Written Ministerial Statements

DEFENCE

Security Normalisation (Northern Ireland)

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): As part of the announcement of normalisation made by the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on 1 August 2005, we undertook to reduce the number of military bases in Northern Ireland to the 14 core sites named in the Security Annexe of the Joint Declaration. We have since reported that we will in future only require 10 of those 14 core sites.

Since 1 August 2005 we have successfully undertaken a major programme of work to remove 37 years worth of military infrastructure. At one time there were 106 military sites in Northern Ireland and even at the beginning of the security normalisation period less than two years ago there were 44 sites.

The departure of troops from Bessbrook Mill today marks a key step in the delivery of tranche 3 of Security Normalisation as set out in the revised Annexe to the Joint Declaration on 1 August 2005. Of the other sites to be closed in this tranche, the observation posts at the Police Service of Northern Ireland Rosemount and Masonic Base in Londonderry have already been vacated and, in the case of Masonic Base, handed to Defence Estates for return to the landowners. We are on schedule to vacate Harmony House, Lisburn; Drumadd Barracks, Armagh; and Lisanelly Barracks, Omagh by 31 July 2007. This will mark the completion of the work set out in the Joint Declaration with the exception of Moscow Camp, Belfast, which will be vacated by the end of the year. Following my statements of 10 May 2006, Official Report, column 20-21WS, and 12 October 2006, Official Report, column 34WS, work to vacate St Lucia Barracks, Omagh; and to close Laurel Hill House, Coleraine is expected to be completed by 31 July 2007; and plans to close St Patrick's Barracks, Ballymena by 31 March 2008 and Shackleton Barracks, Ballykelly in April 2008 remain on schedule.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Schools, Early Years and 14-16 Funding (2008-2011)

The Minister for Schools (Jim Knight): This statement relates to funding for schools, early years and 14-16 funding for 2008-09 to 2010-2011.

1. In March of this year the Department launched a consultation on changes to the school funding system to be implemented over the coming comprehensive spending review period—2008-09 to 2010-11. The proposals continued the programme of reform we started when we introduced the Dedicated Schools Grant and multi-year budgets for schools for the period 2006-08. They set out a series of evolutionary changes to the distribution of funding to local authorities and schools, alongside more far reaching proposals to deal with the significant developments at 14-16 and for early years.

2. I am today publishing a summary of the responses to the consultation and placing a copy of that summary in the Library of the House. I am grateful to all those who responded to the consultation, and in particular to our national partners with whom we have been discussing detailed implementation issues in parallel with the consultation.

3. Many of the Government's proposals were welcomed by respondents to the consultation. But it is also clear from some of the responses, and from the discussions that we have had with stakeholders throughout the consultation period, that there remain issues where further work will be required: the distribution methodology for Dedicated Schools Grant in the long term, and the role and functions of the Schools Forum are two examples.

4. Over the past ten years the Government have invested record amounts in education: funding per pupil has increased by £1,800 per pupil—a 66 per cent. increase in real terms. The comprehensive spending review settlement will mean that schools funding will continue to increase for each of the next three years, although not at the high levels seen in recent years. This demonstrates our continuing commitment to raise standards for all young people, and schools and local authorities have a key role to play over the next three years, and three of our key priorities for them are: taking the next steps on personalisation of learning; ensuring every school provides access to the core offer of extended services; and implementing the extension of the free entitlement to early years education, while increasing its flexibility.

5. That is why we have decided that the Dedicated Schools Grant will continue to be distributed using the spend plus method for the next three years: all authorities will receive a basic per pupil increase each year; and all authorities will receive funding for our priorities on top of that. We will announce in the autumn the basic increase and the funding for Ministerial priorities for each of the next three years. This will deliver the funding to all authorities for our priorities - reverting to a single formula at this time would not do so.

6. But we appreciate there are arguments in favour of a single formula, primarily that it provides a more transparent way of distributing schools funding to local authorities; and our long term aim is to move back to a single formula for distributing DSG. That is why we are announcing a fundamental review of the formula for distributing schools and early years funding to local authorities: the outcome of the review will be a single transparent formula available for use from 2011-2012 onwards. We will set out terms of reference for the review in July, and will work closely with external partners on it.

7. Narrowing the achievement gap between children of different backgrounds will remain one of our key aims—we want all children to succeed, whatever their background. Ensuring that the distribution of funding takes account of deprivation will therefore continue to be a critical issue over the next three years, at both national and local level. Where our priorities demand that funding be weighted to take account of deprivation we will use a new measure to distribute Dedicated Schools Grant, based on tax credit data, which will reflect much better the circumstances of the children in an authority's schools. Alongside this, we will make available additional funding for children from deprived backgrounds who go to school in authorities where the overall level of deprivation is low.

8. These two measures complement the action we are already taking on deprivation funding: we have asked all authorities to review their formulae for funding schools to ensure that they properly reflect the funding for deprivation distributed to them through Dedicated Schools Grant in 2007-08. We are monitoring progress on this, and have made guidance available to local authorities; in addition we will be asking them to submit a further statement in the autumn setting out in detail their plans for the CSR period. Where progress is not adequate there will be further challenge and support.

9. Multi-year allocations of funding for local authorities and schools have been welcomed as providing a better basis for forward planning, and for longer term, more strategic decision making. However, there is a need to reflect changes in circumstances that could not be foreseen at the beginning of a three-year funding period. We will therefore make available a grant to local authorities who, during the three year period, experience exceptional increases in pupil numbers, both in overall terms and in the numbers of children for whom English is not the first language.

10. There will be a sharper focus over the next three years on achieving the greatest possible value for money from the resources we invest schools: that is a shared responsibility for schools, local authorities and central government. Schools will need to think carefully about how they use the funding we make available to them, and we will work closely with them and their local authorities to ensure they have the tools they need to plan and use their resources most efficiently and effectively.

11. The Minimum Funding Guarantee will continue to deliver a minimum per pupil increase in each of the next three years. However, the assessment of cost pressures will reflect our expectation of a substantial improvement in efficiency from schools. That will reduce the cost to local authorities of implementing the Minimum Funding Guarantee, so that more of the increase in resources across the next three years can be used to support our key priorities. This balances continued stability of funding for schools with greater flexibility to target new resources at our key priorities.

12. We will also take further action on school balances, to follow up the clawback mechanism for excessive balances that we introduced this year. Our aim is to ensure that the £1.6 billion currently in school balances is substantially reduced, and is used to support the education of today's children rather than sitting in schools' bank accounts. Local authorities will be required to redistribute to schools a small percentage (5 per cent.) of all surplus school balances through the local authority funding formula. This broadly equates to the interest that accrues on balances. We will consult on the detailed implementation of this measure in the autumn, but local authorities and schools forums will take final decisions on how this funding will be reinvested locally.

13. We will broaden the membership of the schools forum: they have a key part to play in the implementation of our reforms of early years funding and the roll out of diplomas for 14-16 year olds. Local authorities will be expected to have non-schools members, including representation from the early years sector and from 14-19 partnerships. The limit on the proportion of non-schools members will be raised from one fifth to one third: that will allow us to broaden the membership to reflect the full range of interests in the decisions it takes, without the need to recruit significant numbers of extra schools members; and it retains the schools character of the forum.

14. The private, voluntary and independent early years sector is diverse, so its membership of the Schools Forum is only one part of ensuring greater involvement and consultation with the sector on funding decisions. As well as setting out in guidance that representation on the Schools Forum should reflect the amount of early years provision delivered through the PVI sector, we will expect all local authorities to consult a group of early years providers on local implementation—and it will be an option for this group to be a sub group of the schools forum

15. We also need to consider how schools forums will relate to the developing arrangements for Children's Trusts, and the wider Every Child Matters agenda. We have therefore announced today a review of the scope and functions of the Schools Forum, to start at the same time as the review of the distribution formula for Dedicated Schools Grant.

16. We will adopt a staged approach to reforming the funding system for early years provision.

We will publish estimates of local authority spending on early years provision with our annual benchmarking data on all local authority schools spending in August. Building on this, we expect that all local authorities will carry out an assessment of the cost of delivering the free entitlement in PVI settings, and present this to their schools forum, before they consider in early 2008 the distribution of funding to schools and early years providers for the next three years.

From 2009-10 we will require all local authorities to count pupils in maintained and PVI settings on the same basis for funding purposes. The presumption will be that the amount of funding received will depend on the amount of provision taken up, but local authorities will be allowed to vary this and continue to fund on the number of places, where the small size of a setting needs this approach.

From 2010-11, all authorities will be required to introduce a new funding formula to cover early years provision in both maintained and PVI settings, and this will incorporate a standardised transparent method for setting the basic unit of funding per pupil. While 2010-11 is the final date for introduction of a new formula in all local authorities, we will encourage and support as many local authorities as possible, through pathfinder projects, advice and guidance to implement such a formula in 2009-10.

17. Funding for 14-16 year olds taking diplomas will be distributed through a specific formula grant. The formula will reflect the costs faced by local authorities from: the diploma lines being offered, the number of children taking up diplomas, the higher cost of provision in high wage areas, and the additional costs in sparsely populated authorities. How this funding is delivered to the front line will be left mainly to local discretion: there are already a number of local funding models in operation, and we want to allow those to continue where they are working successfully. But our guidance will set out the benefits of a partnership level approach: retaining much of the funding allows for economies of scale in commissioning and paying for provision, and it also gives schools more budget certainty if they can draw on funding from a central pool, rather than having to meet all the costs of diplomas from their delegated budgets. Finally, we will set out a framework for the costs that schools should be charged for diplomas, based on the LSC funding methodology, but with local flexibility to reflect the differing levels of funding for 14 to 16 pupils across local authorities.

18. This statement sets out the key decisions on school funding for the next three year period. They put in place a firm foundation for the school funding system to meet the challenges of the CSR period: there is further devolution to the local level; there is a programme of change for early years funding, coupled with local flexibility; and there is reform of the MFG, coupled with a focus on efficiency to free up resources for our priorities.

19. The Department will be issuing further detailed guidance, including details of all the decisions on the consultation, to local authorities and other key stakeholders, in the near future. A copy will be placed in the Library.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science (CEFAS)

The Minister for Local Environment, Marine and Animal Welfare (Mr. Ben Bradshaw): The 2006-07 Annual Report and Accounts for the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science (CEFAS) will be laid before Parliament today.

Copies will be available in the Libraries of the House.

Radioactive Waste (Disposal)

The Minister for Climate Change and the Environment (Ian Pearson): I am pleased to announce that the UK Government, along with the Welsh and Northern Irish devolved Administrations have today published a framework for the long term management of higher activity radioactive waste. These are set out in a consultation document entitled "Managing Radioactive Waste Safely: a Framework for Implementing Geological Disposal". Copies will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

The UK Government and devolved Administrations' response to the independent Committee on Radioactive Waste Management (CoRWM) on 25 October 2006 committed to consult on how implementation of the geological disposal programme can be taken forward. We are seeking views not only on the technical aspects of developing a disposal facility, but how we can engage most effectively with those communities that might have a potential interest in hosting the facility.

The consultation is not about potential new nuclear build. That is the subject of a separate consultation announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on 23 May 2007. Irrespective of whether or not there is any new build, the UK has a radioactive waste problem that must be solved.

The proposed disposal facility will not only help to solve a major national environmental problem for future generations but will be a high-technology, multi-billion pound project that will bring investment and high quality jobs for generations. It will also provide significant economic and social spin-off benefits for both the host community and the surrounding area. It is a means of dealing with the radioactive waste problem that many other countries are also following.

Planning and development of geological disposal will be based on four pillars:

Partnerships with potential host communities for disposal facilities that allow issues and opportunities to be fully discussed and evaluated.

The Nuclear Decommissioning Authority, NDA, acting as a strong, effective implementing organisation with clear responsibilities and accountabilities;

Strong independent regulation by the statutory regulators: the Health and Safety Executive, the environment agencies and the Office for Civil Nuclear Security;

Independent scrutiny and advice to Government by a reconstituted CoRWM carrying forward the original committee's commitment to openness and transparency.

We recognise that, despite the work CoRWM has done, there will be those who may still harbour doubts about the geological disposal of radioactive waste. We shall address such concerns in an open and transparent way, on the basis of sound scientific and technical evidence, as the process moves forward. CoRWM has set the standards for openness and transparency, and we are committed to maintaining them.

I must stress that there is no site selection or voluntarism process underway at this point nor will there be until the outcome of the consultation is available and Government have established and published their view of the way forward in light of it. That said, we are happy to discuss the issues set out in the consultation document with any community with an interest.

The date for response to the consultation document is 2 November 2007. Although the Scottish Government have decided not to sponsor this consultation, organisations or individuals in Scotland who wish to respond may do so and UK Government will discuss these responses with the Scottish Government through the appropriate devolution mechanisms.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

General Affairs and External Relations Council (GAERC)

The Minister for Europe (Mr. Geoffrey Hoon): My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary (Margaret Beckett) and Sir John Grant, UK Permanent Representative to the EU, represented the UK at the General Affairs and External Relations Council (GAERC) in Luxembourg.

The agenda items covered were as follows:

General Affairs

Pursuing the Treaty Reform Process

The Council discussed reform of the EU treaties in preparation for the June European Council. It considered a report by the Presidency and looked at possible ways forward.

Preparation of the European Council on 21/22 June

The Council discussed the draft Conclusions for the European Council, covering justice and home affairs, economic and social and external relations issues.

Global Approach to Migration

The Council adopted Conclusions on the EU's Global Approach to Migration. These underline the importance of working closely with African, EuroMed and other partners, including the EU's eastern neighbours, on migration and migration-related issues.

External Relations

WTO/PDA

The Council was briefed by the Commission on progress in trade negotiations under the World Trade Organisation's Doha Development Agenda. The Council will meet in extraordinary session on 25 June in Geneva to discuss the outcome of a meeting of the EU, US, India and Brazil, to be held in Potsdam from 19-23 June.

Cuba

The Council adopted Conclusions calling on the Government of Cuba to undertake the political and economic reforms needed to improve the daily life of the Cuban people. It emphasised the importance of democratic reform and of respect for human rights, while setting out the EU's willingness to engage in dialogue with the Cuban Government.

The EU and Central Asia: Strategy for a New Partnership

The Council approved a draft strategy for the EU's relationship with Central Asia, which will now be submitted to the European Council. The strategy sets out the EU's interests in the region and possible avenues through which to pursue an enhanced relationship.

Strengthening the European Neighbourhood Policy

The Council discussed the European neighbourhood policy on the basis of a report by the Presidency and welcomed the progress made in strengthening the policy.

EU Anti-Death Penalty Initiative

The Council decided that the EU would, as part of a cross-regional alliance, introduce a resolution against the death penalty during the 62nd session of the UN General Assembly.

Sudan

The Council adopted Conclusions expressing alarm at the humanitarian and security situation in Darfur. It urged the parties to the conflict to abide by the existing cease-fire agreements, respect the neutral role of the AU mission and ensure safe and unhindered humanitarian access throughout Sudan. It stressed the need for a political solution and reaffirmed its full support for the AU/UN initiative to revitalise the political track. It welcomed the Government of Sudan's acceptance of an AU/UN hybrid operation, but underlined the Council's expectation that the Government of Sudan should swiftly take action to facilitate the deployment of the operation. Ministers also underlined the importance of continued funding for the AU mission.

Relations with the Western Balkans

The Council adopted Conclusions welcoming renewed co-operation by the new Government in Belgrade with the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia and the reopening of talks on a Stabilisation and Association Agreement with Serbia. On Kosovo, the Council reaffirmed its support for UN Special Envoy Martti Ahtisaari and reiterated that his comprehensive proposal provides the basis for the settlement of Kosovo's status. It called for intensified efforts to reach agreement on a UN Security Council resolution on the issue.

Iran

The Council adopted Conclusions deploring the failure of Iran to comply with its obligations under United Nations Security Council Resolution 1747 and reasserting its full support to the Security Council including in its resolve, expressed in Resolution 1747, to adopt further appropriate measures.

Libya

The Council discussed the latest developments in the case of the Bulgarian nurses and Palestinian doctor sentenced to death in Libya in connection with the infection of children with HIV/AIDS in Benghazi. The Presidency and Commission briefed the Council on their joint visit to Libya. The Council will continue to watch the situation closely and hopes that the case can be resolved in a way that leads to the release of the medical workers.

MEPP

The Council discussed the latest developments in the Gaza Strip and called for a rapid resolution to the crisis. It expressed its full support for President Abbas and decided to resume normal relations with the Palestinian Authority immediately, including through direct financial support, through support to the Palestinian police, capacity building for Palestinian institutions and the resumption of the EU Border Assistance Mission in Rafah. It also pledged to do its utmost to provide emergency and humanitarian assistance to the population of Gaza and reiterated its call on Israel to release tax and customs revenues.

The Council met with Israeli Foreign Minister Tzipi Livni in separate session. The Council and Foreign Minister Livni agreed on the need to support President Abbas and moderate Palestinians, including through the release of tax and customs revenues to the Palestinian Authority, progress on the political track and co-operation with the Palestinian side on alleviating the humanitarian crisis in Gaza.

Strengthening EU-Arab League Relations

The Council discussed strengthening ties with the Arab League and tasked the relevant Council bodies to take forward consideration of the issue.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Family Asylum Policy

The Minister for Immigration and Asylum (Mr. Liam Byrne): I would like to update the House on the provision introduced in section 9 of the Asylum and Immigration (Treatment of Claimants, etc.) Act 2004. This provision is intended as a means of influencing the attitudes and behaviours of unsuccessful asylum seeking families who are not taking steps to facilitate their departure from the United Kingdom to their country of origin. It does this by providing for the termination of support in cases where the assessment is that the family is not co-operating or placing themselves in a position where they can leave. The provision was piloted between December 2004 and December 2005 in three areas.

We introduced the provision because it is not right that families who have had their asylum claims carefully considered—including by the independent appellate authorities—should expect to remain in the United Kingdom indefinitely, even after it has been decided that they are not in need of international protection. It is preferable for all concerned if families agree to make a voluntary return home. This is a more dignified approach—and allows access to the reintegration assistance provided through the International Organisation for Migration. However the Border and Immigration Agency must be able to enforce return where a family refuses to make a voluntary return—including in cases where the co-operation of the family is required to obtain necessary passports or other travel documents.

In the form piloted section 9 did not significantly influence behaviour in favour of cooperating with removal—although there was some increase in the number of applications made for travel documents. This suggests that the section 9 provision should not be seen as a universal tool to encourage departure in every case. We therefore do not propose that the section 9 provision should be used on an indiscriminate basis by Border and Immigration Agency case owners in the future.

Since the pilot of the section 9 provision was undertaken the approach to dealing with asylum applications by the Agency has, however, undergone a significant transformation. Making fast track asylum decisions—and removing those whose claims fail—was one of the four objectives set out in the review we published last July. The new approach being taken by the Agency offers a more credible and sustainable end-to-end system. Specialist case owners are now responsible for managing the claimants and their cases through the whole system to either removal or integration as a refugee. Faster and higher quality processes are leading to a better deal for the well founded claimant. This is supported by a strong focus on ensuring that early steps are taken so that those whose claims are not successful leave the United Kingdom in a timely manner.

I have therefore decided that the section 9 provision should be available to case owners dealing with cases under our new end-to-end asylum process. While it will not be suitable on a blanket-basis, it is important that we retain an ability to withdraw support from families who are wilfully not co-operating in the process. Going forward it should be for case owners to take a view, based on an established relationship with the family and an intimate knowledge of the asylum claim which has not been successful, of which approach to encouraging departure is most likely to be effective. Case-specific close working with appropriate officials from the local authority will normally be required if the use of the section 9 provision is being considered.

A short report detailing the outcome of the pilot for the 116 families involved in the pilot and the 116 families used as a control group has been made available on the Border and Immigration Agency website.

JUSTICE

Freedom of Information Act

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Justice (Vera Baird): My right hon. and noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, (Baroness Ashton of Upholland), has made the following written ministerial statement.

"Today I have deposited copies of The Freedom of Information Act 2000—Statistics on Implementation in Central Government: January to March 2007 in the Libraries of both Houses. Copies are also available in the Vote Office and the Printed Paper Office. This is the ninth quarterly bulletin produced by the Ministry of Justice and former DCA, monitoring the performance of central Government and associated bodies under the Freedom of Information Act 2000. Copies are also available on the Ministry of Justice website at http://www.justice.gov.uk/publications/freedomofinformationquarterly.htm."

Legal Aid reform

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Justice (Vera Baird): My right hon. and noble Friend the Lord Chancellor and Secretary of State for Justice has today made the following written ministerial statement.

"On Friday 22 June I laid before Parliament "Implementing legal aid reform: Government response to the Constitutional Affairs Select Committee Report" (Cm 7158). It is also available on the Ministry of Justice website at http://www.justice.gov.uk/publications/policyreports.htm."

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Power of Information Review

The Minister for the Cabinet Office (Hilary Armstrong): In February 2007 I commissioned Tom Steinberg, Director of mySociety and Ed Mayo, Chief Executive of the National Consumer Council to: "explore new developments in the use and communication of citizen and State generated public information in the UK, and to present an analysis and recommendations to the Cabinet Office Minister as part of the Policy Review"[1].

Their report 'The Power of Information' was published on 7 June. Copies are available on the Cabinet Office website and have been placed in the Library for the reference of Members.

The Government take three overarching lessons from this review. Government should:

Engage in partnership with user-led online communities;

Ensure that it fully understands and responds appropriately to changes in the information market; and Advise civil servants on how best to participate in new media.

Citizens themselves are already helping each other in online communities, and working towards the same goals as government on a range of policies, from parenting to health and financial management. The Government in particular agree with the reviewers' comparison between online mutual support and the nineteenth century co-operative and self help movements. The Government are concerned that this comparison should not be misused as a simplistic justification for a return to a laissez-faire approach.

The Government response welcomes the findings of the Review in general and sets out how its recommendations will be taken forward. Accordingly, the Government will make a progress report in December 2007. This response is not the Government's final word, but the beginning of a phase of policy activity to work through the review's recommendations and their consequences.

Copies of the Government's Response to the Power of Information Review have been placed in the Library for the references of Members and are also available in the Vote Office.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Chief Electoral Officer

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Peter Hain): The Chief Electoral Officer for Northern Ireland, Douglas Bain, is responsible for all aspects of electoral administration in Northern Ireland, including the conduct of all elections and referendums, as well as electoral registration. In accordance with section 14 of the Electoral Law Act (Northern Ireland) 1962—as amended by Section 9 of the Northern Ireland (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 2006—the Chief Electoral Officer is required to submit an annual report to the Secretary of State.

I am pleased to announce that the annual report of the Chief Electoral Officer for Northern Ireland for the year 2006-07 has been laid before Parliament today. Copies are available in the Library.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Technology Strategy Board

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Mr. Alistair Darling): In my statement of 1 November 2006 I said that I expected the Technology Strategy Board to be formally inaugurated in the first half of the 2007-08 financial year.

Following the sealing on 27 March of the Royal Charter establishing and incorporating the new body, I am today announcing that the new body will become operational as an executive non-departmental public body from 1 July.

I am also announcing the appointment of 11 board members for the governing body of the new Technology Strategy Board.

The newly-appointed board members are Graeme Armstrong, Nick Buckland, John Brown, Joseph Feczko, Anne Glover, David Grant, Jonathan Kestenbaum, Julia King, Andrew Milligan, Jeremy Watson and Peter Ringrose. Five of the 11 were Board members of the advisory Technology Strategy Board who have been appointed to serve on the new body, and six are new appointments.

The Technology Strategy Board will take on legal responsibility for delivery of a number of technology and innovation support activities from DTI. It will promote and support research, development and the exploitation of science, technology and new ideas to benefit business, increase economic growth and improve the quality of life in the UK. It will be responsible for delivering Government support to encourage business investment in technology and innovation across all sectors of the UK economy. It will deliver this in a range of ways, including Collaborative R and D, Knowledge Transfer Networks, Innovation Platforms and Knowledge Transfer Partnerships. It will also advise Government on areas where barriers exist to the exploitation of new technologies, and put forward recommendations as to how they can be removed.

TRANSPORT

East Midlands Rail Franchise

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. Tom Harris): The Department announced on Friday 22 June that Stagecoach Midland Rail Limited (a subsidiary of Stagecoach group plc) has been awarded the East Midlands franchise which will begin on 11 November 2007 and will increase capacity, improve performance and begin the introduction of smartcard technology by 2010.

The East Midlands franchise brings together the current Midland Mainline operating out of London St. Pancras and the eastern section of Central Trains. The Department will receive a premium of £133 million over the life of the seven-year, four-month franchise.

A new timetable will be introduced in December 2008. This will support extra capacity, including a new hourly service between Kettering and London and a 9 per cent. increase in peak capacity into and out of London St. Pancras. Punctuality and reliability of 90.4 per cent. has been forecast. Stations will see investment of more than £5 million across the franchise area, including the creation of 1250 more car parking spaces, and 400 more bicycle spaces. More than £20 million will be invested in trains.

The Government will continue to regulate fares for the franchise in line with national policy, currently RPI+1 per cent. As with all franchises, unregulated fares are the responsibility of individual operators. In the East Midlands the new operator has indicated possible average annual rises in unregulated fares of 3.4 per cent. above inflation. A single compensation policy for all passengers will be introduced during replacement rail franchises, commencing with the East Midlands and West Midlands.

With improving Passenger's Charter performance in punctuality and reliability the current discount system means that an increasing number of passengers receive no compensation for delays. Therefore discounts in renewal for season tickets valid between one month and one year in compensation for poor punctuality and reliability will be replaced by compensation based on delays to individual journeys, known as Delay/Repay. Under the new system, all passengers will be entitled to claim compensation for all delays, whatever their cause.

50 per cent. of the price paid for a single-leg journey delayed by between 30 and 59 minutes;

100 per cent. of the price paid for a single-leg journey delayed by between 60 and 119 minutes; and

100 per cent. of the price paid for a return journey delayed by more than 119 minutes.

The changes will also start to standardise disparate compensation arrangements for single, return and weekly season ticket holders on different train operators.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit

The Minister for Employment and Welfare Reform (Mr. Jim Murphy): The Social Security (Industrial Injuries) (Prescribed Diseases) Amendment (No.2) Regulations 2007 have today been laid before Parliament. The Regulations implement, from 1 October 2007, the recommendations set out in The Industrial Injuries Advisory Council (IIAC)'s report on Hand Arm Vibration Syndrome (command paper Cm 6098, published July 2004).

The principal recommendation made in the report was that the existing prescription for Prescribed Disease A11 be extended to recognise both the vascular and sensorineural symptoms of Hand Arm Vibration Syndrome (HAVS). This means that people who have sensorineural symptoms of the severity described in the regulations arising from working with the prescribed tools will now be covered by the terms of the prescription, whether or not they have the prescribed vascular symptoms. There are also three other minor amendments which:

clarify the existing prescription for the vascular element of A11; include a causal reference to the occupational exposures listed for PD A11; and reflect a Court of Appeal judgement which has broadened the definition of forestry.

TREASURY

Travel Insurance Review

The Economic Secretary to the Treasury (Ed Balls): On implementing the EU's Insurance Mediation Directive, the Government gave the Financial Services Authority responsibility for regulating the selling of all general insurance, save for a few exemptions allowed by the Directive. Sales of travel insurance sold along with a holiday or related travel were exempt from regulation, but given concerns with this market, the Government committed to review their decision in early 2007.

In August 2006 the Treasury announced that it would conduct an investigation into the selling of travel insurance sold along with a holiday or related travel, thereby fulfilling the commitment made in 2003 to return to this area. A call for evidence was published in November 2006 to inform the review. This document set out the issues and put forward a number of options for the future regulation of the sector. The Treasury Committee also held a hearing into the scope of FSA regulation and has since produced a report calling for travel insurance sold along with a holiday to be regulated by the FSA (so long as it can be done in a proportionate way) and for the Government to work with the FSA and industry to produce policies that are better summarised in plain English. On the second of these recommendations HM Treasury is taking forward work with the Association of British Insurers.

The Government believe that there is a clear weight of evidence pointing to a gap in consumers' understanding of travel insurance as a product and the cover it provides. In particular:

- although the travel insurance market is highly competitive, polices tend to be more complicated than a simple household or motor policy;
- as a secondary purchase, consumers are less likely to be focused on the details of their insurance policy than through a direct sale;
- the majority of consumers only really seem to consider price, not the details of the policy, in deciding which policy to purchase.

Whilst all firms selling travel insurance could do more to explain to customers what the policy does and does not cover, there is clear evidence to suggest that FSA regulated firms do a better job in terms of product disclosure and navigating the consumer through the sales procedure. Furthermore, customers of FSA firms have access to statutory redress and compensation mechanisms if things go wrong. Also, from a principled viewpoint, there is no case for the distribution of travel insurance through this channel to sit outside the regulatory framework when direct sales through insurers or brokers are within it.

The Government take a risk-based approach to financial services regulation, by balancing the need for proper consumer protection with the need to minimise the regulatory burden on firms. After a careful consideration of the arguments and assessment of the balance in this case, the Government believe that it is in the public interest to extend FSA regulation to cover travel insurance sold alongside a holiday. Further details of this assessment are set out in the partial Regulatory Impact Assessment accompanying the proposal. There will now be a further period of consultation on the Government's preferred approach.

HM Treasury is responsible for the overarching regulatory framework under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 and the scope of activities to be regulated by the FSA. Once a decision has been made on scope, the FSA is responsible for the details of the regulatory framework that firms must operate under.

The Government are confident that the FSA operates within a framework that offers it the opportunity and flexibility to regulate in a risk-based and proportionate way. In line with Better Regulation principles the Government will also look to undertake a post implementation review after a reasonable period of time, three to four years after regulation comes into effect.

HM Treasury is today publishing the document: "Travel Insurance Review - summary of responses and next steps", copies of which are available in the Vote Office and the Libraries of both Houses.

Public Expenditure Provisional Outturn

The Chief Secretary to the Treasury (Mr. Stephen Timms): The Treasury will publish the 2006-07 Public Expenditure Provisional Outturn White Paper on Thursday 19 July.

The White Paper is an annual report to Parliament on the provisional outturn for public expenditure. It focuses on spending within Departmental Expenditure Limits (DEL) and Annually Managed Expenditure (AME), including information on individual Supply Estimates, and administration costs and near-cash limits.

The outturn figures are described as provisional because they may be revised when Department's final accounts are published.

A copy of the White Paper will be available in the Libraries of both Houses and will be accessible on the Treasury website.

Economic and Financial Affairs Council (ECOFIN)

The Chancellor of the Exchequer (Mr. Gordon Brown): The Economic and Financial Affairs Council was held on 5 June in Luxembourg. The UK was represented by the Economic Secretary to the Treasury. The items discussed were as follows:

Implementation of the Stability and Growth Pact: Excessive Deficit Procedures

The Commission presented its proposal to abrogate the Excessive Deficit Procedures on Malta, Germany and Greece. Ministers agreed Conclusions supporting the abrogation of the EDPs.

Convergence Reports by the Commission and the European Central Bank

The Commission and the European Central Bank presented their Convergence Reports on Cyprus and Malta, which conclude that both countries have met the Maastricht criteria for joining the euro. Ministers welcomed the Commission and ECB's conclusions, and agreed a letter to be sent to Heads of State and Government at the European Council on 21-22 June. The final decision on whether both countries will join the euro as planned on 1 January 2008 will be taken at ECOFIN on 10 July.

Quality of Public Finances

Ministers were presented a report on the efficiency and effectiveness of public finances, focusing in particular on the need to improve the measurement of public sector output. The Council adopted Conclusions supporting the report.

Tax

(a) Combating Tax Fraud

Ministers agreed Council Conclusions on a range of measures to combat tax fraud, particularly in the field of VAT. The Conclusions covered work on conventional measures and more radical approaches, including a Commission study into the impact of a possible wide reverse charge. The UK supports efforts to combat VAT fraud, particularly work to improve current arrangements such as exchange of information and mutual assistance.

(b) VAT Package

Ministers agreed a package of VAT measures, subject to work on some technical issues which are to be resolved before the end of the forthcoming Portuguese Presidency. The UK welcomes this important work to modernise and simplify the existing VAT rules, particularly for cross border supplies of services.

(c) Common Consolidated Corporate Tax Base

Ministers held an exchange of views on the Commission's technical work on a CCCTB. The UK does not believe that the competitiveness of the EU would be helped by a harmonised company tax base and remains sceptical about both the principles and the practicalities.

(d) Code of Conduct on Business Taxation

The Council took note of a report from the Code Group on its work under the German Presidency to combat harmful tax competition. The UK supports the work of the Group.

(e) Joint Transfer Pricing Forum

Ministers agreed Conclusions welcoming the work of the Joint Transfer Pricing Forum. The UK agrees that the report's recommendations represent best practice, and broadly follows these standards already.

DEFENCE

Agency Key Targets

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): Key targets for the financial year 2007-08 for the following Ministry of Defence agencies and trading funds have been placed in the Library of the House.

Defence Vetting Agency
Hydrographic Office
Ministry of Defence Police and Guarding Agency
People, Pay and Pensions Agency
Service Personnel and Veterans Agency

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Carbon Reduction Commitment Consultation Publication

The Minister for Climate Change and the Environment (Ian Pearson): I am pleased to announce that today the Government have launched a 15-week consultation on the detailed implementation proposals of the Carbon Reduction Commitment (CRC). Copies of the consultation document, updated partial RIA and the Government response to the previous consultation have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

The CRC is a new mandatory cap-and-trade scheme which will place an emissions cap on up to 5,000 large business and public sector organisations responsible for around 14 million tonnes of carbon (MtC) emissions each year.

The UK is committed to meeting ambitious carbon reduction targets and requires a robust package of policies to deliver emissions savings. This new scheme, announced in the Energy White Paper, together with the provisions of the Energy Performance of Buildings Directive will deliver emissions reductions of 1.2 MtC per year by 2020, from organisations such as large retailers and supermarkets, hotel chains, universities, hospitals and central Government Departments.

The CRC is a scheme that we believe is, so far, unique for this type of organisation, designed to drive emissions reductions by providing organisations with financial incentives through emissions trading and combining this with reputational incentives through publishing performance in the form of a league table. CRC will auction 100 per cent. of allowances to participants and will recycle the revenue raised from the auction back to participants on the basis of their performance.

This new consultation, ending on 9 October, seeks stakeholders' views on the detailed implementation and operational proposals of the CRC, with the aim of deciding how CRC can best be implemented. Government intend to bring CRC into force in 2010 beginning with a three-year introductory phase, with a fixed price sale of allowances, in which Government will not set a cap.

Voluntary Modulation Money (Livestock Sector)

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (David Miliband): In my written parliamentary statement of 29 March 2007 on voluntary modulation (VM) and the new rural development programme for England, I said that I would make a further announcement about the use of VM receipts under axis 1 to assist the livestock industry in tackling some of the particular challenges it faces.

Purpose of Axis 1 Livestock-Related Measures

Voluntary modulation receipts amounting to £98 million at current exchange rates over the lifetime of the new programme will be used to support three main objectives:

to bring about improvements in the competitiveness of each individual livestock sector to help them compete in the marketplace; to assist farmers in meeting their changing responsibilities and facilitate improved animal health and welfare; to provide support for farmers in enhancing the efficiency and effectiveness of on-farm management of nutrients.

All the main livestock sectors (dairy, beef, sheep, pigs, poultrymeat and eggs) will be eligible for this extra funding.

Formula for the Division of Axis 1 VM Funding

The livestock package of funding will be delivered by the Regional Development Agencies (RDAs) alongside the core funding for axis 1. The RDAs will work with a number of delivery partners in their management of the axis 1 VM funding, including the Levy Boards.

The VM resources will be divided between the eight RDAs responsible according to a new specific formula based on numbers of livestock (using standard livestock units or LSUs), but with a weighting towards the density of dairy cattle because of the particular burdens that nutrient management issues will cause for the dairy industry. This results in a distribution between the regions as follows:

	Weighted Distribution	Approximate Allocation (£m)
North East	6.3%	1.02
North West and Merseyside	17.1%	2.79
Yorkshire and the Humber	12.0%	1.95
East Midlands	11.4%	1.86
West Midlands	15.2%	2.48
Eastern	7.0%	1.14
South East and London	8.0%	1.30
South West (excluding Cornwall)[1]	23.1%	3.77
England (without Cornwall)	100.00%	16.30

[1] Separate funding arrangements will apply in Cornwall and the Isles of Scilly through the convergence element of the Rural Development Programme for England

Next Steps

The RDAs have initiated detailed discussions with the principal livestock industry stakeholders in their regions with a view to putting together a detailed programme of options to meet the three objectives described above, and taking account of particular regional priorities.

Pesticides Safety Directorate (Annual Report and Accounts)

The Minister for Climate Change and the Environment (Ian Pearson): The 2006-07 annual report and accounts for the Pesticides Safety Directorate will be laid before Parliament today. Copies will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Rural Payments Agency (Business Plan/Performance Targets)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Barry Gardiner): My noble Friend the Minister of State for Sustainable Food and Farming and Animal Health has set the following targets for the Rural Payments Agency for 2007-08

1. To have paid 75 per cent. by value of valid 2007 SPS scheme claims by 31 March 2008 and 90 per cent. by value of valid 2007 SPS scheme claims by 31 May 2008[1].

2. To process and pay SPS claims within 2 per cent. materiality threshold and put in place other arrangements (with associated measures) to improve data quality.

3. Process and pay at least 85 per cent. of valid claims, by volume, for all non-SPS schemes within ministerial guidelines and 99 per cent. within EU Commission deadlines or in their absence, 60 days of receipt of the claim.

4. Record 98 per cent. of notifications of births, deaths and movements of cattle on the Cattle Tracing System within 14 days of their receipt.

5. Demonstrate a continually improving trend in customer satisfaction compared with the results of the February 2007 survey as measured for the year through our quarterly customer surveys and a reduction in customer complaints.

6. Provide training and development to enhance leadership skills to all RPA's senior staff in order to maximise efficiency and deliver results.

7. Demonstrate a material improvement in effective joint working with DEFRA and the DEFRA network across all relevant interfaces compared with the February 2007 survey, as measured by feedback from key partners.

8. Successful delivery of improvements covered by DEFRA investment while maintaining performance across RPA's core business activities.

Copies of the strategy and business plan will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

[1] This target is based on the assumption that no partial payments will be made. DEFRA Ministers will consider the issue in autumn 2007 and the target may be adjusted if necessary. The EU regulatory target (for the UK) of paying 96.154 per cent. of total fund value by 30 June 2008 is unchanged.

HEALTH

National Framework for NHS Continuing Healthcare and NHS Funded Nursing Care

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health (Mr. Ivan Lewis): I am today publishing "A National Framework for NHS Continuing Healthcare and NHS Funded Nursing Care in England", which will come into effect on 1 October 2007.

The framework sets out the principles and process for NHS continuing healthcare and NHS funded nursing care. By introducing national criteria the framework aims to promote consistency and transparency in decision making and provide clarity for both patients and professionals about what the NHS will provide for those with the most complex long-term care needs.

It will address the problems surrounding the lack of consistency across the country in the application of the criteria for NHS continuing healthcare and respond to calls by the Health Ombudsman and the Health Select Committee to bring the locally set criteria and variable decision making into one national system.

The framework will also simplify the interaction between NHS continuing healthcare and NHS funded nursing care.

The final framework was developed following a public consultation undertaken by the Department in 2006 that attracted responses from the health and social care sectors, voluntary organisations and users and carers. I am also publishing today a summary of the responses to this consultation.

The framework and the response to the consultation have been placed in the Library and copies are available to hon. Members from the Vote Office.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

"Governing the Future" Command Paper (Government Response)

The Minister for the Cabinet Office (Hilary Armstrong): I have today presented to Parliament a Command Paper providing the Government's response to the Public Administration Select Committee's report "Governing the Future" published on 6 March 2007 in conclusion to its inquiry into the place of strategy and planning in Government.

The Government strongly welcome the PASC report and its support for strategic capability at the centre. The report provides a helpful contribution to promulgating a more strategic approach to policy-making and to ensuring departments are strategically well managed.

Copies of the Command Paper have been placed in the Library for the reference of Members and will be available in the Vote Office.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Public Prosecution Service in Northern Ireland

The Solicitor-General (Mr. Mike O'Brien): My right hon. Friend the Attorney-General has made the following written ministerial statement:

"The Public Prosecution Service in Northern Ireland has today issued a statement in relation to decisions as to prosecution arising out of the Stevens III investigation. Copies of the statement have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses".

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Companies Act 2006

The Minister for Industry and the Regions (Margaret Hodge): The Companies Act 2006, which received Royal Assent on 8 November 2006, will bring major benefits to business by modernising and simplifying company law.

I set out the full commencement timetable for the 2006 Act in my written statement of 28 February. I published, at the same time, a consultative document on questions related to secondary legislation which will need to be made under the Act, and on transitional and savings provisions.

We received 65 responses to the consultation. These broadly supported the Government's approach, while making a number of helpful suggestions on points of detail. This statement outlines the Government's position on the main areas covered by the consultative document in the light of the responses. We intend to publish draft regulations and orders on the Departmental website at www.dti.gov.uk/bbf/co-act-2006/ before the summer recess in respect of most areas where regulations or orders will be required, to enable interested parties to comment on the details of the Government's approach to implementation in these areas. Draft regulations and orders on further areas will be published in the autumn.

The responses confirmed that there continues to be strong support for the Government's "Think Small First" approach to company law reform. In particular, most respondents agreed that the model articles for private companies limited by shares should be designed with the needs of small, owner-managed businesses in mind. There was unanimous support for the proposal to have a single set of accounting and reporting regulations for small companies, so that small companies will have to look in only one place to establish what they are required to include in their accounts and reports. We intend to include in the small company regulations the requirements for small companies that choose to prepare group accounts so that all the requirements are in a single set of regulations, but with the group requirements clearly and separately identified.

We consulted on a number of other accounting and reporting issues. Having now considered the responses, we intend:

to draft a single set of accounting and reporting regulations for all companies other than small companies; to require medium sized, but not small companies, to disclose turnover in their abbreviated accounts;

to retain the disclosure requirements in schedule 7 of the Companies Act 1985 in respect of employment of disabled persons and in respect of employee involvement in company matters; to require quoted companies to report more effectively on how pay across the company is taken into account in setting directors' remuneration.

The 2006 Act makes important changes to the law in relation to directors' residential addresses, so that for every director the address on the public record will be a service address (whether it is his residential address or not). We intend to make supporting regulations in this area which will:

restrict the extent to which credit reference agencies have access to directors' residential addresses; extend the procedures for removal of residential addresses from the existing record to those of former directors and company secretaries.

The 2006 Act retained the requirements in the Companies Act 1985 Act for the annual return of companies with a share capital to include the addresses of all their shareholders. In the light of the responses, we have decided that this requirement should apply only to public companies that are traded on EU regulated markets in respect of shareholders who hold 5 per cent. or more of any class of shares at any time during the year in question. For other companies, the requirement will be changed so they no longer have to provide the addresses of any shareholders.

There was broad support for our proposals in the area of share capital, including that of share capital reduction by limited and unlimited companies. We published draft regulations in this area in May, and will publish revised draft regulations in July in the light of the responses to the consultation.

There was broad support for a single regulatory regime approach for overseas companies with a presence in the UK. We are currently considering the detail of such a regime and will make a further policy statement on this issue at a later stage.

The consultative document also sought views on two areas closely related to our implementation of the 2006 Act: limited liability partnerships and implementation of Directive 2006/68/EC amending the Second Company Law Directive on capital maintenance and share capital.

We are considering the responses in relation to limited liability partnerships carefully with a view to further consultation on specific proposals in autumn 2007 and consultation on draft regulations in early 2008.

We intend to amend the Companies Act 1985 (for the period April to September 2008) and the 2006 Act (from October 2008) in respect of the safeguards for creditors in the case of a reduction in subscribed capital in Directive 2006/68/EC. We also intend to consult further in respect of the option to extend the facility for companies to hold "treasury shares".

The consultation confirmed our general approach to transitional and saving provisions. In particular, we continue to believe that implementation should generally preserve existing decisions taken by the members and directors and agreements entered into by the company. In the light of the responses to the consultation, we intend to make a saving provision in respect of the repeal of sections 151 to 158 of the Companies Act 1985 (financial assistance by companies for acquisition of their own shares). We also intend to provide a grace period until October 2010 for any company which did not have at least one director who was a natural person at the time when the 2006 Act received Royal Assent.

We also consulted specifically on transitionals in respect of the provisions on derivative claims and proceedings in part 11 of the 2006 Act. In the light of the consultation responses, we have concluded that the new, clearer procedures should be used for all claims started on or after 1 October 2007; but the courts should ensure that the outcome of any claim based on acts or omissions by a director before 1 October 2007 will be what it would have been under the old, common law that applied at the time.

The Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No. 3, Consequential Amendments, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2007 was laid before Parliament in draft on 25 June. The draft Order will commence some key parts of the 2006 Act, including provisions relating to part of the statutory statement of directors' general duties, derivative claims and proceedings, the business review, and resolutions and meetings.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

The Minister for Trade (Mr. Ian McCartney): I would like to make a statement on the future status of the Export Credits Guarantee Department (ECGD).

I can now set out the financial framework under which ECGD will undertake its functions from 1 April 2008.

On 1 July 2004, Official Report, column 22WS, the then Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend, the Member for Leicester, West (Ms Hewitt) told the House about the work she had put in place for ECGD to assess the suitability of its operations becoming a Government trading fund by operating a pilot of this status over a two-year period from April 2005. This period was subsequently extended to April 2008.

Since then, there have been some important changes in the environment in which ECGD operates. In particular, against a background of changing UK industrial and trading patterns, buoyant private sector financial markets and benign global risk conditions, there has been a reduced demand for ECGD support and a reduction in its customer base. This has cast doubt about ECGD's long-term suitability to operate within a trading fund structure. Moreover, the experience of operating as a pilot trading fund, combined with other reforms in ECGD's operations, has shown that the benefits from establishing an ECGD trading fund can be delivered in a more appropriate and effective way.

I am pleased to tell the House that the Chief Secretary and I have now agreed a new financial framework that is consistent with the objectives for ECGD set out in 2004.

A number of key principles will underpin the new framework. First, there will be a cap on the risk exposure that ECGD can commit without express consent from HM Treasury, but with sufficient headroom to meet current and potential demand from exporters. Secondly, robust systems will continue to be used to assess and control the assumption of new risks. Thirdly, the premiums which ECGD charges on the transactions that it supports will continue to reflect the risk, including making a contribution to the cost of notional capital and to the maintenance of sufficient reserves, and to cover administration costs. Fourthly, ECGD's administration costs will in future be subject to departmental expenditure limits and the disciplines of Government spending reviews. The new framework will include revised financial objectives to enable Ministers to monitor the ongoing performance of ECGD's operations.

Overall, this new financial framework will provide a structure for managing ECGD's business that is appropriate to today's needs and which continues to balance the requirements of exporters against those of protecting the taxpayer and of achieving value for money.

TRANSPORT

Humber Bridge Debt

The Minister of State, Department for Transport (Dr. Stephen Ladyman): My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport has today laid an Order before Parliament to enable the revision of interest rates on the debt owed by the Humber Bridge Board to the Secretary of State. The debt represents borrowing from Government for the construction of the Humber Bridge. The interest rate on the loan will be reduced from 7.75 per cent., currently payable on a portion of the debt, to 4.25 per cent. payable on the entire debt.

The revised interest rate will apply from 1 April 2006 until 31 March 2011 at which time it will be reviewed. The rate of 4.25 per cent. was chosen as this was the National Loans Fund rate as at 3 April 2006. Over the five-year period, the reduction in interest payable amounts to £16.6 million, which the Humber Bridge Board can use to fund maintenance or repay capital debt. The reduction in interest payments will be reported in the Department for Transport's accounts each year over the five-year period.

The rate has been revised to reflect more closely current interest rates and to allow the Humber Bridge Board to repay the debt within the agreed loan period (until 2038) without recourse to levying a precept on the local taxpayers of Humberside.

The debt was last restructured in 1998 when an interest rate of 7.75 per cent. was set, although interest was not payable on a suspended part of the total debt. These arrangements were set out in the 1998 loan agreement and the Humber Bridge (Debts) Act 1998. In 2006 the Humber Bridge Board approached the Department for Transport advising that the debt would become unmanageable from 2007-08 at the 7.75 per cent. interest rate. This was because traffic growth had not met the levels predicted in 1998 and because of previously unforeseen major maintenance work required.

A revised loan agreement between the Secretary of State and the Humber Bridge Board was signed on 13 June 2007, replacing the 1998 loan agreement. It is dependent on the coming into force of the Humber Bridge (Debts) Order 2007. The Order is made under the Humber Bridge (Debts) Act 1996.

The total debt owed by the Humber Bridge Board to the Secretary of State was £334,437,000 as at 1 April 2006.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Joint Birth Registration

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. John Hutton): I have today published a Green Paper on the Government's commitment to take forward new proposals in joint birth registration.

In December 2006 the Government published the White Paper "A new system of child maintenance". This paper set out the Government's proposal to make joint birth registration the default position for birth registration. It is the Government's ambition to significantly decrease the number of sole registrations from the current level of around 7 per cent. of births per year. This Green Paper sets out how we might achieve this ambition while providing robust exemptions for the protection of vulnerable mothers and children. We have always been clear that we would only legislate on this issue once we are sure such safeguards can be put in place and any legislation will have specific exceptions.

Joint birth registration is a positive, early intervention initiative that could form part of a wider cross government programme to promote good parenting, fatherhood and parental responsibility. The point at which a birth is registered is also an ideal time for possibly vulnerable or at risk parents to be identified.

Making joint birth registration the normal requirement, and doing more to promote and explain this requirement to parents, will publicly embed an expectation that the usual course of events is for both parents to acknowledge and be involved in the upbringing of their children.

This could also lead to positive changes in the level of fathers paying maintenance for their child's upbringing or provide a starting point for single parents to claim child maintenance where there is no longer a relationship between the parents.

The Government believe joint birth registration can make a significant contribution to child welfare and are committed to actively promoting it. This Green Paper sets out proposals to achieve this aim alongside a number of further non-legislative measures designed to maximise the number of joint registrations. The Government believe that these are critical to ensuring the success of our approach. The Green Paper asks whether these measures should be advanced as complementary to the legislative approach or developed solely within the current legislative framework.

Ministerial Group on Gas Safety

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mrs. Anne McGuire): I chaired the first meeting of the gas safety and carbon monoxide (CO) awareness Ministerial Group on 14 June. The Group agreed to support a coordinated approach to raising awareness and reducing deaths and ill health caused by CO poisoning. It also intends to meet representatives of the gas industry and others in the autumn to review their progress in delivering a programme of renewed action on raising CO awareness.

The members of the Group are:

Lord McKenzie, Department for Work and Pensions (Chair)

Lord Adonis, Department for Education and Skills

Andrew Davies, Welsh Assembly Government

Nigel Dodds, Department for Enterprise, Trade and Investment, Northern Ireland

Caroline Flint, Department of Health

Ian Pearson, Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs

Angela Smith, Communities and Local Government

Lord Truscott, Department of Trade and Industry

Alistair Buchanan, OFGEM

A Minister for Scotland is about to be invited to join the Group following the recent elections in Scotland.

Pension Service (Targets/ Business Plan)

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. John Hutton): I am today able to announce the annual performance targets in 2007-08 for the Pension Service executive agency of the Department for Work and Pensions. The targets I have agreed are set out below.

Further information is contained in the Pension Service Business Plan for 2007-08 that has been published today. Copies have been placed in the Library.

The Pension Service targets 2007-08

Successful applications:

Generate a further 235,000 successful applications overall for Pension Credit, of which 166,000 should be for Guarantee Credit.

Pension traces:

Undertake 60,000 successful pension traces.

Service Delivery targets:

Answer 80 per cent. of all calls received in 45 seconds.

Achieve Pension Credit accuracy of at least 96 per cent.

Achieve State Pension accuracy of at least 98 per cent.

Issue 99 per cent. of Winter Fuel Payments for 2007-08 (automatic payments and successful claims received before 22/09/07) by Christmas 2007.

Reduce monetary value of fraud and error in Pension Credit to 4 per cent. of Pension Credit expenditure.

Benefit Fraud Inspectorate Reports

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. James Plaskitt): On behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, the BFI inspection reports on Amber Valley Council, Basildon District Council, Colchester Borough Council, North Shropshire District Council and South Bedfordshire District Council were published today 26 June 2007. Copies have been placed in the Library.

The BFI reports detail a range of strengths and weaknesses in the housing benefit services provided by councils and make recommendations to improve the security and efficiency of benefit delivery.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is considering the reports and may ask the councils for proposals in response to BFI's findings.

Financial Assistance Scheme

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. John Hutton): I lay today before Parliament the second annual report of the Financial Assistance Scheme.

This report covers the administration of the fund from 1 April 2006 to 31 March 2007.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Olympic Funding

The Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (Tessa Jowell): On 15 March 2007, when I announced the new funding provision for the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, I said that land values in the Olympic Park were expected to increase considerably as a result of the investment we are making and that the lottery good causes, having contributed a further £675 million to the Olympics, should share in any such windfall.

I also said that the Mayor and I had agreed that we would re-write our memorandum of understanding and put in place profit-sharing arrangements to enable the lottery and future regeneration needs of the local area to benefit from the returns on the investment that we are making in the Olympic Park.

The Mayor and I have now agreed a new memorandum of understanding that will enable the lottery, as well as the local area, to benefit from the returns in investment that we are making in the Olympic Park.

The memorandum provides that after the London Development Agency (LDA) has been reimbursed for its land acquisition costs and disturbance compensation payments (which are not expected to exceed £650 million) the proceeds of the Land and Property disposals, as and when made, shall be split between DCMS and LDA in a two-stage process.

First, threequarters of the additional National Lottery income we called upon (£506 million) will be re-paid, through DCMS, along with a quarter of the LDA's costs (£125 million) associated with the remediation and disposal of land and buildings in the Olympic Park. This will happen on a pro rata basis.

When this is done, the National Lottery—again through my Department—will be reimbursed the remaining quarter of its contribution (£169 million) and the LDA will receive the outstanding threequarters of its costs, (£375 million). Again, this will be on a pro rata basis. If there is a surplus once the repayments have been made, the Government will discuss with the Mayor how best to use this money.

These arrangements are set out in the revised memorandum of understanding. copies of which I have placed in the Vote Office.

This is a good deal for the National Lottery, for those who benefit from its projects, and for London. It fulfils the promise I made in my statement to this House on 15 March. It should give lottery distributors real confidence that the additional funding necessary for a successful Olympic and Paralympic Games will be re-paid—providing them and the whole country with a further 2012 dividend.

DEFENCE

Service Voters Survey

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Derek Twigg): I have today placed in the Library of the House a copy of the report of a survey on Service voting conducted by the Defence Analytical Services Agency in 2006.

The MOD has been working with the Electoral Commission to improve the electoral process for the armed forces. The survey was undertaken to provide evidence of the numbers of Service personnel who are currently registered to vote and to draw comparison with the results of a similar survey carried out in 2005. The surveys provide information which is helping us judge how best to encourage Service personnel to register in future.

I welcome the survey, which gives us the facts needed to target future work. It indicates that 63 per cent. of service personnel are currently registered, in comparison with 60 per cent previously, the majority of whom (65 per cent) choose to register as ordinary rather than Service voters. The number serving abroad who are registered has risen from 36 per cent. in 2005 to 42 per cent. in 2006.

These figures indicate that registration levels have improved but there is still much work to be done, particularly for those serving abroad; the results will help to indicate where our efforts should be concentrated. We will work closely with the Electoral Commission to understand the reasons behind the results and to use them to make further improvements to the quality of information available to all Service personnel.

We remain committed to improving arrangements for the Service community to exercise their right to vote. We will do this by encouraging our people to register and to vote, and underpin this by clear information provided in a timely manner. We shall continue to work hard, with the Electoral Commission, to achieve this.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Justice and Home Affairs Council

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Joan Ryan): The Justice and Home Affairs Council was held on the 12-13 June 2007 in Luxembourg. Baroness Scotland, Lord Falconer and I attended on behalf of the UK.

Baroness Scotland attended a Ministerial dinner on the evening of 11 June, where the German Presidency reported on the first meeting of Future Group on Home Affairs which had met in Eltville, Germany, on 21 May. Over dinner Ministers discussed the need for the EU to have an effective expulsion policy: the need to protect national security and the human rights of those who pose a threat.

The A-points list was approved and included adoption for Rapid Border Intervention Teams regulation, following a general approach in April, and the Ukraine readmission agreement, which was adopted by qualified majority with the UK voting against due to outstanding scrutiny reserves. The Integration fund was removed from the A-points list and will go to the Competitiveness Council on 25 June for adoption.

The Council opened with the Mixed Committee Items, which included the second generation Schengen Information System (SIS II), SISone4all, the Visa Information System (VIS), data protection and the Regulation on a uniform format for residence permits.

The Council welcomed the progress made on SISone4All and noted that the programme was on schedule. The target of lifting internal borders by December was likely to be reached provided that all the evaluation criteria were met. The Commission reported that the implementation of SIS II remained on target for December 2008 and reiterated that all efforts should be made to ensure that the SISone4All programme does not delay the implementation of SIS II.

There was political agreement on VIS and the Presidency hoped for swift implementation. The UK does not participate in the VIS Regulation and has been excluded from the accompanying Council Decision on law enforcement access to VIS, and therefore did not have a vote on this proposal. The UK did however secure a Council Declaration which underlines Council support for UK and Ireland access and makes clear that this issue will be explored further following the outcome of the FRONTEX and Passports cases before the European Court of Justice which deal with the right of the UK and Ireland to participate in measures which build on those elements of Schengen into which we have not opted in. Furthermore, the UK and Ireland also made a joint declaration setting out our view of the issue in more detail. The Commission hoped that the new system would be established by the first quarter of 2009. The Presidency underlined the significance of meeting the commitment made to the European Parliament of reaching political agreement on the Data Protection Framework Decision by the end of 2007.

The Presidency felt that good progress had been made on the Data Protection Framework Decision. The shape of a compromise on the difficult question of scope had been discussed at senior official level. Further discussions will be required. The Council conclusions were agreed.

The Presidency noted that good progress had been made on the Regulation on a uniform format for residence permits, but concerns remained over minors holding a separate permit. The Presidency was hopeful that agreement would be reached soon.

The main agenda items started with Europol, The Presidency was pleased with the progress of negotiations to date on the draft Europol Council Decision and all member states were content that negotiations on the first chapter had met most concerns. Discussions will now proceed on the next chapters of the text. The Presidency recalled the conclusions reached by the Council in December 2006 concerning the financing of Europol and that it remained necessary to clarify the financial consequences of any move to community financing. The new Council Conclusions setting out the remaining issues to be resolved were agreed.

Political agreement was reached on the Prum Council Decision. The Presidency anticipated that, by the end of the year, the implementing agreement and operational manual would be finalised to enable new provisions to be implemented swiftly. The Government believe that this proposal represents a practical step forward in cross-border police co-operation that should bring direct, positive results for citizens and help make the EU more secure.

The Commission gave a presentation on the Global Approach to Migration. The Government noted that further work was needed on the idea of mobility packages and highlighted the need for more consultation and exploration of the policy before commencing talks with third countries.

On the situation regarding the EU's southern maritime borders, the Presidency highlighted the priority for saving human life and the need for member states to take on a fair share of responsibility and to fulfil their commitments with regard to the Frontex toolbox. Practical steps to relieve any burden on southern States would be subject to further discussion.

Most member states welcomed the purpose of the Directive on sanctions against employers of illegally staying third country nationals, but questioned the approach taken by the Commission. There remained concerns in the Council about the administrative burden, added value, subsidiarity and proportionality. A number of member states also questioned the inclusion of criminal sanctions in first pillar measures. This proposal will be taken forward under the incoming Portuguese Presidency.

The Commission presented its asylum package including a Green Paper on the future of asylum, a proposed Directive extending long term residence to asylum and protection cases, and an evaluation of the Dublin system. The Government highlighted the success of the Dublin system, the necessity to develop the concept of regional protection and to include protection issues in the global approach on migration. The Commission underlined that visa waiver reciprocity continued to be a strong political priority with the matter being pressed with the US and Canada on a regular basis.

The Commission presented the results of the latest round of negotiations with the US on Passenger Name Records. A deal looks likely and the US has accepted the need to reach a binding agreement with a longer data retention period of up to 15 years. All member states support the negotiations.

On the second day of the Council, a general approach was reached on the draft Framework Decision on criminal records, which the Government welcome.

Lord Falconer informed the Council of the historic creation of the Ministry of Justice and the division of responsibilities with the Home Office and welcomed the opportunities for closer cooperation with EU colleagues.

The Council took stock of progress of negotiations on the draft Framework Decision on the recognition and supervision of suspended sentences, conditional release and alternative sanctions. There was support for the objectives of this proposal and for the general direction of negotiations. However, the Council was unable to reach a decision on the application of dual criminality at this stage of negotiations. Discussions on the whole proposal will continue at working group level.

Over lunch the Presidency received broad support for a proposal for web-based exchange of information between member states on violent video games, using age limits and in co-operation with industry. The Presidency asked for greater exchange of information between the member states on banned games.

The Presidency sought agreement on the Framework Decision on Criminal Procedural Rights, reverting to a text that included within its scope cases wholly within domestic jurisdiction. It asked those member states that opposed such a wide scope to change their positions, noting that all had committed to some action in this field. The proposal tabled remained unacceptable to several member states, including the UK, and we regret that the compromise package discussed at the April JHA Council, comprising EU law covering defined cross border cases along with a Resolution on wide-ranging practical measures which might bring real benefits, was not pursued.

The Council took note of the discussions on the horizontal approach in relation to certain offences, which concluded that it is too early to take a final decision on whether a horizontal approach to definitions of offences is required, and on the progress of negotiations on the Directive for the protection of the environment through criminal law.

The Commission presented its Communication on cyber crime. Estonia circulated a paper on recent cyber attacks.

There was a state of play report on ROME II and the conciliation with the European Parliament was noted.

Council Conclusions were adopted on the Global Approach to migration, integration, violent video games, e-justice and the procedure for handling legislative files containing first pillar proposals relevant to the development of criminal law policy.

CABINET OFFICE

Public Sector Ombudsmen Services in England

The Minister for the Cabinet Office (Hilary Armstrong): I have today authorised the Regulatory Reform (Collaboration etc Between Ombudsmen) Order 2007.

The reforms set out in the order have been developed in close consultation with the parliamentary ombudsman, the health service ombudsman for England, and the local government ombudsman for England, and have been subject to public consultation and detailed parliamentary scrutiny.

Principally the reforms will enable the ombudsmen to work together collaboratively on cases and issues that are relevant to more than one of their individual jurisdictions, including undertaking joint investigations where this is appropriate, and issuing joint reports.

The reforms will enable the ombudsmen to provide a more modern, responsive and co-ordinated service for complainants.

The order will come into force on 1 August 2007.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Chief constable of the Police Service (Annual Report 2006-07)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Paul Goggins): I have received the annual report for 2006-07 of the Chief Constable of the Police Service of Northern Ireland which is being presented to Parliament today as a Command Paper.

Copies of the report are available from the Vote Office and the Library of the House.

PRIME MINISTER

Appointment of Surveillance Commissioners

The Prime Minister (Mr. Tony Blair): In accordance with section 91 of the Police Act 1997, I have agreed to re-appoint the right hon. Lord Coulsfield as a Surveillance Commissioner and, in accordance with section 63 of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000, I have also agreed to appoint his hon. Norman Jones QC as an Assistant Surveillance Commissioner. Both appointments will run from 1 July 2007 to 30 June 2010.

Lord Coulsfield has served as a Surveillance Commissioner since 2004.

DEFENCE

Deepcut Review

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): I wish to clarify my written statement to Parliament on 28 March 2007, Official Report, column 91-95W, on the progress that has been made in the provision of care of our young recruits and trainees. I said that we have no plans to change our policy which allows all new recruits who have completed 28 days service, regardless of their age, to Discharge as of Right (DAOR). But I was referring only to the management, care and welfare of Service personnel under the age of 18. I should have said that we have no plans to change our policy which allows all new recruits under the age of 18 who have completed 28 days service to DAOR within the first six months of service. Additionally, those under the age of 18 years three months who have passed their statutory period for DAOR, but who are clearly unhappy in their service, may be considered for discharge from the Armed Forces provided that their unhappiness has been registered with their Commanding Officer before reaching the age of 18.

HEALTH

Meat Hygiene Service (Annual Report and Accounts)

The Minister of State, Department of Health (Caroline Flint): The 2006-07 annual report and accounts for the Meat Hygiene Service was laid before Parliament today. The report has been placed in the Library and copies are available for hon. Members from the Vote Office.

CABINET OFFICE

Central Office of Information

The Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office (Mr. Pat McFadden): I have set the Central Office of Information the following targets for 2007-08:

Financial:

To break even, taking one year with another.

Efficiency:

To achieve a 2.5 per cent. reduction in the unit costs of output.

Quality:

Customer satisfaction index score of 8.25 (out of 10)

96 per cent. scores of six or more

A 10 per cent. increase on the 2006-07 audited response rate.

PRIME MINISTER

Machinery of Government - Departmental Organisation

The Prime Minister (Mr. Gordon Brown): I am today outlining Machinery of Government changes affecting a number of existing Departments of State. Full details will be provided shortly in a paper to be laid in the Library of the House.

These changes will sharpen the focus of central Government on the new and very different challenges that Britain will face in the years ahead. In particular the changes seek to strengthen the Government's support for children, young people and families through these challenges, and to ensure that Britain is equipped to seize the new opportunities of the global economy.

Support for Children and Families

Children and families are the bedrock of our society. The Government's aim is to ensure that every child gets the best possible start in life, receiving the ongoing support and protection that they—and their families—need to allow them to fulfil their potential.

To drive forward progress towards this goal, I am today announcing the formation of a new Department for Children, Schools and Families, for the first time bringing together key aspects of policy affecting children and young people.

The new Department will play a strong role both in taking forward policy relating to children and young people, and coordinating and leading work across Government on youth and family policy.

High quality and tailored education for all young people will be at the heart of the new Department—which will take on pre-19 education policy responsibilities, from the Department for Education and Skills (DfES), working closely with the new Department for Innovation, Universities and Skills to ensure successful delivery of the 14 to 19 reforms. Funding for 16 to 19 education will in future go to schools and colleges via the local authority education budget. Raising school standards for all children and young people at all ages will be an overriding priority of the new Government.

The new Department will assume responsibility for promoting the well-being, safety, protection and care of all young people—including through policy responsibility for children's social services.

It will also be responsible for leading the Government's strategy on family policy—including parenting—and, working with the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) and HM Treasury, will take forward the Government's strategy for ending child poverty.

The Department will be responsible, together with the Department of Health (DH), for promoting the health of all children and young people, including measures to tackle key health problems such as obesity, as well as the promotion of youth sport with the Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS).

The new Department will drive the Government's wider strategy on youth issues. This will include working with the Home Office and the Department of Health on tackling drug use and with the Department for Communities and Local Government (DCLG) on youth homelessness and supported housing.

The Department will also be responsible for promoting the wider contribution of young people to their communities. It will assume responsibility from the Home Office for the 'Respect' agenda. In addition it will lead a new emphasis across Government on the prevention of youth offending, through joint responsibility with the Ministry of Justice for policy and funding of the Youth Justice Board.

Rising to the Challenges of Globalisation

The global economy is changing at an unprecedented rate presenting profound challenges to all national economies. The twin trends of globalisation and technological change are continually reshaping the environment in which businesses operate, generating ever more intense competition across increasingly global markets.

But alongside these challenges are significant new opportunities, with the greatest rewards for those nations with the highest levels of innovation and skills and the most dynamic and enterprising business sectors.

Ensuring that Britain seizes these new opportunities is key to the future prosperity of us all.

Business Council for Britain

I am today announcing the creation of a new Business Council for Britain to assist the Government in putting in place the right strategy to promote the long-term health of the UK economy.

The Council will comprise senior business leaders from a range of sectors, able to provide clear, independent advice on the reform priorities to enable business to compete in the global economy.

The Council will meet twice a year, chaired by a senior business person. It will report to the Government and to Parliament. Secretaries of State will attend meetings at the invitation of the Council.

The Council will:

examine the progress the Government are making to improve the business environment in areas critical to the future of the economy;

advise the Government on their ongoing policies and priorities; conduct its own reviews on the areas it believes will determine the future economic well-being of the UK; and where issues are particularly important, the Council will have the power to establish Special Commissions to make recommendations for reform.

Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform

To rise to the new global challenges, Britain must continue to develop its world-class competitive business environment as the key to being a dynamic, flexible and competitive economy.

To lead this work, I am today announcing the formation of the Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform (DBERR).

The new Department will be responsible for creating the conditions for business success, developing deeper and more effective engagement with business, with the ability to promote the competitiveness agenda across critical areas of Government policy. It will provide support for the new Business Council.

It will also be responsible for promoting choice and quality for consumers through competition policy and for ensuring an improved quality of life for employees.

The Department will promote productivity and enterprise across Government and within the EU. A key priority will be its cross-Government role in promoting better regulation across the business, public and voluntary sectors. The Better Regulation Executive will move to the new Department to lead that work.

In addition, the Department will assume from the Department of Trade and Industry policy responsibility for productivity, business relations, energy, competition and consumer policy, corporate law, employment regulation, and, working closely with the Department for Communities and Local Government, making sustainable improvements in the economic performance of all English regions. The Department will have joint responsibility with the Department for International Development on trade policy, and with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on trade promotion.

Department for Innovation, Universities and Skills (DIUS)

In the years ahead, countries will increasingly derive their competitive edge from the speed with which they are able to innovate, building on a world-class research base, creating new products and markets and driving enterprise and efficiency. Seizing these new opportunities will also require a world-class skills base - both through the expansion of high-end graduate skills, but also by raising the skills of the wider adult workforce, including those currently unskilled.

To ensure that Britain is equipped to meet these challenges I am today announcing the formation of a new Department for Innovation, Universities and Skills (DIUS).

The new Department will be responsible for driving forward delivery of the Government's long-term vision to make Britain one of the best places in the world for science, research and innovation, and to deliver the ambition of a world-class skills base.

It will therefore assume responsibility from the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) for science and innovation—including ensuring world-class research and increased business innovation. The Department will oversee the science budget, which will remain ring-fenced, and the dual support system for funding will be retained. A new Office of the Chief Scientific Adviser will be created within the Department.

The new Department will also assume responsibility for ensuring that the UK has the skilled workforce it needs to compete in a global economy.

The Department will, therefore, be responsible for the development, funding and performance management of higher education (both teaching and research) and further education, working closely with the Department for Children, Schools and Families. The Department will also be responsible for taking forward the Government's wider skills agenda—including the implementation of Lord Leitch's "Review of Skills", published last year.

ADDITIONAL ISSUES

Olympic Games

The Government are committed to successful delivery of the 2012 Olympic Games. To strengthen further the existing arrangements within Government, I am today announcing that the Government Olympic Executive will remain within the Department for Culture, Media and Sport and will report to a dedicated Minister of State for the Olympics, who will be based in the Cabinet Office and will attend Cabinet.

Prime Minister's Delivery Unit

The role of the Prime Minister's Delivery Unit (PMDU) is to promote a relentless focus on effective delivery of the Government's key priorities. The PMDU will now report jointly to the Prime Minister and to the Chancellor and will be based in the Treasury, working—as now—closely with No 10, Cabinet Office and HM Treasury officials, and Departments, on the critical priorities and actions needed to strengthen delivery across Government, and on the reform of key public services.

Better Regulation Commission

The Government believe that policy making would benefit considerably from a fuller and more rounded consideration of public risk. I have asked the Better Regulation Commission, building on its report "Risk, Responsibility and Regulation", to devise a structure and approach that ensures that this ambition is embedded in real policy action, even when facing pressures to react to events. I have asked it to report back by the end of July.

Parliamentary Issues

Legislation currently before Parliament will continue to be taken forward, and any changes in Ministers and Departmental roles in taking forward legislation will take place in accordance with well-established procedures.

The Government after consultation in Usual Channels will bring forward a proposal for the House to consider regarding consequential changes in the structure for Departmental Select Committees.

Consequential Changes

As a consequence of the changes outlined above, I am today announcing that the following Departments will cease to exist: the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI), the Department for Education and Skills (DfES), and the Deputy Prime Minister's Office (DPMO).

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Single Farm Payment

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Hilary Benn): My predecessors have kept the House informed of progress with the Single Payment Scheme (SPS). I intend to do likewise.

As at 30 June, the end of the regulatory payment window for the 2006 scheme, a total of £1.49 billion, representing some 98 per cent. of the estimated total fund had been paid in either full or partial payments to 107,088 (98.2 per cent.) claimants. About 2,900 claimants have received a partial payment and await the balancing sum. Work has also to be completed in respect of a further 2,000 claims, mainly small ones and those affected by legal issues such as probate. In these cases either no payment has been made to date or it has yet to be confirmed that any payment is due. Interest will be paid to claimants on sums paid after 30 June on the same basis as for the 2005 scheme.

Given the difficulties experienced with the implementation of the scheme in 2005, the plan that my right hon. Friend, the then Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs set out in his statement of 7 November 2006, Official Report, column 715 for 2006 SPS payments was a challenging one for the Rural Payments Agency (RPA.) I am able to report that the agency has succeeded in both making the majority of payments earlier than last year, so boosting farmers' cash-flow, and meeting its formal target of making 96.14 per cent. of payments by 30 June. I am grateful to RPA staff who have worked long and hard to make this happen.

There need to be further improvements in the RPA's performance, however, before it can be said that it is again providing an acceptable level of service. The next step in achieving this will be to complete work on some 20,000 2005 cases where entitlement values have been identified for review and possible adjustment, upwards or downwards, to 2005 and 2006 payments. RPA resources are now being switched to this work.

Meanwhile, the RPA has already begun processing the 106,000 or so claims that have been submitted under the 2007 SPS. The agency's targets for 2007-08 that were set out in the statement of my hon. Friend the Member for Brent, North, (Barry Gardiner), 26 June 2007, Official Report, column 20WS include one for 2007 SPS payments that represents a greater degree of challenge for the agency in the coming year while also reflecting the fact that it is still in a recovery period. Against this background, I would like to add my thanks to the farming industry for its continuing patience and support.

INNOVATION, UNIVERSITIES AND SKILLS

Higher Education (Loans, Grants and Fees)

The Minister for Higher Education and Lifelong Learning (Bill Rammell): The level of support for loans, grants and fees that will be available to eligible higher education students in the 2008-09 academic year will be 2.5 per cent. higher than for 2007-08, in line with forecast price increases.

For students who have entered higher education in or after 1 September 2006 and are being charged variable fees, the maximum fee payable will increase from £3,070 to £3,145 in 2008-09. The increase to the fee will be matched by a corresponding increase to the loan for fees that students can take out.

For students who are not being charged variable fees (primarily students who entered higher education before 1 September 2006), the maximum fee payable will increase from £1,225 to £1,255.

The increased fee amounts will be authorised by the Student Fees (Amounts)(England) (Amendment) Regulations 2007, which will come into force on 1 September 2008.

I am placing a memorandum in the Library giving details of the increased loan, grant and fee rates for 2008-09. The maximum amount of the Disabled Students Allowances (DSAs) for non-medical helpers will increase in 2008-09 to £20,000 for full-time undergraduate students and to £15,000 for part-time undergraduate students; the maximum amount of the DSA for postgraduate students will increase to £10,000. All these rates are being incorporated into the Education (Student Support) (No. 2) Regulations 2007, which will be laid before Parliament in due course.

JUSTICE

Boundary Commission (Interim Review)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Justice (Bridget Prentice): My right hon. and noble Friend, the then Lord Chancellor and Secretary of State for Justice, Lord Falconer of Thoroton, has received notice in writing from the Boundary Commission for England of commencement of an Interim review. The review will be of the boundaries of the parliamentary constituencies of:

Berwick-upon-Tweed County Constituency;

Chippenham County Constituency;

Daventry County Constituency;

Hexham County Constituency;

Somerton and Frome County Constituency;

South Northamptonshire County Constituency;

South West Wiltshire County Constituency;

Wansbeck County Constituency; and Wells County Constituency.

TREASURY

Appointments

The Chancellor of the Exchequer (Mr. Alistair Darling): The Prime Minister has today announced a series of constitutional reforms set out in the Green Paper "The Governance of Britain".

These include reforms to modernise the role of the Executive and increase its accountability to Parliament. Further to the Prime Minister's statement, I am announcing the reforms relating to the Treasury.

In 1997, the establishment of an independent Bank of England and Financial Services Authority (FSA) reflected the Government's commitment to transparency, credibility and accountability in economic policymaking. Last month, reforms were announced to increase the transparency of appointments to the Monetary Policy Committee (MPC).

To further increase parliamentary accountability and scrutiny of appointments I am today announcing that, following their appointment, I will invite the Treasury Select Committee to convene pre-commencement hearings with all appointees to the MPC of the Bank of England and the chairman of the FSA.

These hearings will give the committee a full opportunity to discuss with the appointee their priorities and experience, and for external MPC appointments, coupled with the reforms announced last month, will allow the committee to evaluate their skills and qualities against the published criteria.

Furthermore, as part of the proposals for increasing the independence of Government statistics currently before Parliament, to further increase public confidence, I propose a vote in the House of Commons to confirm the Government's nominee for chair of the statistics board. I can also confirm today that, following the debate in Parliament, I propose pre-release access to national statistics will be reduced from up to five days for non-market sensitive and 40.5 hours for market sensitive statistics to 24 hours for all statistics.

In addition, in order to enable Parliament to better scrutinise public spending, I am proposing to simplify the planning, parliamentary approval and reporting of public spending by aligning estimates and accounts with budgets and the fiscal rules.

Double Taxation Agreements

The Financial Secretary to the Treasury (Jane Kennedy): A new double taxation agreement with the Faroes was signed on 20 June 2007 and a new protocol to the double taxation agreement with Switzerland was signed on 26 June 2007. The texts of the double taxation agreement and the protocol have been deposited in the Libraries of both Houses and are available on HM Revenue and Customs' website. The texts will be scheduled to draft Orders in Council and laid before the House of Commons in due course.

BUSINESS, ENTERPRISE AND REGULATORY REFORM

UK Inward Investment Results - 2006-07

The Secretary of State for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform (Mr. John Hutton): With my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, I am delighted to inform the House that the UK continues to be a world class business destination.

UK Trade and Investment has announced today, in its launch of the UK Inward Investment Results 2006-07, that there were 1,431 direct investments in the UK by foreign owned companies between 1 April 2006 and 31 March 2007 as reported by UK Trade and Investment and its partner agencies in Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and the English regional development agencies. This is an increase of 17 per cent. on the year before and this reconfirms the UK's position as the top investment location in Europe. Overall total jobs figures were down 12 per cent. to 78,357 of which new jobs were up 7 per cent. to 36,526.

This performance reflects the confidence which companies around the world continue to show in the business environment. The number of new projects has increased by 18 per cent. from 508 in 2005-06 to 600 in 2006-07 while confirming 334 expansions by existing investors which is down by just 1 per cent. from 337 expansions the previous year.

UK Trade and Investment's five year strategy "Prosperity in a Changing World" has refocused and restructured to concentrate on the areas where Government can make the most difference to maintain and grow the UK economy. For inward investment, UK Trade and Investment is targeting high value, innovative inward investment and entrepreneurial talent, especially research and development projects that match and enhance the UK strengths. The UK has therefore positioned itself as a springboard for global growth for companies seeking to grow internationally from a UK base.

I am arranging for a copy of the UK Inward Investment Report 2006-07 to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

DEFENCE

Depleted Uranium Exposure

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Derek Twigg): In 2003 King's College London was commissioned by the Ministry of Defence , as part of its major health and wellbeing survey of Operation

TELIC personnel, to investigate the distribution and determinants of exposure to depleted uranium (DU) resulting from the use of DU munitions. Researchers visited bases in the UK and Germany and obtained urine samples from a total of 369 personnel who had taken part in the combat phase of the operation. Volunteers were sought in four categories, combat, non-combat, battlefield medical and vehicle clean-up personnel among which the last two groups were expected to have the greatest chance of exposure.

The findings of the study are today being published in the journal Occupational and Environmental Medicine. No evidence was found for DU contamination in UK forces exposed to DU munitions. Analysis of the urine samples indicated only traces of natural uranium from normal dietary sources at levels consistent with those in non DU-exposed populations.

I welcome publication of these results, which should further reassure our veterans and others that the risk of incidental contamination by battlefield use of DU munitions is very small.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Probation Board Business Plan 2007-08

The Minister of State, Northern Ireland Office (Paul Goggins): I have today published the Probation Board for Northern Ireland business plan for 2007-08. The plan sets out the board's key objectives and performance targets for the coming year.

Copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

JUSTICE

Court of Protection Rules

The Secretary of State for Justice and Lord Chancellor (Mr. Jack Straw): I have today laid before Parliament the Court of Protection Rules 2007, the Mental Capacity Act 2005 (Transfer of Proceedings) Order 2007 and the Mental Capacity Act 2005 (Transitional and Consequential Provisions) Order 2007.

The Mental Capacity Act 2005 establishes a new specialist court, the Court of Protection, with a jurisdiction to deal with decision making for people who lack mental capacity to make those decisions for themselves. The Act as amended provides for rules of court to be made by the Lord Chief Justice (or his judicial nominee), with the Lord Chancellor's agreement, to govern the manner in which proceedings are conducted in the new Court of Protection.

The new court has a jurisdiction to decide issues of capacity, to make decisions and to appoint people to make decisions on behalf of people who lack capacity to make those decisions themselves. The new court will have jurisdiction to make decisions both in relation to the property and financial affairs of people who lack capacity and in relation to their personal welfare. A public consultation on the rules was conducted between July and October 2006. Responses were received from a range of organisations and individuals including organisations representing people who lack capacity, their families and carers. In addition, a group comprising members of the judiciary and legal profession with experience of the operation of the current court and the High Court, under the auspices of the President of the Family Division, has provided advice on the development of the Rules. The new Court of Protection will operate from 1 October 2007.

The Mental Capacity Act 2005 (Transfer of Proceedings) Order provides for transfers of proceedings between the Court of Protection and a court having jurisdiction under the Children Act 1989.

The Mental Capacity Act 2005 (Transitional and Consequential Provisions) Order 2007 contains transitional and consequential provisions to the Act. The transitional provisions deal with the transfer of proceedings between the High Court and the new Court of Protection, the Senior Judge of the Court of Protection and pre-existing advance decisions to refuse life-sustaining treatment at the commencement of the Act on 1 October 2007.

Judicial Appointments Commission

The Secretary of State for Justice and Lord Chancellor (Mr. Jack Straw): The 2006-07 annual report and accounts for the Judicial Appointments Commission will be laid before Parliament today.

I welcome the publication of the first annual report of the Judicial Appointments Commission. The commission plays a vital role in the selection of judges and in making recommendations about judicial appointments to me as Secretary of State and Lord Chancellor.

I am glad that the report reflects the hard work and dedication of the commissioners and staff under the leadership of the Chairman, Baroness Prashar CBE. In particular, the report details the many challenges that the Commission faced and met during its first year of operation including the significant task of managing a challenging selection exercise programme.

I look forward to working with the commission and I know that they will relish the challenge of building on the significant achievements of their first year.

PRIME MINISTER

Council of Europe and Western European Union

The Prime Minister (Mr. Gordon Brown): My right hon. Friend the Member for Kingston upon Hull, East (Mr. Prescott) has been appointed as a full representative of the United Kingdom Delegation to the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe and the Assembly of Western European Union in place of my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Tony Lloyd).

BUSINESS, ENTERPRISE AND REGULATORY REFORM

Competitiveness Council

The Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform (Malcolm Wicks): The following statement provides information on the Competitiveness Council in Luxembourg on 25 June at which I represented the UK. Annette Schavan, German Federal Education and Research Minister, chaired the Council.

The Council held an exchange of views and reached agreement on a general approach on the European Institute of Technology (EIT). The Council agreed that the number of Knowledge and Innovation Communities (KICs) should be set at two or three to allow for flexibility and that the possibility of establishing KICs "inter alia" in renewable energy and climate change should be included in the preamble to the draft regulation establishing the EIT. On the budget, the Council agreed a sum of €308.7 million for a six-year period beginning on 1 January 2008. The UK expressed its concerns over this figure.

Council conclusions were adopted on a charter for the management of intellectual property rights and on the CREST report on co-ordination of the structural funds and the framework programme to support research and development.

Ministers then had a short exchange of views on the European Research Area (ERA) Green Paper following up on discussions at the Wuerzburg Ministerial informal and the May Competitiveness Council, focusing on strengthening research institutions, knowledge sharing and international co-operation. The Council agreed that more effective knowledge transfer between universities, business and public research institutions was at the heart of improving Europe's capacity for innovation and some argued that any Commission proposals following the Green Paper would need to be informed by effective evaluation of sixth framework programme for research.

Under AOB the Commission gave four presentations on the recently or soon to be adopted legislation to set up the Clean Sky and European Nanoelectronics Initiative Advisory Council (ENIAC) Joint Techonlogy Initiatives (JTIs) and the Ambient Assisted Living and EUROSTARS article 169 initiatives, stressing the need to get rapid agreement on the JTIs to maintain industry interest.

The presidency gave a presentation on the Euro-Med Education and Research Ministers Conference, and an update on the proposal for a directive on the marketing of certain measuring devices containing mercury.

Also under AOB the Portuguese delegation set out their plans for their upcoming presidency.

HEALTH

Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health (Mr. Ivan Lewis): The annual report for 2006-07 has been laid before Parliament today and copies have been placed in the Library. The report covers research and development work carried out by or on behalf of any Government Department in relation to equipment that might increase the range of activities and independence or well being of disabled people.

The current report places such research in the context of the national service framework for long-term conditions and the White Paper on Adult Social Care and outlines the role of assistive technology in making independent living easier for older people and people with disabilities. The report describes the wide range of Government funded projects supporting the development, introduction and evaluation of assistive technology.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Youth Justice Agency of Northern Ireland

The Minister of State, Northern Ireland Office (Paul Goggins): I have placed copies of the Youth Justice Agency's Annual Report and Accounts for 2006-07 in the Libraries of both Houses.

This is the Agency's fourth annual report since its inception on 1 April 2003. It achieved nine of its 10 key performance targets and 19 of its 23 development objectives.

SCOTLAND

Boundary Commission for Scotland

The Secretary of State for Scotland (Des Browne): I have received notice from the Boundary Commission for Scotland that it intends, in pursuance of the Scotland Act 1998, as amended by the Scottish Parliament (Constituencies) Act 2004, to commence a general review of the constituency boundaries of the Scottish Parliament. The review will cover the boundaries of all constituencies—other than the Orkney Islands and the Shetland Islands—and the eight regions. The Commission is required to submit its report to me not later than 30 June 2010.

I am also pleased to announce that Mr Kenneth McDonald has recently been appointed as a Commissioner of the Boundary Commission for Scotland. His appointment will run until June 2011.

TREASURY

Economic and Financial Affairs Council (ECOFIN)

The Chancellor of the Exchequer (Mr. Alistair Darling): The Economic and Financial Affairs Council will be held on 10 July in Brussels. The items on the agenda are as follows:

Presidency Work Programme

The Portuguese Presidency will present its work programme for the next six months. They are likely to concentrate on an economic policy oriented towards growth and stability, in particular the Quality of Public Finances, the Lisbon Strategy, and the strict application of the Stability and Growth Pact and the enlargement of the Euro area. They also intend to focus on better regulation, completing the internal market, and approval of the 2008 EU Budget.

Implementation of the Stability and Growth Pact

Ministers will discuss the Stability Programme for Austria and the Convergence Programme for the Czech Republic. All other member states were discussed at ECOFIN in February and March, but the process for these two countries was delayed because of changes in Government. Excessive Deficit Procedures against the Czech Republic and Hungary will also be discussed. The UK supports a prudent interpretation of the Stability and Growth Pact (SGP) which takes into account the level of debt, the influence of the cycle and the level of public investment, and ensures that any recommendations reflect each member state's economic position.

The euro

Ministers will adopt legal acts allowing Cyprus and Malta to join the euro on 1 January 2008. Heads of State and Government at the European Council considered a letter from ECOFIN and agreed with the Finance Ministers' recommendation that both countries should be allowed to adopt the euro.

Public Finances in EMU 2007

Ministers will hold an exchange of views on the Commission Report, which is an annual publication and was accompanied by a Commission Communication outlining proposals to improve the functioning of the SGP. The Report focuses on ways to keep up the momentum of fiscal adjustment so as to make rapid progress towards the achievement of sustainable fiscal positions.

Relations with Third Countries

There will be a debriefing by the Presidency and the Commission on the EU-US Summit 30th April 2007, and an exchange of views on economic, financial and regulatory aspects of dialogues with other third countries.

International Accounting Standards Board: governance and financing

Ministers will be asked to agree Council Conclusions, which acknowledge the steps taken by the International Accounting Standards Board (IASB) and its associated bodies to improve governance and also make a number of suggestions to improve further both IASB governance and funding regime going forward.

Global Navigation Satellite System (GALILEO)

There will be an exchange of views on the financing of the Galileo project. UK will continue to push for full clarity on costs and a solution that avoids any re-opening or revision of the financial perspective.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Empty Property Relief

The Minister of State, Department for Communities and Local Government (John Healey): I am today publishing a consultation on detailed aspects of reforms to the current system of relief from business rates for owners of empty properties.

The modernisation of empty property relief is a key element of a broad package of measures which promote the efficient use of land and property, announced in the 2007 Budget. The Rating (Empty Properties) Bill, which received its Third Reading in the House of Lords on 3 July and now awaits Royal Assent, will provide a stronger incentive for owners to bring empty shops, offices, factories and warehouses back into use—helping to revitalise town centres, reduce rents for businesses and bring forward new opportunities for commercial and housing development on brownfield sites.

The consultation paper published today seeks views on detailed aspects of the reforms to empty property relief, to be achieved through secondary legislation. In particular, it invites views on potential changes to a small number of the current exemptions from empty property rates; and on new measures to prevent the avoidance of empty property rates, which the Government propose to bring in under a power provided in Schedule 1 of the Rating (Empty Properties) Bill.

The response to the consultation, which closes on 1 October 2007, will inform the secondary legislation required to give effect to the reforms which, as announced in the 2007 Budget, will be brought into force on 1 April 2008, subject to Parliamentary consent.

Copies of the consultation document have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

JUSTICE

Boundary Commission for England

The Secretary of State for Justice and Lord Chancellor (Mr. Jack Straw): I should like to inform the House that I have, under Schedule 1 to the Parliamentary Constituencies Act 1986, reappointed the honourable Mr. Justice Sullivan as Deputy Chairman of the Boundary Commission for England, to hold office until 31 March 2010.

Written Ministerial Statements

TREASURY

Economic and Financial Affairs Council (Budget ECOFIN)

The Economic Secretary to the Treasury (Kitty Ussher): I will attend the Budget ECOFIN to be held on 13 July in Brussels. Discussion will be on the Preliminary Draft Budget for the European Communities for 2008 and the meeting will include conciliation with the European Parliament, during which Council and the European Parliament will discuss expenditure levels. Items on the agenda are as follows:

Preparation for the conciliation meeting with the European Parliament;

Conciliation with the European Parliament;

Establishment by the Council of the draft EC Budget for 2008.

JUSTICE

Public Guardianship Office

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Justice (Bridget Prentice): The Public Guardianship Office's Annual Report and Accounts for 2006-07 have been laid before Parliament today. This document gives full details of the agency's performance and expenditure for that year.

TRANSPORT

New Cross Country Rail Franchise

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. Tom Harris): The Department are today announcing that Arriva Trains Cross Country Ltd has been awarded the New Cross Country franchise. The new franchise combines most of the existing Cross Country services currently operated by Virgin Cross Country and some services currently operated by Central Trains.

The contract will begin on 11 November 2007 and run for eight years and four months with the option for the Department for Transport (DFT) to terminate the contract after six years if performance targets are not met. The DFT will pay Arriva Trains Cross Country Ltd a subsidy of £1.056 billion.

The contract which DFT has signed will add capacity by nearly 3,000 seats each day on key routes at the busiest times by June 2009. Most additional seating capacity will be provided by reintroducing high speed trains to the network. These trains will be refurbished to the standard of the Voyager trains used on current Cross Country services; further seating capacity and additional luggage space will be added by modifying the Voyager fleet. The Stansted - Birmingham and Nottingham - Cardiff routes will see refurbished trains by June 2009 featuring more seats, and new first class accommodation.

A new timetable will be introduced in December 2008 based on the route structure specified developed by a cross-industry group to maximise the benefits of the West Coast Mainline modernisation. Arriva Trains Cross Country Ltd will offer a limited number of service extensions above and beyond the minimum specification maintaining some current direct journey opportunities which were not included in the franchise specification.

Extra help will be provided for passengers who need to change trains, especially at Birmingham New Street. Onboard staff will be equipped with technology to give up to the minute information on train times and connections. There will be an information campaign to advise passengers of other stations where they can change more easily than at Birmingham New Street. Extra staff will be employed to help passengers during major timetable changes in December 2008.

Arriva Trains Cross Country Ltd is contracted to improve performance and will introduce state of the art web based ticketing which will allow customers to print tickets at home.

The Government will continue to regulate fares for the franchise in line with national policy, currently RPI+1 per cent. As with all franchises, unregulated fares are the responsibility of individual operators.

In the New Cross Country franchise, Arriva Trains Cross Country Ltd has indicated possible average rises in unregulated fares of 3.4 per cent. above inflation each year.

The New Cross Country franchise will offer a single compensation policy for all passengers. As with other recently announced franchises, discounts in renewal for season tickets valid between one month and one year in compensation for poor punctuality and reliability will be replaced by compensation based on delays to individual journeys, known as Delay/Repay. Under the new system, all passengers will be entitled to claim compensation for all delays, whatever their cause:

50 per cent. of the price paid for a single-leg journey delayed by between 30 and 59 minutes;

100 per cent. of the price paid for a single-leg journey delayed by between 60 and 119 minutes; and

100 per cent. of the price paid for a return journey delayed by more than 119 minutes.

The changes will also start to standardise disparate compensation arrangements for single, return and weekly season ticket holders on different train operators.

TREASURY

First Solution Money Transfer

The Economic Secretary to the Treasury (Kitty Ussher): In light of the recent financial difficulties experienced by the money transfer company, First Solution Money Transfer Ltd, the Companies Investigation Branch (CIB) of the Insolvency Service, within the Department for Business; Enterprise and Regulatory Reform, is carrying out an examination of the facts of the case. CIB has powers to investigate companies where there is suspicion of some form of misconduct, or where the facts need to be substantiated.

The BERR Minister, Stephen Timms, also met with representatives of the affected community last week to hear their concerns.

An insolvency practitioner has not yet been formally appointed to act as voluntary liquidator. However, the company has asked customers who have been affected by the financial difficulties experienced by First Solution Money Transfer Ltd to contact their nominated insolvency practitioners, Panos Eliades Franklin & Co on 020 8815 4000.

The Government have already committed, following agreement reached on the EU Payment Services Directive (PSD) in April 2007, to bring money transfer companies into regulation from November 2009. HM Treasury will launch a public consultation on the implementation of the PSD in autumn 2007. The Government encourage money transfer providers and users to participate actively in this consultation.

The Government recognise that international remittances through formal channels are an increasingly important source of development finance, and can have a significant positive economic impact in developing countries, particularly in low-income countries. The Department for International Development (DFID) recognises the challenges associated with sending remittances to developing countries, and is currently supporting a project to improve the transparency and lower the cost with which migrants are able to remit funds home to Bangladesh. DFID also funds the UK Remittances Task Force, which aims to promote greater transparency, competition and better information within the UK remittances market, and has developed a voluntary Customer Charter to improve remittance services in the UK.

In HM Treasury's document "Financial Inclusion: the way forward", published in March 2007, the Government stated that they would approach the UK Remittances Task Force, to ask if it will consider how remittance services fit with existing financial service products offered to migrant communities by various providers. In taking forward this work, the Government will ask the Task Force to consider whether there are any lessons from the First Solution case for access to remittances and wider financial services by migrants in the UK.

DEFENCE

Agency Key Targets

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Derek Twigg): Key targets for the financial year 2007-08 for the following Ministry of Defence agencies and trading funds have been placed in the Library of the House.

ABRO
Defence Aviation Repair Agency
Service Children's Education

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Environment Council

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Hilary Benn): Anne Lambert (UK Deputy Permanent Representative to the EU) represented the UK at the Environment Council in Luxembourg on 28 June.

The Council reached a unanimous political agreement on the draft directive on waste. The UK supports the agreement reached and the agreed text will now be negotiated with the European Parliament. In particular the Council agreement meets two of the UK's key concerns, namely that the single market for waste materials for recycling should not be impeded, and that the Commission should carry out proper impact assessments before introducing any new EU-wide minimum standards for waste treatment operations. Political agreement was also reached on a draft Directive establishing environmental quality standards (EQS) in the field of water policy. The UK supports this which provides a high level of protection for the environment with a risk-based and cost-effective approach in line with the Water Framework Directive. The Council also reached political agreement on a draft regulation banning exports and ensuring the safe storage of metallic mercury. At the request of Sweden, Ministers agreed that metallic mercury should only be eligible for underground storage after the development of specific environmental criteria through the EU's comitology process.

The Council agreed a set of Conclusions to inform the Commission's forthcoming legislative proposal on reducing CO_2 emissions from cars. Ministers endorsed the general thrust of plans set out by the Commission in February and gave their backing to a target to reduce average CO_2 emissions to 120 grams per kilometre by 2012 for new cars sold in the EU. Council Conclusions were adopted on the Review of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme (EU ETS) and the Commission will now aim to present legislative proposals by the end of 2007. With regard to preparations for the Convention on Biological Diversity (Bonn, 19-30 May 2008), Environment Ministers adopted the Council Conclusions. The Council also adopted Conclusions on new perspectives for EU environmental policy which deals with three specific issues: the 6th Environmental Action Plan, market-based instruments, and eco-innovation.

The Council adopted by qualified majority a mandate for the Commission to negotiate an international regime on liability and redress for damage resulting from transboundary movements of living modified organisms under the Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety. The UK voted against, because we have political, legal and practical concerns. A planned vote on whether to approve a genetically modified potato for cultivation in the EU was withdrawn from the agenda by the Presidency.

Under 'AOB', the German Presidency provided progress reports on: the inclusion of aviation activities in the EU ETS, the Fuel Quality Review, and the Soil Directive. The Presidency also provided information on the sustainable use of pesticides Directive, the Environment for Europe process, the proposed Regulation on marketing of Plant Protection Products and the outcome of the 3rd Conference of the Parties to the Stockholm Convention on Persistent Organic Pollutants. The Commission provided information on emissions from heavy duty vehicles (Euro VI), ship dismantling, the Green Paper on adaptation and on the deliberate release of GMOs.

Information on the risk assessment of GMOs, the Commission for the protection of the Danube river, the Midnight Sun Dialogue on climate change, the Council of Baltic Sea States meeting, the Aarhus Convention and Natura 2000 was requested by Member States. Information on the Workshop on the Thematic Strategy for Soil Protection and VII Ibero-American Forum of Ministers of the Environment was provided by Member States.

TREASURY

National Statistics (Annual Report)

The Exchequer Secretary to the Treasury (Angela Eagle): The National Statistics Annual Report for 2006-07 is being published and laid before Parliament today. Copies are available in the Libraries of the House and is also accessible on the National Statistics web site.

UK Asset Freezing Regime

The Economic Secretary to the Treasury (Kitty Ussher): In a written ministerial statement of 10 October 2006, the previous Economic Secretary undertook to report to Parliament on a quarterly basis on the operation of the UK's asset freezing regime. This is the third of these reports and covers the period April-June 2007.[1]

Asset-freezing designations

In the quarter April-June 2007, the Treasury made three domestic designations under the Terrorism (United Nations Measures) Order 2006.

None of these were persons already designated under earlier Orders.

The Terrorism Order and the Al-Qaida and Taliban Order provide, where appropriate, for designations to be made confidentially and with restricted circulation of notice. No persons were designated on this basis in this quarter.

One person was designated on the basis of closed source material provided by law enforcement and intelligence agencies.

There were no financial sanctions listings at the EU or the UN in relation to terrorism or Al-Qaida and the Taliban of persons with links to the UK.

No designated persons have been delisted in this quarter.

A total of 244 separate accounts and approximately £570,000[2] of suspected terrorist funds have been frozen in the UK since 2001.

Reviews

The Treasury keeps domestic asset-freezing cases under review. A number of formal reviews have been initiated in this quarter and the review of 1 case has been completed. In this case a decision was taken following the review to maintain the asset freeze.

Licensing policy

In accordance with UN Security Council Resolution 1452 (2002), the Treasury operates a licensing system whereby designated persons and others are able to apply to make or receive payments under specific and, if necessary, monitored conditions. In this quarter, the following licences were issued:

Seven listed persons were granted basic expenses licences (two of which were for benefits payments)

No listed persons were granted extraordinary expenses licences; and six listed persons were granted legal expenses licences.

In addition, the households of three listed persons were granted benefits licences in accordance with the policy set out in the previous Economic Secretary's statement of 3 July 2006 to Parliament.

[1] The detail that can be provided to the House on a quarterly basis is subject to the need to avoid the identification, directly or indirectly, of personal or operationally sensitive information.

[2] This figure includes approximately $58,000 of suspected terrorist funds frozen in the UK. This has been converted using current exchange rates. Future fluctuations in the exchange rate may impact on the contribution this sum makes to future totals of suspected terrorist funds frozen.

Tax Credits

The Financial Secretary to the Treasury (Jane Kennedy): Tax credits today provide support to 20 million people including 6 million families and 10 million children. Take-up of tax credits is a significant success. In 2004-05 take-up of the Child Tax Credit rose from 79 per cent. to 82 per cent., with over 90 per cent. of the money available being claimed. Take-up among those on incomes below £10,000 is 97 per cent. and take-up among lone parents is 93 per cent. This is higher than for any previous system of income-related financial support for working families.

Tax credits play a major role in moving people into work and helping people move up the employment ladder, ensuring that work pays over welfare. Tax credits, economic stability, and the Government's welfare to work programmes have helped to increase the number of people in work by over 2.6 million since spring 1997.

As a result of the Government's reforms to the tax and benefit system since 1997, from April 2007, in real terms:

families with children are, on average, £1,550 a year better off, while those in the poorest fifth will be, on average, £3,450 per year better off; and a single-earner family on half average male earnings with two children is £3,900 a year better off.

The tax credit system has also played a key role in tackling child poverty. Since 1998-99, 600,000 children have been lifted out of relative poverty, compared to a doubling of child poverty in the previous 20 years.

Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs are today publishing their estimates of error and fraud in the tax credits system in 2004-05. This analysis shows that the rate of error and fraud has declined by a sixth between 2003-04 and 2004-05. This is below the error and fraud rate under the predecessor system; and comparable with error and fraud rates for Income Support and Job Seekers Allowance when the Government first started collecting data in a systematic way in 1997-98.

Looking to the future, HMRC are seeking to accelerate the production of error and fraud figures, which will enable them to set clear targets for a further reduction. HMRC are also looking carefully at whether an estimate can be made of the split between customer error and official error for the 2005-06 and subsequent enquiries.

The largest component of the figures published today is error (£1.13 billion) as opposed to fraud (£40 million). These figures are from a period when the Inland Revenue was starting to recover from the early operational difficulties and new rules and processes were starting to become established.

Since the introduction of tax credits, HMRC has had a detailed programme of action in place to ensure that individuals receive the tax credits to which they are entitled, at the right time. To tackle error, HMRC have continued to improve their communications with members of the public—simplifying the claim form and award notices. Access to contact centres has also been improved, with 99 per cent. of callers in 2006-07 answered on the day they called. Advertising and increased contact has been used to make individuals aware of their entitlements and reduce error.

HMRC is also committed to tackling official error. Accuracy in processing and calculating awards rose from 78.6 per cent. in 2003-04 to 97.7 per cent in 2005-06.

To tackle fraud, HMRC has further refined its risk assessment processes and increased pre-payment checks on claims where fraud or non-compliance is suspected. In addition, compliance specialists are now in place in tax credit contact centres. By providing support and advice to contact centre staff, they have successfully prevented a significant number of attempts to defraud the tax credit system.

Information on organised fraud shows that HMRC is successfully stopping the majority of claims identified as being submitted by organised fraudsters. In 2006-07 HMRC identified attempts to defraud the tax credit system of around £252 million. Of this, the vast majority—some £212 million, was detected by HMRC before any money was paid out.

Tax credits and economic stability have helped to increase the number of people in work by more than 2.6 million since spring 1997, and since 1997 long-term unemployment has reduced by 460,000. Tax credits have improved work incentives, reduced the tax burden on low-to-middle-income families and helped dramatically to reduce child poverty.

United Kingdom Coins 2009

The Chancellor of the Exchequer (Mr. Alistair Darling): Her Majesty The Queen has been graciously pleased to approve my recommendation that the following coins should be issued in 2009:

a crown piece to celebrate the 500th anniversary of the accession of Henry VIII;

a two pound coin to mark the 200th anniversary of the birth of Charles Darwin and the 150th anniversary of publication of The Origin of the Species;

a two pound coin to celebrate the 250th anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns; and a 50 pence piece to commemorate the 250th anniversary of the foundation of the Royal Botanic Gardens at Kew.

Collector versions of these coins will be released at a premium above face value and, during the course of 2009, the coins will also become available at face value from banks and post offices.

BUSINESS, ENTERPRISE AND REGULATORY REFORM

Energy Demand Reduction Project

The Secretary of State for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform (Mr. John Hutton): Contracts have been signed with EOF Energy, E.ON UK, Scottish and Southern Energy, and Scottish Power to conduct the trials of smart meters and associated feedback devices. They are being funded by £10 million from Government matched by a similar amount from the companies involved. The funding was announced as part of Budget 2006.

The trials will include 15,000 households receiving state of the art smart meters and 8,000 more receiving clip on real time display units for their existing meters. The other households in the trial will be testing new ways of receiving information to help them cut their energy use. Altogether around 40,000 households will be involved.

Clip on real time display units can tell people how much energy they are using, and how much it is costing when individual appliances are turned on. Smart meters allow energy suppliers to communicate directly with their customers, removing the need for meter-readings and ensuring entirely accurate bills with no estimates. Smart meters tell people about their energy use either through linked display units or in other ways, such as through the internet or the television.

The trials will test out consumers' response to better information on their energy use through a variety of methods, including:

Consumers to be able to access information about their consumption and energy costs through visual display units that can be displayed round the house, over the internet and even through digital TV;

The potential for energy suppliers to provide enhanced billing information with advice to consumers on how they can cut down their energy bills; and,

Providing a breakdown of energy use to the customer and exploring a range of tariffs for consumption at different times of the day.

The trials will be conducted throughout the country and will look at the responses from a range of customers, including those in fuel poverty.

The trials will also look at:

Increasing the frequency of billing as well as the impact of more accurate bills; and Encouragement to become even more energy efficient through more information and community engagement.

Smart meters are expected to be rolled out to most households within the next 10 years, and all but the smallest businesses in the next five years.

In the meantime, Government have proposed that real time display units be provided with any new meters fitted from 2008, and to all households that request them between 2008 and 2010. It is estimated that these short-term measures will deliver savings of 0.3 million tones of carbon per year by 2020. Government will be consulting further on the implementation of these proposals.

DEFENCE

Greenhouse Gas Emissions

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Derek Twigg): I have placed in the Library of the House today a table detailing for 2005 the cost to the Ministry of Defence (MOD) of participating in the first year of phase 1 of the EU European Trading Scheme (2005).

The table details MOD sites registered in the scheme, the number of free allowances, actual carbon dioxide emissions, scheme administration costs, and additional allowance costs.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Home Energy Conservation Act

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Hilary Benn): Data reported by Energy Conservation Authorities in England under the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995 in the period 1 April 1996 to 31 March 2006 have been placed in the Libraries of the House. This data have also been published on the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs website. Authorities have reported an overall improvement in domestic energy efficiency of 19.26 per cent. as measured against a 1996 baseline.

Floods

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Hilary Benn): The month of June was the wettest June on record; in excess of 150mm of rain fell over most of the Midlands and northern England with between 200 and 300mm in parts of the North East. These extreme conditions led to large scale urban flooding, a lot of which was from surface water run-off rather than from rivers. The flooding affected places across the Midlands and Yorkshire and Humberside, and tragically four people lost their lives as a direct result of the flooding. The circumstances of three other reported deaths are still being investigated. Over 37,000 properties including some 7,000 businesses are reported to have been affected, with nearly 18,000 properties affected in the Hull area alone and over 5,000 in the Doncaster area. It is estimated that thousands of people are still out of their homes with around 300 in emergency accommodation in Sheffield and Doncaster, and Hull. The response of the emergency services, local authorities, operating authorities, voluntary sector and the affected communities has been very impressive.

However, as the affected communities, businesses and individuals move to the long and difficult task of recovery, they are understandably asking questions about the flooding—its causes and subsequent management. My ministerial colleagues and I have said that it is vital that we learn lessons now about how to manage and respond to this type of disaster in the future. As part of the usual process following an emergency we are establishing a review to identify these lessons, and the Prime Minister stated on 8 July that the conclusions of such an exercise would be made public. I am, therefore, announcing today how the Government intend to go about this and our aim to publish initial findings by the end of the year and subsequently a formal Government report. The review will be led by officials from the Cabinet Office with my officials' support. They will report to me, the Minister for the Cabinet Office, and the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government.

The review will look at flood risk management, the emergency response and the initial moves towards recovery. The longer-term recovery effort will require sustained commitment over a considerable period of time, and a further review will be undertaken separately once these tasks are well in hand and we are better able to assess the lessons to be drawn from it.

The review will consider all available evidence on the flooding and its impacts and what this means for the future. Its specific objectives will be;

i. To understand why the flooding was so extensive;

ii. To learn lessons on how in future we can best predict, prevent or mitigate the scale and impact of flooding incidents;

iii. To look at how best to co-ordinate the response to flooding in future;

iv. To establish what access to support, equipment and information is needed by those involved in the response at local, regional and national levels;

v. To ensure the public has as much access as possible to information on the risk of flooding to allow them to take appropriate precautions, be adequately informed on developments as an emergency unfolds, and be looked after properly in the immediate aftermath;

vi. To establish how the transition from response to recovery is best managed;

vii. To identify those aspects of the response that worked well and should be promoted and reinforced;

viii. To make recommendations in each of these areas to improve the UK's preparedness for flooding events in the future.

The lessons learned exercise will be wide ranging and will hear from those involved at the local, regional and national level. It will ensure a structured approach to public engagement so that the voices of local communities are heard, including affected individuals and locally elected representatives (councillors and local MPs). At the same time I recognise that a considerable amount of work is taking place dealing with the recovery from last month's events—the review will therefore take place in a staged approach. It will identify areas for attention as quickly as possible with fuller responses over a slightly longer timescale. We aim to summarise initial findings of the review by the end of the year and explore more fully how we propose to address them in a subsequent published report.

Wet Weather and Farmers

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Hilary Benn): The unprecedented wet weather has caused significant disruption for a number of farmers. In recent days, including during my visit to the Great Yorkshire show, I have received representations from industry representatives and individual farmers about two specific measures we might take to help alleviate their difficulties. Both have now been implemented.

Given the urgency of the issue, I gave instructions yesterday that the cross compliance requirement (Good Agricultural and Environmental Condition (GAEC) 3) prohibiting the use of mechanical field operations and mechanised vehicles on waterlogged soil should be suspended until 31 July 2007. This will enable farmers to use mechanical equipment and vehicles on waterlogged soil and access their crops. Farmers should use their soil protection review as a means to identify and mitigate any soil-related issues arising as a result of the suspension.

Livestock farmers have also been experiencing problems in accessing sufficient forage for their animals. I have, therefore, authorised the rural payments agency (RPA) to allow farmers in England to graze set-aside land with their own animals or harvest hay or silage for their own use. Farmers wishing to make use of this derogation should telephone, e-mail or write to the RPA customer service centre providing the reference numbers for the fields which they wish to graze or harvest. Exceptionally, in these circumstances, farmers may consider that the derogation has been granted unless RPA subsequently makes contact to indicate otherwise.

http://www.rpa.gov.uk/rpa/index.nsf/0/839744302B8BBA1080257315005078F1

HEALTH

Medical Training Data

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health (Ann Keen): Following the end of the first round of recruitment for specialty training on 22 June, I should like to give to the House the data that shows the number of posts that have been filled in England.

The information is in the tables. These figures show that 85 per cent. of all junior doctor training posts in England have been filled by the end of round one. Of a total of 15,600 training posts available in England, 13,168 have been offered to and accepted by junior doctors.

A second round of recruitment has commenced and will run until 31 October. Deaneries have informed the Department that there are 2,320 posts available to applicants within Round Two.

As part of the package announced in the House on 24 May there will also be around 1,000 training posts made available at the end of this year's recruitment process to appointable junior doctors who did not secure a post in Rounds One or Two.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Forensic Science Regulator

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Meg Hillier): I am today announcing the arrangements we have put in hand to establish the post of forensic science regulator whose role will be to advise Government and the Criminal Justice System on quality standards in the provision of forensic science. This will involve identifying the requirement for new or improved quality standards; leading on the development of new standards where necessary; providing advice and guidance so that providers will be able to demonstrate compliance with common standards, for example, in procurement and in courts; ensuring that satisfactory arrangements exist to provide assurance and monitoring of the standards and reporting on quality standards generally.

The regulator will be supported and advised by a Forensic Science Advisory Council whose members will be drawn from key stakeholders, expert bodies and others with a particular interest in the provision of forensic science to the Criminal Justice System. These arrangements draw on the recommendations of the House of Commons Science and Technology Committee in its report "Forensic Science on Trial" which was published on 16 March 2005 and on the responses to a consultation exercise carried out by the Home Office last year.

A team has been established in the Home Office under the management of a senior civil servant to set up the Office of the Regulator and the Forensic Science Advisory Council. The regulator will be appointed by the Home Secretary following recruitment through the public appointments process. Pending this recruitment, the responsible official will serve as the interim regulator.

JUSTICE

Prison Places

The Minister of State, Ministry of Justice (Mr. David Hanson): In his statement on Tuesday 19 June, Official Report, House of Lords, column 96 that the Government were to provide an additional 1,500 prison places, the then Lord Chancellor agreed to make available the information about where the first 500 of those new places would be located. That information is given in the following table.

Prison Location [1]	Security Category [2]	Build Type [3]	Number of Places	Planned Operational Date [4]
Blundeston, Lowestoft, Suffolk	C - Trainer	TCM	60	January 2008
Erlestoke, Devizes, Wiltshire	C - Trainer	TCM	60	January 2008
Kirklevington Grange, Yarm, Cleveland	C/D - Resettlement	TCM	60	February 2008
Ranby, Retford, Nottinghamshire	C - Trainer	TCM	60	February 2008
Isle of Wight	Conversion of Existing Buildings		68	March 2008
Wymott, Preston, Lancashire	C - Trainer	RBRU	64	July 2008
Ashwell, Oakham, Rutland	C - Resettlement	RBRU	64	August 2008
Highpoint, Newmarket, Suffolk	C	RBRU	64	August 2008
Total Number of Places		-	500

Notes:

[1] All new places are in existing adult male prisons.

[2] All prisoners are given a security categorisation when they enter prison. These categories are based on the likelihood that they will try to escape, and the danger to the public if they did escape. The description of Category C prisoners is: prisoners who cannot be trusted in open conditions but who do not have the resources and will to make a determined escape attempt.

[3] TCM: Temporary Custodial Module - RBRU: Rapid Build Residential Unit

[4] This is the month when the first prisoners are expected to occupy the additional capacity places that have been built.

Officials from the Ministry of Justice have made initial contact with the relevant local planning authorities, and will discuss the plans fully with those authorities over the next few months. Separate letters have been sent to the MPs for the constituencies concerned.

An announcement about decisions on the remaining 1,000 places will be made after Lord Carter has completed his review of the prison building programme, that was also referred to in the announcement on 19 June.

Children's Fund Accounts

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Justice (Bridget Prentice): The Court Funds Office (CFO), an associated office of the Ministry of Justice, provides a banking and investment service for funds held in court. The work is governed by the Administration Act 1982, the civil procedure rules and the court funds rules. CFO manages some £4.5 billion in a mixture of cash and equity holdings. Investment on behalf of children is generally made into the equity index tracker fund, which is managed on behalf of the Ministry of Justice by Legal & General, who are one of the largest managers of index tracker funds in the UK.

A recent review of children's damages awards that are held in court and administered by the CFO identified a requirement to correct a number of children's accounts, to ensure that the award is appropriately invested as originally directed by the court. Where the award is more than £5,000 and the child is under 13 years of age, part of the award would usually be placed in an index tracker fund. In a number of cases this investment in equities did not take place.

Prompt action is now being taken to identify all affected cases and where the consequence has been a lower rate of return, to pay the balance necessary to ensure beneficiaries are not disadvantaged. The administrative failures, which led to this situation, have been addressed to ensure cases are invested in accordance with the courts' directions without delay.

The process for calculating the correction payments has been reviewed by a city firm of accountants and also by the strategic investment board, which is a panel of appointed financial experts that provides generic investment advice to the Ministry of Justice in respect of its clients.

It is estimated that approximately 4,000 current and closed cases have been affected and that the full cost of corrective payments will be approximately £12.5 million. This is out of a total of 90,000 current children's cases holding nearly £650 million in cash and investments, and 1.1 million closed cases.

Letters providing full details of the corrected accounts are being sent to all litigation friends who represent the children involved.

Oakhill Secure Training Centre

The Minister of State, Ministry of Justice (Mr. David Hanson): On 14 June the Ministry of Justice received the results of two unannounced inspections, by the Commission for Social Care Inspectorate (CSCI), into Oakhill secure training centre. They assessed the centre's development as poor.

As a result I wish to inform the House that a new director has been appointed. Malcolm Stevens took up post on 9 July.

The inspections confirmed concerns raised by the Youth Justice Board regarding levels of order and control at the centre. The CSCI reports will be published in due course.

The Youth Justice Board has required Mr. Stevens to set out how he would improve performance at the centre, which is operated by G4S.

The Youth Justice Board will monitor performance closely and expects to see rapid progress. If this is not the case further action will be taken and in this event I will update the House.

President of Appeal Tribunals Report

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Justice (Bridget Prentice): My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and Lord Chancellor has today published the seventh report by the president of appeal tribunals on the standards of decisions made on behalf of the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in cases which came before appeal tribunals. The major reasons given for appeal tribunals overturning or amending decisions were because new evidence was produced at the hearing or the tribunal took a different view of the same evidence.

In his report, the president acknowledges improvements by some Department of Work and Pensions agencies, particularly the Disability and Carers Service. He also recognises the work done by the Department to improve the standards of medical reports.

The Tribunal's Service has in place a number of partnership agreements with Department for Work and Pensions agencies, who deal with benefits and make decisions on behalf of the Secretary of State, covering the interface as part of the end to end process of administering appeals. In addition to the agreements, regular meetings are held to review respective performance and discuss any issues to improve customer service.

This is the first report published by the Ministry of Justice as responsibility for appeal tribunals transferred from the Department of Work and pensions from 1 April 2006.

Copies of the report have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses, the Vote Office and Printed Paper Office. Copies are also available on the internet at www.tribunals.gov.uk

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Flexible Working

Ms Abbott: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what assessment the Government has made of the merits of encouraging employers to advertise posts as available for flexible working to help lone parents and carers back into the workplace; and if she will make a statement. [140850]

Meg Munn: The benefits of advertising posts as available for flexible working are to give employers access to a bigger pool of potential employees, including lone parents and carers. My right hon. Friend the Minister for Women (Ruth Kelly) opened a debate on how to take flexible working into account in the recruitment process in a speech to employers on 16 May 2007 at the Work Wise UK Summit 2007. Many employers already advertise posts as suitable for job share or flexible hours and there are specialist recruitment agencies which bring together people looking for flexible work and the jobs that can be done flexibly, but these are still the exception.

SCOTLAND

Absent Voting

David Mundell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many complaints were lodged with returning officers in respect of people not receiving their postal ballot papers in time to vote in the recent Scottish elections in May, broken down by Scottish (a) parliamentary constituency and (b) region. [145652]

David Cairns: Returning Officers are not required to provide this information to the Secretary of State. This information is not held centrally.

Departments: Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people in his Department have been allowed to work from home for part of the week in the last year; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on home working. [143878]

David Cairns: All the staff in the Scotland Office are on secondment from the Scottish Executive or the Ministry of Justice (MoJ) who are both committed to achieving a work life balance for all staff. No staff in the Office have formally worked from home in the last year.

Departments: Manpower

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people granted (a) temporary part-time, (b) temporary full-time, (c) permanent part-time and (d) permanent full-time contracts of employment in his Department in each of the last three years were (i) male, (ii) female, (iii) registered disabled and (iv) aged 55 years or over. [143901]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office does not directly employ any staff; all staff are seconded from the Scottish Executive or the Ministry of Justice, as necessary. The Office does not hold personnel records that would allow age to be determined.

The gender breakdown of the Scotland Office, and information on disabled staff, is published in the Office's annual reports, copies of which have been placed in the House Library.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of staff in his Department are (a) male, (b) female, (c) registered disabled and (d) aged 55 or over. [143918]

David Cairns: The gender breakdown of the Scotland Office and information on disabled staff is published in the Office's annual report, a copy of which has been placed in the House Library. The staff in the Office are seconded from the Scottish Executive or the Ministry of Justice and the Scotland Office does not hold personnel records that would allow age to be determined.

Departments: Remploy

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what (a) services and (b) products his Department has procured from Remploy in the last 12 months; and at what cost. [143789]

David Cairns: None.

Elections

David Mundell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has met Scottish Ministers to discuss the Electoral Commission's statutory review of the Scottish parliamentary elections. [145653]

David Cairns: My right hon. Friend and I have not had any discussions with Scottish Ministers on this issue. The Electoral Commission and its statutory review are both independent of Government. The Commission is only bound by statute to report on the Scottish Parliament election but, at the request of Scottish Ministers, will also include the Scottish local government election.

David Mundell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he was consulted on the final ballot papers adopted for the Scottish parliamentary elections in May which were issued to voters. [145654]

David Cairns: Returning Officers were not required to consult the Secretary of State on the final ballot papers issued to voters for the Scottish Parliament elections in May. The Scottish Parliament (Elections etc.) Order 2007 sets out the rules that Returning Officers are required to follow in printing the ballot paper.

David Mundell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what level of consultation was undertaken with political parties about the design and format of ballot papers used in the Glasgow and Lothian regions for the recent Scottish parliamentary elections. [145655]

David Cairns: There is no duty on Returning Officers to consult political parties on the design of ballot papers to be used in their area. They are required only to follow the statutory requirements for ballot papers laid out in the Scottish Parliament (Elections etc.) Order 2007. These statutory requirements, debated and agreed by Parliament, were finalised following a substantial consultation process, including a public consultation exercise which all political parties were invited to respond to. Many, though not all, political parties in Scotland responded to that consultation.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Armed Conflict: Journalism

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Solicitor-General what (a) correspondence and (b) discussions the Law Officers' Department has had with (i) European counterparts and (ii) others to seek the earliest possible compliance with United Nations Security Council Resolution 1738, on the protection of journalists in armed conflict; and if he will make a statement. [140889]

The Solicitor-General: None.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Solicitor-General what steps have been taken by the Law Officers' Department to ensure the UK's compliance with United Nations Security Council Resolution 1738, on the protection of journalists in armed conflict; and if he will make a statement. [140890]

The Solicitor-General: The United Kingdom takes seriously its obligations, under international humanitarian law, to protect journalists and other civilians in situations of armed conflict and already has in place the necessary measures to ensure compliance. The Law Officers' departments have not been required to take additional steps following the adoption of United Nations Security Council Resolution 1738 (2006).

Crown Prosecution Service: Powers

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Solicitor-General what consideration the Government has given to the proposals made by the Chairman of the Criminal Cases Review Commission in Birmingham on 10 May, with particular reference to extending the powers of the Crown Prosecution Service relating to the instigation and conduct of prosecutions to those areas currently within the remit of the Health and Safety Executive and other regulatory or enforcement bodies; and if the Government will respond to the proposals. [144215]

The Solicitor-General: There are no plans, at present, to extend the powers of the Crown Prosecution Service, which are set out in the Prosecutions of Offences Act 1985.

Data Protection: Prosecutions

Norman Baker: To ask the Solicitor-General what criteria are followed by the Director of Public Prosecutions in deciding whether to give his consent pursuant to section 60 of the Data Protection Act 1998 to a prosecution for a non-notification offence under that Act. [144334]

The Solicitor-General: In cases requiring the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions, specific consideration must be given to the decision to institute or continue proceedings.

A crown prosecutor can give consent on behalf of the Director of Public Prosecutions by virtue of section 1(7) of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985.

The decision to grant consent should be taken applying the principles set out in the Code for Crown Prosecutors and the CPS's policies. Consent cases should be reviewed at the earliest possible opportunity.

The Code for Crown Prosecutors is a publicly available document, which can be accessed from the CPS's website at http://www.cps.gov.uk/publications/docs/code2004english.pdf

Departments: Advertising

Grant Shapps: To ask the Solicitor-General (1) which (a) advertising agencies and (b) other organisations supplied consultancy services for advertising campaigns for the Law Officers' Departments in each of the last five years; and what the cost of these services was; [139444]

(2) how much was spent on advertising by (a) the Department and (b) its non-departmental agencies in each of the last five years. [139529]

The Solicitor-General: The Law Officers' Departments advertise solely for recruitment purposes, with one exception: within the Treasury Solicitor's Department (TSol) the specialist Bona Vacantia division regularly places advertisements in the press seeking kin in cases where individuals have died intestate with no apparent claimants to the estate under administration. The costs for this activity are treated as an expense on the Crown Nominee's Account that is presented separately to Parliament.

The Law Officers' Departments' expenditure in the last five years on recruitment was as follows:

	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06	2006-07
TSol	132,718	128,124	50,786	125,611	*132,891

n/a = not available

The Treasury Solicitor also handles recruitment advertising for the Attorney General's Office, and for HM Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate.

The Revenue and Customs Prosecution Office was established in April 2005 and therefore has no data before this.

The Crown Prosecution Service recruitment advertising costs prior to 2005 are not available as they are not recorded centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Serious Fraud Office uses the services of a media agency, WDAD, who are an approved supplier under a Cabinet Office framework.

The CPS uses Barkers to place its advertisements through a Central Office of Information contract.

Departments: Property

Grant Shapps: To ask the Solicitor-General what the cost of leasing buildings and office space for the Law Officers' Departments was in each of the last five years. [139464]

The Solicitor-General: The Law Officers' Departments' expenditure is set out in the following table, where the figures for the Attorney-General's Office and Her Majesty's Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate are included within the Treasury Solicitor figures:

[2] The Revenue and Customs Prosecution Office was established in April 2005 and therefore has no data before this.

Departments: Public Relations

Grant Shapps: To ask the Solicitor-General how much has been spent by the Law Officers' Departments on public relations in each of the last five years. [139450]

The Solicitor-General: The Law Officers' Departments' publicity and press work is conducted by its in-house Press and Communications Teams. It is not possible to distinguish the costs of their proactive public relations work from that of reactive media handling.

No external PR agencies have been used by the Law Officers' Departments during this period.

Public Prosecution Service for Northern Ireland: Annual Reports

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Solicitor-General whether the annual report of the Public Prosecution Service for Northern Ireland for 2006-07 will include statistics on (a) reported race crimes, (b) cases prosecuted, (c) cases securing convictions and (d) cases not prosecuted; and if he will make a statement. [127180]

The Solicitor-General: The Public Prosecution Service published its first annual report last year and the report for 2006-07 will be published in July. The PPS does compile figures on race crimes and those figures can be made available on request. However, last year's and this year's report, although providing full statistics on case numbers and outcomes, does not break the figures down by individual offence. Whilst to publish race crime statistics alone in the report would be anomalous, a more detailed breakdown will be provided for the 2007-08 report.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Cathedral Buildings

27. Mark Pritchard: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what the Commissioners' policy is on the use of cathedral buildings by the creative media industry. [144687]

Sir Stuart Bell: As 'Building Faith in Our Future' shows, the Church is not precious about the uses to which cathedral buildings are put in serving the wider community so long as we always remember their role as centres of worship and mission and as iconic parts of the nation's heritage.

Church Properties

28. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners how much the Church Commissioners received from commercial organisations from (a) advertising on church buildings and (b) using church properties for telecommunication purposes in the last 12 months. [144688]

Sir Stuart Bell: Records are not kept centrally. In each case, agreements are formed between the individual cathedral and the church authorities and the commercial organisations in question.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

House of Commons

Mr. Doran: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission whether a report has been received from Sir Kevin Tebbit's review of the management and services of the House. [144770]

Nick Harvey: Yes. It is published today as House of Commons paper HC 685 and is available on the internet at:

http://www.publications.parliament.uk/pa/cm200607/cmselect/cmcomm/685/685.pdf.

The Commission is very grateful to Sir Kevin Tebbit and his team for their thorough analysis and recommendations. The report will be considered by the Administration, Finance and Services and Audit Committees and be debated after the summer recess. The Commission has invited the Board of Management to consider the report and prepare a programme for taking forward its proposals, subject to points made by Members in the debate. The Commission will consider the report again and decide upon its recommendations in the autumn after views from Members of the House and the House administration have been made known.

WALES

Departments: Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much was spent by staff in his Department via departmental (a) credit, (b) procurement and (c) fuel cards in each of the last three years. [145303]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office does not have fuel cards.

Corporate credit cards were introduced in the Wales Office in April 2004.

The amount spent on corporate credit cards is as follows:

2006-07	13,950.40

Information on the Government procurement card is not kept in this format and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Increased spending on credit cards is the result of an active programme within the Wales Office to encourage their use. This has produced significant savings on processing and transaction costs. As such, the increase reflects greater usage of cards, rather than increased overall spend.

Departments: Older Workers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of staff in his Department were over 60 years of age in each of the last three years. [145691]

Mr. Hain: This information is not systematically recorded and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people aged (a) over 55 years of age and (b) over 60 years of age have been recruited by his Department in each of the last three years; and what percentage in each case this is of the number of new recruits in each year. [145696]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office has only recruited existing civil servants. In accordance with good practice and anti-age discrimination, candidates for Wales Office jobs are not asked to provide their dates of birth on applications.

As such, this information is not systematically recorded, and collating it could be achieved only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Public Participation

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many public consultations his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and what the cost was of each consultation. [145284]

Mr. Hain: None.

Departments: Remploy

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what (a) services and (b) products his Department has procured from Remploy in the last 12 months; and at what cost. [143785]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office uses the Ministry of Justice procurement systems and the Office of Government Commerce on line procurement services.

To date Remploy have not featured in either of those sources. We are aware of the services they offer and subject to our value for money and sustainable development criteria being met would consider a Remploy tender via those procurement channels.

Departments: Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many staff surveys his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and at what total cost. [145268]

Mr. Hain: In the last 12 months the Wales Office participated in one staff opinion survey conducted by the Ministry of Justice. There was no cost to the Wales Office.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMISSION

National Audit Office Reports

26. Norman Baker: To ask the Chairman of the Public Accounts Commission what recent reports the Commission has considered from the appointed auditor of the National Audit Office; and if he will make a statement. [144686]

Mr. Alan Williams: The Public Accounts Commission considers each year, usually in July, the auditors' report on the National Audit Office's annual resource account and on the NAO's statement on the financial impact of its work. It also considers at the same time the auditors' annual value for money examination of an aspect of the Office's operations. This was last done in July 2006. The Commission expects to receive the next set of reports from the auditors in July this year.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Departments: Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Leader of the House how much was spent by staff in his Office via departmental (a) credit, (b) procurement and (c) fuel cards in each of the last three years. [145297]

Mr. Straw: This information is not currently available in the format requested following the Machinery of Government transfer of my office from the Privy Council Office to the Cabinet Office. However, on occasion my Office has used corporate credit and procurement cards, mainly with regard to the booking of travel. Fuel cards are not used by my Office.

Departments: Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Leader of the House what the rate of employer contributions to the Parliamentary Contributory Pension Scheme is for 2007-08; what savings he estimates would result from capping the rate to 14 per cent. for each year from 2007-08 to 2020-22; and if he will make a statement. [144272]

Mr. Straw: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to him on 30 October 2006, Official Report, columns 20-21W.

Limiting the Exchequer contribution to 14 per cent. would, if the actuarial valuation assumptions are borne out in practice, reduce the contribution by 12.8 per cent. of pensionable pay for the period up to 2020-21. Based on an estimated total pensionable pay for 2007-08 of £44.5 million, reducing the Exchequer contribution to 14 per cent. would represent a £5.7 million per annum saving.

The PCPF is a "balance of cost" scheme whereby the Exchequer makes up the balance of cost after taking account of pension benefits and payments, Member contributions and investment returns. Reducing the Exchequer contributions until 2020-21 would increase the level of deficit, which would eventually need to be paid by the Exchequer or by increasing Member contributions, reducing the level of pension benefits or a combination of these.

Members: Cycling

Martin Horwood: To ask the Leader of the House if he will take steps to enable hon. Members to register with the Government's cycle to work scheme; and if he will make a statement. [144810]

Mr. Straw: The cycle to work scheme is designed for the employees of participating organisations. Members of Parliament are not employees of the House of Commons but office-holders and as such are not eligible. However, Members of Parliament are entitled to claim a bicycle allowance of 20p per mile for official travel, a rate which provides an incentive to use an environmentally-friendly means of travel and is approved by Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs.

Written Questions

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Leader of the House pursuant to the answer of 8 March 2007, Official Report, column 2147W, on written questions, when he expects to complete his assessment of whether to publish in the Official Report letters written to hon. Members in lieu of written parliamentary answers. [145809]

Mr. Straw: Letters sent to hon. Members from Ministers or from the heads of Executive Agencies in response to a parliamentary question are already published in the Official Report, except where there are issues of confidentiality or undue length. I refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement of 21 July 2004 Official Report, column 35WS, and the written answer of 26 January 2005, Official Report, column 345W. In respect of letters from non-departmental public bodies, following the hon. Member's earlier question I wrote to the chairman of the Procedure Committee asking that the Committee examine the issues involved.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Departmental Coordination

Margaret Moran: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what shared service initiatives have been completed within Government; and what assessment she has made of their effectiveness. [145068]

Mr. McFadden: Shared Services is a key part of Transformational Government and there has been significant progress across central Government. MOD, DWP, HMRC, Prison Service, DfT and DEFRA have all established shared HR and Finance Services.

The NHS Shared Business Service has saved over 100 trusts an average of 34 per cent. of the cost of processing finance transactions through shared finance services. It is on track to deliver savings of more than £220 million over 10 years. The Ministry of Defence's People, Pay and Pensions Agency is reducing costs at the same time as improving quality. Through sharing and related reforms, the Department is expecting a net benefit of over £300 million during the next 10 years. Transport for London saved approximately 30 per cent. on its human resources spend in the first year of operating its shared service centre.

Government are looking to share a variety of additional services across Government. For example, the new Cabinet Office IT contract is available to other Departments and public sector organisations.

Dietary Supplements: EC Law

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps have recently been taken by officials (a) of her Department and (b) of the Better Regulation Executive to ensure that the Government's objectives for the interpretation and implementation of the Food Supplements Directive are met. [145632]

Mr. McFadden: Cabinet Office officials, including from the Better Regulation Executive, have worked closely with the Food Standards Agency to help deliver the Government's objectives on the Food Supplements Directive, in particular on the issue of maximum permitted levels for minerals and vitamins under Article 5 of the Directive. Cabinet Office officials have also worked with the Food Standards Agency on preparing a stakeholder consultation on an initial Regulatory Impact Assessment with respect to food supplements.

Pensions: Civil Service

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what the present rates of employer contributions to Civil Service Scheme pension scheme are; what estimate she has made of the cost savings for each year from 2008 to 2050 of capping the employer contribution at 14 per cent.; and if she will make a statement. [144263]

Mr. McFadden: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 27 November 2006, Official Report, columns 345-46W. The rates of employer contributions have not changed, but the salary bands referred to in the answer were revalorised from 1 April 2007 by the Scheme Actuary.

I have not made any estimates of the cost savings arising from capping the employer contribution at 14 per cent.

Service Transformation Board

Margaret Moran: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment she has made of the performance of the Service Transformation Board. [145032]

Mr. McFadden: The Service Transformation Board—now re-constituted as the Delivery Council—consists of officials with responsibilities for business delivery of transformation. It worked in partnership with the Chief Information Officers' (CIO) Council on the transformation of Citizen and Business Centred Services set out in the "Transformational Government (Cm 6683) report"; its initial achievements were reported in "Transformational Government: Annual Report 2006" (Cm 6970). The Delivery Council is now supporting Ministers and the Civil Service Steering Board in the next stages of the Transformational Government strategy including the implementation of Sir David Varney's report "Service Transformation: A better service for citizens and businesses, a better deal for the taxpayer".

V

Greg Clark: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster pursuant to the answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 46W, on V, what definition she uses of a volunteering opportunity. [145180]

Edward Miliband: V's definition of a volunteering opportunity is available on their website at:

http://www.wearev.com/vlearning/index.php

a copy of which I place in the Library for the reference of Members.

PRIME MINISTER

Honours

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister which people who received honours in Her Majesty the Queen's birthday honours are (a) citizens of the Irish Republic, (b) citizens of Commonwealth countries, other than the UK and (c) citizens of non-UK countries other than the Irish Republic or Commonwealth countries. [144400]

The Prime Minister: The information requested is not held centrally and to obtain it would incur disproportionate costs.

IBM Corporation

Mr. Gray: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 18 June 2007, Official Report, column 1428W, on the IBM Corporation, what the cost was to the public purse of the meeting; whether he received any gifts from Mr. Gerstner; and what meetings he has had since that date with representatives of the IBM Corporation. [144998]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 18 June 2007, Official Report, column 1428W.

Libyan Arab Republic

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Prime Minister who accompanied him on his recent visit to Libya; and which company or organisational affiliation each person had. [145425]

The Prime Minister: Since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. Copies of these lists are available in the Library of the House. Information on the number of officials accompanying Ministers on overseas visits is included in the list.

All Ministers' travel arrangements are in accordance with the arrangements for official travel set out in chapter 10 of the Ministerial Code, and the accompanying guidance document, "Travel by Ministers". Information for 2007-08 will be published in the normal way.

Lord Birt

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the contribution of Lord Birt in his role as special adviser. [145045]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the press notice issued by my Office on 15 December 2005. The press notice is available on the Number 10 website: http://www.number-10.gov.uk/output/Page8774.asp, and a copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

Members: Correspondence

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister by what date he expects to respond to the letter dated 17 May from the hon. Member for Lewes on the disposal of gifts he has received. [145027]

The Prime Minister: As far as I am aware, my Office had not received the letter at the time this question was tabled.

Saudi Arabia: Arms Trade

Mr. Laws: To ask the Prime Minister what representations (a) he and (b) his officials in 10 Downing street have received from (i) the Government of Saudi Arabia and (ii) its representatives on the Serious Fraud Office inquiry into defence orders for Saudi Arabia; and if he will make a statement. [145401]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 19 June 2007, Official Report, column 1610W, by my hon. Friend the Minister for State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (Dr. Howells).

Mr. Laws: To ask the Prime Minister what advice he sought from the heads of the UK's security and intelligence agencies in relation to the impact on national security and foreign policy objectives in the Middle East of the investigation by the Serious Fraud Office into the al-Yamamah defence sales contract; when such advice was requested; and if he will make a statement. [143715]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my hon. and learned Friend the Solicitor-General on 14 December 2006, Official Report, columns 1119-20, and to his response during the debate on 7 February 2007, Official Report, columns 875-76.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Departmental Coordination

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what progress he has made in co-ordinating the development of Government policy since May 2006. [145092]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to my Department's annual report, copies of which are available in the Library for the reference of Members.

Departments: Official Gifts

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what gifts he received on his recent visit to the West Indies. [145028]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The Government publish an annual list of gifts received by Ministers valued at more than £140. Information relating to 2007-08 will be published as soon as it is available at the end of the financial year.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departments: Aviation

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many flights to overseas destinations were taken by (a) civil servants and (b) Ministers in his Department in each of the last three calendar years; and what the total cost was of such flights. [144950]

Mr. Hain: All travel by civil servants or Ministers is undertaken in accordance with civil service rules and procedures, the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers. These combined figures for the years in question are set out in the following table.

	Flights	Cost (£)
April 2004 to December 2004	137	122,308.51
January 2005 to December 2005	258	238,704.47
January 2006 to December 2006	160	148,342.60

Figures for January 2004 to March 2004 are not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Energy

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many energy saving light bulbs were purchased by his Department for use on the departmental estate in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [144949]

Mr. Hain: The Department has a variety of light fittings which accept a wide range of bulbs. No records are kept of the numbers or frequency of bulb replacement and the cost of obtaining these figures would be disproportionate. Energy saving light bulbs are, where practicable, the preferred type of light bulb.

Departments: Manpower

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people granted (a) temporary part-time, (b) temporary full-time, (c) permanent part-time and (d) permanent full-time contracts of employment in his Department in each of the last three years were (i) male, (ii) female, (iii) registered disabled and (iv) aged 55 years or over. [143900]

Paul Goggins: The following table details the number of staff employed within the Northern Ireland Office granted (a) temporary part-time, (b) temporary full-time, (c) permanent part-time and (d) permanent full-time contracts of employment in each of the last three years who were (i) male, (ii) female, (iii) registered disabled and (iv) aged 55 years or over.

	Temporary		Permanent
	Part-time	Full-time	Part-time	Full-time

Departments: Older Workers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people aged (a) over 55 years of age and (b) over 60 years of age have been recruited by his Department in each of the last three years; and what percentage in each case this is of the number of new recruits in each year. [145701]

Paul Goggins: The figures in relation to the Northern Ireland Office are as follows:

2004: Four staff recruited aged 55 years or over; this represents 1.7 per cent. of new recruits. Zero staff recruited aged 60 years or over.

2005: One member of staff recruited aged 55 years or over; this represents 0.5 per cent. of new recruits. Zero staff recruited aged 60 years or over.

2006: Three staff recruited aged 55 years or over; this represents 1.5 per cent. of new recruits. One member of staff recruited aged 60 years or over; this represents 0.5 per cent. of new recruits.

Departments: Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff surveys his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and at what total cost. [145263]

Mr. Hain: The NIO undertook two staff surveys in the last 12 months at a total cost of £3,107. One was a periodical departmental staff survey which cost £3,107 and the other was a survey carried out in-house at zero costs by the Department's community safety unit. This answer relates only to the NIO and does not include its agencies or NDPBs.

Graduates

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many and what percentage of (a) women and (b) men of (i) white, (ii) Afro-Caribbean and (iii) Asian ethnicity received (A) first class, (B) upper second class and (C) lower second class degrees in Northern Irish universities in the last five years for which figures are available. [145400]

Mr. Hain: This is now the responsibility of the Northern Ireland Administration.

Juvenile Justice Centre

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) attempted suicides and (b) self-harm incidents were recorded for juveniles at the Juvenile Justice Centre in each of the last three years. [143300]

Maria Eagle: The threat of suicide in custody is prevalent and the Juvenile Justice Centre operates a system of risk assessment to detect and manage suicidal and self-harm tendencies in young people. There have been no serious attempts at suicide in the last three years. Information relating to incidents of self-harm is recorded on individual case files and is not centrally co-ordinated. All incidents of self-harm, whether threatened or real, are treated seriously and intervention and support procedures exist to minimise the risk of recurrence and to ensure the continuing safety of young people at the centre.

Prisoner Escapes

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 8 March 2007, Official Report, column 2201W, on prisoner escapes, what assessment he has made of the reasons for the fall in the number of (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions in 2005; and what steps he is taking to (i) reduce the number of escapees and (ii) achieve a higher conviction rate. [128031]

Paul Goggins: The fall in the numbers of prosecutions and convictions in relation to escape from lawful custody offences since 2005 may partly reflect a change in policy, whereby prisoners who were granted temporary leave but failed to return on the agreed date were no longer automatically charged with an offence. Only in cases where the prisoner had been unlawfully at large for longer than eight weeks was a prosecution sought.

Under new proposals, however, PSNI will be notified as soon as a person has been unlawfully at large for seven days or more, with a view to prosecution. Notification may also be made for periods less than seven days, when the Governor in question considers this is justified by the circumstances of the case.

In addition, the PSNI have recently agreed new reporting procedures with the Northern Ireland Prison Service to ensure that all such cases will now be investigated and reported to the PPS. This will increase the number of convictions being achieved.

The procedures surrounding the supervision of prisoners both within and outside of prison establishments are constantly reviewed to ensure maximum efficiency and effectiveness and to minimise the possibility of escapes.

Sexual Offences

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases of sexual assault were reported in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years (a) in total, (b) in each parliamentary constituency and (c) in each council area. [145336]

Paul Goggins: I have been advised by the PSNI that statistics are collected by District Command Units which are coterminous with council areas. These statistics are set out in the following table. The data are not collated by other areas and therefore not available broken down by parliamentary constituency.

Sexual offences recorded by PSNI

Note:
Sexual assault includes the following offences: rape, attempted rape, indecent assault on a female, indecent assault on a female child, indecent assault on a male, indecent assault on a male child.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of serious sexual crimes reported in Northern Ireland resulted in conviction in the courts in each of the last three years. [145462]

Maria Eagle: Data relating to the number and percentage of serious sexual crimes reported that result in a conviction are not available as figures relating to recorded crime are collected on a different basis from those of prosecutions and convictions. Recorded crime figures relate to the number of notifiable crimes reported whereas prosecutions and convictions refer to the number of offenders who have been subsequently charged for offences. In addition, recorded crime figures incorporate each offence as initially recorded and these may differ from the offence for which a suspect or suspects are subsequently proceeded against.

Table 1-3 gives the number of prosecutions and convictions for indictable sexual offences by individual offence and percentage of prosecutions that resulted in a conviction.

Data cover the calendar years 2003 to 2005, the latest available years and are collated on the principal offence rule; thus only the most serious offence with which an offender is charged is included.

Speed Limits: Fines

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much revenue was generated through the issuing of speeding tickets in (a) each constituency and (b) each council area in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years; and how many tickets were issued in each area during that period. [142632]

Paul Goggins: Fixed penalty notices fall into two categories. The first is an endorsable fixed penalty notice which means there will be points placed on the individual's driving licence (a licence endorsement) as well as a fixed penalty fine. The second is a non-endorsable fixed penalty notice where there is only a fine. Revenue from the latter category is not paid to the PSNI.

Revenue from endorsable fixed penalty notices issued for excess speed is set out as follows.

The two tables take account of the change in policing structures from RUC sub divisions to PSNI district command units.

Zoos

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many zoos there are in Northern Ireland. [145531]

Mr. Hain: This is now the responsibility of the Northern Ireland Administration.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

British Overseas Territories: Overseas Aid

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what financial aid and assistance each British Overseas Territory received from the UK Government in 2005-06. [145544]

Mr. Thomas: The total amount of financial aid and other DFID bilateral assistance to the British overseas territories in 2005-06 is shown in table 1 as follows.

Territory	Financial aid	Other DFID assistance	Total
Anguilla	5	890	895
Gibraltar	—	2	2
Montserrat	11,209	1,408	12,617
Pitcairn Island	646	1,936	2,582
St. Helena and Dependencies	9,788	3,775	13,563
Turks and Caicos Islands	-161	518	357

Note:
Negatives represent accounting adjustments, not a net flow to DFID.

British overseas territories may also receive aid from regional programmes and projects funded by DFID.

Departments: Aviation

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many flights to overseas destinations were taken by (a) civil servants and (b) Ministers in his Department in each of the last three calendar years; and what the total cost was of such flights. [144948]

Mr. Thomas: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost. Since 1999, the Government have published on an annual basis, a list of all overseas visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500, as well as the total cost of all ministerial travel overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. Information for 2006-07 is currently being compiled and will be published before the summer recess. All travel is undertaken in accordance with the Civil Service Management Code, the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers.

Departments: Dalits

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of his Department's locally employed staff in India are of Dalit origin; and at what level they are employed. [145423]

Mr. Thomas: DFID's locally engaged staff in India are recruited directly by our office in New Delhi. Its recruitment policy states that DFID does not discriminate on the basis of sex, caste, ethnicity, religion or other diversity criteria. However, we do not ask applicants or new recruits to provide information about their background because of the sensitivities involved in India, especially with regard to caste.

We are therefore unable to provide the information requested.

Departments: Foreign Relations

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many Memoranda of Understanding are in force as a result of agreements with foreign governments entered into by Ministers in his Department; and what executive actions each entails. [144468]

Mr. Thomas: Records of Memoranda of Understanding are not held centrally, either in DFID or across Whitehall, providing the information required would incur disproportionate costs.

Departments: Marketing

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which advertising and marketing campaigns were run by (a) his Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years; which external agencies were involved; and what the cost was of each campaign. [144626]

Mr. Thomas: Spending on advertising in print media for staff recruitment and procurement purposes was as follows:

	Spend (£)
2002	914,571
2003	849,196
2004	700,077
2006	527,868

Expenditure on marketing and promotional campaigns since January 2002 is listed as follows. In all cases, this includes design and production of materials, and other promotional services. It is not possible to disaggregate advertising direct spend except at disproportionate cost. All the following costs are inclusive of VAT.

Developments Magazine and Rough Guide Campaign (2005)

To promote Developments Magazine and The Rough Guide to a Better World

Total: £3,642

Trade Matters Campaign (late 2005-early 2006)

To raise awareness of the role of trade in fighting world poverty and promote the availability of a new free publication—Trade Matters.

Total: £26,176

Developments Magazine Campaign (2006)

To increase the number of subscribers to the Department's free magazine—Developments.

Total: £12,934

Third White Paper on International Development (2006)

To raise awareness of the UK Government's action plan for working with overseas and international partners to reduce world poverty over the next five years.

Total: £125,000

G8 Gleneagles—One year on (2006)

To report progress on delivering the commitments proposed at the G8 summit. Newspaper supplement in The Observer, adverts for the supplement in The Guardian, and content of the supplement placed on a Guardian Unlimited microsite.

Total: £62,275

DFID has not used advertising agencies in the last five years. DFID has used the Central Office of Information (COI) to source services for promotional campaigns. It is not possible to disaggregate these costs from design and production of materials, and other promotional services, without incurring disproportionate costs.

DFID places recruitment and procurement advertisements in print media using Barkers Advertising and Marketing Agency. There is no direct cost to DFID for their services.

DFID has no Executive agencies.

Departments: Public Participation

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many public consultations his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and what the cost was of each consultation. [145279]

Mr. Thomas: Over the 12 months up to end-May 2007, DFID launched 15 formal public consultations on its public website in order to inform the Department's policy development.

Information on the cost of each consultation and the total cost of all consultations, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The consultations launched were:

DFID health strategy

Country Strategy for DFID Sierra Leone

DFID Ethiopia Country Assistance Plan

DFID Tanzania Country Assistance Plan

DFID Pakistan Country Assistance Plan

Updating "Taking Action—the UK's strategy for tackling AIDS in the developing world"

DFID's work in Latin America 2008 to 2011

DFID Regional Assistance Plan for the Caribbean

Linking Scheme—investing in raising the levels of awareness about global issues among the UK public

DFID and Volunteering

Equality for Disabled People (this was a cross-Whitehall consultation)

DFID Vietnam Country Assistance Plan

DFID Ghana Country Assistance Plan

DFID India Country Assistance Plan

Preventing Violent Conflict Policy Paper

Departments: Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many staff surveys his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and at what total cost. [145262]

Mr. Thomas: DFID conducted one staff survey in the last 12 months which required external assistance. This was to gather evidence for independent assessors to measure our performance against the Investors in People standard, and cost £7,000.

During the same period, we also carried out our annual survey to assess staff perceptions of how they are managed. It covered issues such as leadership, communication, training and opportunities for development, workloads, and how valued staff feel. This, plus a small number of other internal surveys, were devised, conducted and analysed internally by our own staff at no additional cost. It is not possible to calculate the staff time cost associated with those exercises.

Developing Countries: Drugs

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to reduce the supply of fake or ineffective drugs in the developing world. [144726]

Mr. Thomas: DFID supports the World Health Organisation (WHO), through its core funding, in its efforts to help developing countries strengthen their pharmaceutical legislation, good manufacturing practices, national drug regulatory capacity and performance. The WHO also promotes information exchange among drug regulatory authorities to help combat drug counterfeiters.

DFID is working with a wide range of partners, including the WHO, developing country governments, pharmaceutical companies and non-governmental organisations, on the development of the Medicines Transparency Alliance (MeTA).

MeTA seeks to increase transparency over vital information on the price, quality and availability of essential medicines in developing countries to help tackle high prices, challenge corruption and counterfeiting, and address inefficiency. Up to a third of medicines on the market in developing countries are fakes.

MeTA seeks to change this by securing high level political commitment to increase transparency and accountability over medicine procurement and supply in participating countries. MeTA also seeks to bring the right people around the table—Government Departments, civil society organisations, companies and others—to agree ways of disclosing information on the price, the quality and the availability of essential medicines into the public arena, with the aim of ultimately reducing the cost, improving the quality and increasing the availability of medicines.

DFID has for example provided support to Nigeria's National Agency for Food and Drug Administration and Control which has taken an active lead in reducing counterfeit drugs throughout the country.

Ethiopia: Health Services

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will take steps to facilitate the provision of healthcare free at the point of access in (a) Ethiopia and (b) Liberia. [144757]

Hilary Benn: DFID is committed to helping countries that want to remove charges at the point of delivery. In the recent DFID White Paper we made a commitment to help partner governments abolish user fees for basic health services and help them tackle other barriers to access, including discrimination against women.

In 2003, as part of transition arrangements, user fees for health services in Liberia were suspended. At the end of the transition period on 31 March 2006, the President accepted the Minister of Health's recommendation that healthcare should continue to be free. We support this policy, although it is essential that it is implemented in the context of wider health sector reform, including financing, human resources, institutions, and procurement/supply chains.

DFID has agreed to extend its support to Save the Children UK in Liberia which is playing a leading role in assisting the Government with the development of pro poor policies and health financing. DFID will jointly fund the placement of an SCF-UK Technical Director for Health to work specifically on co-ordination, policy and advocacy, including on access to free healthcare.

User fees are one of several constraints to access to health care in Ethiopia, others being distance to health facilities and availability of drugs. Since more than one in five Ethiopians lives more than 10 km (or two hours walk) from a health care facility, Ethiopia's Health Sector Development Plan focuses on expanding access to primary health care services, especially preventive services, most of which are provided free. DFID helps to fund the delivery of these services through its contributions to the Protection of Basic Services grant, which supports recurrent costs of health and other services at local level and procurement of essential commodities such as vaccines, malaria drugs, bednets and contraceptives.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support his Department provided to health systems in (a) Liberia and (b) Ethiopia in each of the last five years. [144758]

Hilary Benn: As outlined in the new DFID health strategy "Working together for Better health", assisting countries to strengthen their health services is a UK priority.

In Ethiopia, DFID provided direct budget support to the Government in support of its poverty reduction strategy from January 2003 to March 2005. This included £2.9 million for strengthening of the national health system and delivery of health care. Between June 2006 and end March 2007, DFID provided a grant of £8.7 million for the Protection of Basic Services, to help fund the recurrent costs of delivering basic health care services and the procurement of key commodities including vaccines, malaria drugs, bednets and contraceptives. Since 2005, DFID has committed a total of £145,000 to a multi-donor fund to cover costs of technical assistance, studies, consultations and meetings that are crucial to the implementation of Ethiopia's Health Sector Development Programme.

In Liberia DFID has been providing humanitarian support for health services since 2003 through Save the Children, Merlin and other NGOs. They have focused on providing basic services, working closely with Country Health Teams. These Teams will take on increasing responsibility for health service management and delivery through training and carrying out joint supervision of health facilities. DFID's support to NGOs in Liberia is structured around supporting public healthcare systems to be delivered free to the patient. As well as building capacity to strengthen systems, the support ensures payment of staff and provision of drugs.

DFID will provide up to £8 million over the next two years for building and strengthening systems at the central level. This includes support to the Ministry of Health to establish strong financial management and contributing to a proposed multi-donor fund to support Liberia to strengthen its health systems under its National Health Plan. DFID will continue to support NGOs to cover critical gaps in the provision of healthcare with increasing focus on transfer of leadership to the Government.

In Liberia, DFID bilateral expenditure on health in 2002-03 to 2006-07 was:

2002-03	[1]0.0
2004-05	0.8
2005-06	1.5
2006-07	[2]1.7

[1] Actual spend of £38,000
[2] Provisional

This is expected to increase to around £3-£4 million for 2007-08 and 2008-09.

Iraq: Reconstruction

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) how much the Government budgeted to spend on the reconstruction of Iraq; [145532]

(2) how much the Government have spent on rebuilding the infrastructure in Iraq since the fall of Saddam. [145534]

Hilary Benn: Since March 2003, the UK Government have budgeted £744 million for the reconstruction and development of Iraq. Our contribution will help the Iraqi Government, at provincial and national level, to plan and deliver investment in basic services (electricity, hospitals, etc.), improve oil production, generate jobs and manage its own resources more effectively.

DFID has committed over £100 million to infrastructure projects in Iraq, and disbursed over £80 million so far. Our work on improving power and water supply has helped create employment for several thousand Iraqis in repairing some of southern Iraq's key infrastructure.

DFID power projects have added or secured 350 MW of electricity to the Iraqi national grid, and will be adding or securing a further 120 MW over the next six months. This has been achieved by repairing damaged electricity transmission and distribution networks, including transmission lines from Al-Hartha power station to Basra city (securing electricity supplies for 1.5 million residents), and the Al-Hartha power station chimney (securing electricity supplies for 340,000 people).

By late 2007 DFID will have improved access to water for one million people. We have replaced 200 kilometres of water mains, repaired over 5,000 leaks, cleared out 7,000 septic tanks and cleared over 40 kilometres of drains. We have refurbished a reverse osmosis unit to supply potable water to about 500,000 people, improved water supply to 60,000 people in Al Amtahiyah, constructed a water training centre in Basra to increase the skills of Iraqi engineers in water treatment and leakage repair, and provided technical advice for a major sewage installation in Al Amarah, providing up to half the city's population with access to a piped system and replacing open sewage channels.

Pakistan: Overseas Aid

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the impact of UK aid to Pakistan on levels of (a) anti-British extremism, (b) violations of religious freedom and (c) freedom of speech in Pakistan. [145583]

Mr. Thomas: DFID is in the process of preparing a new Country Assistance Plan for Pakistan for 2008 to 2012. As part of that preparation, we have commissioned an independent evaluation of DFID's impact on the three strategic outcome areas of the 2005 Country Assistance Plan: (1) increased incomes for the poor; (2) improved delivery of education, health and population services to the poor; and (3) greater accountability of the state to its citizens. We aim to publish this evaluation by the summer.

We have also just completed consultations within Pakistan, and with the Pakistan Diaspora, on what our future priorities should be. The overwhelming sense from these consultations was that DFID's programme in Pakistan has been making an impact, and that we should look to increase our efforts in support of Pakistan's poverty reduction strategies and plans.

DFID's work, especially in the aftermath of the 2005 earthquake, has won the UK many friends in Pakistan and has contributed to strengthening the ties between our two countries. This was illustrated in November last year when my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister signed a 10 year Development Partnership Arrangement (DPA) with Pakistan's Prime Minister, Shaukat Aziz. The DPA is based on a shared commitment to pursuing poverty reduction objectives, respecting the human rights obligations entered into, and improving financial management and accountability in Pakistan.

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much aid his Department gave to Pakistan in each of the last five years; and what planned expenditure is for the next three years. [145606]

Mr. Thomas: The total DFID bilateral expenditure to Pakistan in each of the last five financial years is set out in table 1 following, alongside projections for 2007-08.

Table 1: DFID bilateral expenditure to Pakistan

	Expenditure (£000)
2002-03	38,314
2003-04	66,240
2004-05	31,377
2005-06	97,413
2006-07	[1]101,118
2007-08	[2]101,000

[1] Provisional.
[2] Projection.

Projections beyond 2007-08 will not be available until the Comprehensive Spending Review is concluded later this year.

UK funding to multilateral institutions cannot be directly attributed to any country; however table 2 contains estimates of the UK's imputed shares of multilateral aid to Pakistan. These estimates are based on the UK's funding of each multilateral institution and each multilateral's distribution of aid to Pakistan. They are only available on a calendar year basis.

Table 2: imputed UK share of multilateral aid to Pakistan for 2001-05

	Imputed aid (£000)
2002	28,343
2003	34,391
2004	27,729

Note:
The list of multilateral organisations used in the production of these data is not exhaustive; the multilaterals analysed are those that provide the Development Assistance Committee with detailed information about their distribution of funds to Pakistan and to whom DFID provided funds over the period.

Data for 2006 are not yet available.

Palestinians: Human Rights

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will support the deployment of a human rights monitoring mechanism across Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territories. [145385]

Hilary Benn: Any third party, such as a human rights observation force, would only be able to achieve its goals with the full support of the Government of Israel (GoI) and the Palestinian Authority. Such support is unlikely in the current climate.

Thailand: Overseas Aid

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much UK-funded support has been made available to aid groups in Thailand assisting those displaced from their homes in Burma in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [145217]

Mr. Thomas: Of those aid groups based in Thailand, DFID provides £1.8 million (over three years—2005-06, 2006-07 and 2007-08) to the Thailand-Burma Border Consortium for the provision of food, shelter, cooking fuel and non-food items for the 166,000 refugees in the nine camps on the Thai-Burma border, and for their support to internally displaced people, particularly those in hiding in areas of ongoing conflict. We provide an approximately equivalent amount of funding to the Thailand-Burma Border Consortium's refugee work through our contributions to aid provided by the European Union.

DFID acknowledges the importance and value of cross-border aid, especially in supporting many of the 100,000 internally displaced people living in conflict areas in eastern Burma. We also acknowledge the value and importance of work by community based groups inside the country, who are able to reach many of the 400,000 internally displaced people living in Government controlled areas, mixed administration areas (where both ethnic armed groups and the Burmese army are present) and cease-fire areas. We believe strongly that the two mechanisms should be seen as complementary to each other—not as competitors.

We have removed the restriction on the use of UK funds provided to Thailand-based non-Governmental organisations for cross-border assistance. But while several Governments already fund cross-border work, the UK is the only bilateral donor currently supporting community-based groups reaching internally displaced people from inside Burma. Our judgment is that the best use for our additional money is to support community based organisations working inside Burma, which is why we also provide assistance to internally displaced people through community-based groups inside Burma (£400,000 in 2007-08) to provide emergency relief, health and education programmes in eastern Burma.

UN

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the creation of One UN teams in the developing world. [144725]

Mr. Thomas: In 2006, the UN Secretary-General set up a High Level Panel (HLP) on UN System-wide Coherence. The Panel, with the Chancellor's participation, reported in November 2006 with recommendations to improve the UN's position and response to new global development challenges, and to achieve greater efficiency and co-ordination. This included the establishment of 'One UN' pilots at country level. The pilots are testing an approach based on one integrated UN programme with one consolidated budget, managed by one UN leader (the Resident Co-ordinator), where appropriate housed in one UN location. The aim is to create a genuinely united nations at country level, operating in partnership with, and responding directly to the needs of developing countries in achieving the Millennium Development Goals.

'One UN' is currently being piloted in eight countries: Mozambique, Rwanda, Tanzania, Pakistan, Vietnam (all priorities for the UK), Cape Verde, Uruguay and Albania. The HLP recommended that the programme expand to up to 40 countries by 2010. DFID is working closely with country offices, governments, and the UN system to ensure that 'One UN' is successful. Progress is already being made in aligning the UN with national priorities, in greater efficiency and in taking the necessary change management steps. DFID is working closely with partners and the UN system to ensure robust monitoring and evaluation processes are in place, so that lessons learned and best practice are fully utilised in future 'One UN' countries.

Zimbabwe: Health Services

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will take steps to facilitate the provision of healthcare free at the point of access in (a) Zimbabwe and (b) Rwanda. [145590]

Hilary Benn: DFID is committed to helping countries that want to remove charges at the point of delivery. DFID made a commitment in the recent White Paper to help partner governments abolish user fees for basic health services and help them tackle other barriers to access, including discrimination against women.

In Rwanda, the Government and major aid donors are conscious that financial barriers are inhibiting poor people from accessing health services. DFID is therefore working closely with the Government to investigate how DFID aid and technical assistance can best be provided to reduce the level of out-of-pocket expenditures on health services. In particular, DFID is looking at various options to specifically address the needs of the very poor that are most adversely affected by present patient charges.

In Zimbabwe, access to health services is rapidly decreasing as the economy contracts, inflation surpasses 4500 per cent. government capacity to maintain services diminishes and travel for most people becomes harder. User fees are currently charged for most health services other than preventive care to children under five and HIV treatment services. Where commodities have been donated, the Ministry of Health policy is that these should not be sold through fees but passed on for free. We are all aware of the situation in Zimbabwe which prevents a development partnership between DFID and the Zimbabwean government. However, DFID engages whenever the opportunity arises to discuss the adverse effects of user fees. DFID provides technical assistance and financial support for research in order to strengthen the evidence base and support the policy process.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support his Department provided to health systems in (a) Zimbabwe and (b) Rwanda in each of the last five years. [145650]

Hilary Benn: DFID suspended all development assistance to the Government of Zimbabwe in 2002.

Since then, DFID Zimbabwe has provided over £63 million through NGOs to ensure the poorest people continue to access essential health services. Support has been provided for reduction in preventable deaths (vaccination programmes, malaria prevention); mother and child services (including antenatal care, maternity services, prevention of mother to child transmission and emergency obstetric care); sexual and reproductive health (including family planning services, treatment for STIs); and HIV/AIDS (including prevention and treatment, behaviour change and care for orphans).

The total assistance in each of the past five years was:

	£ million
2002-03	5.5
2003-04	10.4
2004-05	14.6
2005-06	12.9
2006-07	19.6

In Rwanda the majority of DFID current spending is through budget support. DFID bilateral expenditure on health in Rwanda from 2002-03 to 2006-07 was:

	£ million
2002-03	2.3
2003-04	2.0
2004-05	4.0
2005-06	7.1
2006-07	[1]1.6

[1] Provisional

This includes a notional proportion of DFID's general budget support.

Zimbabwe: Overseas Aid

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what financial aid and assistance Zimbabwe received from his Department in 2005-06. [145545]

Hilary Benn: DFID bilateral aid to Zimbabwe in the fiscal year 2005-06 was £34.1 million of which £1.6 million was in the form of financial aid. The UK is one of the largest bilateral donors of humanitarian support to Zimbabwe, supporting over 1.5 million of the poorest people. Our funding prioritises HIV/AIDS, food insecurity and supporting orphans and vulnerable children. Our current programmes will help ensure that an additional 30,000 people receive anti-retroviral treatment, will provide health care for around 350,000 children, promote food security in both urban and rural areas and assist extremely vulnerable displaced people. The UK does not give direct funding to the Government of Zimbabwe. All DFID's bilateral funding is channelled through NGOs and UN agencies, much of it programmed jointly with other donors.

The UK contributions to multilateral aid to Zimbabwe (United Nations, European Commission, World Bank and others) totalled £5.6 million in 2004 which is the last year for which data are available.

The full breakdown of bilateral aid is published in Table 12.1 of Statistics on International Development 2001-02 to 2005-06, a copy of which is available in the Library.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

London Olympics

9. Meg Hillier: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent meetings she has had on the Olympics legacy in east London. [144652]

Tessa Jowell: I have had many such meetings, including with the mayors or leaders of the five host boroughs last Tuesday, and Ken Livingstone last Thursday. One of the main legacies of the 2012 Games will be to transform the heart of East London with new homes, new public transport, new employment and business opportunities and new spaces to work, live and play in.

11. Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether she has made an estimate of the amount of revenue that the new logo will attract for the hosting of the Olympic Games in 2012. [144654]

Mr. Caborn: The new London 2012 brand, of which the logo is one element, will help the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games (LOCOG) to raise the £2 billion they need to host and stage the games. Sponsors will buy rights to the brand and it will underpin LOCOG's merchandising strategy. LOCOG believe that the brand will make an effective and decisive contribution to the full £2 billion budget.

13. Siobhain McDonagh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what progress is being made to ensure that the poorest and most disadvantaged areas of London benefit from the economic legacy of the 2012 London Olympics. [144656]

Tessa Jowell: A significant amount of activity is already under way to help local people secure jobs, to help local businesses to compete successfully for Olympic-related contracts and to regenerate East London—one of the most deprived parts of the capital. Jobcentre Plus has already placed 110 local people into jobs on the Olympic site; 3,000 businesses have already registered for information about Olympic-related contract opportunities; and 11 pre-volunteer programme pilots are already giving 450 Londoners the opportunity to develop skills through volunteering. These objectives were central to our bid for the games and are ones which we are wholly committed to achieving.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will investigate the capacity constraints and legacy effects of holding the equestrian events for the 2012 Olympics in Greenwich park. [144661]

Mr. Caborn: The London Organising Committee has appointed a course designer, and work is under way to assess the overlay plan for the park, including looking at optimisation of space. The venue was endorsed by the International Federation, the Federation Equestre Internationale (FEI) which also had a delegation visit the site earlier this year.

Work is ongoing with all stakeholders to ensure the Olympic events do not have a detrimental effect on this unique world heritage site, and that opportunities are maximised to showcase the site and the sport of equestrianism to the world.

BBC Charter

10. Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions she has had with the BBC on its charter, with particular reference to regional news coverage. [144653]

Mr. Woodward: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not had any recent discussions with the BBC about its charter.

The BBC agreement places requirements on the BBC relating to the amount of time given to regional news coverage and its scheduling. The BBC Trust is responsible for ensuring these requirements are met.

Channel 4

12. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to review the financial arrangements for Channel 4 television. [144655]

Mr. Woodward: Following Ofcom's report on the funding of Channel 4 the Government have announced their intention to use part of the licence fee to fund some of Channel 4's digital switchover costs and to bring forward our review of public service broadcasting funding.

Tote Privatisation

14. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on progress on selling the Tote. [144657]

Mr. Caborn: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Lancaster and Wyre (Mr. Wallace).

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the future of the Tote. [144658]

Mr. Caborn: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Lancaster and Wyre (Mr. Wallace).

Tourism

15. Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to strengthen Government support for seaside and coastal tourism. [144659]

Mr. Woodward: DCMS continues to provide VisitBritain with funding of around £50 million a year to promote Britain overseas and England to the domestic market. The attractions of the coast have been prominent, for example, in its recent "Family Fun" and "English Rose" campaigns.

Councils and businesses on the coast are also responsible for the product they offer, and they have taken great strides to change their image. It is important that seaside resorts continue to use the national quality schemes for accommodation and attractions developed by VisitBritain.

Museums and Galleries: Visitor Numbers

18. John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what additional measures she has considered to encourage more visitors to the national museums and galleries; and if she will make a statement. [144663]

Mr. Lammy: Free admission has ensured that more people than ever have access to the national collections. The number of visits to national museums and galleries has risen from 24 million in 1997-98 to 39 million last year.

What we need to do now, and have already been encouraging through our performance targets, is to increase participation from under-represented groups.

Regional Casinos: Energy Efficiency

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will take steps to ensure that new regional casinos make use of energy efficient light bulbs. [144660]

Mr. Caborn: Any new casino development will be required to comply with relevant planning and building requirements, including relevant requirements designed to protect the environment and promote energy saving.

Arts: National Lottery

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much National Lottery arts funding (a) Northern Ireland, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) England received per capita in each of the last five years. [145398]

Mr. Caborn: The series of tables show the per capita figures for the last five financial years for Northern Ireland, Scotland, Wales and England where the good cause is recorded as Arts. The search is location specific. That is the tables include only grants that are specific to location in the region and exclude grants that might have gone to addresses in the region, but are not otherwise related to it.

The value of grants is taken from the Lottery grants database which uses information supplied by the Lottery distributors. The population figures used are from the mid 2005 estimates of the Office for National Statistics.

Northern Ireland (population 1,724,400)

Year (financial)	Value of grants (£)	Per capita (£ and pence) rounded to nearest pence

Arts: West Bromwich

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 13 June 2007, Official Report, column 1038W, on the Public Arts Centre in West Bromwich, East constituency, what recent discussions the Minister for Culture has held on the Public Arts Centre; and if she will make a statement. [145464]

Mr. Lammy: I have not had any recent discussions on the Public Arts Centre in West Bromwich, East constituency.

British Film Institute

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the future of the British Film Institute. [145418]

Mr. Woodward: The British Film Institute (BFI) play a vital role to the Film industry through their care for the BFI National Archive and Collections and their encouragement of knowledge and participation in film in the UK. DCMS works closely with the BFI and UK Film Council to ensure this work can be continued and developed in the future.

British Film Institute: Finance

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what funding was provided to the British Film Institute in each of the last 10 years; and what the projected funding allocation is for 2007-08. [145427]

Mr. Woodward: Funding from Government for the British Film Institute, directed through the UK Film Council since its establishment in 2000, is in the following table.

Financial year	Core funding (£ million)	Additional grant	Total grant (£ million)
1998-99	16	0	16
1999-2000	16	0	16
2000-01	16	£450,000 advance against 2001-02	16.45

Financial year	Core funding (£ million)	Additional grant	Total grant (£ million)
2001-02	14.5	£0.45 million advanced in 2000-01	[1]14.05
2002-03	14.5	0	14.5
2003-04	14.5	One-off award of £200,000 to fund BFI's strategic review	14.7
2004-05	16	£0.8 million one-off award for modernisation	16.8
2005-06	16	£2 million one-off capital award for the Southbank and £1 million one-off award for modernisation	19

British Grand Prix

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has held on the future of Formula One motor racing at the Silverstone circuit in Northamptonshire, with particular reference to its future after 2009; what steps she is taking to support the British motor racing industry; and if she will make a statement. [145428]

Mr. Caborn: The Government maintains its desire for a British Grand Prix at Silverstone but our role remains one of dialogue and facilitation.

I have attended a number of meetings to discuss the future of Formula One Grand Prix racing at Silverstone. The most recent meeting was on 20 March with the British Racing Drivers Club (BRDC) to discuss their plans for redevelopment of the Silverstone circuit and discussions are ongoing.

The Government support British Motorsport through Motorsport Development UK (MDUK) who have invested over £12 million to help maintain and strengthen the UK's dominant position in world Motorsport.

Ceramics

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to reclassify the ceramics industry as a creative industry; and if she will make a statement. [145352]

Mr. Woodward: The creative industries, as defined in the 1998 and 2001 Mapping Documents, are those which have their origin in individual creativity, skill and talent. This definition includes design and crafts, which cuts across many sectors, including ceramics, and the creative elements of them. The Creative Economy Programme is considering the broad framework of support for the creative industries and through that work there is a broad recognition that creativity itself is a vital component of sectors such as ceramics, where I am aware that there are many examples of companies achieving renewed success through their innovation and willingness to reinvent themselves.

Cricket: Entry Clearances

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what advice she gave to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office of the issuing of a visa to the Chairman of the Zimbabwean Cricket Union Peter Chingoka to attend the International Cricket Council conference at Lords between 24 and 29 June. [145787]

Mr. Caborn: The Government do not comment on individual visa application cases.

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions (a) she and (b) her officials had with the England and Wales Cricket Board on the granting of a visa to Peter Chingoka to attend the International Cricket Council conference at Lords between 25 June and 29 June. [145792]

Mr. Caborn: My officials and I have discussed the International Cricket Conference at Lords in June with the England and Wales Cricket Board. However, the Government do not comment on individual visa applications cases.

Cultural Heritage: Iraq

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what funds were allocated to the protection of Iraq's heritage in each of the last four years. [143004]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 19 June 2007]: My Department supports international activity by bodies such as the National Museums and Galleries, the British Library and English Heritage through their annual grant in aid. Specific sums are not ring-fenced on a country by country basis, as operational decisions on priorities are best taken by the professionals in each institution in the light of changing circumstances.

In the case of Iraq, I would highlight the work of the British Museum, which has:

provided expertise and training on conservation and site management;

sent two archaeologists to Iraq who were instrumental in co-ordinating the quick supply of a wide range of desperately needed materials and equipment to the Baghdad Museum; and arranged and managed (with additional funding of £15,000 from the DCMS) a project that allowed three interns coming from the Iraqi Ministry of Culture to learn the skills necessary for the future management of the Babylon archaeological site.

In addition to the work of the British Museum, the British Library has also provided expertise and support. It was able to work with the Iraq National Library and Archive, supplying surrogate material to replace that which was lost during the conflict.

Culture: Anniversaries

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what criteria her Department applies before deciding whether or not to celebrate a cultural anniversary. [144020]

Mr. Lammy [holding answer 20 June 2007]: None. There are a plethora of cultural anniversaries every year, marking a broad spectrum of people, events and occasions. My Department does not take unilateral decisions on whether or not to celebrate any of them.

Departments: Aviation

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many flights to overseas destinations were taken by (a) civil servants and (b) Ministers in her Department in each of the last three calendar years; and what the total cost of such flights was. [144944]

Mr. Lammy: Departmental expenditure for overseas travel and subsistence by officials is shown in the table.

Regarding Ministers' visits overseas, since 1999 the Government have published, on an annual basis, a list of all overseas visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500, as well as the total cost of all ministerial travel overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. Information for 2006-07 is currently being compiled and will be published before the summer recess. All travel is undertaken in accordance with the Civil Service Management Code, the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers.

Financial year	Overseas travel and subsistence costs by officials (£)
2006-07[1]	291,427.90
2005-06	287,546.56
2004-05	279,710.59

[1] Subject to finalisation of the annual resource accounts.

Departments: Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much was spent by staff in her Department via departmental (a) credit, (b) procurement and (c) fuel cards in each of the last three years. [145288]

Mr. Lammy: The Department spent the following amounts on (a) credit cards, (b) procurement cards and (c) fuel cards in the last three financial years:

	(a) Credit cards	(b) Procurement cards	(c) Fuel cards
2004-05	0	108,426	0
2005-06	0	174,642	0
2006-07	0	398,718	0

Departments: Energy

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many energy saving light bulbs were purchased by her Department for use on the departmental estate in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [144943]

Mr. Lammy: The Department did not purchase any energy saving light bulbs during these periods.

We are currently refurbishing our offices at 2-4 Cockspur Street and are installing T16 energy efficient light bulbs.

Departments: Foreign Relations

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many Memoranda of Understanding are in force as a result of agreements with foreign Governments entered into by Ministers in her Department; and what executive actions each entails. [144477]

Mr. Lammy: There are three Memoranda of Understanding (MoUs) signed by DCMS Ministers relating to sport:

(i) UK-Saudi Arabia, December 1987;

(ii) UK-South Africa, February 2005;

(iii) UK-Brazil, September 2006.

These MoUs have been put into operation by UK Sport (i and ii) and the British Council (iii).

There is one MoU between the UK and Italy on Digital Television, signed by the Secretary of State in 2004. An exchange of information between the UK and Italy is planned; the form of this is being discussed.

Departments: Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people in her Department have been allowed to work from home for part of the week in the last year; and if she will make a statement on her Department's policy on home working. [143888]

Mr. Lammy: DCMS has 16 members of staff currently working from home on a regular basis. In DCMS there is an arrangement where staff work part of their hours from home. At present we are only able to support a limited number of formal home-working arrangements. However, we also support and encourage the more informal home-working arrangements in which staff may have agreed to work from home on an occasional ad-hoc basis.

Departments: Marketing

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which advertising and marketing campaigns were run by (a) her Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years; which external agencies were involved; and what the cost was of each campaign. [144617]

Mr. Lammy: The information requested is as follows.

(a) Department

(i) The DCMS spent £163,200 on the Licensing Act campaign in 2005. The external agency involved was COI.

(ii) There was a smaller amount of advertising and marketing activity around the BBC Charter Review.

Campaign	Cost (£)	Agency
Licensing Act Campaign (2005-06)	163,200	COI
BBC Charter (2004-05)	37,085	COI
BBC Charter (2003-04)	20,987	COI

(b) Agencies

The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Northern Ireland

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will place in the Library a copy of the concordat governing the relationship between her Department and the Northern Ireland administration. [145943]

Mr. Lammy: My Department does not currently have a Concordat with the Northern Ireland Executive but will work with colleagues in the Devolved Administration in Northern Ireland to develop one. A copy will be laid in the House when this has been done.

Departments: Older Workers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what percentage of staff in her Department were over 60 years of age in each of the last three years. [145676]

Mr. Lammy: The information is shown in the following table.

As at 1 April:	Percentage of staff over 60 years of age
2005	1.7
2007	2

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people aged (a) over 55 years of age and (b) over 60 years of age have been recruited by her Department in each of the last three years; and what percentage in each case this is of the number of new recruits in each year. [145710]

Mr. Lammy: In the last three years the Department recruited one person over the age of 55 which represented 7 per cent. of those recruited in that year. No staff were recruited over the age of 60.

Departments: Public Participation

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many public consultations her Department undertook in the last 12 months; and what the cost was of each consultation. [145271]

Mr. Lammy: Over the 12 months to end May 2007, my Department launched 36 formal public consultations in order to inform the Department's policy development. Information on the cost of each consultation and the total cost of all consultations, could be provided only at disproportionate cost. All consultations are available on the departmental website:

www.culture.gov.uk <http://www.culture.gov.uk>

Departments: Reviews

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for East Devon (Mr. Swire) of 11 June 2007, Official Report, columns 738-39W, on art works, which recommendations from the Goodison report have been addressed by (a) her Department and (b) each other Department; and what steps have been taken in respect of each recommendation that has been addressed. [143556]

Mr. Lammy: I am placing in the House Libraries a table setting out the actions taken by DCMS and others to address the recommendations of Sir Nicholas Goodison's report.

Departments: Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many staff surveys her Department undertook in the last 12 months; and at what total cost. [145255]

Mr. Lammy: DCMS is in the process of undertaking a staff opinion survey. They take place biennially and the last one was in 2005. The cost of this year's survey is £21,540.

Departments: Travel Agents

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much her Department and its agencies paid in travel agencies' fees in each year since 1997. [139912]

Mr. Lammy: The following table shows the Department's expenditure on travel agencies' fees since July 2000. Data prior to July 2000 are no longer available and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The increase since 2002 reflects reductions in the commission the airline industry paid to travel agents for booking flights, and the consequent reduction in the levels of rebates travel agents pass on to clients. Travel agents' fees now reflect the full cost of the travel management contract.

The Department has one Executive agency, the Royal Parks, which has not incurred any expenditure on travel agencies' fees.

Financial year	DCMS (£)
2006-07[1]	23,821.00
2005-06	26,730.00
2004-05	18,720.00
2003-04	14,894.48
2002-03 (July 2002-March 2003)	11,751.61
July 2000-June 2002	5,295.49

English Sports Council: West Midlands

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what funding was provided to Sports England West Midlands in each of the last five years; and what the projected funding allocation is for the 2008-09 financial year. [145419]

Mr. Caborn: The following table provides details of funding provided to Sport England West Midlands in each of the last five years;

Sport England West Midlands	Exchequer	£ Lottery
2003-04	351,965	500,000
2004-05	239,927	12,440,000
2005-06	1,474,522	5,899,310
2006-07	1,360,037	6,253,750
2007-08	1,429,571	13,107,637
Total	4,856,022	38,200,697

The projected funding for 2008-09 financial year will not be known until the outcome of the 2007 comprehensive spending review.

International Council on Monuments and Sites

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the UK members of the International Council on Monuments and Sites; and by whom each was (a) nominated and (b) appointed. [145587]

Mr. Lammy: Membership of ICOMOS-UK is open to anyone involved or interested in cultural heritage conservation. All members of ICOMOS-UK are automatically members of ICOMOS.

ICOMOS is an international, non-governmental membership organisation, which is self-governing and selects members for its own committees. There are no UK members on the Executive Committee of ICOMOS.

International Council on Monuments and Sites: Finance

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the grants to the International Council on Monuments and Sites in each of the last five years. [145585]

Mr. Lammy: The International Council on Monuments and Sites (ICOMOS) does not receive grants through my Department. However, grants have been provided to its UK National Committee, ICOMOS-UK:

2003-04	[1]45,000

[1] Of which £4,000 was provided by Historic Scotland

From 2004-05 ICOMOS-UK received grants through English Heritage:

2004-05	41,000
2005-06	41,000
2006-07	41,000

Discussions concerning the grant for 2007-08 are under way. Historic Scotland and CADW have independent negotiations with ICOMOS-UK.

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport for what reasons annual grants are made to the International Council on Monuments and Sites. [145586]

Mr. Lammy: The International Council on Monuments and Sites (ICOMOS) does not receive grants through my Department. However, grants to its UK National Committee—ICOMOS-UK, are made by English Heritage.

This funding supports ICOMOS-UK's World Heritage work in England, which includes: training and capacity building, communications/awareness raising; provision of advice on World Heritage nominations and management plans and on periodic reporting; advice on the implications of development proposals in World Heritage sites in England. Funding also supports the strengthening of ICOMOS-UK's role on the international agenda, in particular through promoting best practice from the UK on World Heritage.

Historic Scotland and CADW have independent negotiations with ICOMOS-UK for their services.

National Lottery: Scotland

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the impact of additional Lottery funding for the London Olympics on future Lottery funding in Scotland. [144662]

Mr. Woodward: Of the additional £675 million announced on 15 March, the Scottish Arts Council will contribute £7 million; Sport Scotland £7.3 million; and Scottish Screen £1 million.

Of the relevant UK-wide distributing bodies, the Heritage Lottery Fund will make a contribution towards the additional £675 million of £90.2 million; and the Big Lottery Fund will make a contribution of £425 million.

It is for these distributors to determine the proportion of their funding which goes to Scotland. No money will be taken before 2009, grants already made need not be affected and we have agreed with the Big Lottery Fund that resources for the voluntary and community sector will be protected.

National Lottery: Sports

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much was distributed to sports clubs (a) to pay Lottery awards and (b) to meet administrative costs by each of the five sports Lottery distributors in 2006-07. [145082]

Mr. Caborn: The total funds drawn-down by the five sports Lottery distributors in 2006-07 were, subject to audit, as follows:

	£ million
Sport England	121.400
Sports Council Northern Ireland	7.976
sportscotland	21.898
UK Sport	46.852
Sports Council for Wales	10.649

Of the funds drawn-down by the distributors, the following amounts were spent on meeting Lottery administration costs:

	£ million
Sport England	19.929
Sports Council Northern Ireland	0.663
sportscotland	3.502
UK Sport	1.842
Sports Council for Wales	1.502

It should be noted however that there is no common definition of Lottery administration costs. As such the figures provided cannot be directly compared.

Olympic Delivery Authority: Transport

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the cost of delivering the transport strategy of the Olympic Delivery Authority; in what years it will be incurred; and what estimate she has made of the expenditure in each (a) region and (b) county. [145037]

Mr. Caborn: The estimate of the Olympic Delivery Authority's total costs for delivering of the games transport strategy is in the region of £1 billion.

The majority of the contracts needed to deliver this strategy have yet to be procured and information relating to their potential value is commercially sensitive. Releasing detailed regional information at this stage may prejudice the ability of the Olympic Delivery Authority to achieve value for money.

Olympic Games: Greater London

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) on what date the updated figures on the cost of the Olympics provided to her Department by PricewaterhouseCoopers in September 2004 were shown to (a) officials and (b) Ministers at HM Treasury; [141905]

(2) what documents PricewaterhouseCoopers provided to her Department in September 2004 when they gave an update on the cost of the 2012 Olympics. [141906]

Tessa Jowell: PricewaterhouseCoopers (PWC) provided a report to my Department entitled Olympic and Lower Lea Valley Costing Validation Review in July 2004. Copies of this report have been placed in the Libraries of the House. PWC did not provide an update on these figures in September 2004. Rather, my officials continued to update the July figures provided by PWC, in light of emerging information. The final figures were agreed with HM Treasury prior to the submission of the Candidate File.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 22 May 2007, Official Report, column 1177W, on the Olympic Games: Greater London, for what reasons the transport projects were not transferred to Transport for London. [141930]

Tessa Jowell: The three transport projects concern changes to mainline rail infrastructure as part of the London 2012 Olympic Games delivery programme. They do not affect the modes for which Transport for London has responsibility.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the value of land in the Olympic Park at today's market value. [142163]

Tessa Jowell: The London Development Agency (LDA) is responsible for making estimates of land values for the purposes of commercial negotiations, but these are commercially sensitive and necessarily confidential.

The LDA is also currently leading detailed work to make a thorough assessment of the potential end values of land in the Olympic Park and we await the outcome of that work.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will take steps to ensure that all official merchandise, equipment and clothing produced for the London 2012 Olympic Games are produced in facilities where international labour standards are respected, including the International Labour Organisation Core Conventions, and the relevant provisions of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women and the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child; and if she will make a statement. [143948]

Tessa Jowell: We will work with our partners and other Government Departments to explore how the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games can incorporate ethical and fair trade, and in turn bring positive impacts to poor people in developing countries.

The London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games (LOCOG), which will deliver the games—and the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA)—responsible for building the venues—are committed to promoting ethical principles consistent with the Olympic Charter.

LOCOG requires all its suppliers to comply with the Ethical Trading Initiative (ETI) Base Code, and is working with the Playfair Alliance and the ETI to develop a practical approach to raising the bar. The ETI Base Code is derived from the core conventions of the International Labour Organisation.

LOCOG has recently appointed its Head of Procurement who is developing the policies that will inform procurement when it comes on line mainly in 2009. In addition, LOCOG and the ODA have regular meetings with representatives of the Playfair Alliance and the ETI to inform relevant procurement policies.

The ODA seeks to work with suppliers who have a good track record in human rights and using goods and materials produced ethically. This includes seeking suppliers who operate within the laws of their country, who do not have discriminatory practices and who do not use child or bonded labour.

Robert Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she expects the winners of utility contracts for the Olympic Games to be announced. [144415]

Mr. Caborn: There will be several utilities contracts and current expectations are that the different contracts will be let from early summer 2007 through to summer 2008.

The Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA) will announce details of contracts it has awarded once the contractual negotiations have concluded, as in the case of the award of the Primary Substation contract announced on 7 June 2007.

Robert Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many different companies have applied for each Olympic Games utility contract. [144416]

Mr. Caborn: The utilities contracts for Olympic Park are being procured under a commercially confidential process by the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA). Releasing detailed information at this stage may prejudice the ability of the ODA to achieve value for money.

Robert Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what mechanisms are in place for ensuring the fairness of the award of the utilities contracts for the Olympics. [144417]

Mr. Caborn: The utilities contracts for the Olympic Park are being procured in accordance with the Olympic Delivery Authority procurement policy, which in turn is compliant with UK and European public procurement legislation, intended to ensure fairness in the competitive processes.

Robert Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what contribution to the regeneration budget she expects to come from sponsorship deals for the Olympic Games. [144418]

Mr. Caborn: All sponsorship activity for the London 2012 Games is a matter for the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games (LOCOG). It is a self-financing body that has a budget of around £2 billion for hosting and staging the London 2012 Games. Around a third of the LOCOG budget will come from its sponsors and will contribute to delivery of the Games, but regeneration costs will not be met from LOCOG's sponsorship programme. The delivery of the new venues and infrastructure needed to enable regeneration is included in the Olympic Delivery Authority's budget.

Robert Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much she expects to be raised through sponsorship for the Olympic Games. [144419]

Mr. Caborn: This is a matter for the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games (LOCOG). To host and stage the London 2012 Games, LOCOG has a budget of around £2 billion, almost all of which has to be raised from the private sector. Around a third of this will be through sponsorship activity. Sponsors are, therefore, a vital part of delivering a successful Games. In addition, LOCOG will also receive a proportion of revenue from the sponsors in the International Olympic Committee's (IOC) The Olympic Partner Programme (TOP), within the overall contribution they will receive from the IOC towards the London 2012 Games.

Robert Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she expects all main sponsors for the Olympic Games to be announced. [144420]

Mr. Caborn: This is a matter for the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games (LOCOG). Their sponsorship programme is based on a three-tier structure and their first priority is to sign the main partners in Tier One. LOCOG announced their first Tier One sponsor, Lloyds TSB, in the banking and insurance sector in March 2007. The other active sectors included in Tier One are utilities, telecommunications, airlines, automotive, sportswear and oil and gas categories. I understand that they expect to make a number of further announcements in this financial year, although no specific dates have yet been agreed. Their Tier Two and Tier Three programmes will come on line in due course. The LOCOG sponsorship programme is in addition to the sponsors included in the International Olympic Committee's (IOC) The Olympic Partner Programme (TOP).

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the number of construction workers on the Olympic site who will receive healthcare benefits. [144899]

Mr. Caborn: The estimated number of construction workers on the Olympic Park site (i.e. excluding the village and retail development) is expected to peak at around 9,000 in 2010. It is assumed all will be entitled to receive NHS healthcare benefits, and it is likely that many will be provided with additional healthcare benefits by their employer. However, it is not possible to estimate what additional benefits may be provided since the majority of construction contracts are yet to be let.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will place in the Library copies of (a) submissions made by bodies for which she is responsible to the IOC Co-ordinating Commission and (b) the IOC Co-ordinating Commission's final report. [145081]

Tessa Jowell: The visit of the IOC Co-ordination Commission was organised by the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games (LOCOG). It is a regular private business meeting between those two organisations to discuss progress. The bulk of the information was provided by oral evidence and papers were tabled by LOCOG. Those papers submitted by LOCOG to the IOC Co-ordination Commission were provided in confidence.

My Department submitted the Legacy Promises document to the IOC Co-ordination Commission. Copies of this document are already in the Library of both Houses. The IOC Co-ordination Commission does not produce a formal report as such. Rather the Chairman of the Commission writes a private letter to the Chairman of the Organising Committee. However, the Commission issued a press release and copies will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2007, Official Report, column 639W, on the London Olympics, whether the breakdown of planned expenditure provided corresponds to the budget headings of the revised budget provided to the IOC Co-ordinating Commission. [145084]

Tessa Jowell: The visit of the IOC Co-ordination Commission was organised by the London Organising Committee of the Paralympic Games and Olympic Games (LOCOG). The bulk of the information, including the revised budget was provided in a series of presentations to the IOC.

The presentation to the IOC on Olympic finances encompassed all aspects of the revised budget provision as set out in my answer of 18 April.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate her Department has made of the number of tourists visiting (a) Northern Ireland, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) England during the 2012 Olympics. [145399]

Mr. Woodward: Estimates of the number of tourists by country are not available. Preliminary estimates suggested that about 500,000 additional inbound visitors will come to London during the games. However, VisitBritain and Visit London will be shortly commissioning some research to undertake more in-depth analysis.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she is taking to tackle the production and sale of counterfeit Olympic products before the 2012 Olympics. [145421]

Mr. Caborn: The London Olympic Games and Paralympic Games Act 2006 and the Olympic Symbol etc. (Protection) Act 1995 contain provisions that safeguard the intellectual property rights of the London 2012 Games. This includes giving customs and trading standards officers powers to detain and seize goods which infringe the rights of the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games (LOCOG) and the British Olympic Association by using the Olympic and Paralympic terminology, symbols or mottos without their consent.

LOCOG has begun planning their strategy to combat unofficial merchandise and counterfeit goods and are in the process of identifying a prevention and enforcement policy for the next five years. They have also set up an Anti-Counterfeiting Working Group whose aim is to collaborate and share information and best practice, and to develop a co-ordinated multi-disciplinary approach to the issue. The Working Group includes representatives from HM Revenue and Customs, Trading Standards, Metropolitan Police, Olympic Security Directorate, and the Intellectual Property Office.

The provisions contained in the Olympic-specific legislation are in addition to the general intellectual property rights which LOCOG will also rely on to protect the brands related to London 2012, the Olympic movement and Paralympic movement.

Public Houses: Entertainments

Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment her Department has made of the effect of the Licensing Act 2003 on live entertainment in public houses, with particular reference to the removal of the two in a bar exemption. [144691]

Mr. Woodward: Current assessments are largely anecdotal and suggest a broadly neutral impact in terms of live music performances in pubs.

A survey of smaller venues we carried out in 2006 showed that nearly three-quarters of the 7 per cent. of venues that had ever put on music using the two in a bar exemption now have a licence for live music. Those who did not apply stated that they chose not to because their premises were either unsuitable, or they would not use it. This research is available in the Libraries of the House and on the DCMS website:

www.culture.gov.uk/Reference_library/Research/research_by_dcms/live_music_exec_summary.htm

The Live Music Forum has been monitoring the early effects of the Act on live music and is due to publish its assessment shortly. Our own planned research into the current provision of live music will look at premises including pubs, and will be completed by the end of the year.

Slavery: Anniversaries

Ms Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will bring forward plans for a national debate on proposals for a slavery memorial day. [145286]

Mr. Lammy: As the Deputy Prime Minister confirmed in the Adjournment Debate of 20 March on the Bicentenary of the Abolition of the Slave Trade, the Government will be initiating a public debate on a suitable date for a National Memorial Day every year and what this might entail. Further details will be announced in the coming weeks.

Sports

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many sports clubs there were in England in each of the last 10 years. [145083]

Mr. Caborn: DCMS does not hold the information requested and there is no central register for Sports clubs in England.

Sports Grounds: Safety

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many responses were received to the Sports Ground Safety Legislation Consultation; and when she expects the results to be published. [145420]

Mr. Caborn: There were 41 responses to the consultation on the application of sports safety legislation. The responses are now being assessed and the results will be published later this year.

Sports: Hearing Impaired

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations her Department has received about continued funding for UK Deaf Sport; and if she will make a statement. [144974]

Mr. Caborn: The Department has received correspondence from Craig Crowley, chair of UK Deaf Sport, most recently in April 2007. Mr. Crowley expressed his disappointment at UK Sport's decision not to fund his organisation and asked that UK Sport review the decision.

Since we won the right to host the 2012 Olympic games, UK Sport has revised its strategy, and it is now primarily focused on supporting Olympic and Paralympic sports. However its World Class Pathway Programme does not discriminate against deaf athletes, and there are already some talented deaf athletes on the Pathway who will continue to receive the support they need to succeed at the very highest level.

In my reply to his letter, I suggested Mr. Crowley contact each of the Home Country Sports Councils to see if they would be prepared to fund UK Deaf Sport for the Deaflympics, and to obtain advice on alternative sources of potential funding.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what funding her Department (a) has given to UK Deaf Sport for the year 2007-08 and (b) gave for each of the last three years. [144975]

Mr. Caborn: Through UK Sport the Department has funded the following amounts for UK Deaf Sport:

	Funding for deaf sport (£)
(a) 2007-08	42,000
(b) 2006-07	42,000
2005-06	42,000
2004-05	42,000

Additionally, UK Deaf Sport was awarded £75,000 for the period from 1 December 2003 to 31 March 2005 to support the GB team at the 2005 Deaflympics.

Sports: Training

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many community sports coaches there are in (a) West Bromwich, East constituency, (b) the West Midlands region and (c) England; and what steps she is taking to increase the number of community sports coaches. [145394]

Mr. Caborn: We estimate that, by 22 June 2007, funding awards had been made to support the following Community Sports Coach (CSC) posts:

(a) We do not hold specific data on the number of Community Sports Coaches in the West Bromwich, East constituency but there are 168 funded posts in Birmingham and the Black Country, of which 147 are operational

(b) 419 funded posts in the West Midlands, of which 374 are operational

(c) 3,298 funded posts in England, of which 2,921 are operational

Future funding for Community Sports Coaches is subject to the ongoing comprehensive spending review.

Tourism: Fire Prevention

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government on fire risk assessments in respect of tourist industry facilities; and if she will make a statement; [145896]

(2) what guidance (a) her Department and (b) Visit Britain has issued to accommodation providers in the tourism industry on fire risk assessments; and if she will make a statement. [145897]

Mr. Woodward: I have had no discussions on fire risk assessments in respect of tourist facilities with the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, who has responsibility for fire safety policy. Guidance on compliance with the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2005, which was developed following a public consultation, is set out in a series of guides dealing with a range of different types of premises, and are freely available on the Communities and Local Government website.

In addition VisitBritain offers such guidance to accommodation providers on its tourism trade website:

http://www.tourismtrade.org.uk/QualityStandards/default.asp

This includes advice on compliance with the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2005 (the 2005 Regulations).

Further advice on the 2005 regulations and the assessment of fire safety risks is contained in VisitBritain's National Quality Assessment Scheme magazine, 'Quality Edge' (Winter 2007 edition, Page 18), which is also available on the internet at:

ELECTORAL COMMISSION COMMITTEE

Departments: Manpower

Mr. Heald: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission how many staff funded by the public purse in the Electoral Commission are classified as people without posts. [142194]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that there are no people within the organisation classified as people without posts.

Elections: Fraud

Mr. Heald: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what assessment the Electoral Commission has made of the effectiveness of individual electoral registration in reducing the scope for fraud in Northern Ireland. [142192]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that since the introduction of individual registration in 2002 it has published reports on the 2003 Northern Ireland Assembly election, the 2005 combined UK parliamentary and local government elections and the 2007 Assembly election. It is the Commission's view that changes introduced by the Electoral Fraud Act 2002, including individual registration, have resulted in more accurate elector registers and reduced the scope for electoral malpractice.

Mr. Heald: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission pursuant to the answer of 16 May 2007, Official Report, column 749W, on elections: fraud, (1) how many cases of prosecutions for offences under the Representation of the People Acts came to the attention of the Electoral Commission and were recorded in each year since 2002; [142196]

(2) on what date the Electoral Commission started counting cases of prosecutions following its discussions with the Crown Prosecution Service. [143171]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that it has no formal or statutory role in relation to electoral malpractice, and there is no requirement for it to be informed of cases of prosecutions for offences under the Representation of the People Acts. The available information on the number of such cases brought to its attention in each year is as follows:

	Number
2003	1
2004	2
2005	1
2006	5
2007 (to date)	7

Elections: Legislation

Mr. Heald: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission pursuant to the answer of 16 May 2007, Official Report, column 749W, on elections: legislation, if he will place in the Library a list of the cases referred to in the Crown Prosecution Service's files on alleged offences under electoral legislation indicating (a) what each alleged offence was, (b) the location of the alleged offence and (c) what the final outcome was of each case. [142195]

Peter Viggers: The Commission informs me that it is not in a position to provide the information requested. I refer my hon. Friend to my answers to him on 27 March 2007, Official Report, column 1481W, and 16 May 2007 Official Report, columns 748-49W. The Commission remains in contact with the Crown Prosecution Service and intends to report further by the end of the year.

Elections: Local Government

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what the timetable is for periodic electoral reviews for each tier of local government in England. [141868]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that the boundary committee for England completed a programme of periodic electoral reviews of all 386 local authorities in England in October 2004. The Commission has no plans to direct the committee to conduct a further programme. It can direct the boundary committee to undertake electoral reviews of individual authorities at any time.

Mr. Heald: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what advice the Electoral Commission has provided on combining the date of the 2009 European parliamentary elections and 2009 local elections; and if he will make a statement. [142189]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that it has provided no such advice. The Commission was, it also informs me, consulted by the Department for Communities and Local Government on a proposed Government amendment, now made, to the Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Bill to allow the date of ordinary local elections to be moved in years when there are European Parliamentary elections so that the two elections could be combined. The Commission has recommended that the provision should also include a time limit by which such powers must be exercised.

Elections: Scotland

Mr. Heald: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what criteria the Electoral Commission used to choose its independent observer to review the issues with the Scottish Parliamentary and local elections in 2007. [142191]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that it sought to appoint a non-partisan person independent of the Commission from outside the United Kingdom with extensive electoral administration experience; good knowledge of electoral processes and practices; and some familiarity with the type of legal framework within which the United Kingdom electoral system operates.

Mr. Heald: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what the terms of reference are of the review into the Scottish 2007 elections; and what discretion the review team has to extend the terms. [142203]

Peter Viggers: The Commission informs me that it placed a paper in the Library setting out the full terms of reference and scope of the review on 21 May, and that the review team may examine any aspect of the elections that it thinks may be relevant. I also refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Lanark and Hamilton, East (Mr. Hood) on 23 May 2007, Official Report, column 1307W.

Mr. Heald: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission whether the independent review into the Scottish 2007 elections is being administered on the Electoral Commission's premises. [142211]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that it has secured separate office accommodation for the review team in Edinburgh, from which it is expected to carry out the bulk of its work.

Electoral Commission: Manpower

Mr. Heald: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission whether the two new (a) corporate communication officers and (b) media relations officers planned to be employed by the Commission are in addition to its existing staff complement. [142190]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that both media relations officer positions and one corporate communication officer position are established posts. The other Corporate Communication Officer post is a six month fixed term appointment, additional to the existing staff complement.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agriculture: National Income

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the gross value added (GVA) of farming in (a) Cornwall, (b) the South West and (c) the UK was in each year since 1979; and what proportion of total UK GVA this represented. [144229]

Barry Gardiner: The information available is presented in the following table. Regional data are only available from 1995.

Note that the fall in Agricultural GVA in 2005 is partly a consequence of the introduction of the Single Payment Scheme which is not included in output (as it is decoupled from production) and therefore does not appear in gross value added.

Agricultural gross value added at basic prices

Agriculture: Organic Food

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he expects UK farmers to adopt the EU Organic Standards agreed on 12 June. [144015]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 20 June 2007]: The EU Council Regulation on organic production and labelling of organic products will apply from 1 January 2009.

Agriculture: Subsidies

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the likely financial correction to be imposed on the UK for non-respect of payment deadlines in 2005-06. [134685]

Barry Gardiner: The current estimate of the potential financial correction to be proposed in relation to the UK for failure to meet payment deadlines in respect of the Single Payment Scheme (SPS) for 2005 is around £70 million. The Government will continue to defend the UK's interests against such proposals with the aim of ensuring that any corrections are minimised to the fullest possible degree.

Algae

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the effects of algal blooms on (a) mussel beds and (b) inshore fisheries in the area covered by the North Western and North Wales Sea Fisheries Committee. [142809]

Mr. Bradshaw: Neither DEFRA, nor the Welsh Assembly Government (which is responsible for water quality in Wales) have carried out such assessments. However, the North Western and North Wales Sea Fisheries Committees monitor and plot the locations of algal blooms in the sea.

The Food Standards Agency advises that some algae produce biotoxins, which may accumulate in shellfish and pose a risk to consumers. The UK has a statutory monitoring programme in place to check for the presence of biotoxins in live bivalve molluscs.

Under the programme, live bivalve molluscs, including mussels from the Morecambe Bay area, are routinely sampled and tested. Since June 2006, biotoxins have not been found to be a public health concern in the Morecambe Bay area.

The Environment Agency also monitors water quality in these areas, as required by the Shellfish Waters Directive.

Animal Welfare Act 2006: Prosecutions

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people in (a) England and (b) Wales have been prosecuted under the Animal Welfare Act 2006 in 2007. [145560]

Mr. Bradshaw: Data from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform for 2007 will be available in the autumn of 2008.

Animal Welfare: Transport

Gwyn Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many notices have been served under Article 24 of the Welfare of Animals (Transport) (England) Order 2006 by inspectors (a) at Dover, (b) at supervised loadings at departure premises and (c) at other places in respect of live calves destined for export; what remedial measures have been ordered by these notices; and if he will make a statement. [140096]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information is as follows:

1. The following information relates to the transport of live calves under 42 days of age intended for export.

2. For the period from 3 May 2006 to 30 April 2007, a total of 373 inspections have been carried out by animal health staff and 26 notices were served under Article 24 of the above order as detailed in the following table.

Location of inspection	Number of inspections	Number of notices served
Supervised loadings at point of departure	79	1
Staging posts/transfer points	5	0
Dover	289	25
Total	373	26

3. Reasons for the service of the 26 notices and details of the remedial action required to be taken by the transporter are as follows:

Notices served	Reason for the notice	Remedial measures ordered by these notices
3	Unable to provide adequate water and emergency feed	Take remedial action before continuing journey
5	Insufficient headroom and oversize pens	Take remedial action before continuing journey
1	Ventilation fans not working on lorry	Do not transport animals at all
4	Delayed sailing	Hold at lairage for 24 hour rest
4	Cancelled sailing	Return the animals by most direct route
4	No journey log/ exceeded journey times	Hold at lairage/return the animals by most direct route
5	A collapsed calf (all at Dover)	Do not transport animals at all (4 of the 5 calves were humanely destroyed)

Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty: Cotswolds

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make a statement on the grant settlement received by the Cotswolds area of outstanding natural beauty from Natural England for 2007-08; and what assessment he has made of the effect of the grant on the establishment of the Cotswolds Conservation Boards. [144887]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA does not fund areas of outstanding natural beauty (AONBs) directly. Most of the core (administrative) costs, and some of the project costs, involved are provided by Natural England. The relevant local authorities also make a significant contribution. It is for Natural England to determine funding levels for each AONB according to priorities and available resources.

Bees: Electromagnetic Fields

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the potential effects of the wider use of Wi-Fi technology on bee populations. [145061]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA has not made any assessment of the effects of electronic telecommunications networks on bee populations as there is no evidence to suggest that there is any link between this technology and colony mortality. Should a link emerge, DEFRA will consider what action should be taken.

Birds: Imports

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reasons the rules on pet bird imports have been relaxed, with particular reference to (a) the removal of the need for individual licences and (b) compulsory quarantine periods. [144890]

Mr. Bradshaw: Before the recent change to rules on pet bird imports, there were more restrictions on movements of pet birds into the UK than on commercial birds of the same species. In respect of disease risk, there is no justification for imposing additional rules on individuals wishing to bring their pet birds into the UK. Pet birds are confined in a house or aviary, with minimal contact with wild birds or commercial poultry, and are closely observed, so disease is noticed promptly. Bird keepers are advised to be alert for signs of avian influenza or Newcastle disease at all times and to report any suspicion of disease to their nearest animal health office.

Following a public consultation, including an animal health risk assessment, moving pet birds to the UK from other European countries does not require licences or quarantine subject to conditions: there must be five or fewer pet birds, the import must not be intended for a commercial purpose and the birds cannot be poultry.

Carbon Emissions

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the regulatory framework is for those companies that offer carbon-offsetting services; and if he will make a statement. [145903]

Ian Pearson: The carbon market is a growing and diverse marketplace. In practice, there are two different markets currently in operation—the voluntary market and the regulated market. The regulated market covers emission reductions generated under the Kyoto mechanisms, such as Certified Emission Reductions (CERs) and EU Allowances (EUAs). The voluntary market covers all emission reductions generated outside of the regulated regime—collectively known as Verified Emission Reductions (VERs). There is currently no regulatory framework governing the voluntary market.

DEFRA has published a consultation paper on establishing a voluntary Code of Best Practice for the provision of carbon offsetting to UK customers. The purpose of establishing such a Code is to ensure consumer confidence in this emerging market. Such confidence will also be an important factor in the market's continued growth. The consultation has now been completed and responses are being assessed. The intention is to have the Code operating in late 2007.

The Code proposes that the most suitable carbon credits for offsetting are those from the regulated market because they are robust and verifiable.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the environmental effectiveness of the services offered by carbon-offsetting companies. [145904]

Ian Pearson: Carbon offsetting is not a cure for climate change, but it can to help raise awareness and reduce the impact of our actions. The biggest priority is to reduce our emissions wherever possible. However, where this cannot be achieved, offsetting can help by creating the equivalent carbon dioxide saving elsewhere.

There are currently two markets in operation which generate emission reductions for carbon offsetting. The regulated market encompasses emission reductions generated under the Kyoto mechanisms, while the voluntary market covers those which operate outside the Kyoto regime. There is currently no regulatory framework governing the voluntary market.

In order to provide more confidence, DEFRA has published a consultation paper on establishing a voluntary Code of Best Practice for the provision of carbon offsetting to UK customers. The aim is to have the Code operating in late 2007.

The Code proposes that the most suitable carbon credits for offsetting are those from the regulated market because they are robust and verifiable. These credits include Certified Emission Reductions (CERs), EU Allowances (EUAs) and Emission Reduction Units (ERUs). However, it is possible to offset voluntarily, that is without a formal compliance obligation, and use regulated credits to achieve this. Government currently uses CERs within its own voluntary internal carbon offsetting schemes.

Catering: EC Law

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reasons the catering industry is exempt from the EU Organic Food Standards adopted on 12 June 2007. [143956]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Council agreed that it was not currently appropriate to consider EU standards for the catering sector and that instead, it should be left to the control of national governments. The Commission have undertaken to review this by 31 December 2011.

Cattle: Exports

Gwyn Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 10 May 2007, Official Report, column 380W, on cattle: exports, what the journey length in hours was of each shipment of calves aged under 42 days exported to Spain between 1 January and 30 April 2007. [140172]

Mr. Bradshaw: The following table shows the figures requested, for journeys between 1 January 2007 and 30 April 2007:

Destination	Number of shipments	Total number of calves	Average journey time (hours)	Number of short rest stops/ journey	Number of 24 hour rest periods/ journey
Barcelona	50	3,202	57	2	1

Cattle TB: Independent Scientific Group

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when Ministers first received the report of the Independent Scientific Group on cattle tuberculosis. [144580]

Mr. Bradshaw: DEFRA Ministers, together with a range of stakeholders, received the final report of the Independent Scientific Group (ISG) on 15 June 2007. On 23 May, under cover of a letter from the chairman of the ISG, Ministers received an incomplete draft of the report.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he next plans to meet representatives of the Independent Scientific Group on bovine tuberculosis to discuss its recent report. [144888]

Mr. Bradshaw: There are no current plans for DEFRA Ministers to meet representatives of the Independent Scientific Group on Cattle TB (ISG) to discuss its recent report. The work of the ISG has come to an end.

The Government are committed to establishing a new bovine TB science advisory body to provide independent expert advice to inform policy decisions on bovine TB issues.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether he plans to ask Professor Godfray to carry out an evaluation of the recent Independent Scientific Group report on bovine tuberculosis. [144889]

Mr. Bradshaw: There are no plans to ask Professor Godfray to carry out such a review.

Departments: Aviation

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many flights to overseas destinations were taken by (a) civil servants and (b) Ministers in his Department in each of the last three calendar years; and what the total cost of such flights were. [144946]

Barry Gardiner: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost. Since 1999, the Government have published on an annual basis a list of all overseas visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500, as well as the total cost of all ministerial travel overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. Information for 2006-07 is currently being compiled and will be published before the summer recess. All travel is undertaken in accordance with the Civil Service Management Code, the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers.

Departments: Manpower

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people granted (a) temporary part-time, (b) temporary full-time, (c) permanent part-time and (d) permanent full-time contracts of employment in his Department in each of the last three years were (i) male, (ii) female, (iii) registered disabled and (iv) aged 55 years or over. [143895]

Barry Gardiner: This information is partially available from statistics published by the Cabinet Office in the annual Civil Service Statistics reports. The latest published statistics are for 1 April 2003, 2004 and 2005.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of staff in his Department are (a) male, (b) female, (c) registered disabled and (d) aged 55 or over. [143912]

Barry Gardiner: This information is available from statistics published by the Cabinet Office in the annual Civil Service Statistics reports. The latest published statistics are for 1 April 2005.

In addition, the Office for National Statistics has carried out an ad hoc analysis for permanent staff by Department aged 55 or over. In DEFRA, 13 per cent. of staff were aged 55 or over on 1 April 2005.

Departments: Marketing

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which advertising and marketing campaigns were run by (a) his Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years; which external agencies were involved; and what the cost was of each campaign. [144622]

Barry Gardiner: The total expenditure of the Department's Communication Directorate on marketing activity for each of the last five years is as follows:

	Expenditure (£)
2002	3,747,138.54
2003	2,380,639.81
2004	3,285,228.17
2005	3,190,869.12
2006	2,576,335.49

From its inception to 2003-04, the Department did not record separate costs for campaigns as part of its communications expenditure.

For details of advertising campaigns, costs and external agencies involved from 2004-05 to 2006-07, I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave on 19 June 2007, Official Report, columns 1655-56W, to the hon. Member for Welwyn Hatfield (Grant Shapps). The Department procures its advertising services from the Central Office of Information (COI). Advertising agencies are selected from the COI rosters and supply their services to the COI, not to DEFRA directly.

For details of public relations campaigns, costs and external agencies involved from 2004-05 to 2006-07, I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave on 19 June 2007, Official Report, column 1654-55Ws, to the hon. Member for Welwyn Hatfield (Grant Shapps) The Department procures its public relations services from the Central Office of Information (COI). Public relations agencies are selected from the COI rosters and supply their services to the COI, not to DEFRA directly.

For costs for DEFRA's delivery bodies, I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given on 6 March 2007, Official Report, columns 1820-23W, by the Minister for Climate Change and the Environment (Ian Pearson) to the hon. Member for Cheltenham (Martin Horwood).

Departments: Northern Ireland

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of the concordat governing the relationship between his Department and the Northern Ireland administration. [145937]

Barry Gardiner: My Department does not currently have a concordat with the Northern Ireland Executive but will work with colleagues in the devolved Administration in Northern Ireland to develop one. A copy will be laid in the House when this has been done.

The principles set out in the Memorandum of Understanding and Supplementary Agreements between the UK Government, Scottish Ministers, the Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales and the Northern Ireland Executive, published in 2001, continue to underpin our working relationship with the Northern Ireland Executive.

Departments: Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many staff in his Department received bonus payments in 2007; what proportion of the total workforce they represented; what the total amount of bonuses paid was; what the largest single payment has been; and if he will make a statement. [143104]

Barry Gardiner: The following table shows details of bonuses awarded to staff in core-DEFRA and those Agencies covered by the core-Department's reward arrangements in 2007 i.e. Animal Health, Pesticides Safety Directorate, Veterinary Medicines Directorate, Marine Fisheries Agency and Government Decontamination Services.

	January-May 2007
Number of staff awarded bonuses	822
Proportion of workforce (Percentage)	14
Total amount of bonuses paid (£)	347,100
Highest bonus (£)	900

However, these figures represent In-Year Performance bonuses only, paid to staff at Grade 6 and below.

Payment of annual performance bonuses to staff in and below the SCS for 2007 have still to be finalised.

Separate performance bonus arrangements operate for staff in the SCS and those at Grade 6 and below.

For the SCS

Non-consolidated cash payments, otherwise known as bonuses, reward in-year performances in relation to agreed objectives, or short term personal contribution to wider organisational objectives. Bonuses are paid in addition to base pay increases and do not count towards pension.

Bonuses are allocated by departments from a 'pot' expressed as a percentage of the SCS salary bill, which is agreed centrally each year following the SSRB recommendations. The intention is that bonus decisions should be differentiated in order to recognise the most significant deliverers of in-year performance.

For Staff at Grade 6 and below

The High Performance Bonus Awards scheme introduced in April 2005, provide staff in DEFRA and those Agencies covered by the core-Department's reward arrangements, with recognition and reward for delivery of an outstanding outcome or performance that significantly exceeds normal expectations. The process should provide staff at all grades with an opportunity to earn a bonus, and ensure that achievements in operational, policy and corporate services areas are recognised as being of equal esteem.

There are two types of award:

In-Year High Performance bonuses paid to individuals or teams in recognition of one-off achievements during the year; and Annual High Performance bonuses which are paid to the top 10 per cent. of performers in each DG for delivery of an outstanding outcome or performance sustained throughout the whole year.

Departments: Public Participation

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many public consultations his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and what the cost was of each consultation. [145275]

Barry Gardiner: In the period June 2006 to June 2007 the Department initiated 114 public consultations. The cost of each of these consultations could be calculated only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Remploy

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) services and (b) products his Department has procured from Remploy in the last 12 months; and at what cost. [143796]

Barry Gardiner: From information held centrally, core-DEFRA spent £522.88 with Remploy in the last 12 months. Departmental accounts classify the expenditure as Diversity Advertising non-recruitment.

Departments: Sign Language

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the merits of providing British Sign Language (BSL) videos on his departmental website for the benefit of those whose first language is BSL. [142493]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA aims to produce a website that is accessible for users with disabilities. In April 2007 changes were made to the site which made it more compliant with Web Accessibility Initiative standards, further supporting DEFRA's commitments under the Disability Discrimination Act.

Video is not used extensively on the DEFRA website but where it is used we aim to provide accompanying transcripts or explanatory descriptive text for those unable to hear the audio content of an online video. We have not assessed the feasibility of also providing BSL.

Departments: Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many staff surveys his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and at what total cost. [145258]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA'S approach has been to undertake a full staff survey every 18 months. The last full staff survey took place in 2005 and cost approximately £65,000 plus VAT.

Domestic Waste

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the Answer of 16 April 2007, Official Report, column 77W, on domestic waste, and the Answer of 30 April 2007, Official Report, column 1430W, on domestic waste: Norfolk, when he will publish an amended list of local authorities. [145346]

Mr. Bradshaw: A revised list of local authorities known to be operating alternate weekly collections (AWC) of refuse and recyclables/organic waste is as follows:

[1] Scheme not district-wide

[2] Phase one introduced summer 2006. Next three phases to be introduced July 2007 to February 2008

[3] Roll out January 2007—scheme not borough wide

Some authorities listed provide AWC of refuse alongside a weekly recyclables and/or food waste collection service. This list represents the Waste and Resources Action Programme's (WRAP) best understanding of the current situation. However, the often rapid changes in this area mean that this list might not be completely up to date.

WRAP has deleted from the list those authorities that had been incorrectly recorded as operating AWC schemes. Authorities operating small scale trials have also not been included, in order to avoid any confusion or potential misunderstanding if the authority has not yet agreed wider roll out of the scheme.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 16 April 2007, Official Report, column 77W, on domestic waste, what records the Waste and Resources Action Programme holds of local authorities intentions relating to the introduction of alternate weekly collections later in 2007. [145347]

Mr. Bradshaw: Local authorities intending to introduce alternate weekly collections later in the year are under no obligation to inform the Waste and Resources Action Programme of this fact.

Domestic Wastes: Waste Disposal

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance (a) his Department and (b) the Waste and Resources Action Programme has provided to local authorities on the size of wheelie bins for collections of household waste. [145240]

Mr. Bradshaw: Section 46 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 empowers local authorities to specify the number, size, construction and maintenance of their waste receptacles, what can be placed in each, and also where and when they should be placed for collection.

My Department has funded the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP), to provide advice and support to local authorities in carrying out their recycling and waste collection operations efficiently and effectively. However, WRAP has not produced any specific guidance on the size of wheelie bins for the collection of household waste.

Decisions on the best way to collect waste are rightly a matter for local authorities, not central Government.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the comments made by the Minister for Sustainable Farming and Food on 10 May 2007, House of Lords, Official Report, column 1534, (1) what estimate his Department has made of the increase in fly-tipping resulting from the move to alternate weekly collections of household rubbish; [145348]

(2) what requirements local authorities who move to alternate weekly collections of household rubbish will have to take extra steps to tackle fly-tipping. [145349]

Mr. Bradshaw: My Department has not made any assessment of fly-tipping incidents resulting from local authorities moving to alternate weekly collections of household waste.

There is currently no evidence that switching to alternate weekly collection of household waste results in an increase in fly tipping incidents.

Any changes to waste collection methods that are poorly implemented may increase the risk of fly-tipping. However, DEFRA actively encourages local authorities to have fly-tipping prevention and enforcement strategies in place, regardless of whether they introduce alternate weekly collections or not.

My Department is currently in discussions with the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) to consider whether they could work with any local authorities that are introducing these schemes in the future to carry out some pre, and post, scheme analysis of fly-tipping. This is in addition to the guidance that WRAP is currently updating on alternate weekly collections, in order to minimise nuisance and health risks.

It is the responsibility of each local authority to determine what works best for their own community, rather than central Government.

My Department is currently consulting on proposals to give local authorities the freedom to introduce financial incentive schemes to encourage recycling and minimisation of waste by householders. This consultation seeks views on what controls, if any, Government should place on local authorities before allowing them to introduce such incentive schemes. We have proposed that there should be a requirement for local authorities who use these powers to have fly-tipping prevention and enforcement strategies in place.

Eggs: Labelling

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government are taking to ensure clear labelling of eggs produced from battery cage hens. [145564]

Mr. Bradshaw: The rules for marketing Class A eggs for consumption are agreed at European level. Each egg must be stamped with various details relating to its origin and including a code identifying the method of production. Packs or displays of Class A eggs must also be labelled with the production method and an explanation of the code on the eggs. Together, these enable the consumer to determine whether an egg is organic, free range, barn, or from a caged hen.

These rules are actively enforced in England from the primary production through packing to distribution by Animal Health 'Egg Marketing Inspectors' and by local authorities at retail and catering level.

Electronic Equipment: Recycling

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for North Cornwall (Dan Rogerson) of 27 April 2007, Official Report, column 1342W, on electronic equipment: recycling, what mechanisms the Government hope will be established to provide for the expected increase in recycling of (a) metals, (b) plastics and (c) other materials. [142884]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

The UK has existing treatment capacity for many types of Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment (WEEE). For example, we have some of the largest and most modern fridge treatment facilities in Europe and are currently importing fridges from France and the Republic of Ireland. We have growing capacity for the treatment of TVs and monitors with cathode ray tubes (CRTs) and good treatment capacity for lamps and fluorescent tubes. The capacity in these areas has been prompted by the requirements of the Ozone Depleting Substances Regulations (in the case of fridges and freezers) and the Hazardous Waste Regulations in the case of other types of hazardous WEEE.

Since the WEEE UK Regulations were laid on 12 December 2006 this existing infrastructure has been further enhanced, with investments of over £15 million across the UK. This investment includes plants in South Wales, Bedfordshire, Kent and Birmingham which will be capable of handling in excess of an additional 250,000 tonnes of WEEE material.

Energy Supply

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if his Department will consider the merits of publishing a low carbon milestone document to help Ofgem achieve its new role of analysing the long term energy outlook in order to address concerns about security of supply as outlined in the recent Energy White Paper. [143866]

Ian Pearson: As set out in the Energy White Paper, the new Energy Markets Outlook is to be jointly managed by the Department of Trade and Industry and Ofgem to provide energy market information relating to security of supply.

Through the Energy White Paper and draft Climate Change Bill, the Government have provided a framework to encourage the development of low carbon technologies, which will allow the market to help minimise the cost of achieving our goals. Our commitment to the EU Emissions Trading Scheme also shows our continued belief that a carbon market is the most cost-effective way to reduce emissions. However, it is for the market to decide how to respond and in which technologies to invest. We therefore have no plans to publish a milestone document.

Energy: Conservation

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what powers his Department has (a) to advise, (b) to encourage and (c) to compel businesses to minimise energy and electricity consumption during non-business times in order (i) to improve energy efficiency, (ii) to minimise environmental damage and (iii) to reduce light pollution. [145513]

Ian Pearson: DEFRA funds the Carbon Trust, who work closely with business to encourage sustainable use of energy, establish energy efficient practices and systems, and develop low carbon technologies. Under its Solutions programme the trust advises businesses on cutting carbon emissions through reducing energy use, including advice on switching off lighting and equipment during non-business times. The Carbon Trust holds free lighting workshops, and produces a number of publications specifically focused on lighting in the business sector.

The Secretary of State has the power to enter into climate change agreements (CCAs) with industry sectors and individual companies that meet certain eligibility conditions. CCAs give entitlement to claim an 80 per cent. discount from the Climate Change Levy in return for meeting challenging energy efficiency or carbon emissions reductions targets. The targets apply regardless of when energy is used.

In addition, as part of the Energy White Paper, the Government announced that they would be taking forward the Carbon Reduction Commitment (CRC). The CRC is a mandatory emissions trading scheme that will target energy use emissions from large non-energy intensive commercial and public sector organisations, such as supermarkets, banks, large local authorities and Government Departments.

This sector accounts for around 10 per cent. of the UK's carbon emissions and is rising. There is scope for significant abatement. The CRC will deliver emissions reductions of 1.1 MtC per year by 2020 from this sector. It would encourage organisations to minimise their energy use by placing a cap on their overall energy use emissions.

We will be publishing a consultation document shortly on the detail of how the proposed CRC can best be implemented.

Stronger powers were provided to local authorities to tackle light pollution under the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005. The Act extends the statutory nuisance regime enabling local authorities to issue abatement notices, and individuals to take private action through the magistrates court.

Energy: Meters

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will meet industry representatives to discuss smart metering and the Energy White Paper. [144751]

Ian Pearson: My Department holds regular meetings with industry representatives to discuss a range of issues, including smart metering and the proposals in the Energy White Paper.

Environment Agency: Natural England

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions he has had on merging the Environment Agency and Natural England; and if he will make a statement. [144766]

Barry Gardiner: The Secretary of State has had no recent discussions on merging the Environment Agency and Natural England.

Farms

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average size of a farm is in (a) Cornwall, (b) the South West and (c) the UK. [144228]

Barry Gardiner: The average size of holdings for Cornwall and the Isles of Scilly, the South West Region and England at June 2006 can be found in the following table. Figures for Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland fall under the jurisdiction of the devolved authorities.

	Average holding size in hectares
(a) Cornwall and the Isles of Scilly	31.2
(b) South West Region	36.8
(c) England	46.6

Fisheries: Income

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the average annual earnings of fishermen in (a) Cornwall, (b) the South West and (c) the UK in each year since 1979. [144232]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 25 June 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what estimate has been made of the average annual earnings of fisherman in (a) Cornwall, (b) the South West and (c) the UK in each year since 1979. (144232)

I attach a table showing average annual earnings for a fisherman in the UK, for the years 1999 to 2006. Figures showing the average annual earnings of a fisherman in Cornwall or the South West, and annual figures prior to 1999, are not available. For years prior to 2002, 'fisherman' is defined as Unit Group 903 in the Standard Occupational Classification 1990—'Fishing and Related Workers'. For years 2002 onwards, 'fisherman' is defined as Unit Group 5119 in the Standard Occupational Classification 2000—'Agricultural and Fishing Trades Not Elsewhere Classified'.

The Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings, carried out in April each year, is the most comprehensive source of earnings information in the United Kingdom. It is a one per cent sample of all employees who are members of pay-as-you-earn (PAYE) schemes.

[a] Employees on adult rates who have been in the same job for more than a year.

[b] "Fisherman" is defined as Unit Group 903 in the Standard Occupational Classification 1990—"Fishing and Related Workers", covering years 1999 to 2001, and as Unit Group 5119 in the Standard Occupational Classification 2000—'Agricultural and Fishing Trades Not Elsewhere Classified", covering years 2002 onwards.

[c] In 2004 additional supplementary surveys were introduced to improve the coverage of the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings. Figures are presented both excluding and including the additional surveys for comparison purposes.

Guide to quality: The Coefficient of Variation (CV) indicates the quality of a figure, the smaller the CV value the higher the quality. The true value is likely to lie within +/- twice the CV—for example, for an average of 200 with a CV of 5 per cent. we would expect the population average to be within the range 180 to 220.

Key:

CV<=5 per cent.

* CV>5 per cent. and <=10 per cent.

 CV> 10 per cent. and <=20 per cent.

x CV > 20 per cent. The median is the value below which 50 per cent. of employees fall. It is preferred over the mean for earnings data as it is influenced less by extreme values and because of the skewed distribution of earnings data.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the number and proportion of fishermen in (a) Cornwall, (b) the South West and (c) the UK living below the poverty line. [144235]

Mr. Jim Murphy: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not available.

Fisheries: Manpower

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many fishermen there were in (a) Cornwall, (b) the South West and (c) the UK in each year since 1979; and what proportion of the total workforce they made up in each year. [144233]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information requested, for the UK and the South West, is shown in the following table where available. A breakdown of the number of fishermen in Cornwall is not available.

Fisheries: Quotas

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the International Council for the Exploration of the Seas' fishing quota advice for 2008; and if he will make a statement. [145463]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 19 June 2007, Official Report, column 1664W.

Fishing Catches

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress has been made with the development of the (a) North sea nephrops discard pilot schemes and (b) Irish sea discards pilot scheme; what information his Department has recorded as a result of the schemes; whether he is in a position to make recommendations as a result of the schemes; and if he will make a statement. [144527]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given to him on the 15 June 2007, Official Report, column 1370W, and the 18 June 2007, Official Report, column 1431W.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations he has made to his EU counterparts on (a) a community-wide discard ban and (b) the introduction of a full catch registry scheme; and if he will make a statement. [144539]

Mr. Bradshaw: At the 11-12 June Agriculture and Fisheries Council, my ministerial colleagues and I discussed the Commission's recent communication which proposes a series of discard bans in EU fisheries. I made clear that, although the UK was generally supportive of the Commission's initiative to reduce discards, we had concerns about the practical implementation of the measures proposed, particularly discard bans. We believe the Communication significantly underestimates the potential enforcement difficulties and costs associated with such measures, especially in the mixed fisheries around the UK.

Fly-tipping: East of England

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many incidents of fly-tipping were reported in each local authority in the East of England in each of the last four years for which figures are available; and what the estimated cost was of dealing with such incidents; [144540]

(2) how many (a) prosecutions and (b) successful prosecutions there were for fly-tipping in each local authority in the East of England in each year for which figures are available. [144541]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Flycapture database, which was set up in 2004 by DEFRA, the Environment Agency and the Local Government Association, records the number of fly-tipping incidents dealt with by the Environment Agency and local authorities and details of enforcement action. The following tables show the number of incidents and prosecutions recorded by each local authority in the East of England on Flycapture for 2004-05 and 2005-06.

Data for 2006-07 have not yet been finalised but will be available in the summer.

Fly-tipping

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate the Environment Agency has made of the (a) number of incidents and (b) tonnage of fly-tipping and illegal dumping in England in each of the last three years. [143491]

Mr. Bradshaw: Flycapture, the national database of fly-tipping incidents, was set up in 2004 by DEFRA, the Environment Agency and the Local Government Association, to record fly-tipping incidents dealt with by the Environment Agency and local authorities.

Flycapture data show that, in England, 926,534 incidents were reported in the period from April 2004 to March 2005. There were 2,509,976 incidents reported from April 2005 to March 2006.

A possible reason for the rise in fly-tipping offences recorded by Flycapture in its second year may simply be due to better reporting and a rise in the number of local authorities in England submitting regular returns. This number rose significantly, from 79.5 per cent. in April 2004 when the database was first launched, to 92 per cent. in 2005-06. Over time, the database will help us build up a more accurate picture of illegally dumped waste, as well as providing a useful management tool for local authorities in tackling the problem.

Data for 2006-07 are not yet available but will be published this summer. Flycapture does not record fly-tipping tonnages.

Foie Gras

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what steps the Government take to ensure that the production of foie gras in England does not contravene UK animal welfare laws; [145562]

(2) what the Government's policy is on the production and sale of foie gras. [145563]

Mr. Bradshaw: Foie gras is not produced in the UK and this Government have made their view very clear that the production of foie gras using force feeding gives rise to serious welfare concerns. If any production were to occur, Animal Health would be asked to investigate and advise on any contravention of UK animal welfare laws. The UK has the highest animal welfare standards we have ever had and they are among the highest in the world. This Government have been at the forefront of implementing higher standards domestically, and have been active on a European and international level in trying to improve standards.

The free movement of goods is a well established principle in Community law and is enshrined in Part III, Title I of the Treaty Establishing the European Community (TEC). A unilateral ban by the UK on the import or sale of foie gras would contravene the provisions of the TEC and would be highly likely to result in proceedings being brought against the UK before the European Court of Justice.

In addition, even if the Community law obstacles to introducing a restriction could be overcome, which is unlikely, the World Trade Organisation rules do not allow us to ban imports on the grounds of the welfare standards applying in third countries. Ultimately, the most effective action that can be taken is for individuals not to buy foie gras, if they dislike the way it is produced.

Genetic Modification Inspectorate: Manpower

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many full-time equivalent staff were employed in the Department's Genetic Modification Inspectorate in each of the last five years. [145351]

	Full-time equivalents
2002-03	2.04
2003-04	2.00
2004-05	5.01
2005-06	3.40
2006-07	1.94

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Lorely Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the availability of Warm Front grants in (a) England and (b) Solihull; and how many people took up those grants in each area in the last period for which figures are available. [145599]

Ian Pearson: All private sector households in England, where the owner or tenant is in receipt of a Warm Front qualifying benefit, have the potential to qualify for Warm Front.

Of the 253,079 households assisted in 2006-07, 463 were in the Solihull constituency.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how Warm Front has drawn up its pricing structure for the installations of new boilers and central heating systems; and whether his Department was (a) consulted or (b) involved in other ways in the development of the structure. [145851]

Ian Pearson: Both the labour and the material costs of all Warm Front work has been subject to a competitive tender (in line with EU regulations). My Department has been central to these processes.

Institute of Zoology: Finance

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what public funds were made available to the Institute of Zoology in each of the last five years. [145553]

Barry Gardiner: Funding by DEFRA to the Institute of Zoology to carry out research projects from 2002-03 to 2006-07 is shown in the following table:

Financial year	Amount (£)
2002-03	72,130
2003-04	53,000
2004-05	10,000
2005-06	15,000
2006-07	273,000

Lorries: Exhaust Emissions

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of heavy goods vehicle traffic on (a) air quality management areas, (b) special protection areas, (c) sites of special scientific interest and (d) sites of importance for nature conservation. [145725]

Barry Gardiner: Road traffic has been identified as a significant source of pollution in 95 per cent. of the air quality management areas (designated by local authorities) declared so far.

Local air quality assessments include a basic screening process to determine vehicles' impact on air quality. Typically, this considers traffic as consisting only of light and heavy duty vehicle types, assigning average levels of emissions to each of these in order to model their air quality impact on the surrounding area. Although this method does not apportion a fraction of the overall level of air pollutants directly to specific classes of vehicles, such as heavy goods vehicles (HGVs), it does ensure that their emissions are represented in the assessment.

Should the screening process identify a likely failure of air quality objectives, a further, more detailed level of assessment is undertaken to establish whether an air quality management area is necessary. These methods of assessment all consider the specific contribution of HGVs to ambient air pollution.

No specific national assessment of the impact of HGV traffic has been made for the areas mentioned in (b), (c) and (d). Terrestrial special protection areas are also notified as sites of special scientific interest (SSSIs). Natural England data on the reasons for unfavourable condition on SSSIs identifies that 18,524 hectares of SSSI land are adversely affected by air pollution. However the impacts of air pollution and identification of air pollution as an adverse activity affecting site condition are currently considered to be under reported. Furthermore SSSI condition is not disaggregated to identify different sources of air pollution. Individual assessments of the impact from air pollution have been made in respect of specific sites.

Mercury: EC Law

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what EU rules exist on regulation of the use of mercury in (a) barometers and (b) lightbulbs; and if he will make a statement. [144765]

Ian Pearson: A legislative review by the Commission in July 2003 did not identify any EU regulations pertaining specifically to the use of mercury in barometers. As a result, the Community Strategy Concerning Mercury, endorsed by Council in June 2005, contains a commitment to restrict the marketing for consumer use and health care of non-electrical or electronic measuring and control equipment containing mercury.

The Restriction of Hazardous Substances (ROMS) Regulations banned the sale of compact fluorescent lights (CFLs) containing in excess of 5 milligrams (mg) of mercury per lamp from July 2006. Current mercury levels in CFLs are typically 4mg per lamp.

From 1 July 2007, the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment (WEEE) Regulations will require systems to be in place allowing final holders and distributors to return waste CFLs free of charge. For non household CFL waste, the WEEE Regulations require that producers provide for separate collection.

Nuclear Power

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what his estimate is of the average carbon price which would be required by the nuclear industry in order to make new nuclear power generation economically viable in the UK. [142098]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

As part of the 2007 Energy White Paper cost-benefit analysis on new nuclear power generation was published. This showed the balance between costs and benefits under alternative gas price, carbon price and nuclear cost scenarios. The analysis is available at: http://www.dti.gov.uk/files/file39525.pdf

Organic Food

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations he has received from the Soil Association on (a) the 0.1 per cent. threshold for UK organic food and (b) the EU Organic Food Standards adopted on 12 June. [144014]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 20 June 2007]: During the consultation period the Soil Association expressed concern over certain aspects of the proposals to revise the EC regulation. These centred around the compulsory use of the EU logo and the provisions regarding the prohibition of GMs. We understand that the Soil Association would prefer no threshold to be specified in the organic regulation.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations he has received on his decision to agree a compulsory EU logo for organic food. [144016]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 20 June 2007]: The proposals to introduce into the EC regulation an EU logo and a requirement to use it were issues on which we consulted. The conclusion of the Advisory Committee on Organic Standards was that it supported the proposals, as did the majority of stakeholder bodies. However, the Soil Association expressed concern and opposed the measures.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans he has to consult on his agreement with EU ministers to adopt common standards for organic food across the EU. [144017]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 20 June 2007]: We consulted widely on the new regulation between its presentation by the Commission at the end of 2005 and its agreement by the Council of Ministers on 12 June 2007. We plan to repeat this level of engagement during the development of the detailed implementing rules. The European Commission also plan to launch a public consultation on the implementing rules after the summer.

Pets: Electromagnetic Fields

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the potential effects on the health of domestic pets of radio waves from home wireless broadband systems; and if he will make a statement. [145009]

Mr. Bradshaw: No such assessment has been made.

Polar Bears: Conservation

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the Government's policy is on the conservation of polar bears. [145554]

Barry Gardiner: The United Kingdom is a Party to the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES). CITES, which is implemented within the EU by the Wildlife Trade Regulation (Council Regulation (EC) No 338/97), regulates trade in over 5,000 species of animals, including the polar bear (Ursus maritimus). Polar bears are listed under Appendix II as a species that is not necessarily now threatened with extinction, but may become so unless trade is closely controlled. Under the EU Regulation the international trade in polar bears and other vulnerable species is strictly regulated to ensure that it will not be detrimental to their wild populations.

Currently, however, the chief threat to polar bears is the impact of climate change, which is felt particularly strongly in polar regions. If global temperatures continue to rise, Arctic summer sea ice could disappear almost entirely by the latter part of this century. The UK continues to take a strong lead internationally on climate change. In particular, we are working through the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change and the G8 to secure agreement to a long-term international framework that can address dangerous climate change.

Poultry: Animal Feed

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) whether poultry feed containing poultry parts may be imported into the UK; [144441]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effects of the feeding of dead poultry parts to poultry on the risk of infection of (a) avian influenza and (b) other conditions; [144442]

(3) what estimate he has made of the tonnage of feed for poultry which was recycled from dead poultry parts in England in the most recent 12 months for which figures are available. [144443]

Mr. Bradshaw: Under EU-wide Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy (BSE)-related feed ban controls, introduced in 2001, most processed animal proteins, including those derived from poultry, have been prohibited from use in any farmed animal feed. This builds on longer-standing controls on mammalian-derived processed animal proteins.

Separate controls, in place since 2002 under the EU Animal By-Products Regulations, prohibit processed animal proteins from being recycled back to the same species they are derived from. These controls mean that feeding poultry using recycled processed animal protein derived from dead poultry is not permitted, either in the UK or in any other member state. Additionally, no poultry feed containing processed animal protein derived from poultry may be imported either into the UK, or into any other member state.

Neither pigs nor poultry, as naturally omnivorous animals, have been shown in experiments to be orally susceptible to BSE, and no naturally occurring Transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathy have yet been identified in these species. Nevertheless, the principle of preventing intra-species recycling of processed animal protein in feed will continue to apply to all farmed animal species both now and in the future.

Recycling

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will place in the Library the data from WasteDataFlow showing (a) the final destination of materials sent for recycling, (b) tonnage sent for recycling and (c) quantity sent for recycling but rejected/disposed of by each local authority in England in the last period for which figures are available. [143461]

Mr. Bradshaw: I am arranging for information to be placed in the House Library showing (a) the reported destination of municipal waste sent for recycling, (b) the tonnage of municipal waste sent for recycling and (c) the amount reported as being rejected, by each local authority in England. All data relate to municipal waste and are as reported by local authorities to WasteDataFlow for the 2005-06 financial year.

Seas and Oceans: Environment Protection

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what marine protected areas are in place; what percentage of the UK coastal and offshore waters they cover; what plans he has for the designation of further such areas; and if he will make a statement. [144852]

Mr. Bradshaw: There are 182 protected areas in UK inshore waters with a marine element: 81 special protection areas with marine habitats for birds, 98 special areas of conservation with marine habitats or species, and three marine nature reserves. In total, these sites cover more than 1.8 million hectares, or 2.2 per cent. of UK waters.

Work is under way to identify further sites in UK waters. To date, 19 areas for marine habitats have been surveyed and there are plans for additional survey of a further 10 areas. Between them, these areas cover up to 9,550,000 ha or 11 per cent. of UK waters. Seven areas for marine birds have also been surveyed, with plans for 30 more. A selection of these surveyed areas are likely to be recommended as marine protected areas under the habitats and birds directives, but the number and size of these sites is not yet known.

The Marine Bill will also introduce a new mechanism to enable the designation of marine conservation zones. There have been a number of recommendations on what proportion of the UK marine area might be covered by such zones, including by the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution. However, there is currently insufficient scientific evidence to enable us to make an accurate assessment of the likely extent of a network of marine protected areas.

To inform the impact assessment for the Bill, we have undertaken research investigating the likely extent of a network of marine conservation zones in UK waters under a range of different scenarios. The network configurations generated as part of the exercise all resulted in 14 to 20 per cent. coverage of the UK continental shelf. These figures were based on a number of scenarios, although none of these are necessarily representative of how the final network will look. The findings of this research have been published on the DEFRA website.

Sewers

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) when he plans the public consultation on the transfer of private sewers to water companies to begin; [145607]

(2) how many reviews and consultations there have been since 1997 on transferring private sewers to water companies. [145608]

Ian Pearson: An extensive review of private sewers began in 2001, prompted by the concerns of householders. A consultation in 2003 revealed a high level of support for transfer, and the Government concluded there was a clear case for action. Further informal consultation and research by DEFRA and key stakeholders explored customers' views, estimated the costs and bill impacts of transfer, developed implementation options and identified further questions for the next stage of consultation.

Following the Government's decision to transfer private sewers to water and sewerage companies, we intend to publish a further public consultation on the implementation options over the summer.

Sewers: Lancashire

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many miles of sewers there are in (a) Pendle and (b) East Lancashire; what percentage is over 100 years old; and if he will make a statement. [145335]

Ian Pearson: DEFRA does not hold this information. United Utilities are responsible for the public sewers in Pendle and East Lancashire and would hold any available information relating to the age and length of sewers in this area.

Waste and Resources Action Programme

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what financial contribution was made by the Waste and Resources Action Programme to each local authority in England in each of the last three years. [145239]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information requested is currently being collated by the Waste and Resources Action Programme. I will write again to the hon. Member when it has been prepared and place a copy in the Library of the House.

Waste Management

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the timetable is for the implementation of the proposals in his Department's waste review. [145232]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Waste Strategy for England 2007 contains a high-level implementation plan which summarises the key actions flowing from the Strategy, the timeframes for these actions, and responsibilities for delivery.

Copies of the Strategy are available in the Libraries of the House and from DEFRA's website.

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the efficacy of water-based mechanical-biological treatment systems in the processing of solid urban waste. [145506]

Mr. Bradshaw: My Department has not made an assessment specifically on the efficacy of water-based mechanical-biological treatment systems to process solid urban waste. However, studies have been carried out on behalf of DEFRA by Enviros Consulting on the mechanical-biological treatment of waste, including technologies that use water. The final reports, "Mechanical Biological Treatment and Mechanical Heat Treatment of Municipal Solid Waste" and "Advanced Biological Treatment of Municipal Solid Waste", are available from the DEFRA website.

New technologies to treat waste have the potential to play an increasingly important role in extracting materials and energy from waste for recovery, as well as reducing the quantities remaining for disposal.

Water: Peterborough

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions his Department has had on water supply infrastructure to Peterborough with (a) the Department of Communities and Local Government, (b) Anglian Water and (c) Rutland county council; and if he will make a statement. [145384]

Ian Pearson: I had a meeting with Anglian Water in December 2006 at which the company briefed me on its operations and gave me its views on a number of contemporary water policy matters. Improvements to resilience of supply, including to Peterborough, were among the many issues raised by the company but no discussion took place on specific infrastructure developments. Any such discussion would have been inappropriate since proposed infrastructure projects could come before Ministers for decision on appeal against refusal of planning permission. For that reason, my Department has had no other discussions with these or any other bodies specifically about water supply infrastructure serving Peterborough.

Whales: Conservation

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with Japanese environment ministers regarding the international ban on whaling. [145556]

Mr. Bradshaw: There have been no discussions between DEFRA Ministers and Japanese Environment Ministers on this issue.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government are taking to ensure the conservation of whales. [145557]

Mr. Bradshaw: The UK has been, and will remain, at the forefront of the fight to ensure that anti-whaling countries do not restart commercial whaling or reduce the level of protection for cetacean species around the world.

At this year's annual meeting of the International Whaling Commission (IWC), the UK and other anti-whaling countries were able to secure a resolution that reaffirmed the continued need for the IWC moratorium on commercial whaling. This resolution subsequently served us well in the Conference of Parties to the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species, enabling us to defeat proposals aimed at eventually allowing trade in whale products to take place.

World Environment Day

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs in what ways his Department publicised World Environment Day on 5 June. [141051]

Ian Pearson: I opened the £18 million River Quaggy Flood Alleviation scheme in Lewisham, London, with the chairman of the Environment Agency Sir John Harman. I asked people to mark World Environment Agency Day by identifying the one change they can make in their everyday lives to protect the environment and fight climate change. I also urged people to go to the Environment Agency's Mend the World online survey, which was the core component of the Environment Agency's campaign this year for WED. This has been asking people for the number one action they can do to tackle climate change, the one extra action they could take and what was stopping them from doing so.

I also announced that the Government are to hold a second competition for youth Climate Change Champions to communicate climate change across the country. The nine inaugural champions, aged between 10 and 18, have been active in speaking out about climate change. Their efforts have reached an estimated 18 per cent. of the adult population and have engaged a large number of young people in the debate about what needs to be done. The competition will kick off in the summer, and nine new champions will be appointed in the autumn.

DEFRA also released a new booklet, "Climate Change: Your Guide to Inspiring Action" to help organisations communicate the ways in which people can make changes in their lives to help fight climate change. The first guide has been downloaded 40,000 times and 6,000 hard copies have been distributed. It is available on www.climatechallenge.gov.uk

I also highlighted a number of other initiatives that took place on WED, which have received DEFRA funding through the Climate Challenge Fund scheme. These included the launch of the Royal Society of Arts/Tesco Carbonator—an online CO_2 calculator aimed at children aged 7-14 to raise awareness of climate change and the Royal Geographical Society's new website for 11 to 18-year-olds linking climate change to the geography curriculum. The fund provides financial support for communications projects seeking to achieve positive changes in public attitudes about climate change. The 83 projects cover a wide range of communications initiatives and media and are supported by £8.5 million of funding.

Zoos

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many zoos there are in England. [145530]

Barry Gardiner: My Department does not hold a definitive list of the number of zoos in England.

A list of zoos is published on the DEFRA website, based on information supplied by English local authorities that administer the provisions of the Zoo Licensing Act 1981. The list provides information on 255 zoos currently operating in England.

Zoos: Animal Welfare

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government take to ensure that animals kept in zoos are not culled unnecessarily. [145561]

Mr. Bradshaw: Under the Zoo Licensing Act 1981 the Secretary of State is required to specify detailed standards for zoo management that zoos are expected to comply with. The Secretary of State's Standards of Modern Zoo Practice are designed to ensure that the welfare of animals in zoos is adequately protected.

The current standards state that euthanasia in zoos is an acceptable procedure only if an animal cannot be provided with captive conditions which meet the Five Principles of animal welfare, or if it cannot be released into the wild. These Five Principles are based on the 'Five Freedoms' drawn up for livestock by the Farm Animal Welfare Council, and they comprise: provision of food and water; provision of a suitable environment; provision of animal health care; provision of an opportunity to express most normal behaviour; provision of protection from fear and distress.

The standards provide strict guidelines on circumstances where euthanasia is justifiable. These are:

if, in the opinion of a vet, an animal is suffering from an incurable disease, or severe pain or suffering which cannot be alleviated.

if a zoo has to close, euthanasia may be the only option for some animals and the most humane for others.

if the animal poses a serious and unavoidable threat to human safety (e.g. because it has escaped); culling of surplus stock (including unacceptable sex ratios) where overcrowding compromises the welfare of the animals so that it is impractical to maintain them within the Five Principles.

The standards further recommend that zoos have a policy, with appropriate protocols, which should be made available to zoo inspectors during their regular inspection visits under the Zoo Licensing Act. This should also form part of the zoo's audit process. Zoos are also expected to have in place an ethical review process, which would address issues such as the establishment's culling policy.

DEFENCE

Advertising

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department spent on advertising with The Guardian newspaper, including online, advertorials and advertising features, in the latest year for which figures are available. [114043]

Derek Twigg: The following table shows how much the Ministry of Defence has spent on advertising with The Guardian newspaper in the last year. The Naval Service has not advertised in The Guardian newspaper in Financial Year 2006-07. Details of Ministry of Defence civilian advertising expenditure are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

	Amount (£)
RAF	41,790
Army	34,000
Naval Service	0

Afghanistan: Peacekeeping Operations

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of (a) the capabilities of the Taliban in southern Afghanistan and (b) whether the Taliban is being assisted by Iranian elements. [137420]

Des Browne [holding answer 16 May 2007]: The Taliban are currently able to threaten Afghan and international security forces in parts of eastern and southern Afghanistan by means of improvised explosive devices, suicide bombers and small-scale ambushes. They have not been able to hold territory in the face of offensive action by Afghan and international security forces.

Iran is an influential neighbour in the region and has a strategic interest in a strong and stable Afghanistan. Nevertheless some support for the Taliban emanating from within Iran gives cause for concern, not least the illegal movements of munitions across the border with Afghanistan. Any Iranian links to illegal armed groups either through the supply of weapons, training or funding, would be completely unacceptable. We have made this clear to the Iranians and will continue to do so.

Armed Forces: Buildings

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total cost was of repairs and maintenance at properties occupied by the Assistant Chief of the General Staff in 2006. [128272]

Derek Twigg: Both the current and former Assistant Chief of General Staff occupied the same Substitute Service Accommodation in 2006 for which the Department paid a rent to a private provider. The provider is responsible for carrying out the required repairs and maintenance at the property, but is not required to provide MOD with details of the costs of doing so, which are included in the rent.

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total cost was of (a) gardening and (b) repairs and maintenance at properties occupied by (i) the Chief of the General Staff, (ii) the Adjutant-General and (iii) members of the Army Board in 2006. [128273]

Derek Twigg: The Army Board consists of the Secretary of State for Defence, the Minister of State for the Armed Forces, the Minister of State for Defence Equipment and Support, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence, the Chief of the General Staff, the Second Permanent Under-Secretary of State for Defence, Commander in Chief Land Command, Adjutant-General, Assistant Chief of the General Staff, the Director General of Land Equipment, Master General of the Ordnance and General Officer Commanding (Northern Ireland).

Civilian members of the Army Board are not entitled to occupy defence accommodation.

Military Army Board members are accommodated under a variety of arrangements. For only some of these arrangements are costs separately identifiable. In some cases such costs are included in the rent payable.

However, available information shows that in the financial year 2005-06 the following amounts were spent:

	CGS	AG	GOCNI	CinC Land	ACGS
Maintenance and Repairs (£)	453	13,284.44	4,702.52	7,475.57	Included in rental cost

Armed Forces: Council Tax

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Government's plans to review and amend the council tax liability of members of the Armed Forces on active service abroad. [145233]

Derek Twigg: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 30 April 2007, Official Report, column 1456W, to the hon. Member for Forest of Dean (Mr. Harper).

Armed Forces: Depleted Uranium

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the number of (a) serving and (b) retired UK service personnel who have embedded depleted uranium shrapnel. [144560]

Derek Twigg: We understand that less than five serving or retired UK service personnel carry embedded depleted uranium shrapnel following blue-on-blue incidents during Operation Telic.

Armed Forces: Deployment

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which (a) Army, (b) Royal Navy and (c) Royal Air Force units were deployed for longer than four months in each of the last 10 years; and on how many occasions. [128239]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is as follows.

(a) The standard operational tour length for the Army is six months; therefore, over the last 10 years the majority of Army units (that is Infantry, Royal Armoured Corps, Royal Artillery, Royal Engineers, Royal Signals and Royal Logistic Corps) will have deployed for longer than four months. Based on data held at HQ Land Command the table illustrates when, between 2003 and 2007, Infantry, Royal Armoured Corps and Royal Artillery units deployed on an operation which was longer than four months. Deployments are noted in the year they commenced.

(b) From 2003, the Royal Navy reports that the number of surface ships that were deployed for more than four months in each of the corresponding years were:

	Number
2003	40
2004	32
2005	34
2006	38

Average fleet size over this period was around 72 ships (68 in 2003 to 77 in 2007). A more detailed breakdown could be provided at only disproportionate cost.

(c) The Royal Air Force does not deploy units in the same way as the Royal Navy and Army. The Royal Air Force allocates a tasking to an Expeditionary Air Wing for a given period of time to a given theatre of operations. An Air Wing once given the task will deploy personnel from a number of different squadrons on a trickle feed basis. Individual Separated Service figures are therefore used instead to measure turbulence and sustainability.

Armed Forces: Housing

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many armed forces personnel who have been discharged from service in the last 12 months are looking for housing; and if he will make a statement; [143959]

(2) how many armed forces personnel have been affected by the issue of local connection when looking for housing upon being discharged from service during the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement; [143960]

(3) how many armed forces personnel have reported being affected by housing shortages upon leaving the armed forces during the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [143961]

Derek Twigg: The Ministry of Defence does not hold the information requested.

On "local connection", my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing and Planning and I announced on 21 June 2007, Official Report, columns 107-08WS, that the Government will be amending the housing legislation to ensure that Service personnel are put on an equal footing with others applying for social housing. Also, the MOD continues to work closely with DCLG and other partners to help prevent new Service leavers becoming homeless, and to provide a safety net for existing vulnerable and homeless ex-Service personnel.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many calls were received by the Modern Housing Solutions helpdesk on each day from 1 November 2005 to 31 May 2007; what advice the Defence Housing Executive gave to Modern Housing Solutions on the number of calls that would be expected to be made each day to the Modern Housing Solutions helpdesk; and if he will make a statement; [144572]

(2) what estimate he has made of the average length of calls made to the Modern Housing Solutions helpdesk over the period 1 November 2005 and 31 May 2007. [144574]

Derek Twigg: The Modern Housing Solutions (MHS) helpdesk has been in operation since MHS began delivering services under the Housing Prime Contract (HPC) in January 2006. Details of the number of calls received per day for the period 1 January 2006 to 31 May 2007 and details of the average length of calls made to the helpdesk for each day for the period 14 March 2006 to 31 May 2007 have been placed in the Library of the House. Details of the average call length before 14 March are not available.

During the tendering process for the HPC the Department provided companies with details of a trial helpdesk which ran for three years prior to the commencement of the HPC and covered service families accommodation (SFA) in the north of England. Details of that trial, including the number of calls were provided.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what qualifications are required of staff on the Modern Housing Solutions helpdesk; and how many of the staff employed between 1 November 2005 and 31 May 2007 are serving or former services personnel. [144573]

Derek Twigg: In recruiting helpdesk staff, Modern Housing Solutions takes account of previous experience, knowledge, skills, attitude and other competencies such as communication skills and a strong customer focus but no formal qualifications are required.

No service personnel are employed on the helpdesk. Information about previous membership of the armed services is not required from those working on the helpdesk, but there are several former service personnel (as well as spouses) employed within the helpdesk at different levels.

All helpdesk staff receive two weeks initial induction training as well as regular refresher training.

Armed Forces: Mental Health Services

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of HM armed forces who (a) lost limbs, (b) suffered brain injury and (c) have been identified with post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) have received an appointment for psychiatric support within six months of injury in each of the last five years; how many have been waiting more than six months; and how many have not been referred. [142471]

Derek Twigg: Those service personnel who have received a serious physical injury are treated as a matter of priority, most often at the Royal Centre for Defence Medicine and then at the Defence Medical Rehabilitation Centre. As part of their hospital care, they will receive psychological assessment and, if necessary, treatment can commence. If required, patients can be referred later to a military Department of Community Mental Health (DCMH).

For those who do not have a serious physical injury, if their GP judges that they might be suffering from an operational related mental health condition (for example PTSD), then they will be referred to a DCMH for a detailed multidisciplinary assessment of their condition. If it is confirmed that the individual is suffering from a mental illness such as PTSD, they will receive specialist treatment at a DCMH or, if in-patient care is required, a Priory Group Facility.

Our mental health services operate in line with best practice to provide community-based mental health care. Our model for Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) treatment meets the standards set by the independent National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence.

We have established 15 military DCMHs across the UK (plus satellite centres overseas) to provide out-patient mental health care. The MOD's performance indicators require urgent cases to be seen within 24 hours and others within 20 working days of referral. The DCMHs function within these requirements and we are not aware of, nor would we expect there to be, any patients who had to wait in excess of six months for a referral.

It remains the case that medical discharge from the UK armed forces due to psychological illness is low. Out of almost 180,000 Regular Service personnel only about 150, or less than 0.1 per cent. are discharged annually for mental health reasons, whatever the cause. Of these, only 20 to 25 meet the criteria to be diagnosed with PTSD.

Armed Forces: Pay

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the ranges of pay are for all ranks in the armed services. [144169]

Derek Twigg: I refer the hon. Member to the Armed Forces Pay Review Body (AFPRB) and the independent Senior Salaries Review Body (SSRB) which are available in the Library of the House.

Armed Forces: Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the earliest age is at which a member of the armed services can receive a full pension; and if he will make a statement. [144274]

Derek Twigg: The expression 'full pension' is taken to mean a pension reflecting the maximum amount of reckonable service allowed under the pension scheme rules. As the majority of service personnel belong to either the armed forces pension scheme 1975 (AFPS 75) or the armed forces pension scheme 2005 (AFPS 05) my answer is in respect of those schemes.

Under AFPS 75 the most an officer can accrue is 34 years reckonable service from age 21 and, for another rank, the limit is 37 years reckonable service from age 18. The earliest that a full pension can be paid is age 55 and this full pension is worth 48.5 per cent. of representative pay.

Officers who leave having accrued at least 16 years reckonable service from age 21 under AFPS 75 and other ranks who leave having accrued at least 22 years from age 18 are entitled to a pension paid immediately upon discharge but this is a proportion of the full career pension. Those who leave with two or more years service but insufficient to qualify for this immediate pension are awarded a preserved pension payable at age 60 for service before 6 April 2006 and 65 for service after that date.

Under AFPS 05 the most that a member can accrue is 40 years reckonable service with no minimum age limit. The normal full pension entitlement is age 55. A full pension under AFPS 05 is worth just over 57 per cent. of final pensionable pay.

AFPS 05 members who leave before age 55 with two or more years reckonable service are entitled to a preserved pension payable at age 65. Those who have given at least 18 years reckonable service and attained age 40 are eligible for payments from the early departure payments scheme. Their pensions are preserved until age 65.

Finally, members of the armed forces do not typically serve to age 55 or beyond. In 2005-06 approximately 10 per cent. of officers and approximately 7 per cent. of other ranks served long enough to receive a full pension.

Armed Forces: Radio Frequency Identification

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what use is made of radio frequency identifiers by the armed forces; and if he will make a statement. [145060]

Mr. Ingram: Radio Frequency Identification (RFID) technology is currently used by the armed forces solely in support of consignment tracking within the Joint Supply Chain.

Armed Forces: Recruitment

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people were recruited to (a) Phase One, (b) Phase Two and (c) Phase Three under the Army Recruiting and Training Division Statement of Training Requirement draft Man Plan in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [138744]

Derek Twigg [pursuant to the reply, 4 June 2007, Official Report, c. 164W]: The figure provided in the table for Input to Phase One in 2005-06 was incorrect and should have read 12,108. The following additional footnote should also have been provided:

Those who choose to join the Infantry complete a combined Phase One/Phase Two course called the Combat Infantry Course. They are shown in the Input to Phase One but as there is no separate entry to Phase Two they are not included in the Input to Phase Two figures.

Armed Forces: Training

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of foreign armed forces received (a) training and (b) hospitality at UK military establishments in each year since 2001, broken down by (i) nationality and (ii) reason for providing the training; and whether agreements applied to the provision of the training. [143682]

Mr. Ingram: Since April 2001 22,307 members of foreign armed forces from 148 countries have received training at military establishments in the United Kingdom. All of these individuals will have received some form of hospitality offered by the training establishment, ranging from a simple welcoming reception to the provision of MOD service accommodation. This applies to all course places whether they are part or fully paid for by MOD, or whether the country in question pays for the training itself. The provision of training places is governed by various Memoranda of Understanding and agreements. The principal objective of this training activity is to use British Defence assets to discourage hostility abroad, build and maintain trust between states, and assist in the development of democratically accountable armed forces; thereby helping to make a significant contribution to conflict prevention and resolution.

The breakdown of countries receiving training, the total numbers of students trained by financial year, and details of whether training is delivered under some form of agreement is tabulated as follows:

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the University Officer Training Corps have on leaving university signed up as (a) regulars and (b) territorials and have then served on a tour of operation in each of the last four years for which figures are available. [145107]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is not held centrally. Officials are investigating whether it is possible to provide the number of individuals from the University Officer Training Corps who sign up for the Regular and Territorial Army on leaving university and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House. I will write to the hon. Member when investigations have concluded.

Army Base Repair Organisation: Bovington

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how much it will cost to demolish the main building at the Armour Centre at Bovington; [143814]

(2) what the cost is of the proposed new building at the Armour Centre, Bovington to replace the one to be demolished; and what method of financing the work will be used. [143815]

Derek Twigg: The MOD's Project Single Living Accommodation Modernisation Prime Contractor will shortly seek competitive quotes for the demolition of the 1930's "Sandhurst" block (B44) at Bovington. However, we anticipate that the cost of this work will be in the region of £1 million.

The estimated construction cost of the proposed new Single Living Accommodation at Bovington, which will deliver 312 bedspaces, to replace the demolished building, is between £13.6 million and £14.7 million. This work is due to be completed by March 2009 and will be financed as part of the Core Works of Project SLAM.

Army Board

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost has been in the last 12 months of answering questions tabled by the hon. Member for North Durham (Mr. Jones) on the running costs of the offices and official residences of members of the Army Board and other senior Army officers; and if he will estimate the number of man hours which have been spent on this task. [143049]

Derek Twigg: We do not maintain precise records of the cost or the number of man hours involved in responding to specific questions. However, the main effort in answering the relevant questions involved a team of one senior and six junior officials who have devoted roughly 50 per cent. of their time to this task since 31 January. This equates to approximately £40,000, which falls within the disproportionate cost limit.

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many internal flights were taken by the Ministerial members of the Army Board in 2006; how many of these flights were with (a) military and (b) commercial carriers; and what the cost was of each flight. [143321]

Derek Twigg: Ministerial members of the Army Board undertook 25 internal flights with military carriers and 27 internal flights with commercial carriers in 2006. The cost of each internal flight is shown in the following table.

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contribution the offices of non-ministerial members of the Army Board are making to the savings outlined for his Department in the Gershon Review. [135613]

Derek Twigg: None. The Department's efficiency programme in response to the Gershon Review is made up of a small number of high value initiatives.

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the costs of running the households of non-ministerial members of the Army Board were included in considerations of possible cost savings under the Gershon Review. [135614]

Derek Twigg: No. The Department's efficiency programme in response to the Gershon Review is made up of a small number of high value initiatives.

Army Board: Flowers

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total expenditure was on flowers for the residential accommodation provided for (a) members of the Army Board, (b) the Chief of the General Staff, (c) the Assistant Chief of the General Staff and (d) the Adjutant-General in 2006. [128818]

Derek Twigg: Of the 12 members of the Army Board, four have Official Service Residences (OSR): the Chief of the General Staff, Commander in Chief Land, the Adjutant-General, and the General Officer Commanding Northern Ireland. Flowers can be provided only for OSRs as part of the cost of official entertainment.

There is no requirement to hold information regarding official entertainment costs to the level of detail that would allow the cost of flowers to be identified, and the information requested is not therefore available for the Chief of the General Staff and the Commander in Chief Land. For the Adjutant General expenditure on flowers was £72.12 and for the General Officer Commanding (Northern Ireland) it was £190 during 2006.

Army Board: Pollution Control

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps are being taken to reduce the carbon footprint of the (a) Army Board, (b) Chief of the General Staff, (c) Assistant Chief of the General Staff and (d) Adjutant-General. [128817]

Derek Twigg: The Ministry of Defence has environmental policies, procedures and targets in place to quantify and reduce its carbon dioxide emissions. Examples include travel avoidance, reducing energy use in buildings and improved building standards. These arrangements apply to all non-operational defence activity, including that of the Army Board.

Army: Administration

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of his Department's Army General Administrative Instruction 48. [144559]

Derek Twigg: Yes. I will arrange for a copy to be placed in the Library of the House.

Ballistic Missile Defence

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in developing a Space Based Infra-Red System (a) for the United Kingdom and (b) in collaboration with the United States. [145391]

Des Browne: The Space Based Infra Red System is a US programme with no involvement by the UK.

Combat Stress: Finance

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what funding Combat Stress received from his Department in each of the last five years; and what funding is expected to be provided in each of the next three years. [145207]

Derek Twigg: For MOD expenditure from 2001 to 2006 in respect of individual remedial treatment of qualifying war pensioners at Combat Stress Homes in England, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 12 December 2006, Official Report, column 933W, to the hon. Member for Dunfermline and West Fife (Willie Rennie). MOD expenditure to Combat Stress for 2006-07 was £2.5 million.

Separate funding is provided from NHS Scotland for war pensioners' treatment at Hollybush House.

With regard to future funding I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 20 February 2007, Official Report, column 621W, to my hon. Friend the Member for North Ayrshire and Arran (Ms Clark).

Corsham Railway Station

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the construction of a railway station at Corsham to service the military base there. [143334]

Mr. Ingram: The MOD supports the reopening of the Corsham railway station. The Inteq consortium, which is the preferred bidder for the Corsham Development Project, has reflected this in its planning application to the North Wiltshire district council.

However, both the MOD and Inteq recognise that this is primarily a matter for the railway authorities to determine.

Defence Storage and Distribution Agency

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what he expects the Defence Storage and Distribution Agency site at Colchester to be used for after its closure; and if he will make a statement. [142014]

Mr. Ingram: No decision has yet been made on the use of the Defence Storage and Distribution Agency site at Colchester, ownership of which is expected to transfer across to Colchester Garrison at the end of March 2008.

Defence: Corruption

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether (a) he and (b) his Department has been informed of any breaches of UK anti-corruption and anti-bribery regulations in relation to UK defence sales since May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [143090]

Des Browne: There have been no convictions for breaches of UK anti-corruption and anti-bribery regulations in relation to UK defence sales since May 1997.

Defence: Procurement

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent on procurement of each of the systems purchased by each Service in each of the last five years. [125146]

Mr. Ingram: After clarification that the question referred to large new equipment projects undertaken by the Defence Procurement Agency, the following table is provided based on capital expenditure incurred after the main investment decision has been taken including conflict prevention. While we do not collect costs on a Service basis, we have indicated in the table the relevant Service for the major projects listed. It has not been possible to show costs prior to Financial Year 2003-04 as this data is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: BAE Systems

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what (a) logistical and (b) other support his Department provides to BAE Systems for its involvement with US industrial partners in the development of missile defence technology; [145026]

(2) what (a) logistical and (b) other support his Department provides to BAE systems for its involvement with US industrial partners in contributing to the development of missile defence technology. [145390]

Des Browne: Through its participation in the UK Missile Defence Centre the Department provides assistance and advice to UK industry (including BAE Systems) in expanding their involvement in the US missile defence programme. No logistical support is provided to BAE Systems in this area of work.

(24) which defence procurement contracts are in operation between his Department and VT Group; what is being purchased by his Department in each case; and how much each contract is worth. [144630]

Mr. Ingram: According to central records the number and total value of direct contracts the Ministry of Defence has with each supplier is shown in the following table:

Organisation	Number of contracts	Value (£ million)
Rolls Royce plc	211	4,422,939
Smiths Group	90	130,464
Cobham	108	602,082
Meggitt	56	64,318
Ultra Electronics	95	465,784
Chemring Group	24	59,424
VT Group	68	1,586,867
QinetiQ	779	5,117,847
Thales	408	3,689,000
EADS	48	489,520
GKN	22	8,460

Central records do not contain any information in respect of direct MOD contracts with Hampson Industries and Umeco.

The precise value of each contract is commercially confidential but the approximate value of each contract is indicated in an extensive table which I have placed in the Library of the House. The number excludes small-value local purchase orders, contracts placed on behalf of other nations and other Government Departments and those where the suppliers are a subcontractor or a member of an industry consortium. The total cost to the public purse of each contract in each of the past five years is also commercially confidential. However, the scale of total payments made to the major divisions of each supplier, over the past five financial years on all direct contracts, as published by the Defence Analytical Services Agency, is shown as follows.

[1] Indicates either that payments were under £5 million for the year or that certain divisions of some of the companies might not have existed at the time.

The MOD principally purchases power systems for land, sea and air applications from Rolls Royce. This includes: aero engines for combat, light attack, trainer, transport, helicopters, maritime reconnaissance and aerial surveillance aircraft; gas turbines for surface marine propulsion and nuclear propulsion for the Royal Navy's submarine fleet; fully integrated power systems including design and integration, ship control and instrumentation, procurement and equipment supply, installation and commissioning, integrated logistics and platform support.

The MOD principally purchases chemical, radiation, biological and nuclear detection systems from Smiths Group (following the sale of Smiths Aerospace to General Electric). This includes the supply and refurbishment of chemical agent detectors, lightweight chemical agent detectors, man portable chemical agent detectors, chemical detectors and Otto fuel monitors.

The MOD principally purchases equipment and specialised systems for air applications from Cobham. This includes aircraft antennas, communications, navigation and air refuelling equipment (including drogues and receptors), and stores carriage and release. The company also operates, maintains and modifies aircraft for military training and special operations.

Meggitt provides airframe and engine diagnostics, ammunition handling equipment and elastomeric ducting systems for the MOD.

The MOD principally purchases electronic and electromechanical systems that include high integrity sensing, control, communication and display systems, with an emphasis on integrated information technology solutions, from Ultra Electronics.

Chemring provides specialist decoy countermeasures, energetic materials and products (including demolition materials and services) for the MOD.

The MOD purchases land, sea and air applications from VT Group. This also includes tri-service support, training, platform and equipment manufacture, maintenance and facilities management. VT Communications provides Very low frequency received signal and high frequency communications services to the MOD. They also provide electronic control systems for naval and commercial vessels, equipment for motion control, stabilisation, navigation and propulsion systems.

QinetiQ provides a broad range of services to the UK MOD. QinetiQ owns and manages large scale test and trials facilities and provides managed services of strategic importance to MOD. It carries out more than half of the applied research and the strategic research funded centrally by the MOD and provides support to the MOD on equipment procurement. QinetiQ is involved in almost all major MOD programmes, helping to minimise and then manage technical risk and providing impartial assessment, test and evaluation services.

Thales provides a broad range of services to the MOD including land, sea and air applications. These include helicopter avionics, communications, radar, cockpit integration, surveillance, missile design and electronics, early warning, air command and control, naval design and sonar systems, integrated command, control, computers, communications and intelligence, thermal imaging, fire control and communications, military training, consultancy, simulation, network security and cryptography.

EADS provides military aircraft, including special mission aircraft, helicopters and undertakes civil and military aircraft conversion to the MOD. It also provides missiles systems and defence electronics, satellites and orbital infrastructures and launchers.

GKN provides aerospace special products, including cabin and cock-pit windows, fuel tanks and fuel tank assemblies to the MOD.

Information on precisely what equipment the MOD is purchasing from each of the 1,909 contracts could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Corsham

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the number of motor transport journeys made by military personnel from Corsham to Chippenham station in the last 12 months. [144239]

Derek Twigg: A survey of journeys undertaken by motor transport vehicles conveying military and civil service personnel from the Corsham defence estate to Chippenham railway station in the last 12 months indicates a daily average of six return journeys with passenger numbers ranging from one to eight, or approximately 1,560 journeys over a 12-month period.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many rail warrants were issued to his Department's personnel based in Corsham in each of those years for which records are available; for which journeys; and to what value. [144238]

Derek Twigg: The number of rail warrants issued by the travel office of the Joint Support Unit Corsham which provides logistical support to the MOD's Corsham-based organisations is as follows:

	Number
2004	3,402
2005	4,165
2006	4,969
2007	[1]2,025

[1] To week ending 22 June.

These warrants relate to journeys commenced at Bristol, Bath, Chippenham and Swindon railway stations. A further average of 10 warrants per week is issued for journeys commencing at other railway stations in the United Kingdom.

The average cost per ticket is £179.50 on extant ticket prices. Typically more than 70 per cent. of the tickets are issued for travel from Chippenham railway station.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) military, (b) contractor and (c) consultant staff are based at each of his Department's stations in Corsham. [144240]

Derek Twigg: The total number of staff at the Corsham estate is 1,938.

The distribution and breakdown of staff (including civilians) across the estate is as follows:

	Copenacre	Basil Hill	Rudloe	Media Park	Hawthorn
Military	168	315	25	8	20
Civilian	413	300	159	114	12
Consultant	22	7	2	0	0
Contractors	104	100	0	0	169
Total	707	722	186	122	201

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence by what transport mechanisms he expects employees to travel to and from his Department's sites in Corsham; what account he has taken of the environmental impacts of that travel; and if he will make a statement. [144734]

Derek Twigg: Due to the rural nature of the location and the widespread home locations of staff, emphasis is placed on reducing the number of single occupancy vehicles from the present 82 per cent. to 64 per cent. by 2011 and 48 per cent. by 2013 by operating car-sharing. In addition, the local MOD Travel Plan Co-ordinator will be working with other transport operators to provide bus and train services closer to the Corsham sites.

The environmental impact of these changes will be to reduce the number of cars travelling to and from the site from the present 1,800 (including visitors) to a maximum of 1,300.

Departments: Cost Effectiveness

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to publish an updated version of his Department's technical note on efficiency. [145604]

Mr. Ingram: There is no intention to publish an updated version of the MOD's Efficiency Technical Note which was published on the Department's website in December 2005.

Departments: Energy

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many energy saving light bulbs were purchased by his Department for use on the departmental estate in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [144935]

Derek Twigg: Light bulbs for general use on the Defence estate are procured by contractors on MOD's behalf. Information on the proportion of the various types purchased is not held centrally but Departmental policy requires suppliers procuring goods on MOD's behalf to consider environmental standards and use products which are known to have a lower environmental impact.

Figures are however, available for energy saving light bulbs provided for operational requirements:

2,510 purchased 2006

The 2005 figure covered the initial purchase of these items and is higher than that for 2006 which covered our replenishment needs.

Departments: Foreign Relations

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Memoranda of Understanding are in force as a result of agreements with foreign governments entered into by Ministers in his Department; and what executive actions each entails. [144471]

Des Browne: Comprehensive records of Memoranda of Understanding are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, it is estimated that there are in the region of £3,000 Memoranda of Understanding and similar arrangements relating to international defence co-operation in force at present. These cover all aspects of international defence co-operation, such as detailing the general arrangements for co-operation, the organisation of deploying on, and hosting of, international training and exercises, the exchange of personnel and units, equipment and research collaboration and the protection of classified information. Details of individual defence co-operation Memoranda of Understanding are not normally released into the public domain without the consent of participating countries.

Departments: Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people in his Department have been allowed to work from home for part of the week in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on home working. [143887]

Derek Twigg: It is Ministry of Defence policy that all staff can request to work flexibly to maintain a work life balance. All requests must be considered and alternative working patterns, including home working, are open to all staff if the business needs can be met. The agreements are either made locally between the individuals and their line managers and funding to provide equipment to work at home is also authorised locally. No central register of home workers exists and the information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Malvern

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was received from the sale of North Site in Malvern, Worcestershire. [144996]

Derek Twigg: The sale was completed in February 2005 and a receipt of £15 million was received for the site with the potential for further payments to follow.

Departments: Manpower

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people granted (a) temporary part-time, (b) temporary full-time, (c) permanent part-time and (d) permanent full-time contracts of employment in his Department in each of the last three years were (i) male, (ii) female, (iii) registered disabled and (iv) aged 55 years or over. [143892]

Derek Twigg: The following tables give details of civilian personnel recruited to the Ministry of Defence on a permanent or temporary contract in each of the last three financial years.

Ministry of Defence[1]: Civilian Inflow by Gender, Disability and Age

Headcount

Financial Year 2004-05

	Male	Female	Disabled[2]	Staff aged 55 and over
Temporary (casual) part-time	80	240	[3]—	50

Permanent full-time	2,340	1,030	20	350
Total	3,330	2,270	30	570

[1] This includes industrial and non-industrial staff employed by the Ministry of Defence and Trading Funds, but excludes Royal Fleet Auxiliaries and locally engaged civilians.
[2] All disability data are self declared by employees.
[3] Denotes less than 10. Note: Due to the rounding methods used, totals may not always equal the sum of the parts. When rounding to the nearest 10, numbers ending in 5 have been rounded to the nearest multiple of 20 to prevent systematic bias.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of staff in his Department are (a) male, (b) female, (c) registered disabled and (d) aged 55 or over. [143909]

Derek Twigg: The information requested is set out as follows:

Ministry of Defence : gender, disability and age: 1 April 2007

Percentage

Male	63.9
Female	36.1
Percentage disabled	5.5
Percentage of staff aged 55+	22.1

Notes:
1. This includes industrial and non-industrial staff employed by the Ministry of Defence and Trading Funds, but excludes Royal Fleet auxiliaries and locally engaged staff.
2. Disabled personnel as a percentage of total (exe unknown).
3. Due to the rounding methods used, totals may not always equal the sum of the parts. When rounding to the nearest 10, numbers ending in 5 have been rounded to the nearest multiple of 20 to prevent systematic bias.

Departments: Marketing

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which advertising and marketing campaigns were run by (a) his Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years; which external agencies were involved; and what the cost was of each campaign. [144621]

Derek Twigg: I refer the right hon. Member to the answers I gave on 6 June 2007, Official Report, column 488W and 12 June 2007, Official Report, column 936W, to the hon. Member for Welwyn Hatfield (Grant Shapps).

Departments: Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the current rate of employer contribution is to each public sector pension scheme for which his Department has responsibility; what the revenue impact would be of capping the employer contribution to each such scheme at 14 per cent.; and if he will make a statement. [144299]

Derek Twigg: The employer contribution rate for the main armed forces pension schemes is currently 24.8 per cent. of the total pay-bill or 25.6 per cent. of pensionable pay.

The armed forces pension schemes are non contributory for employees and there is no employers cap on the scheme therefore the issue of a revenue impact resulting from a 14 per cent. cap is theoretical and would incur disproportionate costs to calculate.

Departments: Remploy

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) services and (b) products his Department has procured from Remploy in the last 12 months; and at what cost. [143799]

Mr. Ingram: Central records indicate that the Ministry of Defence had six directly placed contracts with Remploy that remained extant at some time during the last 12 months. They related to services and products involving the manufacture and supply of combat clothing (including nuclear biological and chemical suits, headover and inner-knitted overalls). The value and costs of each contract are commercially confidential. However, the value band of each contract is indicated in the following table:

Category	Contract date	Contract number
Below £100,000	31 January 2007	S&ADC/6758
£5,000,000 to £10,000,000	11 August 2005	DC1AESL/0237
£5,000,000 to £10,000,000	13 April 2004	DC1AESL/0127
£100,000 to £500,000	29 March 2004	DC1AESL/0111
Below £100,000	5 January 2004	COMM3A/4071
£100,000 to £500,000	2 July 1998	SMC11CR/6340

Departments: Resource Accounting and Budgeting

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the latest version of JSP 462, Financial Management Policy Manual. [145206]

Mr. Ingram: Yes.

Departments: Sick Leave

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what average number of days per year was taken by staff in his Department as sick leave in each of the last five years for which records are available. [143059]

Derek Twigg: The rates of worker sickness absence for non-industrial and industrial civil servants in the Ministry of Defence 2005, 2006 and financial year 2006-07 is shown in the following table:

	Sickness absence rate[1]
	Non industrial	Industrial	Combined
2005[2]	8.55	12.54	9.30
2006[2]	8.04	12.14	8.82
2006-07[2]	8.03	12.22	8.82

[1] Sickness absence rates are based on FTE working days lost. For example, if a full-time employee is sick for seven calendar days, this is five working days lost and five FTE working days lost, and if a part-time employee (working 50 per cent. full-time hours) is sick for seven calendar days, this is five working days lost and two and a half FTE working days lost.

[2] Excludes Ministry of Defence staff in Trading Funds and Royal Fleet Auxiliaries.

Rates listed are based on a revised Cabinet Office definition for sickness absence which excludes annual leave allowance and bank holidays, and caps FTE sickness absence days across a year to a maximum of 225 days. Recording of absence data against this revised definition has only been carried out since calendar year 2005.

Departments: Sign Language

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the merits of providing British Sign Language (BSL) videos on his departmental website for the benefit of those whose first language is BSL. [142491]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 13 June 2007]: The Department is continually seeking to improve and enhance its web content. MOD is currently considering the report of an accessibility assessment of www.mod.uk against the World Wide Web Consortium (W3C) Web Content Accessibility Guidelines. The guidelines do not require BSL videos, but the feasibility of providing them on the departmental website will be assessed.

Ex-servicemen: Military Decorations

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the number of veterans who left the services prior to 1 April 1975 who are eligible to be awarded the Veterans Badge; and how many such veterans have been awarded the badge. [143672]

Derek Twigg: The Ministry of Defence does not have the information required to make an accurate assessment of the number of people entitled to the HM Armed Forces Veterans Badge prior to 1 April 1975. However, it is estimated that the total number of all veterans who will be eligible to apply is around five million.

Over 460,000 badges have been issued in total.

Falkland Islands: Armed Conflict

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many veterans' badges have been issued to servicemen and women who participated in the Falklands campaign. [145006]

Mr. Ingram: The information on veterans' badges is not held in a format that identifies how many servicemen and women who participated in the Falklands campaign have been issued with a badge. However, I can confirm that 3,015 badges were issued to Falklands veterans who applied for tickets for the Horse Guards Commemorative event on 17 June 2007.

Future Command and Liaison Vehicle

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on progress of the Panther programme; [144730]

(2) what the planned expenditure is on the Panther programme. [144731]

Mr. Ingram: The PANTHER Command and Liaison Vehicle is currently in its demonstration and manufacture phase. The estimated cost of this phase is £201 million and prior to this, the assessment phase was conducted, costing some £2 million. PANTHER has successfully completed Military User Trials and is currently undergoing Reliability Trials.

Future Large Aircraft

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the timescale is for the A400M programme. [144732]

Mr. Ingram: The first aircraft is due to be delivered in 2010, and the planned in-service date is 2011 (delivery of the seventh aircraft).

Iraq Conflict

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the status is of the studies (a) TELIC

Civilian Health Study, (b) High Risk Behaviours After Operational Deployments (TELIC), (c) Use of Computer-based Treatment for Depression and (d) Post-discharge Mentoring of Vulnerable Service Leavers; and if he will place a copy of each in the Library. [142099]

Derek Twigg: Three of the studies are being undertaken by the King's Centre for Military Health Research (KCMHR). The current status of each is as follows:

TELIC Civilian Health Study—the study is under way, and is currently scheduled for completion later in 2007.

High Risk Behaviours after Operational Deployments (TELIC)—the study is under way, and is currently scheduled for completion later in 2007.

Post-discharge Mentoring of Vulnerable Service Leavers—the study is complete and has been accepted for publication. It should be published later in 2007.

The fourth study, Use of Computer-based Treatment for Depression, was an individual study, initially proposed by a member of the Defence Medical Services. However, work has yet to commence.

Iraq: Peacekeeping Operations

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many soldiers are in theatre in Iraq; and how many sets of body armour have been issued; [128844]

(2) if he will make a statement on the provision of body armour to the armed forces in Iraq; [128845]

(3) how many soldiers from 1 Battalion, The Rifles are deployed in Iraq; and how many sets of body armour have been issued to them. [128843]

Mr. Ingram: In March 2007 there were some 7,100 UK troops in Iraq which has reduced to currently some 5,500 personnel in theatre. There have been four members of the 1 Battalion, The Rifles deployed to Iraq since March 2007 of which three are still currently in Iraq. All of the troops serving with the Rifles Battalion are issued with Enhanced Combat Body Armour (ECBA) which is standard issue to all troops deploying to Iraq and Afghanistan. Improved Performance Body Armour (known as 'OSPREY') and Enhanced Personnel Protection Equipment (EPPE) (known as 'KESTREL') are provided in addition to ECBA and have been designed to protect against specific threats faced by personnel undertaking certain roles. In total there are over 14,000 sets of body armour in theatre.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the replacement costs of military equipment damaged and destroyed owing to use in Iraq since the start of the war (a) in total and (b) for (i) tanks and other armoured vehicles, (ii) aircraft and (iii) helicopters. [141465]

Mr. Ingram: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what methods have been used to decontaminate or dispose of protective clothing used by British military personnel who investigated the remains of Iraqi tanks or other military vehicles disabled by depleted uranium weapons used in the invasion of Iraq. [144357]

Des Browne [holding answer 21 June 2007]: Depleted uranium is a heavy metal used in some anti-armour munitions. While there is no appreciable radiation health risk, it can pose a toxic hazard through inhalation of ingestion of depleted uranium dust, or contamination of open wounds. This risk is relatively low and does not require individual protective clothing to be worn unless personnel are working in contaminated areas for a prolonged period. Advice provided on decontamination during combat operations was that clothing that may have been in contact with depleted uranium should have the dust brushed off in a controlled site while the individuals concerned were still wearing oral-nasal protection and gloves. Once brushed clean, the clothing was to be washed as normal. Thereafter clothing could be worn or disposed of locally as required.

Subsequent monitoring of several hundred UK troops has shown that this advice was effective. Tests have shown no detectable depleted uranium in anyone other than a very small number of troops injured directly by depleted uranium munitions.

Joint Strike Fighter Aircraft

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the new in-service date set for the Joint Strike Fighter has had any effect on the plan B for the aircraft to be provided for the new aircraft carriers. [144383]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 21 June 2007]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State in the other place on 8 January 2007, Official Report, column WA8. We will not be setting in-service dates for the Joint Combat Aircraft (JCA) until we take the main investment decision, and we will take that decision when the project is sufficiently mature. The Joint Strike Fighter remains our preferred solution to meet the JCA requirement and our current plans for JCA remain coherent with the CVF programme.

Marchwood Railway Station

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence from what budget construction of the military railway station at Marchwood was funded. [143333]

Mr. Ingram: There is no military railway station at the Sea Mounting Centre at Marchwood. There are, however, facilities where freight can be unloaded by rail. As these were constructed in the 1940s, information relating to the construction costs incurred is no longer held by the Ministry of Defence.

Marines

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the establishment of the Fleet Protection Group Royal Marines is. [145056]

Des Browne: The Fleet Protection Group Royal Marines (FPGRM) establishment is 33 officers and 504 other ranks.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether all units of Royal Marines serving on Royal Navy frigates belong to the Fleet Protection Group Royal Marines. [145057]

Des Browne: All Royal Marines serving on RN Frigates belong to the Fleet Protection Group Royal Marines (FPGRM).

Marines: Terrorism

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Fleet Protection Group Royal Marines is tasked with maritime counter-terrorist duties. [145055]

Des Browne: The FLEET Protection Group Royal Marines is not tasked with maritime counter-terrorist duties.

Marines: Training

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what specialist training Royal Marines serving with the Fleet Protection Group receive in (a) boarding, (b) counter-insurgency operations and (c) site protection. [145058]

Des Browne: The Fleet Protection Group Royal Marines (FPGRM) receive role specific training in order to allow them to conduct their mandated tasks.

(a) Boarding. Fleet Standby Rifle Troop boarding teams must pass a bespoke three-week course which includes close quarter battle training, first aid, fast roping, boarding techniques and boat drills. This is followed by continuation training courses in customs issues and board and search procedures. The course trains ranks in all the skills required to conduct compliant and non-compliant boardings.

(b) Counter-Insurgency Operations. Fleet Standby Rifle Troop Teams are trained to carry out their mandated tasks within a counter-insurgency environment. General training and theatre specific training is conducted within FPGRM. If the task includes operations on land, personnel also receive Operational Training and Advisory Group training.

(c) Site Protection. All Fleet Protection Group Royal Marines personnel are trained in site security. A minimum of five weeks dedicated training a year is undertaken. A minimum of six months in the site protection role is conducted prior to serving with the Fleet Standby Rifle Troop.

Navy

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the chain of command is for personnel of a boarding party deployed from a Royal Navy ship. [145059]

Des Browne: The Royal Marine Officer commands the boarding team during the boarding operation up to the point that the FLEET Protection Group Royal Marines team is inserted and the target vessel is secured. The Royal Navy Boarding Officer will then be handed tactical command for the search operations on the vessel. Both Officers, when in charge, are responsible to the Commanding Officer of the Ship.

Nimrod Aircraft

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what investigation was undertaken into the ruptured super-heated air pipe on Nimrod XV227 in November 2004; what conclusions were reached; and what steps have been taken in response. [142810]

Mr. Ingram: During a post flight check on Nimrod XV227 on 22 November 2004, it was discovered that a portion of Supplementary Cooling Pack ducting had failed. A unit inquiry was held which concluded that it was caused by pitting and cracking corrosion leading to failure. The unit inquiry made the following recommendations and the table identifies actions taken in response.

Recommendation	Action taken
The ruptured duct is replaced with new manufactured items on a fleet-wide basis as soon as possible.	Recommendation closed. All such ducts fitted to in-service aircraft have been replaced with newly manufactured items.
A lifing policy is introduced for the ruptured duct and all similar ducts.	See comments on maintenance policy recommendation. Action ongoing.
A maintenance policy should be instigated for the ruptured duct and all similar ducts.	A study into the need for a preventative maintenance/lifing policy for this and similar ducts has been concluded by the Designer (BAE Systems). Their report, which is due to be issued imminently, is based on the results of a detailed analysis of a sample of ducts taken from a number of MR2 aircraft. This analysis has taken time to complete, but the report is expected to recommend that a lifing policy be introduced. Ducts due for replacement would be replaced during scheduled maintenance activities and it is anticipated that such a duct replacement programme would be in place by December 2007. Action ongoing.
The extent of the hot air leak warning system is reviewed to ensure that all possible duct failures are covered.	Recommendation closed. A review of the aircraft warning systems revealed that the affected Supplementary Cooling Pack Duct was the only duct whose failure would not have been detected.
A hot air leak warning system is introduced for the ruptured duct and cross-air bleed ducts.	Recommendation rejected. The duct failure was an isolated incident and was in the only part of the system where a leak would not have been detected. All of these ducts have been replaced with newly manufactured items that, based upon the previous 25 fault-free years that the original duct had been fitted, are expected to last well beyond the planned MR2 Out of Service Date (early part of the next decade). Moreover, fitting a discrete hot air leak warning system would be a complex modification that would have to be embodied across the fleet during its maintenance cycle and therefore take several years to embody. Considering the Out of Service Date of the Nimrod MR2, the fitting of such a system was not considered to be practicable. Action closed.
This incident is highlighted as a training point for Air Engineers.	The incident was immediately publicised through the Air Engineer command chain at RAF Kinloss. Action closed.
The Aircrew Flight Reference Cards (FRC) regarding Supplementary Cooling Pack malfunctions are amended to reflect the information in the aircrew manuals.	Amendments were made to Aircrew Flight Reference Cards and Aircrew Manuals to reflect the incident. Action closed.

Tornado Aircraft

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the average total operating cost per hour is of the Tornado aircraft. [145102]

Mr. Ingram: The total cost per funded flying hour of the Tornado F3 and the Tornado GR4 is £40,440 and £32,680 respectively. This includes forward and depth servicing, fuel costs, crew costs, training costs and the cost of capital charge and depreciation.

Type 45 Destroyers: Procurement

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the timetable is for making a decision on whether to order the seventh and eighth Type-45 destroyer. [145842]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 17 April 2007, Official Report, column 537W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Crosby (Mrs. Curtis-Thomas).

Unmanned Aerial Vehicles

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 29 March 2007, Official Report, columns 1671-72W, on unmanned aerial vehicles, how much each individual Desert Hawk mini UAV costs; whether UK armed forces have been or will be supplied with any other types of UAV other than Desert Hawk; and whether consideration has been given to the use of light or small propeller driven aircraft for use by the RAF or Army Air Corps for (a) surveillance or (b) close combat support. [142074]

Mr. Ingram: Desert Hawk is employed as a system consisting of eight air vehicles and the associated ground control station, communications and support equipment. The current variant costs approximately £0.4 million per system. A replacement air vehicle would cost in the region of £20,000.

UK armed forces have been supplied with the Phoenix tactical UAV system and the Desert Hawk and Buster mini UAV systems. Also, they will be supplied with Reaper (formally Predator B) and Hermes 450 UAV systems to meet urgent operational requirements. The Watchkeeper UAV system will meet the future tactical UAV requirement.

UK armed forces have some fairly small propeller-driven aircraft in service for surveillance and we keep our requirements for this type of capability under review. Such aircraft would be unlikely to meet our demanding requirements for close air support.

Warships

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for how many days the eight active Type 42 destroyers were (a) at sea and (b) alongside in harbour in (i) the last 12 months and (ii) 2006. [141001]

Mr. Ingram: The information is not held centrally in the format requested. Taking the eight ships as a whole, the approximate percentage of time spent at sea for Type 42 destroyers over the last 12 months and for 2006 is 30 per cent. at sea and 70 per cent. in harbour.

Time spent in harbour includes both time spent alongside in the ship's home port and time spent alongside while deployed elsewhere.

The percentage figures allow for time spent in refit or maintenance periods.

Written Questions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to reply to Question 125146, on procurement, tabled by the hon. Member for Portsmouth South on 28 February 2007; and what the reasons are for the delay. [144583]

Mr. Ingram: I replied to the hon. Member today. I apologise for the delay in replying which was due to an administrative error.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Biofuels

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress is being made in the development of biofuels from crops and from the breakdown of organic waste. [144208]

Malcolm Wicks: Currently, the major portion of biodiesel production in the UK comes from imported soya, palm and jatrophe oils, along with locally grown oilseed rape, with a smaller contribution from recycled waste vegetable oil and animal fats. Bioethanol is sourced primarily from imports. However, a number of companies have announced plans to increase production of biofuels, either by expansion of existing plants or through construction of new plants which will use UK grown crops such as sugar beet, wheat and oilseed rape as a feedstock. Such biofuel production plants are being stimulated by a mix of Road Fuel Duty reduction and the forthcoming Renewable Transport Fuel Obligation. The Government are also keen to support "second generation" biofuels which use more advanced technologies and have the potential to use straw, wood and biodegradable waste as feedstocks and is supporting a number of projects through the Technology Programme in this area. However, the majority of these processes are currently not proven at commercial scale. There is also significant development of biofuels internationally.

Biofuels: Brazil

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to improve the relationship between biofuels producers in (a) the UK and the North East of England and (b) Brazil (i) to stimulate trade, (ii) to encourage innovation in the industry and (iii) to enhance competitive advantage for the two countries. [145021]

Mr. McCartney: Support for establishing partnerships in investment and trade in renewable energies, particularly ethanol, is one of the recommendations of the UK-Brazil

Joint Economic and Trade Committee (JETCO). This clearly shows the importance we place on biofuels, and echoes industry's appetite for bilateral projects. UK banks, consultancy and advisory services companies are active and already doing business with Brazilian partners.

HMG maintains regular dialogue with Brazil, the European Commission, the International Energy Agency and others on ethanol production and trade. Regular discussions also take place between Commission officials about a possible EU-Mercosur trade agreement with regards to bioethanol.

There have been several recent events where Brazilian expertise has been presented to a UK audience to stimulate trade, investment and co-operation in biofuels, including the "Brazil: New Business Opportunities" event on 25 June 2007, organised by the Brazilian embassy in conjunction with UK Trade and Investment (UKTI). This JETCO event will see a specific ethanol presentation by the Brazilian Mercantile and Futures Exchange (BM&F), followed by a biofuels workshop attended by the Brazilian Piracicaba Ethanol Cluster and the Brazilian Sugar Cane Industry Union. Over 80 UK companies are scheduled to attend.

There are no specific Government-led international initiatives specifically focused on biofuels for the NE, but UKTI NE region is running a trade mission to Brazil in February 2008 in which biofuels companies can participate.

Coastal Areas: Conferences

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what issues were discussed at the coastal towns conference on 8 May. [139696]

Margaret Hodge: The conference discussed a wide range of the issues facing coastal towns, in particular whether they share common characteristics. The main issues raised were the diversity among coastal towns, for instance in terms of size and industrial structure; the changing demands of the tourist trade, with movement towards shorter visits and increased business tourism, and the response of coastal towns to this; the importance of transport infrastructure and accessibility in attracting private investment and helping coastal towns realise their full potential; the negative effects of poor quality houses in multiple occupation, which are a feature in many coastal towns; and whether central Government and regional development agencies should adopt consistent policies and strategy for coastal towns as a group, or tailor them to individual circumstances.

Departments: Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much was spent by staff in his Department via departmental (a) credit, (b) procurement and (c) fuel cards in each of the last three years. [145300]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The spend within the Department over the last three financial years through individual Government Procurement Cards is:

2004-05	444,137.97
2005-06	1,605,545.50
2006-07	1,726,413.07

The spend to date (22 June 2007) in 2007-08 is £396,584.27.

The Department does not use credit or fuel cards.

The Department also has a corporate card with American Express which is a charge card used for additional travel expenses only. Liability on the card is jointly managed by staff as individuals and the Department.

Departments: Marketing

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which advertising and marketing campaigns were run by (a) his Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years; which external agencies were involved; and what the cost was of each campaign. [144614]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The following was spent on advertising by DTI and its agencies via the Central Office of Information in each of the last five full financial years. Details of any other expenditure by the DTI and its agencies are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Northern Ireland

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library a copy of the concordat governing the relationship between his Department and the Northern Ireland Administration. [145907]

Margaret Hodge: The DTI does not have a concordat with Northern Ireland Administration. The DTI does have a concordat with the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment in Northern Ireland. This Department covers a similar range of functions to the DTI. A copy of this concordat is available on the DTI's website:

www.dti.gov.uk.

Departments: Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff in his Department received bonus payments in 2006-07; what proportion of the total work force they represented; what the total amount of bonuses paid was; what the largest single payment was; and if he will make a statement. [143097]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department of Trade and Industry awards non-consolidated bonuses in two formats:

Special bonuses to recognise performance in particularly demanding tasks or situations. Staff in receipt of a special bonus may also receive an annual performance award.

Annual performance awards paid to highly successful performance as part of the annual pay award.

Based on the information available the number of staff receiving these awards, as a proportion of the total work force they represent, total amount of bonuses and the size of the single largest payment for which this information can be provided is in the following table.

Financial year 2006-07[1]

Number of staff receiving	919	1,286	—
Proportion of the workforce receiving (percentage)	20	29	—
Total value (£)	491,669	2,538,180	15,000

[1] Financial year running from 1 April to 31 March.

In 2006-07 the total value of bonuses paid was approximately 1.8 per cent. of the Department's total paybill.

The special bonuses and performance awards for non-SCS staff are paid on a non-consolidated, non-pensionable basis and do not increase the Department's paybill costs each year. For the SCS the Senior Salaries Review Body determines the level of expenditure to cover bonuses.

Departments: Public Participation

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many public consultations his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and what the cost was of each consultation. [145282]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Over the past 12 months to the end of May 2007, the Department of Trade and Industry launched 57 formal public consultations in order to inform the Department's policy development. Information on the cost of each consultation, and the total cost of all consultations, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Publications

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the cost was of producing Overseas Trade magazine (a) before advertising revenues and (b) net of advertising revenues in each year for which information is available. [136541]

Jim Fitzpatrick [holding answer 9 May 2007]: The position (excluding website) is recorded in the Official Journal of the European Union tender and contractual documents for the specified periods, and is as follows:

Departments: Publicity

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the cost was of the banners in the window of his Department's building at 1 Victoria Street. [144919]

Margaret Hodge: The cost excluding VAT of designing and producing these banners was £4,582.

Departments: Sick Leave

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what average number of days per year was taken by staff in his Department as sick leave in each of the last five years for which records are available. [143058]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The following shows the average number of sick absence days per year in each of the last five years in DTI HQ:

Year ending 31 March:	Sick absence days
2007	5.7
2006	5.5
2005	5.7
2004	8.0
2003	7.0

Departments: Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff surveys his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and at what total cost. [145265]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The DTI commissions one annual survey of all DTI staff, as part of its internal communications, at a cost of around £20,000 a year.

Departments: Warwick Manufacturing Group

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what payments his Department has made to Warwick Manufacturing Group in each year since 1997. [141908]

Margaret Hodge: No payments have been made to Warwick Manufacturing Group direct. However the following payments have been made to Warwick university, of which it is part, and to Warwick Business School, also part of Warwick university:

	Warwick University	£ Warwick Business School
2002-03	93,570	—
2003-04	38,805	56,378
2004-05	—	50,062
2005-06	—	9,595

The Department changed its financial system in 2003 and details of payments before then could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Warwick Manufacturing Group (WMG) and the university of Warwick are major assets to the West Midlands and play a significant role in attracting inward investment into the region. WMG, in particular, is one of many assets within the region which form an integral part of an overall regional proposition presented to knowledge-driven business. It is rarely possible however to attribute the success in securing an inward investment project to one single factor, as often it is the result of a combination of issues.

For example, the Airbus decision to establish a systems engineering centre for fuel and landing gear systems in Solihull in 2006 was based on a combination of factors, including skills availability, access to existing Airbus centres in both north-west and south-west England and potential engineering links to regional universities including Aston, Birmingham and Warwick. WMG was nevertheless one of a number of factors which persuaded Airbus to locate in the region.

Economic Situation: North West Region

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will break down by area of investment the £211 billion private sector investment quoted in the North West Development Agency's Improving the Economic Performance of England's Northwest document dated February 2007. [140211]

Margaret Hodge: We believe that the figure in the question from the hon. Member should read £2.1 billion, not £211 billion.

Since 1999, the NWDA has levered the following private sector investment through its legacy programmes that includes the Single Regeneration Budget, and since 2002, the Single Programme:

Legacy (1999-2002)
Land and Property	461,000,000
Single Regeneration Budget	842,000,000
Rural Programmes	5,000,000
Inward Investment[1]	287,700,000
Total	1,595,700,000

Image	1,875,738
Total	565,515,166
Legacy and Single Programme Combined	2,161,215,166

[1] The Inward Investment data for 2002-03 onwards are subsumed into business growth.

The North West Development Agency did not categorise private sector investment by geographical area until 2003-04. The following table details the investment by area for 2003-04 to 2005-06.

Private Sector Investment by Area, 2003-04 to 2005-06

Electric Cables: Scotland

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what methodology was used by Ofgem to assess the Beauly Denny transmission line; and what account was taken of the grid reinforcement to accommodate intermittent generation, with particular reference to (a) the increase in capacity made available through the installation of equipment to permit operational intertripping and (b) the use of hydro-electricity as a balancing service when economically justified; [145182]

(2) what work was undertaken by Ofgem in assessing the Beauly Denny transmission line to compare the merits of the proposed line and the use of transmission capacity from North West Scotland on mainly existing transmission lines along the Beauly-Blackhillock-Kintore-Tealing route. [145186]

Mr. McCartney: Under the UK's energy market framework it is for the licensed transmission network companies to connect new generation to the electricity grid. It is a matter for Ofgem, the independent regulator, to ensure that any proposals for extensions to the existing system are economic and efficient. It is for the planning process to consider if proposed upgrades are acceptable. In Scotland, those planning decisions rest with Scottish Ministers.

Electronic Equipment: Waste Disposal

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many in-store take back schemes the Government expects to be set up as a result of the implementation of the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive. [144916]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment (WEEE) Directive requires that distributors supplying electrical and electronic equipment to household end users provide facilities for WEEE to be returned free of charge. The UK's implementing regulations give distributors two options for meeting this obligation: they can offer in-store take back of old equipment when consumers buy a replacement item or they can join the Distributor Take back Scheme (DTS) which supports a network of primarily civic amenity site collection facilities where their customers can return their WEEE.

There is no requirement under the WEEE Regulations to maintain a register of distributors who provide in-store take back. Currently DTS membership represents some 75 per cent. of EEE retailing. Figures on the number of in-store take back schemes are not available.

Employment

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans the Government has to sign partnerships with British industries to promote jobs for British citizens. [144965]

Margaret Hodge: The Government have no specific plans to sign partnerships to promote jobs for British citizens. The Department of Trade and Industry has a wide range of relationships with many sectors of the economy that address the challenges industry faces in light of increasing globalisation and that seek to improve competitiveness and create jobs. We have established a number of Innovation and Growth Teams in key sectors which provide a good example of the way in which we work with industry. We also work with inward investors to the UK who create employment. The working age employment rate remains close to the historic highs of recent years and is 1.6 percentage points higher than in April 1997.

Employment: North West Region

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 12 June 2007, Official Report, column 903W, on employment: North West region, if he will break down by employer the number of jobs safeguarded or created under the urban, rural and economic inclusion heading. [145072]

Margaret Hodge: As stated in my response of 12 June, the Northwest Regional Development Agency (NWDA) does not collect information in the form requested and as such does not hold data by employer.

However, under the Regional Development Agency (RDA) Tasking Framework, introduced in April 2005, RDAs are required to disaggregate outputs by urban and rural area.

For 2005-06, the NRDA reported that 15,738 jobs were created or safeguarded, of which; 74 per cent. (11,588) were in urban areas and 26 per cent. (4,150) were in rural areas.

http:/www.dti.gov.uk/regional/regional-dev-agencies/rda-performance/nage32498.html

Energy Supply: Biofuels

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the adaptability of the existing energy supply infrastructure to (a) biofuels from crops and from the breakdown of organic waste and (b) other more environmentally-friendly fuels. [144209]

Malcolm Wicks: The forthcoming Renewable Transport Fuel Obligation will require changes to the existing oil supply and distribution infrastructure as set out in various Regulatory Impact Assessments which accompanied the development of the RTFO. The oil industry is aware of and preparing for those changes.

Energy: Conservation

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information his Department holds on the geographical distribution of spending under the energy efficiency commitment. [142825]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

For the first phase of the Energy Efficiency Commitment 2002 to 2005 (EEC1) the regulator, Ofgem, which is responsible for administering the scheme, monitored the delivery of energy suppliers' schemes across England, Scotland and Wales. Under EEC1, 86 per cent. of energy savings were delivered in England and 7 per cent. each in Scotland and Wales.

Information is not available on EEC expenditure, which is a matter for the energy suppliers.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps have been taken to help individual homeowners to increase the energy efficiency of their homes; and what steps are being taken to incentivise such actions. [144207]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

The Warm Front scheme aims to improve energy efficiency in households in England through the provision of energy efficiency and heating measures to eligible households. Since its inception in 2000, Warm Front has assisted more than 1.4 million vulnerable households. Funding for the scheme for the 2005-08 period is over £800 million.

The Energy Efficiency Commitment (EEC) is an obligation on electricity and gas suppliers to meet targets for the promotion of improvements in household energy efficiency in Britain. During the first phase of the EEC (2002-05), suppliers installed a range of measures which helped an estimated 40 million households to improve their energy efficiency.

DEFRA funds the Energy Saving Trust (EST) for its work on promoting energy efficiency in the domestic sector through advertising programmes, advice centres and the endorsement of energy-saving products. The Trust also encourages local authorities to develop energy efficiency strategies.

DEFRA has also launched an online calculator that enables people to work out their carbon footprint. The calculator is part of DEFRA's "Act on CO_2" campaign which aims to make people aware of the link between their own everyday behaviour and climate change. The calculator covers three sections—home energy, appliances and personal transport—and can be used for an individual or a whole household. It also provides tailored recommendations through a personalised action plan, about what steps users can take to cut their own emissions.

DEFRA's Guide to Greener Living, and EST's accreditation of products under the "Energy Saving Recommended" label, also signpost consumers to products that save the most energy.

Energy: Meters

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what discussions his Department has had with the Health and Safety Executive on safety issues surrounding the instalment and the wearing of wires of real time displays; [144754]

(2) what discussions his Department has had with the Health and Safety Executive on the safety issues surrounding the instalment and the wearing of wires of real time displays. [144752]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department is in discussion with the Health Safety Executive about display devices. Early indications are that there are no safety concerns surrounding the installation of the devices, which are already available through retailers and some energy suppliers, but we will continue to discuss this issue with suppliers and the executive.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what consideration the Government have given to introducing smart meters with displays in May 2008 in time to meet the Energy Services Directive; [144755]

(2) what consideration the Government have given to introducing smart meters with displays in May 2008 in time to meet the Energy Services Directive. [144753]

Malcolm Wicks: In the Energy White Paper, the Government made clear their view that display devices could give gas and electricity customers information to help them make early reductions in their energy use. Further activity in respect of smart metering is being undertaken by the Government, in partnership with gas and electricity suppliers. In setting out their White Paper proposals on display devices, the Government indicated that they would consult on the implementation of these proposals in the context of their ambitions to see a roll-out of smart meters within 10 years.

Export Credit Guarantees: Burma

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much debt is owed to UK companies by Burma; in relation to which (a) companies and (b) projects the Export Credits Guarantee Department has taken over this debt; and in each case when the guarantees were given. [145338]

Mr. McCartney: The amount owed by Burma to UK companies in respect of defaulted export contracts insured or guaranteed by the ECGD is £22.9 million. The ECGD has subrogated rights to recoveries.

Contracts for which the ECGD provided 100 per cent. guarantees for the related financing loans given by the National Westminster Bank are as follows:

John Brown Engineering/Government of Burma Electric Power Enterprise: One loan signed in 1979 and two in 1982;

Bonar Cruickshank Power Engineering/Government of Burma Electric Power Enterprise: Loan signed 1986; and James Mackie and Sons/Myanmar Textile Industries: Loan signed 1980.

The ECGD also insured two export contracts with Myanmar Textile Industries and the Inland Water Transport Corporation where the outstanding debt is £1.8 million. The policies were issued in 1980 and 1983. Owing to commercial confidentiality undertakings in insurance policies, the ECGD would need to notify those companies before disclosing their names.

Farmers: Bankruptcy

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many and what proportion of farmers were declared bankrupt in (a) Cornwall, (b) the South West and (c) the UK in each year since 1979. [144231]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The closest available estimates for bankruptcies among farmers are the numbers of bankruptcy orders made under the category "agriculture and horticulture" according to the Insolvency Trade Classification (ITC). The table provides the figures for England and Wales, which are available from 1990 onwards.

Bankruptcies in Scotland and Northern Ireland are the responsibility of the devolved administrations and, while total bankruptcies could be provided, a breakdown by industry is not available.

Bankruptcy statistics are classified regionally according to the locations and areas of responsibility of official receivers' (ORs) offices, each of which covers a number of courts having insolvency jurisdiction, and are not directly comparable with administrative geographies. Statistics broken down both by industry and regionally are not readily available for the period requested.

The Insolvency Trade Classification is not consistent with the Standard Industrial Classification 2003 (SIC2003) which is used to classify businesses, nor is the regional classification in use consistent with standard administrative geographies such as counties and Government office regions (GORs). It is not, therefore, possible to provide reliable estimates of the proportions of farmers becoming bankrupt, either at the regional or national level.

Bankruptcies in England and Wales in the Agriculture sector, January 1990 September 2006:

	Bankruptcy orders in agriculture sector (E and W)

Note:
Figures are not available prior to January 1990.

Lighting: Prices

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what additional cost he expects to be added to the retail price of (a) traditional incandescent light bulbs and (b) energy-saving light bulbs as a result of the implementation of the Waste, Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive. [144915]

Malcolm Wicks: Incandescent light bulbs are not subject to the provisions of the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment (WEEE) Directive, but energy-efficient light bulbs, including compact fluorescent bulbs, are. According to industry estimate it cost 20-25 pence to teat a fluorescent bulb. This treatment cost information appeared in the Regulatory Impact Assessment issued alongside the WEEE Regulations.

Ultimately it will be for the lamp industry to ensure that they remain priced at a reasonable level.

Low Carbon Buildings Programme

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what date he expects the domestic stream of the Low Carbon Buildings Programme to be relaunched. [136970]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The household stream of the Low Carbon Buildings Programme was relaunched on 29 May 2007.

National Institute for Medical Research

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what scientific representation there is for the National Institute for Medical Research on the working party of the Medical Research Council deciding on its future at the British Library site. [143071]

Malcolm Wicks: The National Institute for Medical Research (NIMR) is a wholly owned institute of the Medical Research Council. In October 2004, the MRC established a steering committee to oversee the further development of a business plan for the renewal of the NIMR, bringing together scientific and business issues. In February 2005, following the selection of University College London as the preferred partner for the renewal of the NIMR, a project group comprising representatives from the MRC, the NIMR and UCL was established to advise the Committee on the development of the business case required for the Gateway Process.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what date Sir Keith Peters was appointed as interim director of the National Institute for Medical Research (NIMR); how many days Sir Keith has worked at the NIMR since taking up the post; and if he will make a statement. [143078]

Malcolm Wicks: The National Institute for Medical Research (NIMR) is a wholly owned institute of the Medical Research Council (MRC).

Sir Keith Peters took up the appointment as an interim Director of the NIMR on 1 October 2006. His contract requires him to work an average of eight days per month.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) whether the National Institute for Medical Research is permitted to do a preliminary feasibility study of the proposal to relocate to the British Library site; [143106]

(2) why the first statement of 31 May 2007 from the steering group on the relocation of the National Institute for Medical Research was qualified by the further statement of 1 June that the 31 May statement should not be given to the media or staff. [143965]

Malcolm Wicks: This is a matter for the Medical Research Council (MRC). I have asked the MRC's Chief Executive, Professor Colin Blakemore, to reply to my hon. Friend.

New Businesses: Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many new businesses established in West Lancashire received Government (a) funding and (b) assistance in each of the last five years. [144816]

Margaret Hodge: In 2002-03 one new business received funding through an enterprise grant (these became selective financial investment grants in 2004) funded by the Small Business Service. Since this time, there has been no take-up of available grants by new businesses.

The number of new businesses in West Lancashire receiving assistance through the Business Link service for the years in question is as follows:

Businesses receiving Business Link assistance

	Number
2002-03	70
2003-04	59
2004-05	72
2005-06	36
2006-07	6

North West Development Agency: Finance

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the Northwest Regional Development Agency's budget was in each year since 1997. [145073]

Margaret Hodge: The following table shows the Single Pot budget given to the Northwest Regional Development Agency since their creation in 1999-2000 to the present year:

RDA Year	NWDA (£000)
1999-2000	141,367
2000-01	155,750
2001-02	269,688
2002-03	274,032
2003-04	309,092
2004-05	366,720
2005-06	381,831
2006-07	400,133
2007-08	408,904

Nuclear Power Stations

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to make an announcement on the proposed strategic siting assessment for new nuclear power stations. [144831]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government recently published a consultation document on nuclear power as well as a consultation document inviting views on a proposed process for carrying out a strategic siting assessment (SSA). Both consultations close on 10 October 2007. We intend to publish a policy statement in response to both consultations by the end of the year.

The SSA consultation document proposes that, if the Government confirm their preliminary view that it is in the public interest to allow companies the option of investing in new nuclear power stations, the SSA will be launched in early 2008 and conclude in mid 2009.

Overseas Trade: Brazil

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what further action he plans to take to encourage an increase in the value and volume of trade between the UK and Brazil. [145020]

Mr. McCartney: Brazil is identified as an emerging market under UK Trade and Investment's strategy "Prosperity in a Changing World". As part of this strategy, we are focusing on deepening our trade and economic relationship with Brazil with the aim of increasing the level of trade between the UK and Brazil. We aim to achieve this by raising awareness about the opportunities in Brazil and by tackling barriers to trade. The UK-Brazil Joint Economic Trade Committee (JETCO) is one tool already in place to support these aims and a number of activities are ongoing under this. For example:

A "Brazil: New Business Opportunities" event, organised by the Brazilian embassy with the support of UK Trade and Investment, is taking place [took place] in London on 25 June and is bringing together UK and Brazilian businesses.

The CBI is delivering a comprehensive programme aimed at improving the business environment in Brazil.

A full programme of activity aimed at increasing links and collaboration between the UK and Brazil is under way for the Brazil-UK Year of Science.

The FCO Global Opportunities Fund is supporting a visit by experts from the UK Intellectual Property Office to Brazil to deliver intellectual property rights training to Brazilian patent examiners.

A series of joint events are planned to promote professional services during the Lord Mayor's visit to Brazil in August.

The second ministerial JETCO meeting will take place in September in London. This will be attended by Brazil's new Minister of Development, Industry and Foreign Trade, Miguel Jorges.

In addition, four extra staff are joining UKTI's network in Brazil in the next few months as part of a refocusing of resources to emerging markets under the strategy. UKTI has also appointed a high growth market specialist from the private sector with extensive experience of Brazil to assist UKTI in raising awareness of the opportunities in Brazil and to provide business development advice and market intelligence for companies.

Power Stations: Peterhead

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will assess the likely effects of the proposals in the Government's White Paper on Energy on the planning of the 90 per cent. carbon free power station at Peterhead. [144900]

Mr. McCartney: The Energy White Paper announced that a competition would be launched in November 2007 to develop the UK's first commercial scale demonstration of carbon capture and storage technologies on a power generation facility. This will contribute to the UK's emission reduction targets while also demonstrating the technology to an international audience in support of the Government's wider climate change objectives.

Since publication of the Energy White Paper BP has announced its withdrawal from the Peterhead project. We are aware that several other companies remain interested in participating in the competition and we are keen to see other projects come forward as the competition develops.

The decision on planning consent for a particular case is a matter for the relevant competent authority, and in the case of Peterhead that is Scottish Ministers under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989. I understand they gave approval to the proposal on 14 June this year.

Regional Development Agencies: Trade Unions

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the merits of establishing trade union representation on Regional Development Agency boards; and what representations he has received from the Trades Union Congress on this matter. [143124]

Margaret Hodge: RDA boards are made up of a range of different skills and experience to reflect a balance of regional interests. Each board includes a trade union representative.

Each trade union member is appointed by the Secretary of State following a recruitment process which meets the code of the Office of the Commissioner for Public Appointments. Each board member's performance is reviewed annually by the Chair of the RDA. Ministers take account of performance reviews when considering reappointments.

I meet the TUC regional development network regularly to discuss RDA issues but not appointments policy.

Research: Closures

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the case for allowing the Parliamentary Office of Science and Technology to exercise powers of scrutiny over proposed research institute closures; and what discussions he has had with the Trades Union Congress on this matter. [143151]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 19 June 2007]: Recommendations in the Science and Technology Committee's report on its Inquiry into the Research Council Institutes, published on 22 March, suggested a greater role for the Office of Science and Innovation in monitoring the Research Council Institutes, including any restructuring of those Institutes. These issues were raised in April at a meeting between myself, as Minister responsible for science and innovation, and Prospect.

The Government's approach remains that the Research Councils should retain responsibility for the management and organisation of their Research Institutes. Research Councils discuss any proposed closures of such Institutes with local staff trade unions, as a matter of course.

But Ministers and the OSI retain an interest in ensuring the good overall management of our science base and its institutions.

Royal Mail: Government Assistance

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 15 June 2007, Official Report, column 1419W, on Royal Mail: Government assistance, what the independent sources are that have verified the status of Government support to Royal Mail. [145076]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department used a number of external commercial advisers to ensure that the financial arrangements that are currently being investigated by the European Commission were made on a commercial basis. The main source of independent advice has been Deloitte. Advice was also obtained from Credit Suisse, Strategia and Herbert Smith.

Science: Government Assistance

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the level of Government funding support for science centres was in each of the last five years; and what total support is expected to be given (a) in 2007-08 and (b) up to 2010. [144106]

Malcolm Wicks: Government funding for science centres over the last five years is shown in the following table:

2002-03	61
2003-04	598
2004-05	560
2005-06	932
2006-07	333

These figures include:

DTI funding of £93,000 from a total of £150,000 paid between 2001 and 2004, to Ecsite UK, an umbrella body for science centres, to help it become established and become financially sustainable.

£2 million, from DTI and DfES, between 2004 and 2006 to certain centres which were assessed as likely to become financially viable with the short term funding.

(a) Funding for 2007-08 will include £450,000 as a part of £750,000 project ran by Ecsite UK (between November 2006 and March 2008) to help the science centres achieve financial sustainability and £33,000 funding for Ecsite-UK.

(b) The Government have provided this short-term funding on the basis that science centres should be self-sustaining thereafter.

Severn Barrage

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the organisations and authorities whose views (a) in favour of and (b) opposing the proposal for a tidal barrage across the River Severn have been communicated to him. [144715]

Malcolm Wicks: There is no specific proposal at present to build a Severn Barrage. The Sustainable Development Commission is however producing a report, with financial support from various parties including my Department, looking at various options for harnessing the potential tidal energy resource that exists around the UK, including within the Severn estuary. The SDC will, of course, be looking at the Severn Barrage tidal power scheme and other options within the Severn estuary.

The SDC project has included a significant programme of stakeholder and public engagement. This work is now complete and involved two stakeholder workshops in Aberdeen and Cardiff, a series of deliberative public workshops and focus groups at regional and local levels, and a national omnibus poll. A report of the engagement programme, and an independent evaluation of the programme, will be published as part of the evidence base that underpins the SDC's final report that is expected by the end of September.

In the communications that have been received by my Department from organisations or authorities on this issue, it has not always been the case that opinion is clearly for or against a particular scheme.

Shale: Imports

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what tonnage of shale was imported into the UK in each quarter of each year since 2004. [144595]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 21 June 2007]: Imports of shale for construction or similar uses cannot be distinguished from imports of similar clays. HM Revenue and Customs Overseas Trade Statistics give the following figures for imports of HS271410 bituminous or oil-shale and tar sands:

Year/quarter	Weight (thousand tonnes)

UK Trade and Investment: Fees and Charges

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what income UK Trade and Investment received from charging businesses for its services in each of the last five years. [144917]

Mr. McCartney: UK Trade and Investment's operating income, which principally comprises fees and charges for services provided to external customers, is shown in the Annual Reports and Accounts as follows;

2002-03	900,000
2003-04	1,275,000
2004-05	1,057,000
2005-06	1,037,000
2006-07	1,676,000

The figure for 2006-07 is provisional and remains subject to final audit.

Union Modernisation Fund

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria are used to allocate payments from the Union Modernisation Fund; and if he will make a statement. [138716]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Ministers select projects for UMF funding on the basis of recommendations made by an independent Supervisory Board. Bids are assessed against a series of eligibility and selection criteria set out in the UMF application pack (www.dti.gov.uk/files/file35395.pdf). The bids are assessed to ensure that they fall within the scope of the fund; will deliver outcomes that would not happen without funding; have been realistically costed and offer value for money; and have suitable project management arrangements in place for effective delivery of the project.

Working Hours

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what estimate he has made of the percentage of men who would like to work more flexibly; [144147]

(2) what steps are being taken to raise awareness of the business case for flexible working among employers; [144148]

(3) what research he has (a) examined and (b) commissioned on the impact of increasing flexible working on skills shortages in the UK; [144146]

(4) whether he has made an assessment of the impact of flexible working on productivity. [144149]

Jim Fitzpatrick: No specific research has been commissioned by DTI on flexible working and skill shortages in the UK. However, to the extent that flexible working helps employers both to recruit and retain skilled staff, it will help to reduce skill shortages in the UK. DTI research has found that many employees consider the availability of flexible working to be important when deciding to work with their current employer.

With regard to the percentage of men who would like to work more flexibly the DTIs Third Work-Life Balance Employee Survey found that almost half (46 per cent.) either were currently working flexibly, or had done so in the past year. When men who had not made a request to work flexibly were asked why, more than three-fifths said they were happy with their current arrangements or gave other personal reasons. Overall, 86 per cent. of male employees said they were satisfied or very satisfied with their current working arrangements, compared with only 5 per cent. who were dissatisfied and 1 per cent. who were very dissatisfied.

The relationship between various workplace practices and productivity is a complex one, mediated by a host of other variables; studies often find no statistically significant relationship. The relationship between work-life balance and labour productivity was investigated in Chapter 10 of the DTI-sponsored report, 'Inside the Workplace: Findings from the 2004 Workplace Employment Relations Survey' (Routledge 2006). It was found that work-life balance practices were not jointly significant when added to the baseline labour productivity model. A forthcoming DTI research report, however, has found that in private sector workplaces an increased incidence of family-friendly provisions is positively associated with managers' perceptions of improved financial performance.

In terms of raising awareness of the business case for flexible working among employers, the DTI has recently worked with Carers UK, ACAS, British Chambers of Commerce and British Gas to produce an employer's pack which illustrates the business case for flexible working. The Business Link website provides advice and guidance on flexible working and highlights the business case and benefits to employers of working flexibly.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what definition he uses of flexible working for the purposes of departmental policy. [144150]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The DTI considers "flexible working" to cover a range of solutions that enable its staff to work in a variety of patterns and locations while allowing the Department to efficiently deploy its resources to meet and adapt to changing business needs. Flexible working options available to staff include:

Part time working;
Job sharing;
Flexi time;
Home working;
Compressed hours;
Annualised hours;
Team time working.

The Department recognises the benefits that flexible working can bring to its staff, to the successful delivery of its business strategy and its customers.

Written Questions

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will answer question (a) 136543, on maternity and paternity leave, and (b) 136541, on Overseas Trade magazine, tabled on 3 May 2007 by the hon. Member for Rutland and Melton. [141262]

Jim Fitzpatrick: I answered the hon. Member's question on maternity and paternity leave (136543) on 15 June 2007, Official Report, column 1416W, and question on Overseas Trade magazine (136541) today.

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will answer question 136542, on Departments: newspapers, tabled on 3 May 2007 by the hon. Member for Rutland and Melton. [141285]

Jim Fitzpatrick [holding answer 11 June 2007]: I answered the hon. Member's question on Departments publications (136542) on 20 June 2007, Official Report, column 1818W.

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will answer question 136530, on paternity leave, tabled on 3 May 2007 by the hon. Member for Rutland and Melton. [141286]

Jim Fitzpatrick [holding answer 11 June 2007]: I answered the hon. Member's question on paternity leave (136530) on 20 June 2007, Official Report, column 1825W.

Arms Length Management Organisations

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) what steps her Department has taken to allow local authorities with arms-length management organisations the flexibility to use their own (a) land and (b) other resources to build and own homes; [143462]

(2) what plans her Department has to facilitate the construction of more council housing by (a) local authorities and (b) arms-length management organisations. [143467]

Yvette Cooper: Local authorities have an important role in securing new affordable housing. They should work in partnership with housing associations and developers, using their planning and other powers, to identify need and support development. But we are encouraging more direct development by authorities where it offers value for money.

We have changed the bidding process for social housing grant this year which will make it easier for arms-length management organisations (ALMOs) or local authority special venture vehicles to satisfy pre-qualification tests of financial standing and technical capacity which has hampered previous ALMO bids; and ensure that when an authority brings forward land in a bid, this is likely to score well in meeting the criteria of deliverability and strategic fit.

We are exploring with six local authorities, three of which have ALMOs, the benefits of their coming out of the housing revenue subsidy system. The pilots have shown that being self-financing creates a number of benefits, one of which is the opportunity for councils to have a more direct role in building homes for rent. The work of the pilots is currently being assessed.

Coastal Areas: Hampshire

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 19 June 2007, Official Report, columns 1673-74W, on coastal areas: Hampshire, what the timetable is for the publication of the reviews of Hampshire's two shoreline management plans. [145839]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

The Hampshire coast is covered by two shoreline management plans (SMPs). The North Solent shoreline (Selsey Bill to Hurst Spit) is led by New Forest district council and its review has just started for completion by about March 2009. The Hurst Spit to Durlston Head is led by Bournemouth borough council, and its review does not yet have a confirmed start date.

Community Relations

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps the Government are taking to tackle the incidence of Somali youths engaged in fundamentalist activities in the UK. [144177]

Mr. Woolas: The Government remain strongly committed to working with all communities to tackle violent extremism. To this end, the Department for Communities and Local Government works with a number of different diaspora communities in the UK including the Somalian. We are focusing our work on those organisations that are taking a proactive leadership role in tackling extremism and defending our shared values.

Conveyancing: Fees and charges

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps the Government plan to take to improve price transparency of local authority property searches. [140867]

Yvette Cooper: To implement the Office of Fair Trading's recommendation about price transparency for local authority (LA) property search services we have commissioned a study by KPMG which will conclude in mid-July 2007. This will be followed by a formal 12-week consultation on the outcomes. The aim is to have a transparent LA charging regime in place from April 2008. Forty local authorities have already cut their costs in anticipation of home information packs (HIP) because they know that, for the first time, the charges and the length of time taken will be transparent to the consumer and to HIP providers.

Council Housing

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the (a) set up and (b) running costs are of the National Register of Social Housing. [143634]

Yvette Cooper: The development costs were £2.5 million and the running costs for Communities and Local Government are currently £115,000 per annum.

The National Register of Social Housing collects information on the size, type, standard, energy efficiency, accessibility, rents and turnover of all social housing in England and Wales. It will provide statistics for the Neighbourhood Statistics Service and for any geographical area and will be available for local and regional authorities and housing associations to help them improve their strategies to provide affordable housing and meet local needs. It will lead to a reduction of the burden on data providers when it replaces the current forms based systems for collection of data.

Council Tax: Valuation

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what contractual agreements Ordnance Survey (OS) has made with the Valuation Office Agency for release of data held by OS to the Agency. [143453]

Mr. Woolas: Ordnance Survey licenses the Valuation Office Agency to access a range of data and products for use within their business operations. The Valuation Office Agency is a member of the Pan-government Agreement, a collective purchasing agreement between Ordnance Survey and central Government.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether the Valuation Office Agency uses fee code segmentation data for valuation purposes. [143493]

Mr. Woolas: No.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether the Valuation Office Agency's contract with Rightmove gives the agency access to data or analysis from the Rightmove Automated Valuation Model. [143629]

Mr. Woolas: No.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government on what date the Valuation Office Agency's contract with Rightmove allowed the agency to start collecting information about domestic dwellings. [143635]

Mr. Woolas: The Valuation Office Agency has collected information about domestic dwellings in order to meet its statutory responsibilities to compile and maintain council tax valuation lists since 1991.

The facility to access data from Rightmove's archive of estate agent particulars (which had previously been available to the public on Rightmove.co.uk's main website) began on the date of the agreement—1 June 2005.

Departments: Contracts

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what data her Department collects on contracts awarded to external suppliers by public bodies it sponsors. [144393]

Angela E. Smith: The Department has a legal obligation to compile data on public procurement for the European Commission. This includes data from the public bodies it sponsors.

Specific data are required for each contract or framework awarded in the last calendar year where the estimated value is above the threshold of the procurement regulations.

The data required includes:
The nationality of the supplier
The category i.e. supply, works or service
The commodity coding allocated
The procurement procedure adopted
The estimated total value
Whether a contract or framework.

Departments: Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much was spent by staff in her Department via departmental (a) credit, (b) procurement and (c) fuel cards in each of the last three years. [145287]

Angela E. Smith: The Department has spent the following via Government Procurement Card (GPC) over the last three financial years.

1 April to 31 March:	£
2004-05	377,080
2005-06	234,243
2006-07	284,868

The Department also used a fuel card and spent the following over the last three financial years.

1 April to 31 March:	£
2004-05	3,239
2005-06	1,151
2006-07	235

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many energy-saving light bulbs were purchased by her Department for use on the departmental estate in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [144939]

Angela E. Smith: The Department for Communities and Local Government purchased 1,374 compact fluorescent energy-saving light bulbs in 2005. The Department is unable to provide data for 2006 at this time. However, the Department's policy is to use low-energy lighting wherever appropriate, as part of our wider efforts to improve energy efficiency throughout the estate. The figure does not include energy-saving light bulbs purchased by the Department's Executive Agencies, non-departmental public bodies or the Government Offices.

Departments: Epilepsy

Mr. Hurd: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many people with epilepsy are employed by her Department; and if she will make a statement. [139103]

Angela E. Smith: Staff are requested but not required to inform us if they have epilepsy, and as such this information is not held centrally. However we are committed to support all staff with a disability, and work with a network of such staff to ensure that their needs are met.

The Department's recent Disability Equality Scheme has been acknowledged as one of the top four in Whitehall by the Disability Rights Commission.

Departments: Foreign Relations

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many memoranda of understanding are in force as a result of agreements with foreign Governments entered into by Ministers in her Department; and what executive actions each entails. [144478]

Angela E. Smith: None.

Departments: Freedom of Information

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will list the requests made to her Department under the (a) Freedom of Information Act (FOI) 2000 and (b) Environmental Information Regulations in the last six months; and what the (i) FOI case reference number, (ii) request summary, (iii) request outcome and (iv), where appropriate, reason for exemption was in each case. [143471]

Angela E. Smith: The list of requests made to the Department for Communities and Local Government under the Freedom of Information Act and Environmental Information Regulations in the period from 1 October 2006 to 31 March 2007 has been tabulated and a copy has been placed in the Library of the House, together with the other details requested.

This tabulation is solely of requests handled by the Central Department, and does not include requests made to its agencies or the Government Office Network.

Departments: Manpower

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many staff funded by the public purse in (a) English Partnerships, (b) the Housing Corporation, (c) the Commission for Racial Equality, (d) the Audit Commission, (e) the Standards Board and Adjudication Panel for England, (f) the Government office for (i) London, (ii) the South East, (iii) the South West, (iv) West Midlands, (v) East Midlands, (vi) North West, (vii) East of England, (viii) North East and (ix) Yorkshire and Humberside, (g) the Fire Service College, (h) Ordnance Survey, (i) the Planning Inspectorate, (j) The Rent Service and (k) the Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre are classified as people without posts. [141308]

Angela E. Smith: The information requested is not held centrally and could be collected only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 24 May 2007, Official Report, column 1525W, on departments: manpower, what estimate she has made of the cost to the public purse of keeping the staff referred to in employment during the period in which they were without a post. [141363]

Angela E. Smith: None. Of the 19 staff in the department who were without a permanent post on 30 April 2007 the majority are currently working for the Department contributing to the Department's objectives. Others are on unpaid leave or have medical issues.

Departments: Northern Ireland

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will place in the Library a copy of the concordat governing the relationship between her Department and the Northern Ireland Administration. [145944]

Angela E. Smith: The Department for Communities and Local Government does not currently have a concordat with the Northern Ireland Executive.

The principles set out in the Memorandum of Understanding and Supplementary Agreements between the UK Government, Scottish Ministers, the Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales and the Northern Ireland Executive, published in 2001, continue to underpin our working relationship with the Northern Ireland Executive.

Departments: Older Workers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what percentage of staff in her Department were over 60 years of age in each of the last three years. [145675]

Angela E. Smith: Percentage of staff over 60 years of age on 31 March for each of last three years was as follows:

	Percentage
2005	4
2007	2.8

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many people aged (a) over 55 years of age and (b) over 60 years of age have been recruited by her Department in each of the last three years; and what percentage in each case this is of the number of new recruits in each year. [145711]

Angela E. Smith: For staff for whom the information requested is available, the numbers requested are:

	Over 55 years of age		Over 60 years of age
	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage
2006-07	18	4.1	6	1.4
2005-06	6	2.4	1	0.4
2004-05	20	4.0	7	1.4

Departments: Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the current rate of employer contribution is to each public sector pension scheme for which her Department has responsibility; what the revenue impact would be of capping the employer contribution to each such scheme at 14 per cent. and if she will make a statement. [144296]

Mr. Woolas: Figures derived from the most recent statistical returns for the Local Government Pension Scheme (LGPS) in England and Wales indicate that in 2005-06, the average employer contribution rate for the scheme was 15.2 per cent. of payroll. For the firefighters' pension scheme, the current estimated employers' cost is 26.5 per cent. of payroll and 14.2 per cent. for members of the new firefighters' pension scheme.

Introducing a cap of 14 per cent. employers' contributions to the LGPS would reduce scheme income by some £326 million per annum on current estimated figures. For the firefighters' pension schemes, the equivalent estimate figure is some £120 million.

Departments: Public Participation

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many public consultations her Department undertook in the last 12 months; and what the cost was of each consultation. [145270]

Angela E. Smith: Over the 12 months to end May 2007, the Department for Communities and Local Government launched 42 formal public consultations in order to inform the Department's policy development. Information on the cost of each consultation and the total cost of all consultations could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Domestic Wastes: Waste Disposal

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what scientific research has been conducted by her Department and its agencies on alternate weekly collections of household rubbish. [143632]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on 19 June 2007, Official Report, column 1659W.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what research and statistical data gathering have been conducted by (a) her Department and (b) the Audit Commission on the proportion of household rubbish collected for recycling that is not recycled. [143633]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have been asked to reply.

Local authorities are required to report quarterly data on municipal waste (encompassing household waste) to WasteDataFlow. When reporting data, authorities should specify the amount of waste collected for recycling that is subsequently rejected, at the point of collection, at a Materials Recycling Facility (MRF), or at the gate of the reprocessor. The data reported to WasteDataFlow are used by the Environment Agency and DEFRA to monitor the Landfill Allowance Trading Scheme.

The agency has also carried out a survey on household waste materials reclamation facilities in England and Wales. They identified and visited about 80 candidate sites to ascertain recovery and reject levels at each site, verifying this information via a visual inspection of bale quality and the overall state of each facility. The overall typical spread of reject rates for MRFs was from 5-25 per cent. with 10-15 per cent. being the average. Around 1 million tonnes of municipal waste were reported to WasteDataFlow as being processed by an MRF.

Analysis by the Waste and Resources Action Programme, based on a range of data sources, suggests that a conservative estimate of the amount of household waste collected for recycling which is not recycled is around 5-10 per cent. In 2005-06, a total of 6.87 million tonnes of waste from household sources was collected for recycling.

I am not aware of any research carried out by the Audit Commission in this area. However, the Audit Commission has published a number of guidance documents containing advice to local councils on how they can meet their statutory requirements with regards to waste by improving their waste management and adopting best practice. The Audit Commission also examines the performance of councils and the services they provide, including waste, through the Comprehensive Performance Assessment, and provides recommendations for improvement.

Electromagnetic Fields: Public Opinion

Mr. Flello: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what account she takes of public opinion in determining suitable precautionary measures on power frequency electric and magnetic fields (EMFs); what mechanism she plans to put in place to assess public opinion on the issues raised by the recently published Stakeholder Advisory Group on Extremely Low Frequency Electric and Magnetic Fields report on precautionary approaches to power frequency EMFs; and if she will make a statement. [144689]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

The recently published report from the Stakeholder Advisory Group on Extremely Low Frequency (ELF) Electric and Magnetic Fields (EMF), known as the SAGE report, is currently under consideration by the Health Protection Agency (HPA). The Government have asked HPA for advice concerning the report's recommendations. The Government will consider the HPA's advice and, should any further measures be considered as part of a precautionary approach, would consult stakeholders as part of the process. A copy of the SAGE Report has been placed in the Library.

European Regional Development Fund

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the cost to her Department of the decision by the European Commission to suspend European Regional Development Fund payments for England. [135780]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 8 May 2007]: It is not possible to make an accurate estimate of any cost to the Department. Currently the EC has delayed reimbursing the Government for the claims it makes to cover the expenditure on particular ERDF projects. We are working with the Commission to ensure that any outstanding concerns will be addressed.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she expects payments suspended by the European Commission of European Regional Development Fund to England to be resumed; and if she will make a statement. [135782]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 8 May 2007]: The Government received formal notification on 11 April 2007 that the EC was holding reimbursement of payments in respect of ERDF 2000-06 programmes in five (out of nine) regions and the URBAN programme in Peterborough. Evidence is currently being provided for the EC on those regions and programmes so that payments can resume.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much is currently suspended by the European Commission in payments from the European Regional Development Fund to England. [135783]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 8 May 2007]: The Commission's decision to hold back the reimbursement of claims for expenditure on projects funded from the ERDF 2000-06 programmes pending further onsite checks took effect on 4 April 2007. No claims have been made since then. The Department however had outstanding claims of £269 million from earlier claims at the time of the Commission's decision which the Commission has not yet paid. The Department is working to ensure that they are reimbursed as quickly as possible.

Fire Services: Hoaxes and False Alarms

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many malicious fire alarm calls were attended by the fire and rescue services in each London borough in each of the last five years. [145220]

Malicious false alarm calls attended by London brigade in each London borough, 2001-05

London borough	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005

Home Information Packs

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she expects to answer question 138411, tabled on 16 May 2007, on home information pack inspectors. [143194]

Yvette Cooper: I have now replied to the hon. Member's question.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the submission from the Local Authorities Coordinators of Regulatory Services regarding the viability for local authorities of the enforcement of home information packs and pursue non-payment of fines; and if she will make a statement. [140869]

Ruth Kelly: We fully expect local authority trading standards officers to carry out their new statutory duties when home information packs are introduced on 1 August 2007. The Department has worked closely with the Local Authorities Coordinators of Regulatory Services (LACORS) throughout the development of this policy and is now working with them to ensure a smooth implementation. Trading standards have the expertise and experience to operate a common-sense approach to enforcement assessing each case individually, and taking into account whether the HIP is being deliberately avoided when deciding appropriate measures to take—ranging from advice and warnings to a £200 penalty charge. Any estate agents issued with a penalty charge will be reported to the OFT, which has the ability to issue a banning order preventing an offender from trading as an estate agent.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many individuals have opted to purchase a home condition report in Phase 2 of the home information pack trial. [129210]

Ruth Kelly: In total we have received requests for more than 4,000 home information packs (HIPs) across all the trials.

We are still analysing and compiling the data from Phase 2 of the trials. We will publish the findings later in the year.

We are still receiving completed HIPs from pack providers and solicitors. MORI continues to conduct independent research with organisations involved in the trial and with buyers and sellers using the HIPs in their transactions.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what recent assessment she has made of the potential effect on the housing market of the introduction of compulsory home information packs. [136475]

Ruth Kelly: Research conducted for the Department by Europe Economics suggested that had home information packs (HIPs) been implemented on 1 June for all properties there might have been a transitory impact on the volume of properties marketed for sale as consumers adjusted to the new duties. Any such impact was likely to have been small compared with the normal fluctuations in listings. The analysis further predicted that listings behaviour would quickly return to trend levels as the new systems settles into place. Under the revised arrangements, with phased introduction of HIPs, any transitional impacts are likely to be even less significant.

The report further suggests that any transitional adjustments are unlikely to affect house prices or transactions, and that home information packs are unlikely to be a determinant of future changes in house price trends.

In the medium term, as home information packs improve transparency and increase competition, making home buying and selling a quicker, more certain and less daunting experience, the operation of the market should improve.

The Europe Economics research is currently being updated to reflect the phased implementation announced on 22 May 2007. The revised report will be published in due course.

Lorely Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will ensure that provisions are introduced to provide redress for consumers who are mis-sold properties on the basis of inaccurate information in home information packs; and if she will make a statement. [136613]

Yvette Cooper: Consumers will be able to seek independent redress for home information pack (HIP)-related complaints against estate agents who are acting in relation to the sale of residential properties for which a HIP is required. The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, who is the Minister with policy responsibility for estate agents, will shortly be making an order requiring such estate agents in England and Wales to belong to an approved redress scheme for HIP-related complaints from 1 August 2007.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which Government Departments and agencies will have access to the central register of (a) home condition reports and (b) energy performance certificates. [137571]

Yvette Cooper: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Brentwood and Ongar (Mr. Pickles) on 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1400W, regarding access to home condition reports.

Access to energy performance certificates entered in the register is controlled under the Energy Performance of Buildings (Certificates and Inspections) (England and Wales) Regulations 2007. It is an offence for the keeper of the register to disclose EPCs to any other person unless expressly permitted by the Regulations. These Regulations make provision for the disclosure to the Energy Performance Certificate Register by means other than the report reference number to enforcement authorities including the Office of Fair Trading for the purpose of preventing or detecting crime, and prosecuting offenders through the courts.

The Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government also has access for monitoring and enforcement of the Regulations or auditing the work of certification schemes, and that of the register operator, provided that no particular property is identifiable from the information disclosed. No other Departments have access.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what definition of a bedroom the Government intend to use for the purpose of determining whether a home information pack will be required for the sale of a property after 1 August. [139884]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 4 June 2007]: We set out details in the home information packs regulations and commencement order which were published on 11 June 2007.

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) if she will request additional resources from the Chancellor of the Exchequer to pay transitional compensation to individuals who re-trained at their own expense as energy performance inspectors in the expectation that opportunities to work as energy performance inspectors would be available from 1 June, until the home information packs scheme begins; [140569]

(2) if she will make available resources from the contingency fund to compensate those people who re-trained as energy performance inspectors in the expectation that their work would start on 1 June this year. [140568]

Yvette Cooper: The reasons for the delay to the implementation of home information packs were set out in the statement on 22 May 2007.

The proposals we set out on 22 May will mean domestic energy assessors (DEAs) will be able to begin work shortly. We laid revised regulations on 11 June and from 1 August DEAs will also start work with four-bedroom and larger properties, rolling out to all properties as soon as possible.

We have invited councils and registered social landlords to work with us to introduce energy performance certificates (EPCs) on a voluntary basis in social housing. We are also providing 5,000 subsidised EPCs with every HIP commissioned before 1 August. These two projects will support the transition in the housing market, allow for further trialling and help to deliver early carbon savings as well as ensuring that there is as much work as possible for energy assessors at an early stage.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate her Department has made of the number of four-bedroom properties on the housing market in 2007 which are expected to be unable to exchange on completion of transaction due to inability to provide a previously commissioned home improvement pack; and if she will make a statement. [140690]

Yvette Cooper: We published our assessment of the introduction of Home Information Packs on 11 June. A number of the largest home information pack providers have committed themselves to ensuring that home-owners anywhere in England and Wales should be able to obtain a pack within seven working days at the advertised national rate.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how a four-bedroom house will be defined for the purposes of the revised home information pack regulations; and whether householders will be able to re-designate a bedroom for a different use from 1 August to avoid the need for a pack. [140851]

Yvette Cooper: We set out details in the home information packs regulations and commencement order which were published on 11 June 2007.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the (a) start and (b) end date is for consultation on the new home information pack regulations. [140858]

Yvette Cooper: The new home information pack regulations have been discussed with key stakeholders and scrutiny bodies including the Better Regulation Executive and the House of Lords Merits of Statutory Instruments Committee. This follows consultation in January of this year. A consultation in accordance with the Department's agreement with the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors on the age of an energy performance certificate when included in a home information pack will commence this summer.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will place in the Library a copy of the full conclusions of each geographic dry run for home information packs. [140861]

Yvette Cooper: Full conclusions from the area trials will not be available until the end of the year. The implementation update published on 11 June includes information on the assessments that will be done. A copy of the update has been placed in the House Library.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will provide the most recent figures available for numbers of (a) trained and (b) fully accredited (i) home inspectors and (ii) domestic energy inspectors. [140866]

Yvette Cooper: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Banbury (Tony Baldry) on 11 June 2007, Official Report, column 817W.

Regular updates to the figures on trained and accredited assessors will be available on the Department's website.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the percentage change in the number of homes being placed on the market as a result of the introduction of home information packs with voluntary home condition reports. [140868]

Yvette Cooper: Estimates on listings are set out in the impact assessment published on 11 June 2007.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to her statement of 16 May 2007, Official Report, column 644, on numbers of accredited home inspectors and accredited energy inspectors, how many of the 1,110 inspectors were fully accredited on that date. [140872]

Yvette Cooper: On 16 May 1,110 people were either accredited or having their accreditation processed to be Home Inspectors or Energy Assessors. Of those, 406 had completed accreditation or certification and 706 were having their accreditation processed.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many people in (a) Middlesbrough and (b) the North East have completed training to become home inspectors. [143424]

Yvette Cooper: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Banbury (Tony Baldry) on 11 June 2007, Official Report, column 817W.

We will provide further regular updates on the Department's website.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) pursuant to the answer of 24 May 2007, Official Report, column 1527W, on home information packs, what the estimated average market price is of a home information pack for a four-bedroom home, including VAT; [143455]

(2) what estimate she has made of the average market cost of a home information pack, including VAT, for a four-bedroom house. [143497]

Yvette Cooper: An estimate of the cost of producing a home information pack is set out in the Impact Assessment published on 11 June 2007.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will place in the Library a copy of the Home Information Pack Toolkit produced by her Department. [143460]

Yvette Cooper: We are reprinting the Home Information Pack Toolkit, which will be placed in the Library of the House as soon as it becomes available.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will place in the Library a copy of the agreement of 22 May between her Department and the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors in relation to home information packs. [143473]

Ruth Kelly: A copy of the agreement is available in the Library of both Houses.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government who will be responsible for assessing whether a domestic dwelling has four or more bedrooms and will require a home information pack from 1 August. [143496]

Yvette Cooper: The Housing Act 2004 (Commencement No.8) (England and Wales) Order 2007 provides that homes that are marketed as having four bedrooms or more will require a home information pack (HIP). The Housing Act 2004 makes it clear that the responsibility to obtain a home information pack is on the person responsible for marketing the property.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what role (a) Rightmove and (b) Countrywide played in providing advice, research or consultancy to her Department and its predecessors on home information packs. [143628]

Yvette Cooper: We have worked with a large number of stakeholders, including Rightmove and Countrywide, on the development of home information packs.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if her Department will hold a consultation on its plans to revise the home information pack regulations. [145163]

Yvette Cooper: I refer the hon. Member to the Secretary of State's statement to the House on 22 May 2007.

House Prices and Wages Ratio

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what her most recent estimate is of the ratio of house prices to wages in (a) Dorset and (b) Hampshire. [111320]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 25 January 2007]: The most recently published information on the ratio of lower quartile house prices to lower quartile incomes at local authority district and county level is published on the Communities and Local Government website in Table 576 at http://www.communities.gov.uk/pub/218/Table576_id1505218.xls

The earnings data come from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings of the Office for National Statistics of individuals and the house price data come from the Land Registry. The lower quartile price (or earnings) is that figure below which are one quarter of the prices (or earnings) and above which are three quarters of the prices (or earnings).

Housing

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government in how many consecutive years a local authority is allowed to fail to meet its own target for the delivery of affordable housing as recorded in the Annual Monitoring Report before she will (a) call in the local plan and (b) direct the local authority to modify the plan. [118896]

Yvette Cooper: The Secretary of State's call-in powers in section 21 of the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004 are relevant only in advance of the adoption of the plan by the local authority. The Secretary of State may issue a direction to a local authority to revise an adopted plan within a set time scale. The Secretary of State's powers in this regard would be used only exceptionally, depending on the particular circumstances of the plan in question.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when the report on the future of housing policy and access to social housing is due to be (a) completed and (b) published; and if she will make a statement. [143958]

Yvette Cooper: Professor John Hills's report 'Ends and Means: The Future Role of Social Housing in England' was published in February 2007.

The report has provoked a wide-ranging debate on the role of social housing in the 21st century. We are now carrying out a programme of work to address the issues raised.

As part of this programme, on 19 June we launched two key consultations 'Delivering Housing & Regeneration: Communities England and the future of social housing regulation', which outlines proposals to create a new housing and regeneration agency and responds to Professor Martin Cave's review of social housing regulation 'Every Tenant Matters', also published on 19 June; and 'Tenant Empowerment', which outlines proposals to increase empowerment of social housing tenants.

Further details of these consultations are provided in the written statement 'Delivering affordable housing, sustainable communities and better outcomes for tenants', laid on 19 June 2007.

Housing: Armed Forces

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the number of service personnel applying for social housing from local authorities under (a) Part VI and (b) Part VII of the Housing Act 1996 (i) prior to and (ii) following discharge. [133143]

Ruth Kelly: No information is held centrally about the number of service personnel and former service personnel applying to local authorities for social housing in England.

Housing: Construction

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what proportion of flat and house sales were for new build properties in each of the last five years. [143481]

Yvette Cooper: The proportions of flat and house sales that were for new build properties for each of the last five years for England is presented in the table as follows. Data for 2006 are provisional.

Proportion of residential house price transactions that were new by dwelling type in England, 2002-06

	2002	2003	2004	2005	[1]2006
Flats	14.0	17.3	18.8	24.4	22.5
Houses	7.5	7.4	7.0	7.0	5.5
All sales	8.6	9.1	9.3	10.4	8.8

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what proportion of the homes in the five eco villages will be (a) social housing, (b) shared ownership and (c) low cost housing. [143640]

Yvette Cooper: Further information about plans for eco-towns will be set out later this year.

Housing: Elderly

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the adequacy of the arrangements to inform and protect elderly homebuyers purchasing lifetime leases; how many complaints were made to the Government concerning such schemes in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [142174]

Yvette Cooper: The regulatory treatment of lifetime leases was addressed in the Government's response to the March 2006 consultation document, "Secondary legislation for the regulation of home reversion and home purchase plans". The Government response to that consultation is available at http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk./media/880/39/responses_homereversion_130906.pdf

We do not have figures on complaints. Older people can receive free legal advice and information on residential leasehold issues from the Leasehold Advisory Service (LEASE). LEASE is a non departmental public body sponsored by the Department for Communities and Local Government.

Housing: Inspections

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what her Department's latest figures are for the number of fully trained and accredited (a) home inspectors and (b) domestic energy assessors in the South East Government Office Region. [143047]

Yvette Cooper: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Banbury on 11 June 2007, Official Report, column 817W.

Further regular updates will be available on the Department's website.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many (a) home inspectors and (b) energy inspectors have been officially accredited. [145227]

Yvette Cooper: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Banbury (Tony Baldry) on 11 June 2007, Official Report, column 817W.

As I made clear to the House on 12 June we will shortly begin publishing regular updates on the website. This will keep the industry informed on progress and assist its preparations for the next phase of implementation.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether (a) home and (b) energy inspectors will be required to produce photographic identification to enter a domestic dwelling. [145519]

Yvette Cooper: Each Certification and Accreditation Scheme will issue identification cards to its members to use when entering a domestic dwelling to carry out their duties. There will be no cold calling by any HI or DEA; householders will have been given the name of the HI/DEA when the appointment was made for the inspection.

Housing: Low Incomes

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many dwellings in England are recorded by the Valuation Office Agency with a value significant code of ZI (subsidised housing—housing association—equity share). [128558]

Mr. Woolas: As at 3 March 2007, there were 5,254 dwellings in England with this code.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many properties in each local authority in England are coded by the Valuation Office Agency with the WK value significant code. [128559]

Mr. Woolas: The number of dwellings with the VSC 'WK' as at 3 March 2007 has been tabulated and a copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

Housing: Middlesbrough

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many new council houses are planned for Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland. [143426]

Yvette Cooper: Local authority social rented housing stock in both Middlesbrough and Redcar and Cleveland has been transferred to registered social landlords under the Large Scale Voluntary Transfer (LSVT) programme. In the case of Middlesbrough the properties are now managed by Erimus Housing Association and, in Redcar and Cleveland, by Coast and Country Housing.

The only available data on new social homes is at local authority level. The figures for the period 2004-07 are as follows:

	Unit
	For sale/shared ownership	For rent
Redcar and Cleveland
2004	10	64
2005	0	82
Middlesbrough
2004	0	192
2005	0	67
2006	47	34

Housing: Prices

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the average price of an (a) house and (b) flat in (i) England and (ii) each Government office region was in (A) 2000 and (B) the most recent year for which figures are available. [143475]

Yvette Cooper: The mean average selling price of a house and flat in England and each Government office region for 2000 and 2006 is presented in the following table.

Mean average selling price by type of dwelling by region, England, 2000 and 2006

	2000		2006[1]
	House	Flat	House	Flat

Housing: Sales

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many domestic dwellings were marketed for sale in (a) England and (b) Wales in the last year for which figures are available. [143479]

Yvette Cooper: Information on the number of domestic dwellings marketed for sale in England and Wales is not held centrally. However figures on the number of residential properties sold in England and Wales each year are available from the Land Registry and are published on our website at http://www.communities.gov.uk/pub/162/Table588_id1156162.xls.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many homes with four or more bedrooms were sold in England in the last 12 months. [145131]

Yvette Cooper: The Department does not collect the information requested.

Immigration

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what representations she has received from local authorities on the manner in which migrant numbers are calculated for the purposes of local government funding; and if she will make a statement. [145226]

Mr. Woolas: The distribution of Formula Grant funding takes into account a measure of the usual resident population, and does not use estimates of migrant numbers separately.

The Department for Communities and Local Government uses sub-national population projections and the mid-year estimates that are published by the Office for National Statistics (ONS). These statistics take into account changes in the population through natural change (births and deaths) and internal migration (movements between local authorities) as well as international migration.

Questions on the accuracy and calculation of the population statistics are a matter for the ONS.

Immigration: EC Enlargement

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether she plans to take into account the costs since 2004 of interpretation and translation services for local authorities in the eastern region when considering future grant settlements for those authorities; and if she will make a statement. [145307]

Mr. Woolas: The amount available to be distributed by the local government finance settlement is determined by the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Formula grant is unhypothecated, so there are no restrictions on how local authorities spend this grant.

Industrial Development: Planning Permission

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what representations she has received on the time taken to receive planning approval by (a) manufacturers who wish to extend current factory premises or open a new manufacturing site and (b) mineral operators who wish to extend a currently active quarrying operation; and if she will make a statement. [144449]

Yvette Cooper: The Secretary of State receives representations on a large number of topics, including planning procedure. Complaint about delay—whether caused by poor performance by local authorities, procedure or poor quality applications—was one of the reasons we undertook a major overhaul of the planning system. More recently, the Planning White Paper reports that our reforms have already brought substantial improvements in the performance of local planning authorities in deciding applications within target time scales.

The White Paper sets out further measures which will improve the handling of planning applications. Planning performance agreements will enable planning authority and developer to agree in advance a timetable and the requirements for achievement of each phase of processing a major application, avoiding unnecessary delay.

Infrastructure Planning Commission: Powers

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether the proposed infrastructure planning commission will have the remit to consider planning applications for (a) large-scale housing developments, (b) incinerators, (c) sewage plants, (d) wind farm sites and (e) landfill sites. [145153]

Yvette Cooper: Paragraphs 5.4 to 5.12 of the White Paper "Planning for a Sustainable Future" (cm 7120), explain that the proposed infrastructure planning commission would deal with development consent applications for nationally significant transport, water, wastewater and waste infrastructure in England, and energy infrastructure in England and Wales. Local planning authorities will continue to consider the non-nationally significant applications in these sectors that they currently consider. The White Paper does not propose that the infrastructure planning commission would consider any development consent applications for large-scale housing developments.

Land Use: Contamination

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what proportion of contaminated land was restored to (a) domestic, (b) commercial and (c) amenity use in the last (i) five and (ii) 10 years. [144440]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have been asked to reply.

Information on what land is used for after remediation is not collected centrally by my Department. The Environment Agency's 2002 State of Contaminated Land Report, prepared under Part IIA of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, sets out available data on the identification and response to contaminated land dealt with under the Contaminated Land Regime (Part 2A). A further report is expected to be produced later this year, but will not include information on land cleaned up under the planning regime for future use.

Land: Databases

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what role the Valuation Office Agency is playing in the roll-out of the Valuebill project. [143478]

Mr. Woolas: The Valuation Office Agency (VOA) is promoting the benefits of the Valuebill data exchange process within the recent initiative to develop closer working relationships with its local authority partners to make it more efficient. As well as implementing the latest Valuebill exchange standard, the VOA provides a validation service for local authority IT suppliers on similar developments.

Local Authorities: Rented Housing

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the number of (a) local authority and (b) registered social landlord properties sub-let to private renters. [145034]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not held centrally.

Secure tenants of local authorities are prohibited by law from subletting the property to private renters or to anyone else. Tenants with assured periodic tenancies of Registered Social Landlords are also prohibited by law from sub-letting the property except with the consent of the landlord.

Where a property is illegally sub-let, it is for the landlord to take steps to repossess it.

Local Government and Housing Act 1989

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans she has to use her powers under part III of schedule 4 to the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 to issue directions in respect of areas of social housing estates which are deemed to serve the wider community. [143154]

Yvette Cooper: The Secretary of State has no plans to use powers under part III of schedule 4 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989, but would consider any applications for appropriate directions on a case-by-case basis.

Local Government: Finance

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what proportion of local government revenue expenditure was financed by specific grants in each year since 1997-98; and what the estimated figure is for 2007-08. [145536]

Mr. Woolas: The percentage of local government revenue expenditure financed by specific grants in England in each year since 1997-98 and the estimated figures for 2006-07 and 2007-08 are tabled as follows.

The table is produced on a non-financial Reporting Standard (FRS 17) basis to 2003-04 and on an FRS 17 basis from 2003-04 onwards. The main implication is that the costs of entitlements to retirement benefits (pensions) in FRS 17 are accounted for in the year in which employment gives rise to the entitlement, rather than the year in which cash payments of contributions or pensions take place. On an FRS 17 basis, revenue expenditure is now financed by appropriations from pension reserves, in addition to appropriations from other reserves, revenue support grant, redistributed non-domestic rates, police grant and council tax.

The large change in specific grant from 2006-07 onwards is largely due to changes in the way the expenditure on schools is funded. Local authorities now receive dedicated schools grant, included in specific grants, replacing funding previously included in formula grant.

The definition of local government revenue expenditure used here is expenditure funded from aggregate external finance (AEF), council tax and authorities' reserves. AEF is central Government revenue funding that comprises formula grant (revenue support grant, redistributed business rates and police grant), general Greater London authority (GLA) grant and specific grants inside AEF, i.e. revenue grants paid for council's core services. The specific grants used here are the specific grants inside AEF. Comparisons across years may not be valid owing to changing local authority responsibilities.

Members: Correspondence

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the (a) average and (b) longest time taken by her Department to reply to hon. Members' correspondence was in each of the last three years. [145064]

Angela E. Smith: The Cabinet Office, on an annual basis, publishes a report to Parliament on the performance of Departments in replying to Members' and Peers' correspondence. The report for 2006 was published on 28 March 2007, Official Report, columns 101-04WS. Reports for earlier years are available in the Library of the House.

Information on the average time taken to reply to hon. Members' correspondence is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The longest time taken by the Department to reply to hon. Members' correspondence in each of the last three years is 188 days in 2004; 173 days in 2005; and 295 days in 2006.

Multiple Occupation: Licensing

Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many licence applications have been received by local authorities in England under the provisions of the Housing Act 2004 for mandatory licensing of houses in multiple occupation; and what percentage this represents of the properties subject to mandatory licensing under the Act. [144451]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 21 June 2007]: The collection of data on licence applications received by local authorities in England for the mandatory licensing of houses in multiple occupation is still in progress. The Department will release these figures when they are available.

Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will review the effect of paragraph 2(2), Schedule 3 of the Licensing and Management of Houses in Multiple Occupation and Other Housing Miscellaneous Provisions (England) Regulations 2006. [144452]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 21 June 2007]: The Department is committed to reviewing the operation of licensing of Houses in Multiple Occupation, including the provisions in paragraph (2) (2) of schedule 3 of Statutory Instrument 373 'The Licensing and Management of Houses in Multiple Occupation and Other Houses (Miscellaneous Provisions) (England) Regulations 2006'. We are currently discussing these with stakeholders.

Multiple Occupation: Peterborough

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many houses in multiple occupation there were in the Peterborough City Council area in each year since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [144096]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 19 June 2007]: The number of Houses in Multiple Occupation (HMOs) in local authority areas has been collected by the Department through the Housing Strategy Statistical Appendix (HSSA) since 2001. The Department does not hold data on the number of HMOs in local authority areas prior to this date. The following table details the number of HMOs in the city of Peterborough since 2001.

Housing strategy statistical data

	Number of HMOs
2001-02	2,000
2002-03	1,000

Non-domestic Rates

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many notices of appeal the Valuation Office Agency has received in relation to the 2005 business rates revaluation in each year since the ratings list for the 2005 revaluation was published. [143671]

Mr. Woolas: The Valuation Office Agency has received the following number of valid proposals against the 2005 rating lists:

	Number
1 April 2005 to 31 March 2006	269,882
1 April 2006 to 31 March 2007	136,903
1 April 2007 to 31 May 2007	18,865
Total	425,650

Non-domestic Rates: Valuation

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) of 27 March 2007, Official Report, column 1419W, and 15 January 2007, Official Report, column 848W, on business rate valuations, whether the explanatory work has been completed; and what conclusions have been reached on the feasibility of using automated valuation modelling for business rate valuations. [145484]

Mr. Woolas: The first phase in a two-phase feasibility study on the potential contribution of automated valuation modelling (AVM) in support of the forthcoming 2010 non-domestic revaluation concludes that an AVM is capable of supporting the revaluation of certain classes of property by providing:

1. Provisional valuation matrices.

2. Exception reports to assist in the review and validation of rental information.

3. Market analysis, including the development of market derived trending indices.

4. Revaluation 'impact' analysis reports that make available at an early stage information about the likely effect of the revaluation on the aggregate tax base.

The study has also shown that the AVM can be used to develop local or regional valuation time trend indices as well as providing detailed analysis to inform stakeholders of the impact of the revaluation much earlier in the process than would traditionally be the case.

Pensions: Emergency Services

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government for what reason the real discount rate used by local authorities to calculate the unfunded net present value of the cost of (a) police and (b) firefighters' pensions was cut from 3.5 per cent. as at 31 March 2004 to 2.4 per cent. as at 31 March 2005; and if she will make a statement. [144631]

Mr. Woolas: The relevant code in the 2003 Statement of Recommended Practice (SORP) by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy specified a rate of return of 3.5 per cent. real in respect of calculating benefit scheme liabilities. The relevant code in the 2004 SORP changed this. It specified the use of an equivalent current rate of return to that of a high quality corporate bond of equivalent currency and term to the scheme liabilities rather than a specific percentage figure. This reflects the Financial Reporting Board Standard 17 issued by the Accounting Standards Board, part of a general move for local authorities to comply with standard accounting practice.

Planning

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when her Department will publish a summary of responses to its consultation on the Town and Country (General Permitted Development) Order 1995; and if she will make a statement. [125159]

Yvette Cooper: The Department consulted last year on proposals to improve the procedure for making article 4 directions to help address the problems that occur with the subdivision of rural land by enabling local planning authorities to bring directions into force more quickly; and to control the demolition of sports buildings by removing permitted development rights.

We received a large number of responses some of which raise complex issues. We expect to publish a summary of responses in July.

Planning Delivery Grant

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the timetable is for introducing the housing and planning delivery grant; and what the criteria are for determining the level of funding to individual local authorities. [145129]

Yvette Cooper: Following last year's consultation on the Government's proposals, the introduction of and criteria for the housing and planning delivery grant are currently under consideration as part of the wider comprehensive spending review (CSR). The timing of any announcement will be subject to the CSR.

Planning Inspectorate: ICT

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what problems have occurred with the Planning Inspectorate IT system Planning Casework Service since its inception. [144718]

Yvette Cooper: Following rollout of the Planning Casework Service (PCS) PINS has been able to provide a 'public view' of Enforcement and Planning Appeals documentation via publication on the Planning Portal. However, while PINS has encouraged participants in the appeals process to submit documents to it electronically, either online via the Portal or by email, the majority of submissions made by parties remain in paper format.

This required a much greater degree of scanning of these paper submissions than had been forecast and was the main problem encountered with the system. As a consequence PINS reviewed its processes and has temporarily reduced the level of scanning to the main documentation.

PCS continues to allow parties to submit appeals and other supporting documentation online and by email. It also allows interested parties to comment on and track the progress of appeals via the Planning Portal as well as providing a view of the appeal decision once issued.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether a value for money evaluation has been carried out on the IT system Planning Casework Service; and if she will make a statement. [144719]

Yvette Cooper: Following rollout of PCS, PINS has followed correct Government protocol in determining value for money. It is preparing a revised benefits realisation plan and has sanctioned a Post Implementation Review, in line with OGC best practice. The review is at an advanced stage and will be followed by a Gateway 5 review.

Planning Permission: Bexley

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many planning applications from the London borough of Bexley were (a) allowed and (b) dismissed by the Planning Inspectorate in each of the last two years. [144817]

Yvette Cooper: Planning Appeals allowed and dismissed in the London borough of Bexley are as follows.

Financial year	Allowed	% allowed	Dismissed	% dismissed	Total
2005-06	39	33.91	76	66.09	115
2006-07	36	30.00	84	70.00	120
Grand total	75	31.91	160	68.09	235

Planning: Housing Improvements

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether Part M of the Building Regulations applies to extensions built on houses; and if she will make a statement on the rules on accessibility for people with disabilities to house extensions applied by her Department. [143688]

Angela E. Smith: Schedule 1 to the Building Regulations 2000, as amended by the Building (Amendment) Regulations 2003 (S.I. 2003/2692), states, for Part M,

"The requirements of this Part do not apply to ... an extension of ... a dwelling".

Accessibility for people with disabilities to house extensions is therefore a matter for the householder, not for Government.

Polytunnels: Planning Permission

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what her policy is on the extent to which planning procedures apply to the erection of agricultural polytunnels; what discussions she has had with Herefordshire county council on its proposals for planning procedures for polytunnels; and if she will make a statement. [131020]

Yvette Cooper: The Government have not set out a specific planning policy on agricultural polytunnels. Whether something counts as development will depend on the circumstances of the case.

A recent High Court decision on Tuesley farm concluded in that case the polytunnels did constitute development; however, local planning authorities must consider each case on its merits.

Preventing Violent Extremism Pathfinder Fund

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the criteria are for the distribution of funding from the Preventing Violent Extremism Pathfinder Fund to local authorities. [141730]

Ruth Kelly: The Guidance Note issued to Government Offices and local authorities in England in February 2007 which outlines the criteria used can be found on the Department's website at http://www.communities.gov.uk/index.asp?id=1506075

Copies of the guidance have been placed in the Library of the House.

Property Development: Contamination

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) whether her Department has a target for the proportion of new development to take place on currently contaminated land in (a) England and (b) East Anglia; [144439]

(2) what assessment her Department has made of the potential use of contaminated land for (a) projected house building targets and (b) non-domestic purposes in (i) England and (ii) East Anglia. [144444]

Yvette Cooper: The Department does not have a target for the proportion of new development to take place on contaminated land. It is for regional planning bodies and local planning authorities to make assessments of potential land that might be suitable for housing and other development uses as part of the plan making process. Strict environmental health regulations are in place to ensure that any contaminated land is fully remediated before any development takes place.

Property: Databases

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what access the Valuation Office Agency has to (a) the Electronic Survey of Empty Homes, (b) the National Register of Social Housing, (c) the Register of Licensed Houses in Multiple Occupation and (d) the Housing Data Warehouse. [143636]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) on 17 April 2007, Official Report, columns 521-22W.

Property: Photographs

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 8 February 2007, Official Report, column 1164W, on the Valuation Office, how many photographs were held for properties in (a) England, (b) Wales and (c) each local authority in England and Wales. [129270]

Mr. Woolas: As at November 2006 there were 23.5 million domestic properties entered in the council tax lists in England and Wales. This was rounded to 23 million in the answer of 8 February 2007, Official Report, column 1164W. Photographs were attached to 3.1 per cent. of the 22.2 million domestic properties in England and 9.6 per cent. of the 1.3 million domestic properties in Wales. There are therefore photographs attached to approximately 3.5 per cent. of domestic addresses in England and Wales combined rather than the 3.3 per cent. quoted in that previous answer.

A breakdown by local authority cannot be provided without disproportionate cost.

Rough Sleepers

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many people were sleeping rough in (a) London and (b) England in each year since 1997; and what the most recent figure is for each. [115286]

Yvette Cooper: The Government have published a national rough sleeping estimate each year since the Prime Minister introduced the rough sleeping target in 1998 to achieve a two-thirds reduction from 1,850. The following table shows the historical data for London and England as extracted from the national estimate. We do not hold information for 1997.

	London	England
1998	621	1,850
1999	635	1,633
2000	546	1,180
2001	357	703
2002	321	596
2003	267	504
2004	265	508
2005	221	459
2006	267	502

Smoking: Litter

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether ring-fenced funding has been provided to local authorities from central Government to compensate for the extra costs of litter collection arising from the public smoking ban in England. [143744]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have been asked to reply.

No additional funding has been provided by my Department. However, the Government have prepared for possible consequences of England going Smokefree on 1 July, including the potential increase in smoking-related litter.

In May this year, the Government published guidance for local authorities on smoking litter prevention, which was sent to all authorities in England. DEFRA has also funded four smoking litter campaigns for the current financial year. These campaigns have been organised by Environmental Campaigns (ENCAMS), the organisation that runs the Keep Britain Tidy campaign.

Central to this work is the issue of behaviour change. If smokers refrained from discarding their cigarette butts on the street, smoking-related litter would not be a problem. This is why, through the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005, we took the opportunity to clarify that smoking-related litter is in fact litter. As a consequence, anyone disposing of a cigarette butt is committing a littering offence, punishable with a fixed penalty notice fine or prosecution in the magistrates court. The Government continue to encourage local authorities to use their powers in this regard to take action, where appropriate, against those discarding smoking-related litter.

We are also in the process of amending the Street Litter Control Notices Order 1991 to extend the types of premises currently falling within the scope of the Street Litter Control Notice provisions. This will enable them to be used against places which may attract outside smokers, including pubs, clubs, restaurants, cafes and other eating and drinking venues. It is intended to commence this power on 1 July 2007. When there is a suitable opportunity, we also intend to amend both primary and secondary legislation so that Street Litter Control Notices can also be used in respect of offices.

In instances where a partnership approach to deal with a litter or refuse problem has failed, Street Litter Control Notices can be used by local authorities to set out what can reasonably be required of the occupier of the premises in question to minimise the detrimental impact of their operation—for example, providing bins and keeping a defined area clear of litter, including smoking-related litter.

Social Rented Housing

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the number of social housing units built in (a) the London borough of Merton, (b) south-west London and (c) London in each of the last five years. [121555]

Yvette Cooper: The number of social rent homes built or acquired in each London borough in each of the last five years is tabulated as follows. Communities and Local Government do not define an area for south-west London so figures have been provided for each London borough.

Social rent homes provided by sponsoring local authority

Somerset County Council: Manpower

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many personnel were employed by Somerset county council in (a) 2001-02, (b) 2002-03, (c) 2003-04, (d) 2004-05 and (e) 2005-06. [143967]

Mr. Woolas: Somerset county council employed the following (from the March of each year):

	Full-time equivalents
2001-02	9,481
2002-03	9,968
2003-04	11,719
2004-05	11,956
2005-06	12,377

The changes have occurred as a result of some increases in schools, employees, both teaching and non-teaching and also as a result of Local Management of Schools and the re-internalisation of some services.

The increase in joint working and partnership working, with external funding—examples are the NHS, the Supporting People Programme, National Care Standards, the Older People's Commissioning Strategy, the Early Years Initiative, Care Direct, Surestart and Passenger Transport has also increased staff levels. In all these cases the county council has been the nominated employer.

Temporary Accommodation

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the number of children living in (a) bed and breakfast and (b) temporary accommodation; and if she will make a statement. [116375]

Yvette Cooper: Information reported quarterly by local authorities includes the number of households in temporary accommodation on the last day of the quarter, as arranged by the local authority under homelessness legislation. The number of these households which include dependent children or a pregnant woman has been reported since March 2002, and the number of children or expected children in these households has been reported since June 2004.

Latest figures, for 30 September 2006, show that there were 1,871 dependent children in bed-and-breakfast style accommodation and 129,341 in all forms of total temporary accommodation. These figures also include expected children when a pregnant woman is part of the household.

The Government have made significant progress in tackling the use of inappropriate temporary accommodation for families assisted under the homelessness legislation. In March 2002, the Government set a target that no family with children should have to live in bed and breakfast provided as temporary accommodation under the homelessness legislation for more than six weeks. At that time, there were 6,960 families living in bed and breakfast as temporary accommodation, of which it was estimated that between 3,500 and 4,000 had been in bed and breakfast for more than six weeks. The target was met by 31 March 2004 and, to ensure it would be sustained, the Government made the Homelessness (Suitability of Accommodation) (England) Order 2003, which came into force on 1 April 2004. The effect of the order is that, under the homelessness legislation, bed and breakfast cannot not be regarded as suitable accommodation for families with children unless alternative accommodation is not available, and even then cannot be regarded as suitable for more than six weeks.

In addition, in January 2005 the Government announced in "Homes for All" its commitment to halve the number of all households in temporary accommodation by 2010, and more recently on 14 November 2006, a further commitment that by 2010, no 16 or 17-year-olds should be placed in bed-and-breakfast accommodation by a local authority under the homelessness legislation, except in an emergency.

Temporary Accommodation: Children

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many children were recorded as living in (a) temporary, (b) non-decent and (c) overcrowded accommodation in each local authority in the Eastern Region since 2004. [139248]

Yvette Cooper: Information reported quarterly by local authorities includes the number of households in temporary accommodation on the last day of the quarter, as arranged by the local authority under homelessness legislation. The number of children or expected children in these households has been reported since June 2004. Figures reported by all local authorities, including those in the East of England, are provided in a table which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Estimates of the number of children living in non-decent homes in each of the East of England boroughs are not available. However, estimates derived from the 2003 English House Condition Survey suggest 300,000 children live in homes that did not meet the decent homes standard in the East of England in 2003. This is a modelled estimate.

Estimates of the number of children living in overcrowded households in each of the East of England boroughs are not available. However, for the whole of the East of England it is estimated, from the Survey of English Housing, that there were 71,000 children living in overcrowded households (averaged over the period 2003-04 to 2005-06).

There is a measure of overlap between the different housing problems with a proportion of children living in homes with two or all three problems identified. It is not possible to directly assess this overlap.

Urban Areas: Cheltenham

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the likely population of the Cheltenham urban area referred to in the Draft Regional Spatial Strategy (RSS) for the South West 2006 to 2026 (a) with and (b) without implementation of the RSS, broken down by age bands, for each year from 2006 to 2026. [144985]

Yvette Cooper: The total population of the Cheltenham borough area given in the 2001 Census was 110,013. For the urban area, which excludes rural parts of the borough but includes the contiguous urban area, which crosses local authority boundaries, the Census figure was 110,320. The most recent population projections published by the Office for National Statistics for the local authority area indicate a population increase from 111,900 in 2006 to 120,100 in 2026. The projections are trend-based and policy neutral. They do not illustrate either the implementation or the non-implementation of any strategy but indicate a continuation of existing trends. Unfortunately these projections are not published for the contiguous urban area.

The proposed housing figures contained in the draft RSS were submitted by the South West Regional Assembly based on proposals put to it by Gloucestershire county council. The hon. Member for Cheltenham would need to ask those bodies what assumptions they have made about the likely population of the Cheltenham area and the implications of the implementation or non-implementation of those RSS proposals. Following the end of the current Examination in Public of the RSS in July this year and the subsequent submission of the Panel report, the Government will then consider the recommendations in it, and the most up-to-date evidence, before considering the need to accept the RSS or propose changes to it.

Vacant Land: Solihull

Lorely Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what percentage of (a) parkland and (b) greenfield land has been developed on in Solihull in the last 10 years. [145029]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not available centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Local planning authorities are primarily responsible for approving development in their areas.

Valuation Office

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) of 21 March 2007, Official Report, column 996W, on the Valuation Office Agency, if she will list the sources which the Valuation Office Agency uses to obtain such information. [145481]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 28 March 2007, Official Report, columns 1596-97W.

Westminster City Council: Temporary Accommodation

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will seek a report from Westminster city council on the number of statutorily homeless households currently being placed in temporary accommodation outside its area. [145181]

Yvette Cooper: Officials are working closely with Westminster council to ensure, wherever possible, that homeless households that are placed into temporary accommodation remain within the borough.

Written Questions

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she expects to reply to Questions (a) 136471, (b) 136475 and (c) 136474, on home information packs, tabled by the hon. Member for Cotswold on 3 May 2007. [140351]

Ruth Kelly: I answered Questions 136471 and 136474 on 24 May 2007, Official Report, column 1528W. Question 136475 was answered on 25 June 2007.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she expects to make a substantive reply to question 139884, on home information packs, tabled by the hon. Member for Aylesbury on 23 May for named day answer on 4 June. [145602]

Yvette Cooper: I have now replied to the hon. Member's question.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Afghanistan: Drugs

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps her Department is taking to reduce opium (a) production and (b) export from Afghanistan; and if she will make a statement. [145515]

Dr. Howells: Further to the written answer my right hon. Friend the Minister for Trade, Investment and Foreign Affairs (Mr. McCartney) gave to the hon. Member for Ceredigion (Mark Williams) on 23 April 2007, Official Report, column 908W, I can report that, with our assistance, the Afghan Criminal Justice Task Force (CJTF) has now convicted 390 people (including three medium value traffickers) for drugs offences since May 2005. In April, the CJTF convicted 27 people for possession of up to 58 kg of heroin and 1,283 kg of opium, sentencing them to between 10 to 16 years.

Afghanistan: Peacekeeping Operations

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with her colleagues at the Ministry of Defence on how long she expects a British military presence to remain in Afghanistan; and if she will make a statement. [145509]

Dr. Howells: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office and Ministry of Defence regularly discuss the role of British forces in Afghanistan. These discussions are central to the UK's joint civilian-military approach there. The current mandate for our troops, who are in Afghanistan at the invitation of the Afghan Government and as part of the UN-mandated, NATO-led international security assistance force, expires in 2009. We expect, however, that UK forces will be needed in Afghanistan beyond this. The size and duration of the UK military presence will depend on a number of factors including the ability of Afghan security forces to take greater responsibility for the security of their own country.

Armed Conflict: Diamonds

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps her Department is taking on the international trade in conflict diamonds; and what discussions she has had with her counterparts in the (a) Liberian and (b) Sierra Leonean Governments on the matter. [145577]

Mr. McCartney: The UK is fully committed to implementing the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme (KPCS). The body responsible for this, the Government Diamond Office (GDO), is a department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO), and works closely with HM Revenue and Customs, the UK diamond industry and civil society groups to ensure effective implementation of the provisions of the KPCS document.

The UK is supportive of the current European Union Chairmanship of the KPCS, which began on 1 January. The FCO has provided funds for the European Commission to second additional staff for the duration of the Chairmanship. An official from the GDO has taken part in a review visit to Romania and formed part of the recent review mission to Ghana, as part of wider efforts to ensure full compliance of the KPCS among all participants in order to eradicate the trade in conflict diamonds. A GDO official will be taking part in the forthcoming review visit to Bulgaria.

The UK supported the recent lifting of UN sanctions on the diamond trade in Liberia, following an inspection from the Kimberley Process Expert Mission which confirmed that Liberia had the necessary systems in place in order to ensure compliance with the KPCS.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had no discussions with her counterparts in Liberia and Sierra Leone on the international trade in conflict diamonds.

Bosnia: Peacekeeping Operations

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with her Ministerial colleagues at the Ministry of Defence on the length of time she expects a military presence to remain in (a) Bosnia and (b) Kosovo; and if she will make a statement. [145578]

Mr. Hoon: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is in regular contact with the Ministry of Defence and other Government Departments about military commitments in the Balkans.

The UK works closely with our international partners, both in NATO and the EU, to ensure that an appropriate military presence is maintained. There are two military missions—NATO Kosovo Force (KFOR) and the EU military mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina (EUFOR) Operation Althea. Both are subject to regular review to ensure their posture remains appropriate. The UK currently contributes around 200 troops to KFOR and a handful of staff officers in EUFOR headquarters, along with a battalion to the shared EU-NATO Balkans operation reserve force.

China: Dual Nationality

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps she is taking to persuade China to recognise dual nationality. [139863]

Mr. McCartney: We are not currently engaged with the Chinese Government specifically on the recognition of dual nationality.

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people imprisoned in China have joint British/Chinese nationality. [139865]

Mr. McCartney: The Chinese Government does not recognise dual nationality and thus British nationals of Chinese descent detained in China are considered Chinese. The authorities do not notify us of the detention of people in this category. We do not know how many may be detained.

Cyprus

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 22 May 2007, Official Report, column 1215W, on Cyprus, what recent progress has been made on a UN-brokered solution to the situation in Cyprus. [145954]

Mr. Hoon: As I stated in my reply to my hon. Friend on 22 May, Official Report, column 1215W, the division of the island can only be resolved through a comprehensive settlement brokered by the UN. Although there have been no positive developments since that date, we continue to urge both sides to show political will and flexibility to bridge the gap between words and deeds, and to engage constructively with the UN's efforts to broker a comprehensive and durable settlement. The status quo is unacceptable and negotiations on a final political solution have been at an impasse for too long.

Cyprus: Trade

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the operation of the Green Line regulation adopted by the EU for trade between the two communities in Cyprus; and if she will make a statement. [145945]

Mr. Hoon: The Green Line continues to contribute towards intra-island trade and economic interaction between Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots. We welcome all such interaction. The scope of goods able to cross the Green Line under the regulation remains limited which itself restricts the volume of trade occurring. As the EU Commission acknowledged in its 2006 annual report, both political and practical obstacles remain to the effective functioning of the regulation. The Government continue to encourage both sides to lift all restrictions to maximise the potential of the Regulation.

Departments: Aviation

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many flights to overseas destinations were taken by (a) civil servants and (b) Ministers in her Department in each of the last three calendar years; and what the total cost of such flights was. [144928]

Mr. Hoon: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost. Since 1999, the Government have published on an annual basis, a list of all overseas visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500, as well as the total cost of all ministerial travel overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. Information for 2006-07 is currently being compiled and will be published before the summer recess. All travel is undertaken in accordance with the "Civil Service Management Code", the "Ministerial Code" and "Travel by Ministers".

Departments: Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much was spent by staff in her Department via departmental (a) credit, (b) procurement and (c) fuel cards in each of the last three years. [145293]

Mr. Hoon: The amounts spent by Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) staff based in the UK were:

Corporate credit card

	Expenditure (£)	Number of card holders
2004-05	260,821	180
2005-06	917,493	570
2006-07	2,767,719	814

Procurement card

	Expenditure (£)	Number of card holders
2004-05	674,275	102
2005-06	688,879	122
2006-07	1,036,969	161

The FCO also uses a catering card. The expenditure on this card in 2006-07 was £358,985.

Fuel cards are used for the purchase of fuel and oil in the UK and for fuel, tolls and recovery in the rest of Europe. It is not possible to obtain precise figures for expenditure on these cards at present, but the expenditure is estimated to be less than €1,000 per month.

Many posts overseas use corporate credit cards issued by local providers. Information about the amount spent using these cards is not held centrally and could not be obtained without incurring disproportionate cost.

Our existing corporate credit card scheme began an expansion at the beginning of 2006. One of the main reasons for the expansion was the need to reduce the burden on our overseas posts who had up to this point been required to provide subsistence and pay for hotels for officers visiting overseas posts on official duty. The corporate credit card is used by the vast majority of officers for travel costs and costs associated with official entertainment. The increased expenditure on both the corporate credit card and the procurement card is a result of encouraging FCO staff to make increased use of these cards. We see these cards as a cost-effective and efficient way of paying for lower value goods and services.

Departments: Energy

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many energy saving lightbulbs were purchased by her Department for use on the departmental estate in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [144927]

Mr. Hoon: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) purchased the following number of energy saving lightbulbs in the years requested for our estate in the UK.

	Number
2005	2,000
2006	3,100

The FCO has a policy of, where possible, replacing inefficient lightbulbs on failure with energy efficient ones, and as part of general energy saving programmes. We frequently review available options to maximise the energy efficiency of our lighting.

Departments: Northern Ireland

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will place in the Library a copy of the concordat governing the relationship between her Department and the Northern Ireland administration. [145940]

Mr. McCartney: The Concordat on International Relations (D3) between the Government and the Northern Ireland Executive Committee is contained in the Memorandum of Understanding between the Government, Scottish Ministers, the Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales and the Northern Ireland Executive Committee. The Memorandum and associated Concordats, (Cm 5240), was presented to Parliament and a copy placed in the Library of the House in December 2001.

The principles set out in the Memorandum of Understanding and Supplementary Agreements between the Government, Scottish Ministers, the Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales and the Northern Ireland Executive, published in 2001 continue to underpin our working relationship with the Northern Ireland Executive.

Departments: Official Cars

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many cars her Department owns. [145571]

Mr. Hoon: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office Services UK based fleet operates 14 cars.

We are unable to provide details covering all overseas fleet cars without incurring disproportionate cost as officials would need to contact all of our overseas missions to collate this information.

Departments: Older Workers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of staff in her Department were over 60 years of age in each of the last three years. [145681]

Mr. Hoon: At 1 April for 2005, 2006 and 2007 the percentages of staff over 60 employed by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) were as follows:

	Percentage
1 April 2005	5.4
1 April 2006	4.9
1 April 2007	3.3

The FCO abolished the compulsory retirement age for all staff below the level of the senior management structure (senior civil service equivalent) in 2006.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people aged (a) over 55 years of age and (b) over 60 years of age have been recruited by her Department in each of the last three years; and what percentage in each case this is of the number of new recruits in each year. [145705]

Mr. Hoon: The details of Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) staff in these age groups recruited since 2004 are set out in the following table.

Financial year	Staff aged 55 to 60	Percentage of staff recruited	Staff aged 60 plus	Percentage of staff recruited
2004-05	18	4.2	4	0.9
2005-06	25	4.7	8	1.5
2006-07	25	4	4	0.6

The FCO no longer imposes a mandatory retirement age on staff below the senior management structure (senior civil service equivalent) level.

Departments: Public Participation

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many public consultations her Department undertook in the last 12 months; and what the cost was of each consultation. [145276]

Mr. Hoon: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has not carried out any public consultations in the last 12 months.

Departments: Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff surveys her Department undertook in the last 12 months; and at what total cost. [145259]

Mr. Hoon: In the last 12 months the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has conducted the following staff engagement surveys:

Two separate "wave" surveys (designed to follow up our all-staff engagement survey undertaken in January/February 2006) were conducted in September 2006 and January 2007. Each wave survey targeted 25 per cent. of our staff. The total cost of both wave surveys was £12,409.38.

UKvisas carried out a staff engagement survey of UKvisas local staff in early 2007 at a cost of £3,719.81.

As part of its Investors in People accreditation the FCO carries out e-surveys. In tranche 1 (October/November 2006) the FCO conducted e-surveys covering 14 FCO departments and overseas posts. The cost was £2,453.

Within the last 12 months, FCO Services separately conducted an opinion survey of all its staff. Costs for the survey totalled £18,512, with supplementary reporting currently being undertaken at an estimated cost of £4,600.

Diplomatic Service

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the 10 largest missions abroad are; and how many (a) UK-based and (b) locally-engaged personnel are employed in each such mission. [145007]

Mr. Hoon: The 10 Foreign and Commonwealth Office missions overseas with the highest numbers of UK civil servants among their staff are:

Post	Number of UK-based staff	Number of locally engaged staff
Islamabad	145	446
Kabul	118	62
Beijing	115	182
New Delhi	108	512
UK Permanent Representation to the European Union (Brussels)	99	51
Lagos	86	332
Washington	77	197
Moscow	74	160
Paris	67	168
UK mission to the United Nations (New York)	53	43

The staffing of our posts overseas is subject to constant review, and regular change, to ensure that it continues to reflect our business priorities.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which UK diplomatic representation has been (a) downgraded and (b) ended since 1997. [145341]

Mr. Hoon: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 1 November 2006, Official Report, columns 467-68W. There have been no changes in our diplomatic representation since then.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office continuously reviews the deployment of its resources and aligns them flexibly in line with UK interests to benefit the British taxpayer.

Diplomatic Service: Crime

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many notifiable offences were committed by foreign diplomats based in London in 2006, broken down by (a) offence and (b) country of diplomatic status; and if she will make a statement. [144558]

Mr. Hoon: We were notified by the police of 126 alleged criminal offences committed in 2006 by the approximately 24,000 individuals entitled to diplomatic immunity in the UK. 15 of these alleged offences were serious offences that would, in certain circumstances, have carried a penalty of 12 months or more imprisonment. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary provided details of these alleged serious offences in her written ministerial statement of 20 June 2007, Official Report, columns 94-96WS. The following table lists the other alleged offences not included in my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's statement:

Egypt: Frontiers

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with her Egyptian counterpart on steps to secure its border with Gaza; and if she will make a statement. [145819]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary spoke with her Egyptian counterpart ahead of the Arab League Foreign Ministers meeting on 15 June. They discussed the current situation in Gaza including security. Our embassy in Cairo remains in close contact with the Egyptian Government on the situation in Gaza and on the border.

Entry Clearances: USA

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs under what circumstances US citizens may be denied entry to live in the UK by UK Visas. [144315]

Dr. Howells: US citizens will be refused entry clearance if they fail to satisfy the Entry Clearance Officer (ECO) that their application meets the criteria of the immigration rules. In all cases, other than applications for Family Reunion of recognised refugees, the ECO must be satisfied that there will be no recourse to public funds. The criteria vary according to the visa endorsement category applied for.

The full immigration rules regarding criteria of settlement applications are available on the Borders and Immigration Agency website at:

http://www.bia.homeoffice.gov.uk/lawandpolicy/iminigrationrules/

Eritrea: Religious Freedom

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the Eritrean Government on the detention of Christians, including children, in that country by the Eritrean Security Forces. [145465]

Mr. McCartney: The detention without charge by the Eritrean Government of members of minority religious groups, including Christians, is unacceptable and contravenes international human rights agreements to which Eritrea is a party.

We make our concerns about the human rights situation in Eritrea known to the Eritrean Government whenever appropriate, including by our ambassador in Asmara, and in contacts with the Eritrean ambassador and other senior Eritrean officials in London. We will continue to remind Eritrea of its human rights obligations, including through the EU political dialogue with Eritrea. The UK is in touch with the German Presidency of the EU and our other EU partners on human rights issues in Eritrea.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the Eritrean Government on reported human rights violations against Christians in that country; and if she will make a statement. [145466]

Mr. McCartney: The UK remains deeply concerned about Eritrea's human rights record. Actions against members of minority religious groups that contravene international human rights agreements to which Eritrea is a party are unacceptable.

We make our concerns about the human rights situation in Eritrea known to the Eritrean Government whenever appropriate, through contacts in Asmara and London. We will continue to remind Eritrea of its human rights obligations, including through the EU political dialogue with Eritrea. The UK is in touch with the German Presidency of the EU and our other EU partners on human rights issues in Eritrea.

Ethiopia: Politics and Government

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received of the recent conviction of members of the Coalition for Unity and Democracy in Ethiopia; what discussions she has had with her Ethiopian counterpart on these convictions; and if she will make a statement. [143080]

Margaret Beckett: On 11 June, judges in the trial of the Coalition for Unity and Democracy (CUD) leadership ruled that those members who chose not to defend themselves were all guilty of one or more charges brought against them by the prosecution. Sentencing is scheduled around 8 July. Cases for those who have chosen to defend themselves began on 18 June.

I have not discussed the convictions of the CUD leadership with my Ethiopian counterpart.

We are unable to interfere in the judicial affairs of other countries. However, we continue to monitor the ongoing trial of the CUD leadership. We urge the government and all political parties in Ethiopia to commit themselves to resolving their differences through dialogue.

European Union: Presidency Report

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reasons a copy of the report by the German presidency of the EU released on 19 June 2007 on the mandate for discussion at the summit was not placed in the Library on that day. [145005]

Mr. McCartney: The German presidency released a draft Inter-Governmental Conference mandate on the evening of 19 June. It is not normal practice to place in the Library of the House confidential documents that form part of on-going negotiations with European partners. This document formed part of discussions at the European Council, on which my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister made a statement to the House on 25 June.

As usual, a copy of the Council Conclusions will be deposited in the Library of the House after the European Council.

Famagusta

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her policy is on the status of (a) Famagusta and (b) the port at Famagusta. [145953]

Mr. Hoon: Over the years, Famagusta and the Port of Famagusta have been the subject of a series of proposals for confidence building measures. A 2004 proposal from the Government of Cyprus linked preferential Turkish Cypriot trade with the EU through the port of Famagusta, with the return of the closed city of Varosha. Since then, other attempts have been made by a number of EU presidencies to broker a deal. None has been successful. The apparent Turkish Cypriot position is that Varosha will only be returned as part of a comprehensive settlement. Such issues highlight the necessity of a comprehensive and durable settlement to the Cyprus problem.

Fiji: Diplomatic Service

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the safety of British diplomats in Fiji. [144483]

Mr. McCartney: We regularly review the physical and personal security measures for our high commission in Suva and its staff. We remain in close contact on security issues with colleagues at other diplomatic missions based in Suva. We also regularly review the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) Travel Advice for Fiji with the high commission.

Fiji: Elections

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received (a) on the likelihood of Fiji holding elections by March 2009 and (b) the restoration of democracy in Fiji. [145094]

Mr. McCartney: We receive regular reports on the situation in Fiji from our high commission in Suva and our posts elsewhere in the region. We also discuss Fiji with the EU, Australia, New Zealand and others.

On 18 April the Fiji interim government made a number of commitments to the EU under the terms of the Cotonou agreement. These commitments set out the steps for the return to democracy, including the holding of free and fair elections. Thereafter a team of independent consultants, nominated by the Pacific Islands Forum, released the results of an election feasibility study. The study concluded that elections could be held by March 2009. On 19 June, the Fiji interim government accepted this timetable.

We, with EU partners and others, will continue to monitor progress towards this.

Geneva Convention

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government take (a) to comply with Article 1 and (b) to prosecute breaches under Article 147 of the Fourth Geneva Convention. [145389]

Mr. McCartney: The United Kingdom has signed and ratified the Fourth Geneva Convention and complies with its provisions. Every appropriate opportunity is taken in our bilateral relations and through appropriate international bodies to promote respect for the convention and its articles.

The UK has enacted legislation (Geneva Conventions Act 1957, as amended) to enable prosecutions in respect of the grave breaches set out in article 147 in the UK. Alleged breaches of the convention relevant to the UK that are brought to our attention are investigated by the appropriate authorities. Prosecution decisions are made in accordance with criminal law principles by the appropriate prosecuting authority.

HMS Sussex

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether any progress has been made on recovering the wreckage of HMS Sussex off the coast of Gibraltar. [145565]

Mr. Hoon: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Derek Twigg), on 7 March 2007, Official Report, column 1985W. The situation remains the same.

Honours

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which Commonwealth countries have a policy seeking their prior approval before their citizens are gazetted for a UK honour; and if she will make a statement. [144401]

Dr. Howells: Substantive honours, which appear in the London Gazette, are only given to British citizens and nationals of Commonwealth countries of which Her Majesty The Queen is Head of State. We consult all Governments of the Realms prior to the award of the honour. Similarly, we consult all governments before making honorary British awards to citizens of Commonwealth countries where Her Majesty The Queen is not Head of State.

Ilois: Resettlement

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 238W, on Ilois: resettlement, whether she plans to petition the House of Lords for leave to appeal against the decision of the Court of Appeal on 23 May; and if she will make it her policy to abide by that decision. [145088]

Mr. Hoon: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary is considering the 23 May judgment of the Court of Appeal carefully and has in this regard asked officials for further advice. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary reserves the right to petition the House of Lords to grant permission to appeal, as she is entitled to do within one month. If she opts to petition the House of Lords and is granted leave to appeal, she would be bound by the decision handed down by the House of Lords as the final court of appeal, but this could not fetter other measures by the Government to address the decision.

The Government's policy in relation to the British Indian Ocean Territory therefore remains the subject of possible further legal proceedings and it would be inappropriate to comment further.

India: Work Permits

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the (a) terms of reference and (b) expected timescale are for the British high commission's investigation in India into possible abuses of the work permit system; and what plans she has to make the investigation report available to hon. Members. [145031]

Dr. Howells: There is no current investigation by our high commission in New Delhi into abuse of work permits. My hon. Friend may be referring to the independent investigation which commenced on 5 June to look into and report on the apparent security breach in respect of the online visa application facility operated by VFS Global on behalf of UKvisas.

The Independent Investigator's terms of reference require an investigation of the circumstances of the apparent, security breach and issues directly associated with it. The investigation will focus on the following key areas: the circumstances surrounding the apparent security breach of the online visa application facility; issues directly associated with this apparent security breach, including the scale of the problem and its likely significance for those who used the online facility during the relevant period; steps taken to address the security breach; and recommendations for further action that may be necessary to address the problem and the consequences thereof.

It is anticipated that the Independent Investigator will report to my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary by mid-to-late July. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary will thereafter publish the report and lay it before Parliament without amendment. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office will also take appropriate steps to ensure that others who should see the report and may have an interest in it will be provided with a copy of the report or have ready access to it.

Iraq: Peacekeeping Operations

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with her colleagues at the Ministry of Defence on how long she expects a British military presence to remain in Iraq; and if she will make a statement. [145510]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and my hon. Friend the Minister for the Middle East, (Dr. Howells) are in regular contact with our colleagues at the Ministry of Defence, and indeed with the Government of Iraq and our coalition partners, on the situation in Iraq. British forces are in Iraq at the invitation of the Iraqi Government and under a UN mandate. As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister told the House on 21 February 2007, they will remain in Iraq for as long as the Iraqi Government wishes us to be there and there is a job to be done. We remain committed to our strategy of building the capacity of the Iraqi security forces, so that lead responsibility for security can progressively be transferred to them.

Iraq: Religious Freedom

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the risk of violence against Christians in Iraq. [145212]

Mr. McCartney: We recognise that Christians in Iraq, like all other communities, have been badly affected by the high levels of violence in the country. We are aware of recent threats received by Christians from extremists in certain areas of Baghdad, in particular in Dora. We have raised this issue with the Iraqi government who are taking measures to increase security in that area. We continue to monitor the situation closely.

Ultimately the situation for Christians and other Iraqis will only improve when the security situation improves. We continue to work closely with the Government of Iraq and our coalition partners on this.

Iraq: Travel Restrictions

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what restrictions are in place on Iraqi citizens wishing to travel to the British Embassy in Amman, Jordan, to obtain a visa for travel to the UK; and if she will make a statement. [144783]

Dr. Howells: The Government do not place any restrictions on Iraqi nationals wishing to travel to our embassy in Amman to apply for a UK visa. Iraqi nationals entering Jordan from Iraq or elsewhere are subject to Jordan's customary entry procedures which are entirely a matter for the Jordanian authorities.

Israel: Frontiers

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will urge the Israeli Government to stop the construction of the fence/wall inside the west bank, including East Jerusalem. [145386]

Dr. Howells: We regularly raise our concerns about the routing of the barrier with the Israeli Government and will continue to do so. We fully recognise Israel's right to self-defence. But the barrier's route should be on or behind the green line, and not on occupied territory. Construction of the barrier on Palestinian land is illegal and is particularly damaging around East Jerusalem where it threatens to divide the west bank in two.

Israel: Palestinians

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make representations to Israel on its obligation as an occupying power to provide for the protection and welfare of the Palestinian population. [145387]

Dr. Howells: We regularly call upon Israel to abide by its international obligations in respect of the Occupied Palestinian Territories. We encourage it to ensure the continued provision of services to the people of Gaza, to facilitate humanitarian access and to keep the crossing points open. The humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territories underlines the need to maintain the current political processes.

Kashmir: Armed Conflict

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of civilians killed and injured in Jammu and Kashmir as a result of armed conflict since 1989; and if she will make a statement. [145584]

Dr. Howells: We are aware of a range of different estimates for the number of casualties and fatalities caused as a result of the conflict. Our high commissions in Islamabad and New Delhi monitor these carefully on a regular basis. We continue to urge both India and Pakistan to seek a lasting solution to the issue of Kashmir, which takes into account the wishes of the Kashmiri people. We condemn all violence which leads to loss of life or injuries.

Krill: Conservation

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government is taking to assist international conservation efforts with regard to Antarctic krill. [145555]

Mr. Hoon: The UK, led by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and supported by scientists from the British Antarctic Survey and Imperial College, plays a leading role in the Commission for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources (CCAMLR) which pioneered an ecosystem-based approach to fisheries management. CCAMLR recognises that krill play a central role in the Antarctic food web. It has therefore taken a number of significant steps, including imposing strict precautionary catch limits to avoid large catches of krill that could compromise the availability of food in key foraging areas of Antarctic fauna.

Krishna Maharaj

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the next hearing will take place in relation to the possibility of clemency for Mr. Krishna Maharaj in Florida. [144396]

Mr. McCartney: I understand that the next hearing in Krishna Maharaj's case will take place in August 2007. We are in close contact with Mr. Maharaj's legal team who we have asked to keep us informed of the exact date.

Languages: Education

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultation she conducted with foreign language (a) teaching and (b) using staff in (i) her and (ii) other departments on the decision to outsource her Department's language-teaching operation. [140408]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 21 June 2007]: In its review of language training provision, Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) Services consulted stakeholders, including senior language training managers. It decided in light of this work and a review of its wider activities that its language training operation was uneconomic and that it should withdraw from providing language training as it moved to Trading Fund status.

A separate FCO review of language training policy, which concluded that language training needed to be provided in different ways, involved consultation with users of language training services from the FCO and other Government Departments. Following that review, the decision was taken to outsource the language teaching operation.

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what account was taken of potential cost savings within the existing system for foreign language teaching before the decision was made to outsource the operation. [140409]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 21 June 2007]: Potential cost savings within the existing system for foreign language teaching were considered, including organising more group training, more intensive courses and more training overseas; but it was concluded that these changes could only support the conclusion of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Services review that maintaining a large permanent teaching workforce in London was not viable.

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what account was taken of the proportion of existing language teaching services that is outsourced in the decision to outsource the whole of the language teaching function. [140498]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 21 June 2007]: The decision to outsource was taken in order to obtain language training services more cost-effectively. More flexible provision of language teaching will improve efficiency. 40 per cent. of priority language training is already outsourced. Analysis of exam performance suggests that the performance of students is not enhanced by having a permanent workforce.

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what account was taken of the cost-saving changes and recommendations implemented following the language training review in the decision to outsource her Department's language teaching operation. [140624]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 21 June 2007]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answers I gave him today (UIN 140408 and 140409). Although the Foreign and Commonwealth Office review of language training policy made a number of potential cost-saving recommendations, it was concluded that the two reviews of this work and the policy underpinning it supported the strategic business decision to outsource.

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what cost-benefit analysis was undertaken of in-house specialised high-level language teaching in relation to (a) her Department and (b) other Government departments before the decision was made to out-source the operation. [140625]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 21 June 2007]: A detailed cost-benefit analysis was carried out in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) Services review, in relation to the competitiveness of FCO Services' language training for all its customers. FCO Services concluded that it would withdraw from providing these services, and the FCO decided in the light of this and its own review of the policy, that it should move to a new business model.

Members: Correspondence

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when she will respond to the (a) letter of 13 June 2006 and (b) e-mail of 29 January 2007 from the hon. Member for Birmingham, Northfield. [144986]

Dr. Howells: I apologise to my hon. Friend for the failure to respond to his letter dated 13 June 2006. This was due to an administrative error. However, I was pleased to meet with him and others from the Britain-Palestine All Party Group on 5 June to discuss relevant matters.

Middle East: Armed Conflict

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether she has discussed the current closure of the Karni crossing with her Israeli counterpart; and if she will make a statement. [145820]

Mr. McCartney: We remain concerned about the frequent closure of the Karni crossing point and call upon both parties to implement the 2005 Agreement on Movement and Access. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not had any recent discussions about the closure of the Karni crossing point with her Israeli counterpart. Officials from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office raised this with the Israeli embassy on 13 June.

Middle East: Peacekeeping Operations

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the (a) contribution of EUCOPPS to the promotion of law and order in Palestine and (b) constraints on the work of EUCOPPS caused by (i) conflict among Palestinian groups, (ii) actions of the government of Israel and (iii) policies pursued by the international community; and if she will make a statement. [145860]

Mr. McCartney: Created during the UK Presidency of the EU in 2005, the EU Police Mission for the Palestinian Territories (EUPOLCOPPS) was launched as a three-year European Security and Defence Policy mission on 1 January 2006. EUPOLCOPPS aims to assist in the implementation of the Palestinian Civil Police Development Plan, designed to support the development of a transparent and accountable Palestinian police force and to co-ordinate EU and—where requested—international assistance to the Palestinian Civil Police.

Following the election success of Hamas in January 2006, and the Quartet's statement to suspend all diplomatic and political contacts with and assistance to the newly elected government, the role of EUPOLCOPPS was seriously restricted and was unable to carry out its full mandate. During this period EUPOLCOPPS confined its activities to monitoring and maintenance of existing investments in the Palestinian Civil Police infrastructure, sustaining existing contacts in and around the Palestinian Civil Police and analysing and reporting on developments in the security sector.

We support the re-engagement of EUPOLCOPPS with the Palestinian Authority.

Middle East: Peace Negotiations

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will take steps to ensure that the Middle East peace process includes concrete provisions to address human rights issues. [145388]

Dr. Howells: We are concerned about the human rights situation in Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territories. The Roadmap and the relevant UN Security Council Resolutions do take into account human rights issues such as freedom of movement and settlements. We regularly raise human rights issues with the Israeli Government and the Palestinian Authority.

Nicosia: Immigration

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on why the Ledra Street checkpoint in Nicosia has not yet been opened. [144805]

Mr. Hoon: We strongly support the efforts of the UN to broker an agreement between the parties which would permit the symbolic Ledra Street crossing point to open. It would constitute a significant confidence-building measure between the two communities. This message was reinforced in the resolution on Cyprus adopted by the UN Security Council on 15 June. Although there have been positive gestures by both sides, key issues, including the demarcation of the buffer zone, remain. We continue to believe that the crossing point should be opened on the basis of arrangements used at existing crossing points and call upon all involved to extend their full co-operation to the UN.

Niger: Kidnapping

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with President Umaru Yar'Adua on the taking of hostages in the Niger Delta; and what recent advice her Department has issued for Britons working in the oil industry in the Niger Delta. [145096]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not had direct contact with President Yar'Adua on this.

My noble Friend Baroness Royall of Blaisdon told President Yar'Adua of our deep concern about the taking of British hostages and about the overall security situation in the Niger Delta, when she attended the President's inauguration on 29 May. She emphasised to him the need to secure the release of the five British nationals then held hostage peacefully and without recourse to military action. My hon. Friend the Minister of State for Immigration and Asylum (Mr. Byrne), raised the issue of British hostages in similar terms at a meeting with the Nigerian high commissioner on 13 June.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office travel advice for Nigeria was strengthened on 25 May to advise against all travel to three states in the Niger Delta. Following that change a further, consequential amendment was made on 8 June advising that it was unsafe for British nationals to remain in the three states concerned. These reflect the deterioration in the security situation in the Niger Delta since early 2006 and an increase in kidnappings of foreign nationals since 1 May. It stresses the very high risk of kidnapping, armed robbery and other armed attacks against oil and gas industry targets in the Niger Delta and offshore. Our high commissioner in Abuja has informed President Yar'Adua of the reasons for the raised level of travel advice.

Nigeria: Fraud

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in assisting the Nigerian authorities to develop the capacity to tackle e-mail fraud and other financial crime as referred to in the answer to the hon. Member for Huddersfield (Mr. Sheerman) of 23 November 2005, Official Report, column 2133W, on Nigeria. [144989]

Mr. McCartney: The UK and Nigerian authorities, including the British Police and the Nigerian Economic and Financial Crimes Commission (EFCC), have made significant progress on working together to tackle financial crime since 2005.

This co-operation is yielding results. The Metropolitan Police Proceeds of Corruption Unit has so far restrained £34.6 million of Nigerian assets, and nearly £5 million has been returned to the Nigerian authorities. For example, investigations into the finances of ex-governor of Bayelsa State, Diepreye Alamieyeseigha, resulted in almost £1 million being returned to Nigeria in July 2006. We have also been active in international fora. In 2005 the Foreign and Commonwealth Office provided the UN Office on Drugs and Crime with £240,000 for a three year project to strengthen the capacity of the EFCC. We were instrumental in securing European Commission support for US$ 24.7 million for the EFCC to provide equipment and technical support as well as to strengthen the capacity of the judicial system to prosecute in cases of economic and financial crimes, including e-mail fraud.

North Korea: Diplomatic Relations

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the main achievements of the UK diplomatic presence in North Korea over the last 12 months. [144997]

Mr. McCartney: Our embassy in Pyongyang has achieved a great deal despite the very difficult operating environment. Our ambassador and officials have been able both to put to Korean ministers our concerns about human rights in their country and to urge them to abandon their nuclear programme. As our embassy is the only representative of the P3 in Pyongyang our voice, especially on these issues, is particularly important.

North Korea: Nuclear Weapons

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received of North Korea's most recent testing of a short range ballistic missile into the Sea of Japan; and if she will make a statement. [145573]

Dr. Howells: The media reported on 19 June that North Korea had test-fired a short-range missile into the Sea of Japan.

We have since consulted our international partners and concluded that, contrary to initial media reporting, North Korea did not test fire any missiles on 19 June.

Recent media reporting on 21 June also reflected that North Korea did not conduct a missile test launch on 19 June.

Northern Cyprus

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent reports she has received of the (a) destruction of orthodox cultural heritage in Northern Cyprus, (b) demolition of houses belonging to Greek Cypriots in the Karpass area, (c) appropriaton of land belonging to Greek Cypriots in the northern part of Cyprus, (d) agreement of 8 July 2006 between President Papadopoulos and Mr. Talat, (e) opening of crossing points in Nicosia and Kato Pyrgos and (f) measures announced by the Government of the Republic of Cyprus on 21 May 2007 in relation to bi-communal programmes and enterprises. [145955]

Mr. Hoon: The Government are not able to prevent property development in northern Cyprus. We believe that the difficult and complex issue of property is only likely to be fully resolved in the context of a comprehensive settlement. In our contacts with the Turkish Cypriot leadership, we recognise the Turkish Cypriots' need for economic development in support of reunification. But we urge them to ensure that any property development that does take place does so in a manner that is both environmentally sustainable and does not complicate an eventual solution.

Similarly, we call on the Turkish Cypriot administration to show sensitivity to Greek Cypriot churches and cemeteries in the north. Our high commissioner in Nicosia visited the Karpas region on 22 June and raised such issues with his Turkish Cypriot interlocutors.

The 8 July 2006 agreement between the leaders of the two communities presented an opportunity to make progress towards a resumption of full settlement negotiations. Despite attempts since by the UN to implement this agreement no real progress has been made. We continue to urge both sides to show the political will and flexibility required to bridge the gap between words and deeds, and engage constructively with the efforts of the UN. Negotiations on a final political solution have been at an impasse for too long.

We consider that confidence-building measures, such as the opening of Ledra Street, and other crossing points, would help bring the two communities closer together. This message was reinforced in the resolution adopted by the UN Security Council on Cyprus on 15 June. The Security Council's resolution also expressed concern about the diminishing opportunities for bicommunal activity within Cyprus. As such, we hope that the announcement by the Republic of Cyprus of a package of measures to address this will promote reconciliation between the communities.

Occupied Territories

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether she held discussions with EU partners in the week commencing 18 June on Israeli settlement building on the E1 plan and elsewhere in the West Bank; and if she will make a statement. [145810]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary did not hold any discussions about settlement activity in the West Bank with her EU counterparts in the week commencing 18 June.

Settlements are illegal under international law and settlement activity is an obstacle to peace. The Roadmap is clear that Israel should freeze all settlement construction including the "natural growth" of existing settlements, and dismantle all outposts built since 2001. The EU will not recognise any changes to the pre-1967 borders other than those agreed by both parties. We support this. Our Ambassador in Tel Aviv raised our concerns about settlement activity with Israeli Foreign Minister Livni on 28 May.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether she held discussions with the government of Israel in the week commencing 18 June on the demolition or planned demolition by Israel of homes in the Occupied Palestinian Territories; and if she will make a statement. [145811]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not discussed house demolitions with the Israeli government in the week commencing 18 June.

Punitive house demolitions—the demolition of the homes of the families of suicide bombers and militants—were suspended on 17 February 2005. However, due to Israeli restrictions on the granting of housing permits to Palestinians in Jerusalem, Palestinians often build houses without obtaining permits. These homes are then demolished and heavy fines imposed. We are concerned about Israel's policy of house demolitions, especially in East Jerusalem, which leaves hundreds of Palestinians homeless each year and threatens to change the nature of some areas of the city. We have repeatedly raised our concerns with the Israeli authorities.

Occupied Territories: Exports

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether she held discussions with the government of Israel during the week commencing 18 June on the (a) labelling and (b) claiming of trade preferences on goods produced in Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territories and imported to the EU; and if she will make a statement. [145858]

Dr. Howells: The Government have not had any discussions with the Government of Israel on these issues during the week commencing 18 June.

Under a technical arrangement adopted by the EU-Israel Customs Co-operation Committee on 12 December 2004 all imports from Israeli Settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territories and claiming Israeli preferential origin have been required since 1 February 2005 to indicate the place of production and accompanying zip code. The full rate of customs duty is payable on any consignment which is indicated as originating in a settlement.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether she held discussions with EU partners during the week commencing 18 June 2007 regarding the effectiveness of EU arrangements for monitoring the importing into the EU of goods produced in Israeli settlements built in the Palestinian territories but labelled as made in Israel; and if she will make a statement. [145862]

Mr. McCartney: EU Foreign Ministers did not discuss settlement goods at the EU General Affairs and External Relations Council on 18 June.

Pakistan Institute of Medical Sciences: Christianity

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the Pakistani Government on the suspension of Christian students and teaching staff at the Pakistan Institute of Medical Sciences nursing school in Rawalpindi. [145867]

Dr. Howells: We do not usually raise individual cases and have not made representations about the suspension of students and staff at the nursing school in Rawalpindi. However, we do regularly raise our concerns over the difficult situation facing Christian and other minority groups with the Government of Pakistan. Most recently, in May, we again voiced our concerns over the treatment of religious minorities in Pakistan, together with our EU partners.

Pakistan: Honours

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the security of British nationals in Pakistan following statements by Pakistani Ministers on Her Majesty the Queen's Birthday Honours. [145933]

Mr. McCartney: In all parts of the world, we monitor local events that may affect British nationals. Where necessary, we change our travel advice to reflect the situation. We are following events closely in Pakistan and changed the travel advice on 19 June to reflect the fact that anti-UK protests and demonstrations might take place.

Palestinians: Arms Trading

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what military equipment has been provided by the UK to President Abbas's security forces; and if she will make a statement. [145818]

Mr. McCartney: In 2005-06, we provided non-lethal equipment to the Palestinian Authority security forces. This included close protection equipment for the Palestinian Presidential Guard and the upgrading and maintenance of communications equipment.

Palestinians: Overseas Aid

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether her Department has offered (a) financial and (b) other support to the President of the Palestinian Authority, Mahmoud Abbas; and if she will make a statement. [145569]

Dr. Howells: We continue to support Palestinian President Abbas. At the EU General Affairs and External Relations Council on 18 June, the EU agreed to resume normal relations with the Palestinian Authority and are looking urgently at direct financial support to the government; support to the Palestinian Civilian Police through the resumption of the EU Police Mission for the Palestinian Territories (EUPOLCOPPS); the resumption of EU Border Assistance Mission Rafah (EUBAM RAFAH); and intensive efforts to build the institutions of the future Palestinian state. The UK has seconded staff to EUPOLCOPPS and the EUBAM RAFAH. In addition, we have provided non-lethal equipment to the Presidential Guard and radio equipment to the Palestinian Civil Police.

We support President Abbas' efforts to move the peace process forward. The Quartet (EU, US, UN and Russia) have also given their full support to President Abbas.

Palestinians: Political Discussions

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the (a) United Nations, (b) European Union and (c) Arab League on the current situation in the Palestinian occupied territories; and if she will make a statement. [145017]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has been actively engaged in discussions on the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territories.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary spoke with Palestinian President Abbas and US Secretary of State Rice on 14 June as well as the Egyptian, Omani and Qatari Foreign Ministers ahead of the Arab League Foreign Ministers meeting on 15 June. She also discussed the current situation with her European counterparts at the EU General Affairs and External Relations Council on 18 June. She has not recently discussed the issue with the UN Secretary-General, although Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials are in regular contact with their UN counterparts.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the government of Israel in the week commencing 18 June on the situation in the West Bank and Gaza; and if she will make a statement. [145859]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territories with Israeli Foreign Minister Livni on 18 June. In the week commencing 18 June, our Ambassador in Tel Aviv had extensive discussions with the Israeli Prime Minister's Office, Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Ministry of Defence, among others.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what discussions she had with EU partners in the week commencing 18 June on the situation in the West Bank and Gaza; and if she will make a statement; [145861]

(2) whether she held discussions with the government of Israel during the week commencing 18 June 2007 on the future of the EU-Israel Association agreement; and if she will make a statement; [145863]

(3) whether she held discussions with the government of Israel in the week commencing 18 June 2007 on the impact of Israel's actions on the effectiveness of association agreements between the EU and Palestine; and if she will make a statement; [145865]

(4) whether she held discussions with EU partners during the week commencing 18 June 2007 on the EU-Israel Association agreement; and if she will make a statement. [145866]

Mr. McCartney: At the EU General Affairs and External Relations Council on 18 June my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, along with other EU Foreign Ministers, discussed the peace process with Israeli Foreign Minister Livni. They discussed the current situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territories and next steps. There was no discussion of the EU-Israel Association Agreement.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she had with the (a) Palestine Liberation Organisation and (b) Palestinian Authority in the week commencing 18 June on the situation in the West Bank and Gaza; and if she will make a statement. [145864]

Mr. McCartney: Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials at our Consulate-General in Jerusalem are in regular contact with members of the Palestine Liberation Organisation and the Palestinian Authority.

Project Al-Yamamah

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 15 June 2007, Official Report, column 1377W, on Project Al-Yamamah, whether the Economic Counsellor gave a written submission to the Government when he met her Department's officials on 19 January 2007 to discuss the termination of the Serious Fraud Office's investigations; and if she will make a statement. [144612]

Margaret Beckett: The Economic Counsellor from the US embassy gave no written submission on this subject, which was not the main topic of the meeting, when he met with Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials on 19 January.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 15 June 2007, Official Report, column 1377W, on Project Al-Yamamah, whether she has discussed the issue with her US counterpart; and if she will make a statement. [145111]

Margaret Beckett: There have been no discussions between Foreign and Commonwealth Office Ministers and US counterparts. But my officials have regular contact with their US counterparts at Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development meetings.

Robert Mugabe

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Stroud of 23 May 2007, Official Report, column 1315W, on Robert Mugabe, what reports she has received on the intentions of the Government of Uganda with respect to inviting President Mugabe to the next Commonwealth Heads of Government; and if she will make a statement. [145174]

Mr. McCartney: President Mugabe withdrew Zimbabwe from the Commonwealth in 2003. Until it rejoins, we do not expect him to be invited to, or to attend, the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting.

Russia: Arms Trade

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with her Russian counterparts on reducing the trade in small arms to Africa; and if she will make a statement. [145576]

Mr. Hoon: The UK continually engages with the international community, including Russia, to improve international standards of arms exports and highlight the devastating effect of poorly regulated arms exports, particularly on sustainable development.

While no specific bilateral discussions have taken place on small arms and light weapons exports and transfers to Africa, regular senior official level talks are held with Russia on export control issues. The most recent meeting was held in London in May. At this meeting, we restated the UK's commitment to improving transfer standards for small arms and light weapons and encouraged Russian participation at a Canadian sponsored meeting in August, which will discuss transfer controls in the context of the UN Programme of Action (to prevent, combat and eradicate the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects). We also encouraged Russian engagement in the UN process, now underway, to take forward the initiative for an Arms Trade Treaty, which will cover the trade in small arms and light weapons.

Russia: British Council

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what assessment she has made of the activities of the Russian authorities towards the work of the British Council in Russia; and if she will make a statement; [145112]

(2) whether she has raised the treatment of the British Council in Russia with her Russian counterpart; and if she will make a statement; [145113]

(3) what assessment she has made of the progress towards the conclusion of a new Cultural Centres Agreement with Russia; and if she will make a statement; [145114]

(4) what discussions she has had with her European Union counterparts on the (a) treatment of the British Council in Russia and (b) progress towards the conclusion of a new Cultural Centres Agreement; what the outcome was of those discussions; and if she will make a statement. [145115]

Mr. McCartney: The British Council has been present in Russia for many years,, during which it has enjoyed the support of federal ministries, local authorities and officials for activities in the fields of education, language training, scientific co-operation, culture and the arts. Hundreds of thousands of people across Russia have been able to benefit from the activities of the British Council network.

More recently the British Council in Russia has experienced a number of legal., administrative and practical difficulties. The British Council has sought to comply with the demands of the authorities, for example in respect of taxation and other regulations, despite difficulties caused by the lack of clear legal status. Most recently a series of tax inspections in Moscow and across the network was launched and the British Council are providing information requested by the inspectors.

We have pressed the Russians to resolve uncertainties about the legal status of the British Council in Russia by concluding a new Cultural Centres Agreement, taking the place of a 1994 Agreement on Co-operation in the Fields of Education, Science and Culture. The absence of an updated Agreement is causing difficulties for some regional British Council centres established in co-operation with local partners and authorities. A text was agreed at official level with Russia in 2001. In March 2006, Russia submitted a revised text. Productive negotiations with the Russian Foreign Ministry in January brought the text of a new Cultural Centres Agreement very close to conclusion. However, the Russian authorities have been reluctant to guarantee consent, under the terms of the Agreement, for the British Council to establish centres (which already exist as their current network of offices), outside Moscow. We await the Russian authorities' reply to our outstanding proposals for finalising the text, which we hope can lead to a quick and satisfactory outcome.

These issues are raised frequently with the Russian authorities at both Ministerial and official levels. Our Embassy in Moscow keeps EU colleagues informed of developments in the course of regular meetings in Moscow.

Salman Rushdie

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the government of Pakistan on the reported views of its Minister of Religious Affairs on Sir Salman Rushdie; and if she will make a statement. [145340]

Dr. Howells: Our high commissioner in Islamabad raised deep concerns about the reported comments made by Pakistan's Minister for Religious Affairs with the Government of Pakistan on 19 June. We would strongly condemn any statement of this nature. It is clear that nothing can justify suicide bomb attacks.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Government of Pakistan on action by the Pakistani national assembly in response to the awarding of a knighthood to Salman Rushdie; and if she will make a statement. [145821]

Dr. Howells: Our high commissioner in Islamabad discussed the resolution passed by Pakistan's National Assembly, demanding that we withdraw Sir Salman Rushdie's knighthood, with the Government of Pakistan on 19 June. He stressed that Sir Salman's knighthood is a reflection of his contribution to literature throughout a long and distinguished career which has seen him receive international recognition for a substantial body of work, and stressed that the knighthood was not intended as an insult to Islam or the Prophet Muhammad.

Somalia

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 8 January 2007, Official Report, columns 9-10W, on Somalia, whether any progress has been made in (a) strengthening and (b) improving the implementation of the UN arms embargo against Somalia; and what proposals the UK has put forward in this respect. [143950]

Margaret Beckett: The Government strongly support the comprehensive UN arms embargo for Somalia. We sponsored UN Security Council Resolution 1744, adopted unanimously by the UN Security Council on 20 February, which reiterates the Council's demand that all states comply with the arms embargo. The resolution also stipulated certain conditions for exemptions to the embargo for the African Union's Mission to Somalia and for support to the Somali Transitional Federal Institutions. We continue to support the UN Monitoring Committee in its work to observe and report on compliance with the embargo. The UK will continue to consider, in consultation with its partners in the UN, what steps might be taken by the Security Council to ensure maximum compliance with the embargo.

Somalia: Peacekeeping Operations

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance the UK is providing to the deployment of the African Union Mission to Somalia; and if she will make a statement. [143776]

Margaret Beckett: The Government believe that a successful deployment of an African Union (AU) Mission in Somalia (AMISOM) will make a vital contribution to ensuring lasting stability in Somalia. The UK has offered planning and logistical support for a Somalia planning cell within the AU's Peace and Security Operations Division in Addis Ababa. The UK has also offered planning, logistical and financial assistance direct to troop contributing countries, including up to £1.3 million to Uganda.

We also strongly supported the early disbursement of the EU's contribution of €15 million to AMISOM, which is currently being processed.

Sri Lanka: Politics and Government

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the Government of Sri Lanka on the expulsion from Colombo of 376 ethnic Tamils; and if she will make a statement. [145146]

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave my right hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Keith Vaz) on 19 June 2007, Official Report, column 1611W.

The evictions and the reports of human rights violations and civilian deaths in Sri Lanka are a reflection of the deteriorating human rights situation in the country. They can only serve to harden attitudes among the affected communities both in Sri Lanka and overseas.

Sudan: International Assistance

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 249W, on Sudan: international assistance, what discussions have been held with the representatives of countries that have yet to fulfil their pledges of assistance to the African Union in Sudan; and if she will make a statement. [145823]

Mr. McCartney: We have lobbied the Arab League and several of its key members regularly over the last year on the need to honour fully the commitments previously made to provide funds to the African Union (AU) Mission in the Sudan (AMIS). We have also lobbied other potential donors in the EU, major contributors to the UN's peacekeeping budget and major trading partners of Sudan to contribute towards the costs of AMIS.

We have had extensive discussions with the European Commission over the use of previous and future funds from the Africa Peace Facility for AMIS. We have pressed the European Commission to help the AU to produce the financial reporting required to release additional Commission funds for AMIS.

Sudan: Peacekeeping Operations

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on the composition of the peacekeeping troops for the AU-UN force in Darfur; and whether they are to be exclusively or predominantly from African Union member states. [144480]

Mr. McCartney: Troops for the African Union (AU)-UN force in Darfur have not yet been generated. We are pressing both the AU and UN to ensure force generation happens as soon as possible. Troops will be drawn first from African countries and if there are not sufficient African troops available, the UN will source troops from non-African countries. The AU and UN have agreed that

'all efforts will be made to ensure that the peacekeeping force will have a predominantly African character'.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what date has been agreed with the Sudanese Government for the (a) initial and (b) full deployment of the AU-UN hybrid force. [145814]

Mr. McCartney: The Sudanese Government agreed to deployment of the African Union (AU)-UN hybrid force for Darfur on 12 June. The AU and UN have not yet set a date for deployment and we do not expect them to do so until the UN Security Council has passed a resolution mandating the force. We are pressing both the AU and UN to deploy the hybrid mission as soon as possible. At the enlarged international conference on Sudan in Paris today, attended by my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham,, the UN Secretary-General's team anticipated deployment of the heavy support package for the AU during the autumn, and that it would form the basis of the hybrid force shortly thereafter.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans are in place for the funding of the AU-UN hybrid force recently accepted by the Sudanese Government. [145815]

Mr. McCartney: The hybrid force will be funded by the UN. The UN will also fully fund the light and heavy support packages for the African Union Mission in Sudan (AMIS). Until the hybrid force deploys, AMIS funding will continue to come through voluntary contributions from donors.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what timescale is envisaged for the deployment of the AU-UN hybrid force recently accepted by the Sudanese Government; and what agreements have been reached on (a) the composition of its troops and (b) the chain of command. [145816]

Mr. McCartney: The UN and African Union (AU) are still negotiating the timetable for the deployment of the joint AU-UN hybrid force for Darfur accepted by the Sudanese Government on 12 June. We are pressing both parties to agree on the earliest possible date. The heavy support package to be deployed this autumn will form the initial core of the hybrid force.

Troops will be drawn first from African countries and if there are not sufficient African troops available, the UN will source troops from non-African countries. The AU and UN have agreed that 'all efforts will be made to ensure that the peacekeeping force will have a predominantly African character'.

The new AU Mission in the Sudan Force Commander, Nigerian General Agwai, will take over as force commander of the hybrid mission when it deploys. He will report to the newly appointed Joint Special Representative, Rodolphe Adada, who reports to both the UN and AU.

Sudan: Politics and Government

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on the nature of the death of the former Sudanese Vice President. [145184]

Mr. McCartney: It was with great shock and sadness that we learned of the death of Sudanese first Vice President Dr. John Garang in a helicopter crash on 30 July 2005. Dr. Garang was returning from an official visit to Uganda when the helicopter he was travelling in crashed south of New Kush in bad weather. Seven crew and six other passengers were also killed.

In April 2006 the joint Ugandan/Sudanese panel sent a final report into the cause of the crash to Sudanese President Bashir. This report said that pilot error had been to blame. The report was accepted both by the National Congress Party and the Sudan People's Liberation Movement.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on the recent deaths at the Kajbar Dam in Sudan. [145185]

Mr. McCartney: During protests on 13 June against the building of a new dam in the Kajbar area of Northern State, the Sudanese police appear to have used excessive force against demonstrators, killing four people and leaving at least ten injured. Following the incident, the Deputy Governor of Northern State and the local Commissioner of Kajbar tendered their resignations.

We, and EU partners, expressed our concern about this incident to the Government of Sudan during the meeting of the EU-Sudan dialogue on Human Rights on 21 June. The Government said that they had sent a team to Kajbar to investigate the event. We urged them to conduct this investigation quickly and hold those responsible for these tragic events to account.

Four journalists attempting to cover the protests were also arrested and detained by security forces. We welcome their release on 19 June but continue to press the Government of Sudan, including through the EU-Sudan dialogue, to respect freedom of the media as enshrined in the Comprehensive Peace Agreement.

Sudan: Peace Negotiations

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with her French counterpart on that Government's proposal for an international peace conference for Darfur; and if she will make a statement. [145813]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has discussed Darfur with the French Foreign Minister, including the international conference on Darfur held in Paris today at which my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, represented the UK. The French Foreign Minister then wrote to my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to explain the objective for the meeting was to strengthen the international focus and activity on Darfur and give the African Union/UN strong international support We welcome this initiative. My noble Friend Lord Triesman visited Paris on 18 June to discuss with the French Government how to revitalise the political process in Darfur and keep pressure on the Government of Sudan and rebels to honour their commitments.

Terrorism

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with her counterpart in Saudi Arabia on tackling the expansion of Islamic (a) extremism and (b) terrorist activity in the Gulf region. [145516]

Mr. McCartney: Saudi Arabia is one of the UK's key counter-terrorism partners. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary last met her Saudi opposite number, Prince Saud, in May, and we continue to enjoy a high level of bilateral co-operation, including on issues relating to counter-terrorism, at both ministerial and senior official level. Saudi Arabia plays a vital role, both regionally and internationally, in the global response to the terrorist threat, including countering extremism and the disruption of terrorist networks on its own territory.

Thailand: Terrorism

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received of fundamentalist Islamist forces setting schools on fire in Southern Thailand. [144484]

Mr. McCartney: Since the outbreak of serious violence in January 2004 there have been regular attacks on teachers and schools in the three southern Thai border provinces of Yala, Pattani and Narathiwat. According to recent Thai Education Ministry statistics nearly 200 schools have been burnt down, 75 teachers, administrators and staff killed and 91 injured in this period. Schools in the three provinces are frequently closed for security reasons. The authorities have blamed a number of separatist and terrorist groups for the majority of the attacks.

Tibet: Press Freedom

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps she is taking to press for journalists' free access to Tibet during the 2008 Olympic Games. [145047]

Mr. McCartney: At the last round of the UK-China Human Rights Dialogue on 5 February, the Chinese Government confirmed that the new regulations for foreign correspondents, implemented on 1 January, applied to Tibet. However, as with all visitors to Tibet, journalists must still seek permission to enter the region from the local authorities. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister encouraged greater media freedom with the head of the Chinese Information Office for the State Council in April. We continue to urge China to lift its restrictions on freedom of expression both before and after the Olympics and to protect the rights of its domestic media.

Tibet: Railways

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent reports she has received on the implications for the Tibetan people of the opening of the railway to Lhasa. [145033]

Mr. McCartney: The Chinese Government maintain the Qinghai-Lhasa railway is helping to boost the local economy, particularly through its contribution to a growth in tourism in Tibet. We welcome Tibet's economic development, but are concerned that it should take account of the wishes of the local Tibetan population and that they should benefit from it. We regularly raise Tibet-related concerns with the Chinese Government and did so most recently at the UK-China Human Rights Dialogue on 5 February.

Uganda: Armed Conflict

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contingency plans she has to evacuate British nationals from Uganda should the situation in the country deteriorate (a) before and (b) during the Commonwealth meeting; and if she will make a statement. [145168]

Mr. McCartney: Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) Missions overseas where appropriate routinely prepare civil contingency plans if there is a risk in their host countries (e.g. from civil disorder or a natural disaster) that could lead to an evacuation of British nationals. In compiling civil contingency plans, the FCO's objective is to protect British nationals in a situation that poses a serious threat to their safety, and in a worst case scenario, to assist their departure to a place of safety.

Like many other British diplomatic posts, our high commission in Kampala holds a civil contingency plan, which is reviewed and tested annually.

The FCO Travel Advice provides information on the risks faced by British nationals when travelling overseas, and is updated on a regular basis. British nationals intending to travel to Uganda should regularly check the Travel Advice up to their date of departure. An easy way to do this is to subscribe at www.fco.gov.uk/travel to receive free Travel Advice updates through email alerts.

Uganda: Elections

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what assessment she has made of the likelihood of (a) free and fair elections in Uganda in 2011 and (b) implementation of the recommendations of the European Union and Commonwealth Election Observers in that country; and if she will make a statement; [145173]

(2) what discussions she has had with Commonwealth representatives on the implementation of their election observer recommendations for the Ugandan authorities; and if she will make a statement. [145176]

Mr. McCartney: We have a regular dialogue with the Government of Uganda on all aspects of developing multi-party democracy and engaging with the opposition, building towards the next elections in 2011. We will press for the elections to be free and fair, and build on the recommendations made by the international observer groups following the 2006 elections.

We also continue to have high level contacts with the Commonwealth Secretariat and EU partners on a range of issues in Uganda, including political governance and deepening democracy.

I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave to the my hon. Friend the Member for Stroud (Mr. Drew) on 23 May 2007, Official Report, column 1316W, and 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 251W.

UN Human Rights Council

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on proposals to abolish the UN Human Rights Council envoy posts charged with reporting on (a) Belarus, (b) Cuba, (c) North Korea, (d) Burma, (e) Somalia, (f) Sudan and (g) Uzbekistan. [145817]

Mr. McCartney: When the UN Human Rights Council was established in March 2006, it was tasked with reviewing its tools and mechanisms, including its so-called Special Procedures (for example Special Rapporteurs and Independent Experts dedicated to specific country situations). On 18 June, the Council agreed a package of measures at the conclusion of this review. Throughout the review the UK consistently took a strong position, nationally and with the rest of the EU, in favour of maintaining all the existing country-specific and thematic Special Procedures. There was a great deal of opposition at the Council to the continuation of country-specific Special Procedures. I was profoundly disappointed that, because of this opposition, the mandates of the Special Rapporteurs on the human rights situations in Cuba and Belarus were not renewed. The situations in both those countries continue to be of deep concern and we will continue to monitor the situation in each closely. I was, however, pleased that the mandates of all the other country-specific Special Procedures (including the Special Rapporteurs on the situation of human rights in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Burma and Sudan, and the Independent Expert appointed by the UN Secretary-General on the situation of human rights in Somalia) were renewed.

The Council inherited an Independent Expert on the human rights situation in Uzbekistan, created through the confidential complaints procedure under the old UN Commission on Human Rights. At its fourth session (12-30 March) the UN Human Rights Council discontinued consideration of the specific file relating to Uzbekistan under its confidential complaints procedure. The confidential nature of that procedure prevents us from commenting on any details of the cases and on the position taken by the UK. We do, however, emphasise strongly our deep concern over persistent violations of human rights in Uzbekistan.

The Council also agreed on 18 June a new system of universal periodic review, which will look at every state's individual work on human rights implementation, including Cuba's and Uzbekistan's.

USA: Ministerial Visits

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which Members of the Government expect to make an official visit to (a) Florida and (b) the USA before the end of August. [144395]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and my hon. Friend the Minister for the Middle East, Kim Howells, are both visiting Washington between 24 and 25 June. There are no other confirmed visits to the United States scheduled before the end of August by Members of the Government.

Visas: Administration

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many refusal stamps erroneously issued by UKvisas were removed in each of the last five years. [144316]

Dr. Howells: The information requested by the hon. Member is not recorded by UKvisas.

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many administrative errors involving the erroneous issuing of visas by UKvisas were detected in each of the last five years. [144317]

Dr. Howells: The information requested by the hon. Member is not recorded by UKvisas.

Western Sahara

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with her (a) Moroccan counterparts and (b) counterparts at the United Nations on the disputed area of Western Sahara; and if she will make a statement. [145566]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not discussed the Western Sahara with her Moroccan or UN counterparts, but my hon. Friend the Minister for the Middle East (Dr. Howells), has discussed the issue with Moroccan ministers twice this year, in February and April, and UK officials in New York are in regular contact with the UN and representatives of the parties to the dispute.

The UK regards the status of Western Sahara as undetermined, pending UN efforts to find a solution. To this end, the UK fully supports the efforts of the UN Secretary-General and his Personal Envoy to the Western Sahara, Peter Van Walsum, to assist the parties to achieve a just, lasting and mutually acceptable political solution, which will provide for the self determination of the people of Western Sahara.

On 30 April the UN Security Council, chaired by the UK, adopted UN Security Council Resolution 1754, which took note of Morocco's proposal presented to the UN Secretary-General on 11 April, and called for both sides to enter into negotiations without preconditions.

The UK welcomes the first round of these talks between Morocco, the Polisario, and their neighbours, hosted by the UN on 18-19 June and the agreement by all parties to take part in a further round in August.

Whales

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with her (a) Japanese and (b) Icelandic counterparts on reducing and stopping the hunting of whales in international waters. [145517]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had no recent discussions with her Japanese or Icelandic counterparts on whaling. However, our Ambassadors raise the subject frequently with their host governments. Most recently our Ambassador in Tokyo discussed the issue with the Japanese Foreign Ministry in December 2006 and our Ambassador in Reykjavik raised the issue with the Icelandic Minister of Foreign Affairs on 6 June, the Minister of Fisheries and Agriculture on 12 June and with the Icelandic Minister of the Environment on 13 June.

Yemen: Terrorism

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking to assist the Yemeni government in fighting terrorism. [145518]

Mr. McCartney: We maintain a wide-ranging dialogue with the Government of Yemen including on issues relating to counter terrorism (CT). We are supporting the Yemeni government in developing its CT capability, for example the provision of training for the nascent national coastguard. My hon. Friend the Minister for the Middle East, (Dr. Howells), has made two visits to Yemen, in January 2006 and 2007; on both occasions, he expressed the hope that our bilateral CT exchanges would continue to develop.

Younis Masih

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the Pakistani Government on the death sentence for blasphemy imposed on Younis Masih. [145868]

Dr. Howells: We have not recently made any representations to the Pakistani authorities concerning Younis Masih. However, we are aware of this case and continue to follow developments closely. We regularly raise our concerns about the treatment of religious minorities in Pakistan, both bilaterally and with our EU partners. We oppose the death penalty in all circumstances as a matter of principle.

Yu Lam Chan

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further steps she plans to take on the case of joint UK/Chinese citizen Mr. Yu Lam Chan, imprisoned in China. [139862]

Mr. McCartney: The Chinese authorities continue to deny UK officials consular access to Mr. Yu Lam Chan as they consider him to be a Chinese national in China. The Director for Consular Services in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office raised this case with his Chinese counterpart on 5 June and we will continue to raise our concerns over Mr. Yu Lam Chan's health and welfare with the Chinese authorities at every appropriate opportunity.

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her most recent assessment is of the medical condition of UK citizen Mr. Yu Lam Chan, imprisoned in China. [139864]

Mr. McCartney: Consular officials do not have first hand knowledge of Mr. Yu Lam Chan's medical conditions, as they are not permitted access to him. However, officials do maintain contact with family members and we have made clear our concerns to the Chinese authorities regarding Mr. Yu Lam Chan's health and welfare. The Chinese authorities assure us that he is receiving appropriate treatment for his illnesses.

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Mr. Yu Lam Chan has at any time been employed by the British Government in any capacity. [139866]

Mr. McCartney: Mr. Yu Lam Chan is currently serving a prison sentence in China on charges of espionage. It is the long-standing policy of the Government not to comment on intelligence allegations.

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contact she has had with the UN High Commission for Refugees on the case of Mr. Yu Lam Chan, a British citizen imprisoned in China. [139867]

Mr. McCartney: The Government have had no contact with the UN High Commissioner for Refugees on this case.

Zimbabwe: Politics and Government

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports she has received on meetings held in South Africa between Zanu-PF and the Movement for Democratic Change. [145121]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister discussed the progress of the Southern African Development Community initiative with President Mbeki during his recent visit to South Africa. We have welcomed Mbeki's commitment to encourage internal dialogue between the parties in Zimbabwe. It is important that the dialogue addresses ongoing problems of governance, the need for a wider democratic space and respect for human rights, as well as preparing the ground for free and fair elections in Zimbabwe in March 2008. We will continue to keep in close touch with the South Africans and others in the region as the talks between ZANU-PF and the Movement for Democratic Change continue.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the Government of Uganda on President Museveni's (a) support for President Mugabe's land policies and (b) statement that Britain was responsible for the economic and social problems in Zimbabwe; and if she will make a statement. [145178]

Mr. McCartney: We have not made specific representations to the Government of Uganda on these issues. However our high commissioner in Kampala lobbied the Ugandan Ministry of Foreign Affairs in March to seek support for an EU Statement at the UN Human Rights Council condemning recent human rights abuses in Zimbabwe. Following this and other exchanges, the Government of Uganda will be aware of our wider policy on Zimbabwe.

HEALTH

Accident and Emergency Departments: Closures

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her Department's practice is on consulting other Government Departments before deciding on the closure of (a) accident and emergency departments and (b) maternity units; and which other Departments are consulted in each case. [144980]

Andy Burnham: Any proposals for major changes are a matter for the national health service locally in conjunction with local stakeholders. Changes to local health services are subject to full public consultation.

Accident and Emergency Departments: Sussex

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the most recent waiting time levels were in accident and emergency departments in all Sussex hospitals. [145833]

Andy Burnham: The Department does not collect accident and emergency (A&E) waiting time data at individual hospital level. Information is available at trust level. The following table provides the percentage of patients spending under four hours between arrival in A&E and admission, transfer or discharge for the latest period for which data have been published.

Agency Nurses

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the expenditure by the NHS on temporary nursing in each of the last seven years; and what proportion of expenditure on nurses this represents. [145469]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is as follows:

Nursing, midwifery and health visiting staff costs

	NHS paybill	Non-NHS paybill[1]	Proportion of total (percentage)
1999-2000	7,330,271,609	361,656,683	4.7

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effect on patient safety of temporary nursing in the NHS. [145470]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is the responsibility of national health service trusts to assess the effect on patient safety of temporary nursing in the NHS. Staff provided by NHS Professionals, are subject to the same stringent checks as any other substantive employee and as set out in the NHS Employers' document "Safer Recruitment—A Guide for NHS Employers". In addition, nursing agencies, on the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency Framework Agreements, are audited on an annual basis.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to help NHS trusts (a) plan and (b) manage their demand for temporary nursing staff. [145471]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is the responsibility of national health service trusts to plan and manage their demand for temporary nursing staff in the context of local business and workforce planning. NHS Professionals can play a significant role in assisting trusts manage their demand whilst maintaining quality and achieving value for money.

Ambulance Services

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will publish the Ambulance Trust performance data for 2006-07. [145639]

Andy Burnham: The information requested was published by the Information Centre for health and social care on 21 June 2007 and can be accessed at:

www.ic.nhs.uk/statistics-and-data-collections/audits-and-performance/ambulance.

The Information Centre for health and social care will produce printed copies of "Ambulance Services, England 2006-2007" shortly and copies will be placed in the Library once they are available.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of whether emergency medical technicians are able to deliver the same level of care as paramedics in the case of callouts to patients with epilepsy and cerebral palsy. [145666]

Andy Burnham: The treatment administered to a patient with cerebral palsy would depend on the primary illness, symptoms or injury that they presented with rather than necessarily the underlying condition. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 6 June 2007, Official Report, column 559W, in which I provided information on the types of care that can be provided by an ambulance paramedic and an emergency medical technician (EMTs). In relation specifically to the treatment of patients with epilepsy, paramedics can supply and administer rectal diazepam, whilst EMTs can only administer the drug if it was already in the possession of the patient.

Ambulance Services: Protective Clothing

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS ambulance trusts issue their paramedics with stab proof vest protection; what discussion she has held on stab proof vest protection for paramedics; what assessment she has made of the merits of providing stab proof vest protection for paramedics; and if she will make a statement. [145430]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In April 2003, the NHS Security Management Service (NHS SMS) was created and assumed responsibility for the management of security related matters in the national health service, including tackling violence against NHS staff.

However, information on the NHS ambulance trusts which issue their paramedics with stab proof vest protection is not held centrally. Each trust will make their own decision based on local risk assessments.

The Safer Hospitals Project has looked at the use of stab proof vests in the ambulance service. The results will be made available in due course.

Ambulance Services: Sussex

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many 999 calls for Sussex ambulances have been received in each of the last five years; [145826]

(2) how many category A incidents have been attended by Sussex ambulances in each of the last three years, broken down by local authority district. [145827]

Andy Burnham: Information on number of emergency calls and number of category A incidents is provided in the following table.

Emergency calls and emergency incidents (calls resulting in response arriving at the scene of the incident) by specified ambulance service[1], 2002-03 to 2006-07

Benzodiazepines

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many prescriptions of (a) benzodiazepine drugs and (b) antidepressants were dispensed in the community in England in 2006. [145414]

Caroline Flint: In 2006, 10.769 million prescription items were dispensed for benzodiazepines in the community in England. Benzodiazepines are defined in section 4.1.1 and 4.1.2 of the British National Formulary (BNF). Benzodiazepines defined in section 4.8.1 of the BNF for the treatment of epilepsy are not included.

In the same period, 31.038 million prescription items were dispensed for antidepressants in the community in England, as defined in section 4.3 of the BNF.

Prescription information is taken from the Prescription Cost Analysis system, supplied by the Prescription Pricing Division of the Business Services Authority.

Blood: Contamination

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 12 June 2007, Official Report, column 988W, on blood: contamination, what correspondence her Department has had with (a) the UK Haemophilia Centre Doctors' Organisation and (b) clinicians on the inquiry chaired by Lord Archer into contaminated blood and blood products; and if she will make a statement. [145480]

Caroline Flint: The Department has not had any formal correspondence with the United Kingdom Haemophilia Centre Doctors' Organisation or with clinicians about the Lord Archer inquiry.

Blood: Imports

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, columns 279-80W, on blood: imports, (1) how much was spent on commercially imported AHG concentrate/factor VIII blood products by health authorities under arrangements centrally negotiated by her Department in each year from 1977 to 1990; and if she will make a statement; [145528]

(2) what records her Department holds on centrally negotiated arrangements for the purchase of commercially imported AHG concentrate/factor VIII blood products for health authorities in the 1970s and 1980s; and if she will make a statement; [145529]

(3) how many blood donations were used to prepare AHG concentrate/factor VIII blood products in the UK in each year from 1977 to 1985; and if she will make a statement. [145540]

Caroline Flint: This information can be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Blood: Safety

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 15 June 2007, Official Report, column 1381W, on blood: safety, on what date her Department plans to release the next batch of documents identified in the Review of Documentation relating to the safety of Blood Products 1970 to 1985; and if she will make a statement. [145479]

Caroline Flint: The first batch of papers were sent to the inquiry team on 15 June. Arrangements are in hand to place these papers on the Department's website. As indicated previously we will be sending papers to the inquiry team at monthly intervals.

Broadband: Health Hazards

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the potential effects on the health of (a) adults and (b) children of radio waves from home wireless broadband systems; and if she will make a statement. [145008]

Caroline Flint: The independent Advisory Group on Non-ionising Radiation (AGNIR) undertook a comprehensive assessment of radio waves and health in 2003. Its report, entitled "Health Effects from Radiofrequency Electromagnetic Fields", was published by the then National Radiological Protection Board (now the Radiation Protection Division of the Health Protection Agency (HPA)). Copies are available in the Library and on the HPA website:

www.hpa.org.uk/radiation/publications/documents_of_nrpb/abstracts/absd14-2.htm

All devices that emit radio waves (such as wireless internet) should be used in compliance with the exposure guidelines published by the International Commission on Non-ionising Radiation Protection (ICNIRP) as specified in the European Recommendation on limiting public exposure to electromagnetic fields (EC/519/1999).

Information about wireless devices and health is available on the Department's website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/en/Aboutus/MinistersandDepartmentLeaders/ChiefMedicalOfficer/Features/FeaturesArchive/Browsable/DH_5369553

The Government acknowledges further advice provided by the HPA at:

www.hpa.org.uk/radiation/understand/radiation_topics/emf/wifi.htm

This states:

"There is no consistent evidence to date that WiFi and wireless local area networks adversely affect the health of the general population. The signals are very low power, typically 0.1 watt (100 milliwatts) in both the computer and the router (access point) and the results so far show exposures are well within internationally accepted (ICNIRP) guidelines. Based on current knowledge and experience, radio frequency (RF) exposures from WiFi are likely to be lower than those from mobile phones. Also, the frequencies used in WiFi are broadly the same as those from traditional RF applications."

Cancer: Medical Treatments

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact of (a) existing NHS deficits on the take up of treatment approved by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence for use in lymphatic cancer and (b) (i) payment by results and (ii) practice based commissioning on the availability of these treatments. [143304]

Andy Burnham: It is the responsibility of primary care trusts (PCTs) and strategic health authorities to analyse their local situation and develop plans, in liaison with their local national health service trusts and primary care providers, to deliver high quality NHS services.

PCTs are under a legal requirement to fund the provision of treatments within three months of a positive National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) appraisal being finalised. PCTs should use their best endeavours to ensure that any new treatments recommended by NICE are available as soon as possible after publication of final guidance. If it is possible for PCTs to make the necessary arrangements without using the full three month period then they should do so.

Where treatments and services fall under payment by results, this activity is paid for at the national tariff price. Funding for services outside the scope of payment by results is agreed locally between commissioners and providers. Under payment by results any cost implications of NICE guidance for the NHS are taken account of in two main ways:

Through an adjustment within the national tariff uplift (dealing with pay and prices, pay reform and technical issues); and

Through adjustments to specific national tariff prices where appropriate.

Practice based commissioning (PBC) gives practices and primary care professionals the freedom to develop innovative, high-quality services for their patients. It enables them, working across boundaries with secondary care clinicians and others, to redesign services that better meet the needs of their patients. By giving practices the ability to develop new services for patients within a framework of accountability and support, PBC will improve access, extend patient choice and help restore financial balance.

Care Homes: Elderly

Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what statutory obligations cover the care provided to residents in care homes for the elderly; how her Department enforces these obligations; and what statutory requirements are placed upon primary care trusts with regard to care homes for the elderly. [142897]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The detailed regulation of the provision of care for older people in residential care homes is governed by the Care Standards Act 2000 and regulations made under it. The relevant statutory instruments which govern the regulation and inspection of care homes, as defined in that Act, are the National Care Standards Commission (Registration) Regulations 2001 (S.I. 2001/3969) and the Care Homes Regulations 2001 (S.I. 2001/3965). Primary care trusts may make arrangements for the placing of people in residential care homes which are regulated in this way but do not have specific statutory obligations themselves in relation to the regulation of such homes.

In England, the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI), which is set up under the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003, regulates residential care homes through its powers of registration and inspection. Enforcement of the regulatory conditions is through criminal sanctions and mandatory inspection of homes by CSCI. In exercising its powers of inspection, CSCI must take into account the relevant national minimum standards issued under the 2000 Act, which apply across the country and are intended to ensure consistency in the quality of services. It is an offence for anyone who carries on or manages a care home, as defined in the 2000 Act, not to be registered.

Childbirth: Horton Hospital

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women gave birth at (a) Horton General Hospital and (b) Warwick General Hospital in (i) 2005-06, (ii) 2004-05 and (iii) 2003-04; and how many expectant mothers received midwife assistance at home at each hospital in each year. [144085]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 25 June 2007:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question about how many expectant mothers gave birth at (a) Horton General Hospital and (b) Warwick General Hospital in

(i) 2005-06, (ii) 2004-05 and (iii) 2003-04; and how many expectant mothers received midwife assistance at home in each hospital in each year. (144085)

Figures on maternities in hospitals are available from birth registration information. The latest available maternity figures from this source are for 2005. The table below shows the figures requested for the financial years 2003-04 and 2004-05. Since most births at Horton take place in Horton Maternity Hospital, figures for this unit have been included as well as those for Horton General Hospital.

Maternities in Horton General Hospital, Horton Maternity Hospital and Warwick Hospital in 2003-04 and 2004-05

	Number of maternities
	Financial years
	2003-04	2004-05
Horton General Hospital	13	9
Horton Maternity Hospital	1,501	1,528
Warwick Hospital	2,534	2,713

No information is held centrally on midwife assistance at home for these hospitals.

Children: Abuse

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance has been issued by her Department on the covert monitoring of parents while on hospital premises for the detection and prevention of child abuse. [145889]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The full guidance issued by the Department, "Safeguarding Children in Whom Illness is Fabricated or Induced", contains relevant guidance on covert monitoring of parents on hospital premises. Copies have been placed in the Library and are available at:

www.dh.gov.uk/en/Publicationsandstatistics/Publications/PublicationsPolicyAndGuidance/DH_4008714

Clacton Hospital

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 17 May 2007, Official Report, column 912W, on Clacton hospital, for what reasons decisions on Peter Bruff Ward at Clacton hospital are being made by West Essex Primary Care Trust. [144324]

Andy Burnham: As stated in my answer of 17 May any decision regarding the closure of the Peter Bruff Ward at Clacton hospital is a matter for the local national health service, which has the responsibility for the configuration and delivery of local services, working in partnership with the communities it serves. NHS East of England has advised that a consultation on the proposed changes to mental health services in North Essex was launched on 7 June. The consultation, which will conclude on 7 September, includes proposals on the future of the Peter Bruff Ward at Clacton. I would urge the hon. Member to engage as fully as possible during the consultation to ensure that his views and those of his constituents are taken into consideration.

Community Health Services: West Suffolk

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to reply to the Suffolk County Council Health Scrutiny Committee referral of West Suffolk's community health proposals. [144300]

Andy Burnham: The Suffolk County Council Health Scrutiny Committee referral of West Suffolk's community health proposals is currently under consideration by the Secretary of State, and a response will follow in due course.

Dental Services: Hartlepool

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what basis the allocations of funding for children's orthodontic services for Hartlepool for 2006-07 and 2007-08 were made; if she will take action to improve children's orthodontic services in Hartlepool; and if she will make a statement. [145044]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The resource allocations for primary dental care services awarded to primary care trusts (PCTs) for 2006-07 were based on expenditure on general dental services and personal dental services pilots in each PCT area during the reference period October 2004 to September 2005. This captured payments for both general dental services and specialist services such as orthodontic services. The allocations also included adjustments to reflect nationally agreed increases in dentists' remuneration, provision for growth plans previously submitted to and approved by the Department, and some margin to accommodate any new services that may have started during or after the reference period but could not be fully reflected in the calculation of reference period earnings.

The resource allocations for 2007-08 included additional funding to allow for factors such as 2007-08 increases in dentists' remuneration and adjustments in the expected levels of patient charge income. Hartlepool PCT received a 7.1 per cent. increase in its 2007-08 dental funding allocation, net of income from patient charges.

PCTs are responsible for developing dental services in their area to reflect local needs and priorities. Subject to honouring existing contracts, PCTs are free to vary the balance of resources committed to general dental services and to specialist services such as orthodontics. PCTs may also make additional investment in services from within their total national health service resources, if they consider this an appropriate local priority. The Department has provided a range of guidance and support to PCTs to support effective commissioning of orthodontic services and help promote access to high-quality services.

Departments: Aviation

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many flights to overseas destinations were taken by (a) civil servants and (b) Ministers in her Department in each of the last three calendar years; and what the total cost of such flights were. [144807]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost. Since 1999, the Government have published on an annual basis a list of all overseas visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500, as well as the total cost of all ministerial travel overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Library. Information for 2006-07 is currently being compiled and will be published before the summer recess. All travel is undertaken in accordance with the Civil Service Management Code, the Ministerial Code and "Travel by Ministers".

Departments: Consultants

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the outside (a) agencies and (b) consultancies which are undertaking work commissioned by her Department; and what the (i) purpose and (ii) cost is of each commission. [138462]

Andy Burnham: The Department does not collect information in the format requested.

A new system will be introduced in April 2008 called SHOWA, which will be able to track consultant spend for the Department.

Departments: Contracts

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what data her Department collects on contracts awarded to external suppliers by public bodies it sponsors. [144394]

Andy Burnham: The Department does not regularly collect data on contracts awarded to external suppliers by sponsored public bodies. Performance targets for executive non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) sponsored by the Department, including outputs to be achieved, are agreed by Ministers and set out in the published business or corporate plan of the NDPB. Copies of plans are available from the relevant body. The Department monitors performance against these targets and progress is discussed with Ministers. The outputs and achievements of each executive NDPB are set out in its annual report, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Departments: Delivery Unit

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 284W, on Departments: Delivery Unit, (1) what the conclusions were of the review of the overall NHS reform programme; [144517]

(2) what the findings were of the review of the overall NHS reform programme. [144961]

Andy Burnham: The findings and conclusions of NHS reform programme reports of the joint review by the Department of Health and the Prime Minister's Delivery Unit comprise confidential policy advice to the Prime Minister and Ministers, and are not published.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 284W, on Departments: Delivery Unit, what the (a) start date and (b) end date was of each review; and on which date a final report was produced for each. [144518]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is shown in the table.

Name of review	Start date	End date
18 Weeks	13 June 2006	13 September 2006
Choice of four providers	22 September 2006	2 November 2006
Practice-based commissioning	27 November 2006	26 February 2007
Overall NHS reform programme	19 February 2007	22 March 2007
Childhood obesity	February 2006	3 November 2006
Child and adolescent mental health services	September 2006	3 November 2006
Primary care trust capability	5 March 2007	16 May 2007

The date of final reports produced are the same as the end dates.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 284W, on Departments: Delivery Unit, if she will place in the Library copies of the terms of reference for the reviews of (a) 18 weeks, (b) the overall NHS reform programme, (c) childhood obesity and (d) primary care trust capability. [144519]

Andy Burnham: The reports of joint reviews by the Department and the Prime Minister's Delivery Unit comprise confidential policy advice to the Prime Minister and Ministers, and are not published.

Departments: Energy

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many energy saving light bulbs were purchased by her Department for use on the departmental estate in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [144806]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information is as follows.

	Number
2005	27,000
2006	28,000

Departments: Foreign Relations

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many Memorandums of Understanding are in force as a result of agreements with foreign Governments entered into by Ministers in her Department; and what executive actions each entails. [144476]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has entered into numerous Memorandums of Understanding (MOU) with a large number of countries over the years. The purpose and content of these agreements varies considerably, as does the amount of activity taking place under them. For this reason, we are currently evaluating the impact and effectiveness of our memorandums. This will inform a more strategic approach in line with the Global Health Strategy, which the Government are currently developing.

The following table details our principal bilateral agreements. However, we also have several separate reciprocal health care agreements with other countries on access to treatment abroad. This information is available on www.dh.gov.uk/travellers

Departments: Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in her Department have been allowed to work from home for part of the week in the last 12 months; and if she will make a statement on her Department's policy on home working. [143882]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Departments human resource information system currently records four staff as members of its home-working scheme. The Department also allows staff to work at home on an occasional basis at management discretion. No data are kept on these ad hoc arrangements that enable staff to enjoy a more flexible, family-friendly working arrangement.

Our policy is in line with approaches commonly adopted across the civil service and reflects good practice followed by organisations more widely.

Departments: Manpower

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people granted (a) temporary part-time, (b) temporary full-time, (c) permanent part-time and (d) permanent full-time contracts of employment in her Department in each of the last three years were (i) male, (ii) female, (iii) registered disabled and (iv) aged 55 years or over. [143897]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is shown in the following tables.

Entrants by gender

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of staff in her Department are (a) male, (b) female, (c) registered disabled and (d) aged 55 or over. [143914]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: As at the end of March 2007, the Department's records show that 46.6 per cent. of staff are male, 53.4 per cent. of staff are female, 5.8 per cent. have made a declaration as registered disabled and 11.5 per cent. are aged 55 and over.

Departments: Marketing

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which advertising and marketing campaigns were run by (a) her Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years; which external agencies were involved; and what the cost was of each campaign. [144616]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The following tables outline advertising campaigns undertaken by the Department, the cost of each and the external advertising agencies involved, in the last five years.

Departments: Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff in her Department received bonus payments in 2006-07; what proportion of the total workforce they represented; what the total amount of bonuses paid was; what the largest single payment was; and if she will make a statement. [143086]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: 420 staff in the Department received bonus payments in 2006-07. They represented 19 per cent. of the total workforce. The total amount of bonuses paid was £1,400,049. The largest single payment was £22,500.

A significant proportion of bonuses paid were to staff who are senior civil servants, where the Department's policy is determined by the Cabinet Office guidance on civil service bonuses.

Departments: Political Parties

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which (a) executives, (b) non-executives and (c) officials in her Department's arm's length bodies have declared political affiliations to (i) the Labour Party, (ii) the Conservative Party, (iii) the Liberal Democrat Party and (iv) other political parties; and whether declaration of political affiliation forms part of the application process for such posts. [145667]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department does not hold information centrally on the political affiliations of its arm's length body executives, non-executives and officials and it would be disproportionately expensive to gather this information.

The application process for a post within the Department's arm's length bodies does not require applicants to make a declaration about their political affiliations.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which (a) executives, (b) non-executives and (c) officials in her Department's arm's length bodies have previously worked for (i) the Labour Party, (ii) the Conservative Party, (iii) the Liberal Democrat Party, (iv) other political parties and (v) trades unions. [145668]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department does not hold such information centrally and it would be disproportionately expensive to gather the information.

Departments: Private Finance Initiative

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the value is of the unitary payments of each private finance initiative scheme overseen by her Department over the lifetime of the contract, expressed in 2007-08 prices and discounted to present value. [145869]

Andy Burnham: A full list of unitary payments to 2033-34 can be found on the HM Treasury website at:

www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/documents/public_partnerships/ppp_pfi_stats.cfm

The figures in the table are expressed in nominal terms, that is, the Department has applied a deflator (retail price index (RPI)—the one normally used in contracts) to the baseline figure submitted to it by the trust or primary care trust concerned. Figures will therefore vary as a result of changes to RPI.

Unitary payments may also fluctuate both up and down as a result of adjustments made relating to the performance of the contractor, additional services requested by the trust and the effect of refinancing.

Departments: Public Participation

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many public consultations her Department undertook in the last 12 months; and what the cost was of each consultation. [145277]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Over the 12 months to the end of May 2007, the Department launched 43 formal public consultations in order to inform the Department's policy development.

The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency launched 16 public consultations in the same period.

The NHS Purchasing Supply Agency did not launch any public consultations in the same period.

Information on the cost of each consultation and the total cost of all consultations could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her Department's overall expenditure was on public consultations in 2006-07. [145582]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department does not hold information centrally about costs of public consultations. Information on the Department's overall expenditure on public consultations could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Remploy

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) services and (b) products her Department has procured from Remploy in the last 12 months; and at what cost. [143793]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department's finance system, Vista, shows one purchase order has been raised for Remploy in the last 12 months. The products procured were a quadrant corner unit and filing cabinet at a total cost of £3,400.31. No services were procured from Remploy.

Departments: Sick Leave

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what average number of days per year was taken by staff in her Department as sick leave in each of the last five years for which records are available. [143060]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is available in a series of annual reports entitled "Analysis of Sickness Absence in the Civil Service", published by the Cabinet Office and is available on their website at:

www.civilservice.gov.uk/management/occupational_health/publications/index.asp

The latest available information is for 2005-06. The report for 2006-07 will be published in September 2007.

Dietary Supplements: EC law

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps officials based in British embassies to other European Union member states are taking to ensure that the Government's objectives for the interpretation and implementation of the Food Supplements Directive are met; [145630]

(2) what steps the staff of the UK permanent representative in Brussels are taking to ensure that the Government's stated objectives for the interpretation and implementation of the Food Supplements Directive are met; [145631]

(3) what recent representations she has received from consumers on the interpretation and implementation of the Food Supplements Directive; and what steps she plans to take to ensure her objectives for the interpretation and implementation of the Directive are met; [145644]

(4) what meetings have been held by (a) Ministers and (b) officials of her Department and associated agencies with (i) representatives of the European Commission, (ii) Governments of other member states and (iii) officials of other member states on the Food Supplements Directive (vitamins and minerals); what the date was of each meeting; what points were raised at each; and what conclusions reached; [145645]

(5) when she last met Commissioner Markos Kyprianou to discuss the impact on consumer choice and the specialist manufacturing and retail sector of the implementation of the Food Supplements Directive and the setting of maximum permitted levels for vitamins and minerals in supplements under article 5 of that Directive; what the outcome was of that meeting; and when next she plans to meet the Commissioner further to discuss these issues. [145646]

Caroline Flint: Bilateral meetings of Health Ministers were held with Germany, Lithuania and Portugal in November 2006. Bilateral meetings of officials were held with Netherlands, Ireland, Finland, Germany, France and Italy in 2006. Additional meetings were held with the Netherlands in November 2006 and with German officials in March 2007. Officials have regular contact with the Commission and most recently met with Commission officials in November 2006.

The meetings were held to highlight the United Kingdom's (UK) position on supplements and discuss the outcome of the Food Standards Agency (FSA) Board discussions on setting maximum levels of vitamins and minerals. Member states were receptive to the ideas presented by the FSA but had not developed their own definitive positions in the absence of proposals from the Commission. The Commission welcomed the UK Government's response to the discussion document published in June 2006 on issues for setting levels of vitamins and minerals in foodstuffs and commented that previous work taken forward by the UK in 2003 on establishing safe upper levels for vitamins and minerals in food supplements will be a key factor in developing future proposals. Ministers of other member states have not been engaged on the issue of setting maximum levels of vitamins and minerals in food supplements to date, but were receptive to the UK's views and wished to learn more about the UK's position.

A meeting has not been held with Commissioner Markos Kyprianou to discuss the impact on consumer choice and the specialist manufacturing and retail sector of the implementation of the food supplements directive and the setting of maximum permitted levels for vitamins and minerals in supplements under article 5 of that Directive. A future meeting has not been planned.

Representations have been received from consumers on the interpretation and implementation of the food supplements directive, highlighting their concerns regarding the possibility that the Commission intends to propose restrictive daily dose levels for vitamin and mineral supplements and the potential consequent loss of consumer choice. The UK's key objective is for levels to be set based on a risk assessment, and for any controls to ensure safety for consumers and allow them to make informed choices. FSA officials will continue dialogue between the Commission and member states on this issue.

Officials based in British embassies to other European Union member states have not indicated that they are taking action regarding promotion of the Government's objectives for the interpretation and implementation of the food supplements directive.

Staff of the UK permanent representative in Brussels have been briefed on the Government's stated objectives for the interpretation and implementation of the food supplements directive and are speaking to the Commission directly.

Drugs: Misuse

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of people with an addiction to an illegal drug in each London borough in each year since 1997. [144642]

Caroline Flint: The Department has not published estimates on the number of people with an addiction to an illegal drug in London.

The National Treatment Agency's national drug treatment monitoring system collects data on the numbers of clients in treatment for addiction to all illegal drugs. London data from 2003-04 are shown in the following table. Local level data are not available prior to 2003-04.

Electromagnetic Fields: Health Hazards

Mr. Flello: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what advice the Government have sought from the Health Protection Agency in relation to the Stakeholder

Advisory Group on extremely low frequency electric and magnetic fields (EMFs) report; and how the Government's decision-making process on precautionary measures to prevent public exposure to EMFs will take account of this report; [144690]

(2) if she will place in the Library a copy of the recent report from the Stakeholder Advisory Group on extremely low frequency electric and magnetic fields; [144721]

(3) what account she takes of public opinion in determining suitable precautionary measures on power frequency electric and magnetic fields (EMFs); and what mechanism she plans to put in place to assess public opinion on the issues raised by the recently published Stakeholder Advisory Group on Extremely Low Frequency Electric and Magnetic Fields report on precautionary approaches to power frequency EMFs; and if she will make a statement. [144689]

Caroline Flint: The recently published report from the Stakeholder Advisory Group on extremely low frequency (ELF) electric and magnetic fields (EMF), known as the SAGE report, is currently under consideration by the Health Protection Agency (HPA). Government have asked HPA for advice concerning the report's recommendations. Government will consider the HPA's advice and, should any further measures be considered as part of a precautionary approach, would consult stakeholders as part of the process. A copy of the SAGE report has been placed in the Library.

First Aid: Emergency Calls

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many first responders were available for call outs within (a) Cirencester and (b) the Cotswolds in each of the last five years; how many are currently available; and how many she expects to be available by the end of 2007; [144485]

(2) how many ambulances were available for call outs at peak times in (a) Cirencester and (b) the Cotswolds in each of the last five years; how many are currently available; and how many she expects to be available by the end of 2007. [144486]

Andy Burnham: The information requested is not collected centrally.

General Practitioners

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) pursuant to the answer of 7 June 2007, Official Report, column 652W, on general practitioners, what remit her Department was given by HM Treasury for the negotiation of the contract following the discussions; [144493]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 288W, on doctors: contracts, which (a) Treasury and (b) Department of Health Ministers participated in the discussions; [144500]

(3) whether the discussions referred to included consideration of (a) the GP contract and (b) the consultant contract in the form in which these contracts were finally agreed; [144501]

(4) whether her Department gained HM Treasury approval for general practitioners no longer being obliged to provide out-of-hours care during the discussions. [144502]

Andy Burnham: Treasury Ministers and officials have frequent discussions with their counterparts at the Department as part of the process of policy development and delivery. As was the case with the previous Administration, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such discussions.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Rayleigh (Mr. Francois) of 6 June 2007, Official Report, column 571W, on general practitioners, (1) what internal mechanism her Department established for considering and informing progress on the contract negotiations; [144512]

(2) whether there was a start date for the discussions keeping the general medical services contract under constant review; and what the Government's objective is in these discussions; [144513]

(3) at what level discussions between HM Treasury and her Department take place; [144514]

(4) whether representatives from other (a) NHS and (b) Government bodies or departments were present at the regular update meetings held between the NHS Confederation and her Department. [144516]

Andy Burnham: It is normal practice to keep all policy initiatives under review. As with all major initiatives the Department's aim is to improve existing arrangements.

Revisions of the general medical services contract have always sought to secure additional benefits to patients and taxpayers.

As part of the regular process of this review, discussions between Her Majesty's Treasury and the Department have and continue to take place at both official and ministerial level as appropriate.

Our regular discussions with NHS Confederation, now NHS Employers, include representatives from the four health departments and any executive agencies as needed, e.g. Officials from the Information Centre.

Health Professions: Training

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many applications have been received for ST1-4 medical positions by the Medical Training Application Service in the last 12 months; and how many posts were available. [124719]

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total number of specialist training places for 2007 intake is, broken down by (a) deanery and (b) level of specialist training. [137205]

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many applicants are in the process of applying for posts via Modernising Medical Careers; how many posts are available; and how many such posts in the 2007 round are for (a) specialist training and (b) fixed-term specialist training appointments; [135536]

(2) how many applicants there were from round 1 of Modernising Medical Careers; and how many posts are available. [128841]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is shown in the following tables and is correct as taken from a survey of English deaneries on the 14 June. However, the numbers will change regularly as additional posts are confirmed during the 2007 recruitment process.

The number of posts available for the 2007 recruitment process is in the following table.

	Posts on MTAS 19 April

[1] Taken from a survey of English deaneries on 14 June. Figure only includes the posts in England and not those in the devolved Administrations because the survey only covered English deaneries. We expect there to be additional new posts in the devolved Administrations.
[2] As set out in footnote 1, the UK total does not include the new round 2 posts in the devolved Administrations.

Across the UK, 34,389 candidates submitted applications on MTAS during the first recruitment round and made 127,948 applications. Of these, 32,600[4] applicants made at least one eligible application and a total of 118,600[3] eligible applications are recorded on the MTAS system. Of the eligible applicants, 29,600[3] were already working in training or non-training posts in the NHS.

The number of posts broken down by deanery is shown in the following table.

[4] Trent and the Leicestershire, Northamptonshire and Rutland deaneries have since combined into a single East Midlands deanery. The additional round 2 run-through programmes for East Midlands have been entered in the Trent UoA row.
[5] We do not have any additional information to that on MTAS 19 April. We expect there to be additional new posts in the devolved Administrations.

Number of posts by level as at 19 April on MTAS is shown in the following table (not including GP posts filled outside MTAS, extra round 1 posts added since 19 April, or extra round 2 posts as these cannot be broken down by level).

Note:
England figures exclude the devolved Administration deaneries and Defence Medical Services.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department has made of the number of round 2 interviews that will take place via the Medical Training Application Service recruitment process; and if she will make a statement. [145662]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The online Medical Training Application Service is not being used for the round 2 recruitment process. This further recruitment round is being run locally by deaneries.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department has made of the number of round 1 (a) offers made and (b) interviews held through the Medical Training Application Service to date; and if she will make a statement. [145663]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of offers made is not collected centrally. The number of interviews held in round 1 was approximately 40,800 in the United Kingdom and 32,200 in England. England guaranteed interviews for all first choice applications (other than those for general practice) after repreferencing. The Devolved Administrations offered interviews for all four applications. As a result approximately a further 23,400 interviews were held in the UK; 16,300 in England.

Health Services: Immigrants

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are in place to prevent the NHS treating illegal immigrants and failed asylum seekers in circumstances where they have no entitlement to such treatment. [145629]

Ms Rosie Winterton: People who are living lawfully in the United Kingdom for a settled purpose, are entitled to register with a general practice. Regulations do allow practices discretion over whom they register and if the practice list is not closed to new applications the practice must have reasonable and non-discriminatory grounds for refusing an application. Being an illegal immigrant or failed asylum seeker would be such grounds.

For hospital treatment, anyone who is not ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom, including illegal immigrants and failed asylum seekers, is subject to the provisions of the National Health Service (Charges to Overseas Visitors) Regulations 1989, as amended. These regulations require national health service bodies providing hospital services to establish whether a patient is ordinarily resident and, if not, whether they are covered by any of the exemptions in the regulations. If the patient is not exempt, they should be charged for any NHS hospital services provided.

Health Services: Procurement

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of which companies (a) have direct experience of managing a healthcare commissioning budget in the UK or internationally of at least £300,000,000 and (b) have supported commissioning for populations over 90,000. [145633]

Andy Burnham: To support the local national health service in undertaking commissioning functions, the Department has recently assessed organisations against a number of criteria through the development of the framework for procuring external support for commissioners (FESC). The procurement of the FESC has been conducted in compliance with European Union law.

Organisations involved in the FESC procurement have, along with a range of other criteria, been assessed against their track-record of supporting commissioning for populations over 90,000 rather than against experience of managing a healthcare commissioning budget.

Herbal Medicine: EC Law

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will require the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency to discuss the identification of products made from organic ingredients with representatives of the manufacturers of herbal remedies marketed under the Traditional Herbal Medicinal Products Directive; and if she will make a statement. [144790]

Caroline Flint: Following discussions in 2006 the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency met representatives of the Herbal Forum (a group representing manufacturers' trade associations in the herbal sector) and the Soil Association on 14 June 2007 to discuss the development of organic standards which are appropriate to the production of herbal medicinal products, and how products meeting those standards can be identified. We understand that the Herbal Forum intends to bring forward proposals and we will give them careful consideration.

Home Care Services

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons domiciliary consultations by consultants with general practitioners were discontinued by the NHS. [140538]

Andy Burnham: There is nothing to stop domiciliary consultations by consultants with general practitioners in principle. However, these should normally be scheduled as part of the programmed activities that make up the consultant's job plan. Alternatively, a consultant may retain any fee that is paid for domiciliary consultations undertaken in the consultant's own time.

Hospitals: Finance

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the projected financial position is of (a) Sussex County Hospital, Brighton, (b) Worthing and Southlands Hospital, (c) Princess Royal, Haywards Heath and (d) St. Richards Hospital, Chichester for the end of the financial year 2007-08; and what the financial position of each was at the end of the last financial year. [145845]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is collected by national health service trusts, and not by hospitals.

The quarter 4, 2006-07 provisional outturn surplus/(deficit) and 2007-08 provisional plan year end forecast outturn surplus/(deficit) for Brighton and Sussex University Hospitals NHS Trust, the Royal West Sussex NHS Trust and the Worthing and Southlands Hospitals NHS Trust are shown in the following table.

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much each NHS primary care trust allocated to each district general hospital within its boundaries in each of the last three years; what proportion of each trust's budget that represented in each year; and what the projected figures are for 2007-08. [145950]

Andy Burnham: Revenue allocations are made directly to primary care trusts (PCTs), not national health service trusts or individual hospitals. We do not collect centrally, information on funding flows between PCTs and NHS trusts.

Hospitals: Greater London

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the occupation costs were for each of the six hospital trust sites in South East London in each of the last three years. [145948]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information in the following table is as provided by the organisation concerned and has not been amended.

Trust name	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
Bexley Care Trust	1,627,616	1,559,498	1,869,264

The data represent the occupancy costs (capital charges, rent, rates, maintenance, energy and utility) for the trusts in the South East London Strategic Health Authority for the last three years they were collected.

Hospitals: Infectious Diseases

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many incidents of hospital acquired infections have been reported at (a) Sussex County Hospital, Brighton, (b) Worthing Hospital and (c) St Richard's Hospital, Chichester in each of the last five years. [145829]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is not available. The best available information is from the mandatory surveillance system, which provides the data for acute national health service trusts in England rather than individual hospitals on the following:

the number of reports of methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) blood stream infections (bacteraemias) from April 2001 to 31 December 2006 (table 1);

the number of reports of Clostridium difficile for patients aged 65 and over from January 2004 to December 2006 (table 2);

the number of glycopeptide resistant enterococci (GRE) blood stream infections from 1 October 2003 to 30 September 2005 (table 3); and the number of surgical site infections (SSI) reported as part of the mandatory surveillance of SSI following orthopaedic surgery between April 2004 and March 2006 (table 4).

The Sussex county hospital, Brighton, is part of Brighton and Sussex university hospitals NHS trust; St. Richard's hospital, Chichester, is part of Royal West Sussex NHS trust and Worthing hospital is part of Worthing and Southlands NHS trust. The mandatory surveillance data for these NHS Trusts are shown in the following tables:

Hospitals: North Yorkshire

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on hospital ward closures in North Yorkshire. [145657]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The service modernisation and financial recovery plan of the North Yorkshire and York Primary Care Trust (PCT) aims to invest £9 million in developing community-based services. This will enable patients to access care in their own home where clinically appropriate, which will reduce unnecessary admissions to local acute hospitals, supporting the PCT in its return to financial health.

The development of community-based services and efficiency gains have resulted in changes in bed capacity in the York Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust.

Hospitals: Parking

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance her Department provides to hospitals on provision of parking permits to community nurses. [144759]

Andy Burnham: Arrangements and charges for car parking on health care premises are a matter for individual national health service bodies, taking account of all the relevant local factors. This includes what, if any, concessions, exemptions or permits to offer staff.

NHS bodies have income generation powers which allow them to raise additional income by marketing any spare capacity resulting from a non-core function, or by exploiting intellectual property rights. Certain rules must be followed, including the fact that profits raised must be used to improve health services. Charging for car parking is a common example of an income generation scheme.

The Department issued revised and updated guidance on car parking schemes to the NHS in December 2006. This guidance includes recommendations that any scheme should take into consideration the needs of staff, including whether to provide subsidised or free parking for particular categories of staff.

Hospitals: Waiting Lists

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department plans to take to (a) support and (b) penalise those health trusts which fail to meet the 18 week waiting time target by the target date in December 2008; and if she will make a statement. [144160]

Andy Burnham: Specific arrangements for 2008-09 will be set out later in 2007. Currently, primary care trusts and strategic health authorities are responsible for ensuring that the 18 week target is met. The Department is also currently providing intensive support to the most challenged local health communities to deliver the 18 week target.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many patients in London waited for (a) 13 weeks, (b) 14 weeks, (c) 15 weeks, (d) 16 weeks and (e) 17 weeks and over for a first out-patient admission in each quarter since June 2005 in each primary care trust; [144161]

(2) how many patients in London waited for (a) 20 weeks, (b) 21 weeks, (c) 22 weeks, (d) 23 weeks and (e) 24 weeks and over from in-patient diagnosis to treatment in each quarter since June 2005 in each primary care trust. [144162]

Andy Burnham: The available information has been placed in the Library.

Hospitals: West Sussex

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she first saw the proposed consultation document produced by West Sussex Primary Care Trust on reconfiguration of hospital services. [145834]

Caroline Flint: The Secretary of State has not seen this consultation document and does not routinely ask for consultation documents, which are published as a matter of course as part of the consultation process. Proposals for reconfiguration and the management of consultations are a matter for the national health service locally.

Human Tissue Authority

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the formation of the new Human Tissue Authority. [144716]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Human Tissue Authority was established in April 2005 under the Human Tissue Act 2004. Its role is to regulate the removal, storage, use and disposal of human bodies, organs and tissue for a number of purposes set out in Schedule 1 to the Act, such as research, transplantation, education and training.

Further information on the authority can be found on its website at www.hta.gov.uk.

Injuries: Offensive Weapons

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many knife wound injuries were treated in hospitals in West Lancashire in each year since 1997. [144824]

Andy Burnham: The information is not available in the requested format. The following tables show figures for admissions classified as contact with knife, sword or dagger. These figures do not include any patients who were treated for knife wounds in accident and emergency departments but were not admitted, or patients who were treated in an out-patient setting. Values between one and five are not included due to reasons of confidentiality.

Finished admission episodes
A finished admission episode is the first period of in-patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Please note that admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year.

Cause code
The cause code is a supplementary code that indicates the nature of any external cause of injury, poisoning or other adverse effects.

Low numbers
Due to reasons of confidentiality, figures between one and five have been suppressed and replaced with an asterisk.

Data quality
Hospital episode statistics (HES) are compiled from data sent by over 300 NHS trusts and primary care trusts (PCTs) in England. The Information Centre for health and social care liaises closely with these organisations to encourage submission of complete and valid data and seeks to minimise inaccuracies and the effect of missing and invalid data via HES processes. Whilst this brings about improvement over time, some shortcomings remain.

Assessing growth through time
HES figures are available from 1989-90 onwards. During the years that these records have been collected the NHS there have been ongoing improvements in quality and coverage. These improvements in information submitted by the NHS have been particularly marked in the earlier years and need to be borne in mind when analysing time series.

Ungrossed data
Figures have not been adjusted for shortfalls in data (i.e. the data are ungrossed).

Wi-Fi: Health Hazards

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department has issued advice to local education authorities and schools on the use of Wi-Fi. [145502]

Caroline Flint: The Department has not issued any advice to the local education authorities and schools on the use of Wi-Fi.

Junior Doctors: Recruitment

Stephen Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many newly qualified medical students (a) applied for junior doctor training posts and (b) were successful in their application in the most recent period for which figures are available. [127207]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A total of 6,465 applications were received for Modernising Medical Careers 2007 Foundation Programme (UK-wide). All 6,205 eligible applicants were offered a place on a foundation training programme.

Junior Doctors: Training

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what administrative mechanisms her Department used to plan the Medical Training Application Service. [144979]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department used a project-based approach using Prince methodology to set up the Medical Training Application Service web service to support Modernising Medical Careers medical training recruitment. Detailed planning was approved by the project board.

Kidney Disease

Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department has made of the number of people likely to receive renal replacement therapy over the next 10 years. [145360]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Part one of the renal national service framework (NSF), which was published in 2004, sets out the Department's view of likely trends in the population requiring renal replacement therapy in the medium term. In the NSF, we estimated that numbers of people with end stage renal failure and requiring renal replacement therapy would increase to around 45,000 over the 10 years ending 2014. The projected overall annual growth rate in the population requiring renal replacement therapy averages 4.5 per cent. to 5 per cent. per year. A higher rate of growth (6 per cent. to 8 per cent.) is expected in the number of patients needing hospital-based haemodialysis, and in the number of elderly kidney patients.

Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people received treatment for the management of chronic kidney disease in each year since 2000. [145359]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There is no national registry of Chronic Kidney Disease (CKD). The overwhelming majority of people with CKD are under the care of general practitioners and do not need to be seen by secondary or tertiary hospital services.

At general practice level, the maintenance of a practice register of patients with CKD became a part of the Quality and Outcomes Framework in April 2006, which should mean that a very comprehensive CKD dataset will develop over the next few years.

Lymphoma

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many officials within her Department are responsible for lymphoma policy and implementation, broken down by grade. [144767]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The cancer policy team work with the National Cancer Director to develop policy on cancer and end of life care. The responsibilities of the team members are divided along the patient pathway rather than by individual cancer type.

There are 25.95 full-time equivalent members of the cancer policy team and the following table shows them broken down by grade.

Grade	Number
Senior Civil Service	1
Grade 6	3
Grade 7	6.25
Fast stream	1
SEO	6.5
HEO	2.8
EO	4
AO	1.4
Total	25.95

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the role of patient involvement in the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence's appraisals of new lymphatic cancer treatments. [144768]

Caroline Flint: The public and patient involvement unit of the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) has well-developed strategies for ensuring that appropriate patient and carer organisations are invited to act as stakeholders or consultees in all NICE's guidance programmes, including technology appraisals. Lists of all stakeholders involved in each piece of guidance are published on NICE's website at www.nice.org.uk

All NICE's advisory committees include individuals with experience of patient or carer advocacy.

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans her Department has to continue funding for pump-primed lymphoma nurse specialist positions; and if she will increase expenditure on such positions. [144769]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is for local trusts in partnership with local stakeholders to determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health and to commission services accordingly, which includes provision of specialist nursing posts. Where agreements have been made for alternate funding of these posts, this is a local matter.

Meat Hygiene Service: Contracts

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which companies are engaged by the Meat Hygiene Service to provide contract (a) veterinary and (b) meat inspection services. [144860]

Meat hygiene inspectors

Hygiene Audit
Grants Veterinary Services Ltd.
VMHS Ltd.
Eville and Jones
The Corporation Of London
F C I—Food Consultancy and Inspection Ltd.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what hourly charges the Meat Hygiene Service pays to each contract agency in respect of (a) contract veterinarians and (b) contract meat inspectors. [144861]

Caroline Flint: The Meat Hygiene Service is unable to disclose the contents of individual contracts because the information contained therein is commercially sensitive.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) contract veterinarians and (b) contract meat inspectors are employed by the Meat Hygiene Service. [144862]

Caroline Flint: During the year 2006-07, the Meat Hygiene Service had an annual average full-time equivalent of 312 contract official veterinarians, and 213 contract meat hygiene inspectors.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what checks the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) carries out to determine the technical competence of contract veterinarians and contract meat inspectors; and what actions have been taken by the MHS in circumstances where such contractors have not met that level of technical competence. [144863]

Caroline Flint: The Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) holds contracts with a number of companies for the supply of official veterinarians (OVs) and meat hygiene inspectors. The contracts specify the qualifications and level of technical competence required by the MHS. When deployed to approved establishments, the technical competence of all contract staff is assessed and monitored; in-depth initially and periodically thereafter. Each month the technical competency of contract staff is assessed by the MHS as part of contract performance management against a range of key performance indicators. Contractors will also periodically assess the technical competence of their staff.

In addition to the above management checks, the MHS Internal Audit Unit undertakes audits in approved establishments to assess whether MHS teams, which may include contract OVs and meat hygiene inspectors, are carrying out their duties in line with written instructions and regulatory requirements. The Internal Audit Unit also audits contractors' procedures, including the recruitment, induction, training and development, and appraisal of contract OVs and meat hygiene inspectors.

In cases where a contract veterinarian or meat hygiene inspector is assessed as not meeting the required level of technical competence, the employing contractor is instructed to remove the individual and provide a technically competent replacement.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost was to the Meat Hygiene Service of hiring contract veterinarians and contract meat inspectors in each of the last three years. [144864]

Caroline Flint: The Meat Hygiene Service's expenditure on contract official veterinarians and contract meat hygiene inspectors in each of the last three financial years is shown in the following table.

£ million

Financial year	Contract official veterinarian cost	Contract meat hygiene inspector cost
2004-05	22.3	1.4
2005-06	21.9	4.5
2006-07	20.6	8.9

Medical Records: Databases

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what controls she plans to put in place to ensure that patient records entered on the electronic care record database are not misused by researchers using the secondary uses service. [144982]

Caroline Flint: The primary purpose of the national health service care records service (NHS CRS) is to support the delivery of care to patients. However, the aim is that data extracted from NHS services supporting direct patient care, including the NHS care records service, choose and book and electronic transmission of prescriptions, will be made available either in aggregate form or, where detailed information is provided, in anonymised or pseudonymised form, via the so-called secondary uses service. The use of consistent pseudonym enables individual cases to be tracked.

Identifiable information will be available only where patient consent has been formally given or where specific permissions apply. Permission is required from the Patient Information Advisory Group (PIAG), set up under the Health and Social Care Act 2001. The PIAG assesses each application to test that the use of patient information is justified, taking into account issues of confidentiality and consent.

Access to the secondary uses service requires each user to be formally registered and to use individual smart card access, just as for other systems in the national programme for information technology. Each user is allocated a role which determines what reports, and what organisations or geography of data they may access. Key user activities, including logon and extraction of data, are recorded.

The Secondary Uses Group set up by the Care Record Development Board to advise on the ethical use of patient data and how the potential for research, statistics and management can be realised without compromising confidentiality or security, is due to report shortly.

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received from GPs on plans to create an electronic care record for patients; and what assessment she has made of the implications for patient confidentiality of such a scheme. [144983]

Caroline Flint: Since the start of the national programme for information technology, the Department and NHS Connecting for Health have worked closely with individual, and groups of general practitioners (GPs), including the Royal College of General Practitioners (RCGP) Health Informat :s Standing Group. At the outset, the aim was to ensure that the wealth of some 20 years experience in clinical computing, in particular clinical noting and medication management, was distilled into the output based specification (OBS) for the integrated care records service. The OBS, which was published in July 2003, set the template for the subsequent procurement of all the clinical systems. Week-long design workshops were held to clearly define complex areas of functionality, in which the input of many GPs, both individual, and as representatives from RCGP and British Medical Association committees, was key.

Since that time, representatives of around 60 professional organisations, including 14 Royal Colleges, among them the RCGP, have participated on national advisory groups which provide a forum for debate on development and implementation of the national programme, and the sharing of specialist expertise and experience of organisations that are already benefiting from IT implementation. Of NHS Connecting for Health's eight National Clinical Leads—senior figures representing different areas of the health service—two are for general practitioners.

NHS Connecting for Health continues to engage on a daily basis with clinicians throughout England, and as a direct result of feedback from clinicians, improvements continue to be made across the range of programmes. This involvement is impossible to quantify precisely, but equates to hundreds of staff years of input.

With regard to patient confidentiality, while no system can be 100 per cent. secure, we believe that the procedural and technical safeguards surrounding the new electronic care record service provide an unprecedented degree of assurance of security for national programme systems and services, and confidentiality of the personal data they will contain. With regard to specific evaluation arrangements, a ministerial taskforce was established in 2006 specifically to consider matters relating to confidentiality and patient consent. This taskforce reported in December 2006 and the follow-up actions are being overseen by an advisory group chaired by the Deputy Chief Medical Officer. In addition, a contract for independent evaluation of the summary care record early adopter programme, now under way in the north-west, has been awarded to a team at University College London. The evaluation will involve extensive fieldwork to capture the views and experiences of GPs, practice managers, nurses, other NHS clinical and management staff, and, of course, patients. The final report of the evaluation will be published in summer 2008, but emerging findings will influence the continued rollout of the summary care record.

Mentally Ill: Greater London

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mental health patients moved on to independent living in each London borough in each of the last five years. [145505]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not collected by the Department.

Midwives: Insurance

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to require independent midwives to obtain professional indemnity insurance; and whether there is any requirement by the European Commission for her Department to compel independent midwives to obtain such insurance. [144363]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Our intention is to include provision for compulsory indemnity insurance as a condition of registration, as the opportunity arises in wider legislative change.

European Directive 2005/36 on the recognition of professional qualifications allows (but does not require) regulatory bodies to demand evidence of indemnity insurance from incoming European migrants, provided that they demand the same information from United Kingdom nationals.

Midwives: Manpower

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the NHS workforce in England was represented by midwives in 2006, expressed in terms of (a) headcount and (b) whole-time equivalent. [144289]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The following table shows the proportion of the national health service work force in England represented by midwives as at September 2006 in terms of both headcount and full-time equivalent.

NHS staff in England as at 30 September 2006

	Headcount	Percentage of work force	Full-time equivalent	Percentage of work force
Total employed staff (including GP and practice staff)	1,338,140	100	1,095,163	100

MRSA: Conquest Hospital

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of MRSA have been detected at the Conquest hospital in East Sussex; and if she will make a statement. [144772]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The data is not available as requested. The best available information is from the mandatory methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) blood stream infections surveillance that began in April 2001 and covers acute national health service trusts in England rather than individual hospitals.

The Conquest hospital is part of the East Sussex Hospitals NHS Trust and the number of reported MRSA blood stream infections for that trust for the period April 2001 to December 2006 is shown in the following table.

East Sussex hospitals NHS trust

	Number of reported blood stream infections (bacteraemia)
April 2001-March 2002	67
April 2002-March 2003	52
April 2003-March 2004	60

Muscular Dystrophy

Mr. David Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what facilities and treatment are available for sufferers of Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy. [145497]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Treatment for Duchenne muscular dystrophy (DMD) is currently aimed at controlling symptoms to maximize the quality of life. This primarily involves physiotherapy and other supportive treatments, including pharmacological interventions, physical activity, surgery and the provision of orthopaedic appliances. Appropriate respiratory support is available as the disease progresses.

The new translational research centre for neuromuscular diseases at University College London is one of six new Medical Research Council funded research centres that will translate scientific discoveries into new drugs, therapies, diagnostic tools, and methods of prevention. This will be the first such centre in the United Kingdom for the study of disabling diseases like DMD and will facilitate the rapid transfer of research knowledge to the clinical environment.

Musculoskeletal Disorders

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who within her Department is responsible for championing the implementation of the musculoskeletal services framework. [145847]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department's 18 weeks orthopaedics project team, led by Philippa Robinson, 18 Weeks National Implementation Director, is working to address the particular issues in orthopaedics, and to maximise the benefits of moving care closer to home. Following the publication of the musculoskeletal services framework in July 2006, the 18 week orthopaedic project is working closely with the NHS to support the implementation of the good practice set out in the musculoskeletal services framework.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many primary care trusts have established clinical assessment and treatment services as encouraged by the musculoskeletal services framework. [145849]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information is not collected centrally.

NHS Blood and Transplant: Birmingham

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the decision to close the National Blood Service Centre in Birmingham; and what discussions she has held with the (a) Unison and (b) Unite trade unions concerning the decision. [145429]

Caroline Flint: The National Blood Service (NBS) infrastructure is not fully adequate for modern processing and testing requirements. The testing and processing facilities require investment and modernisation which is planned as part of the NHS Blood and Transplant Service Strategy. As part of this, the NBS will consolidate blood processing and testing activity into fewer, modern, more flexible buildings. This is being led with the development of an entirely new site at Filton, Bristol, and this will allow the NBS to meet current and prospective national health service needs, effectively and efficiently.

The proposed changes will not impact upon the service to local hospitals. The centres in Birmingham will continue to provide critical services to local hospitals such as continuing to have a local blood bank to meet hospital orders for blood.

I formally met with representatives of Unison and Amicus in December 2006 to discuss the proposals by the NBS.

NHS Bodies and Premises: Inspections

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 23 March 2007, Official Report, column 1198W, on NHS bodies and premises: inspections, which organisations can conduct inspections of NHS bodies and premises under her authority; and whether her Department maintains a list of all organisations which have the power to inspect NHS bodies and premises. [131878]

Andy Burnham: The Healthcare Commission, in their role as the lead inspectorate for health, co-ordinates other regulatory bodies to promote effective and proportionate inspection and regulation.

The Department does not itself maintain a list of organisations who have the power to inspect national health service bodies and premises.

The Healthcare Inspection Concordat was launched in June 2004 to promote better co-ordinated inspection and minimise the data collection burden on NHS trusts. Twenty of the key inspecting bodies in health, including the Department as an associate signatory, are formally signed up to its principles. The Healthcare Commission has been in discussion with various regulatory bodies about their becoming signatories to the concordat.

The list of the 20 signatories is available at:

www.concordat.org.uk/_db/_documents/Concordat_-_version_(May_06).pdf

NHS Commissioning

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the commitment by the Minister of State of 20 February 2007, Official Report, column 62WH, in a debate on NHS Commissioning, when the Minister of State will visit the Warrington Campus of the University of Chester. [145377]

Andy Burnham: A visit to the Warrington Campus of the University of Chester has been provisionally arranged for the morning of Friday 20 July.

NHS: Finance

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on (a) the NHS, (b) NHS hospital and community health services and (c) NHS maternity services in the 2006-07 financial year. [144288]

Andy Burnham: The information for 2006-07 will not be available until the audited accounts are published in the autumn of 2007.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 15 June 2007, Official Report, column 1391W, on NHS: finance, which organisation collects data on the number of practices receiving component two of the payment. [145641]

Andy Burnham: Decisions on the payment of component two of the Directed Enhanced Service (DES) are made by primary care trusts (PCTs) following an assessment of whether practices have fulfilled the commitments in their practice-based commissioning plans. It is for PCTs to maintain data on these DES payments.

NHS: Foreign Nationals

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance is issued to local NHS bodies on claiming money from foreign nationals who use NHS services. [145890]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Anyone who is not ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom is subject to the provisions of the National Health Service (Charges to Overseas Visitors) Regulations 1989, as amended. These require NHS bodies providing hospital services to establish whether a patient is ordinarily resident or, if not, exempt from charges under one of the exemption categories set out in the regulations. Anyone who is not exempt should be charged for any hospital treatment provided.

The charging regulations were amended in April 2004. At the same time the Department issued comprehensive revised and updated guidance to NHS trusts on implementation of the amended regulations.

NHS: Greater London

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding was provided, net of Department of Health penalties and top-slicing clawback (a) in total and (b) by head of population to each NHS care trust in London in each of the last five years. [145951]

Andy Burnham: Table 1 shows the final revenue resource limits (RRL) for primary care trusts (PCTs) covered by London strategic health authority (SHA) for the years 2003-04 to 2005-06. For 2006-07, the provisional outturn figure has been used. The RRLs quoted take account of any adjustments made to the initial allocations to PCTs, including top-slice and clawback, throughout the year.

Table 2 shows the 2003-04 to 2005-06 allocations per unweighted head for PCTs covered by London SHA. Table 3 shows the 2006-07 to 2007-08 revenue allocations per unweighted head for PCTs covered by London SHA. Actual allocations to PCTs are, however, informed by a weighted-capitation formula and pace of change policy.

NHS: ICT

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 12 June 2007, Official Report, column 1004W, on NHS: ICT, when the (a) engineering-based timetables, (b) plan of key milestones and (c) evidence-based development plans will be (i) completed and (ii) made publicly available. [145638]

Caroline Flint: Work has been ongoing since the inception of the national programme, in line with normal programme management arrangements, to regularly review and update the engineering-based development and release plans with suppliers. Since plans can be subject to change for a variety of purposes, including new requirements, changed priorities and the business needs of the national health service, this process will continue throughout the life of the contracts.

Detailed implementation planning became the responsibility of individual trusts and the chief executives of strategic health authorities from April 2007. There are no plans to make these details routinely available.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department set up (a) a Task Force, (b) a Steering Group and (c) any other regular series of meetings on the Connecting for Health programme. [144576]

Caroline Flint: Governance arrangements for the national programme for information technology, which is being delivered by NHS Connecting for Health, are based on Cabinet Office best practice.

NHS: Private Sector

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what payments (a) her Department and (b) the NHS made to BUPA in each year since 1997. [144546]

Andy Burnham: The Department, as part of Government accounting rules, only retain financial information for seven years. We are currently in financial year 2007-08 so our records only go back 2001-02. The following available information covers that period. The financial years 2001-02, 2003-04 and 2004-05 contain no transactions.

Payments in financial year 2002-03: £74,812.25

Payments for financial year 2005-06: £12,863,284.81

The background information for these two payments

GSup 2 was a procurement for a period of less than one year to provide additional capacity in various strategic health authority regions which was fully centrally funded. BUPA were one of three providers of the GSup 2 services. The services provided were almost entirely in orthopaedics.

Payment for financial year 2005-06: £299.01

This payment covers insurance for the play schemes that year.

Payments for financial year 2006-07: £832,633.16

These invoices are part of the GSup2 and were submitted across the financial year. The costs would have accrued from 2005-06.

The information requested in respect of the national health service is not held by the Department.

NHS: Public Participation

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many public consultations were carried out by NHS trusts in 2006-07; and in how many of these consultations the relevant trust's board chose an option which did not have majority public support. [145591]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Under Section 11 of the Health and Social Care Act 2001 (now section 242 of the NHS Act 2006), it is the duty of national health service trusts, primary care trusts and strategic health authorities to make appropriate arrangements to involve and consult patients and the public in service planning, in the development of proposals to change services, and in decisions affecting the operation of services.

Pregnancy Book

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Answer of 25 January 2007, Official Report, column 2046W, on the Pregnancy Book, if she will make available the initial report on screening for kernicterus. [145888]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: A copy of the report, prepared for the United Kingdom National Screening Committee, entitled "Screening for Hyperbilirubinemia" has been placed in the Library.

Prescription Drugs: Channel Islands

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when Ministers from her Department last met with representatives of the Government of the Bailiwicks of (a) Jersey and (b) Guernsey; whether medicines legislation was discussed; and if she will make a statement. [145643]

Caroline Flint: The Lord Chancellor met with the Chief Minister of Guernsey on 24 April this year. Many issues were discussed including the United Kingdom's view on the Medicines Directive. The Lord Chancellor last met with the Chief Minister of Jersey at a dinner he hosted on 22 February. The opportunity to discuss these directives did not arise.

Prescriptions: Fees and Charges

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 12 June 2007, Official Report, column 1008W, on prescriptions: fees and charges, how many prescriptions were dispensed in (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2006-07; and how many in each year were marked evidence not seen. [145640]

Caroline Flint: The numbers of prescriptions items dispensed in the community in England are shown in the following table.

Financial year	Prescription items dispensed (million)
2005-06	733.011
2006-07	762.632

Data on number of prescription items [illegible]ed as evidence not seen are not collected centrally.

Psychology

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her Department's response is to the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence's recommendations on provision of psychological therapies. [142110]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) have issued several items of guidance and technology appraisals that are pertinent to the delivery of psychological therapies, including guidelines on the management of depression and schizophrenia which both identified the effectiveness of psychological therapies. To support the local delivery of NICE Technology Appraisal TA097, we issued implementation guidance for computerised cognitive behavioural therapy in March 2007. In November 2005, the Department launched its improving access to psychological therapies programme. This programme is being extended to a further 10 sites (to add to the two original demonstration sites in Doncaster and Newham) in 2007-08. It is also working with primary care trust commissioners to examine how NICE evidence-based psychological therapies can be offered for patients with depression and anxiety disorders.

Psychology: Finance

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial support was provided by the NHS for psychological therapies in (a) 2006-07 and (b) 2007-08. [142111]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Financial details of the national health service spend for psychological therapies in 2006-07 and the current financial year are not yet available. The most recent data is provided by the "2005/06 National Survey of Investment in Mental Health Services" commissioned by the Department and provided by mental health strategies. For the five years from 2001-02 to 2005-06, there has been a net real terms (i.e. net of pay and prices) increase in investment from £125 million to £142 million.

More recently in April 2007, Professor Louis Appleby, the National Director for Mental Health, described in his report "Mental Health Ten Years On: Progress in Mental Health Reform" that the number of clinical psychologists in the NHS had increased to 6,800, a rise of 2,700 (69 per cent.) since 1997.

Recombinant Factor VII

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who the parties are to the service level agreement referred to in the answer, Official Report, column 817W, on recombinant factor VII of 3 July 2006. [145642]

Caroline Flint: The service level agreement is between the Department and the 10 strategic health authorities.

Royal London Homeopathic Hospital: Closures

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the likely impact of the closure of the Royal London Homeopathic Hospital on Brent residents. [144641]

Andy Burnham: This is a matter for the chair of The University College London Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust. We have written to Robert Naylor informing him of the hon. Member's inquiry. He will reply shortly and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Selly Oak Hospital: Afghan Nationals

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many Afghan nationals have been given treatment in Selly Oak Hospital for (a) gunshot wounds and (b) wounds caused by grenade fragments in each of the last five years. [145046]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Smoking

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what requirement churches and other places of worship have to display no-smoking signs once the public smoking ban is introduced in England. [145503]

Caroline Flint: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 11 June 2007, Official Report, column 879W, for details on the legal requirements for the display of no-smoking signs.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many full-time equivalent staff are employed as (a) regional tobacco control managers and (b) their associated support staff; [145507]

(2) what total budget has been allocated to fund regional tobacco control managers in 2007-08. [145508]

Caroline Flint: Arrangements for regional tobacco control vary around the country. Government Offices of the Regions (GORS) employ some regional tobacco policy managers (RTPMs) and others are employed by primary care trusts. Finance for RTPMs is from a range of sources, including the Department.

The North East region has one full-time equivalent (FTE) RTPM and one FTE support staff and a six month commissioned post of one 0.2 FTE communications officer.

The North West has three FTE posts, including one RTPM.

The East Midlands RPTM post is currently vacant and a recruitment exercise is taking place at the moment.

The South East has an FTE RPTM post and 0.2 FTE administrative support.

The East of England currently has no FTE RTPM or associated support staff. Tobacco control work is undertaken as by 0.5 of FTE for a member of the health programmes team.

The South West has one FTE RTPM and one temporary administrative support varying between 0.4 FTE to one FTE depending on local priorities.

London region has one FTE RTPM and one FTE support.

The West Midlands has a seconded RTPM at 0.8 FTE, additional work is sourced by short-term contracts for specific project work.

Yorkshire and Humberside has one FTE RTPM and a 0.2 FTE administrative support.

In 2007-08, £2 million has been allocated to the regional public health groups' budgets to support work on tobacco control.

Smoking: Prisons

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact on delivery of nicotine replacement therapy within prison establishments of (a) prison staff levels, (b) competing workload demands and (c) prisoner transfers between establishments across the Prison Estate; and if she will make a statement. [145269]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Since April 2006, commissioning responsibility for prison health services has been fully devolved to primary care trusts (PCT).

For each of the financial years 2003-06, the Department provided an additional £500,000 funding to bring smoking cessation services into prisons in England, including nicotine replacement therapy, in line with National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidelines. Resources are now contained within baseline PCT funding and provision is determined by local health needs assessment, in partnership with the prison.

Social Services

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to establish a new consensus for a new, fair and sustainable settlement in social care as stated by the Minister for care services; who the key partners will be in such a consensus; and what definition she uses of (a) fair and (b) sustainable. [145634]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Government have provided significant investment in local services, including in the area of social care, since taking office. Total Government grant has increased by 39 per cent, in real terms since 1997 and this has delivered real improvements.

We are committed to ensuring that local authorities can continue to deliver effective local services. We are working with local government representatives to identify future pressures on local authorities, and the ways in which these can best be managed, as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review (CSR) 2007.

As is normal in the run-up to any Government Spending Review, the Secretary of State and her Ministers hold regular internal meetings to plan the new settlement.

The Government believe it is important that the 2007 CSR is informed by wide public debate on the long-term challenges facing the United Kingdom. Across Government, the public are being engaged on a wide range of issues related to the CSR. In social care, the consultation "Your Health, Your Care, Your Say" provided an opportunity to hear the views of the public of the priorities for their local health and social care services.

South East Coastal Strategic Health Association: Manpower

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have been employed by South East Coastal Strategic Health Association and its successor organisations in each of the last five years. [145830]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is listed in the following table.

NHS hospital and community health services: NHS staff in the South East Coast Strategic Health Authority (SHA) as at 30 September each specified year

Headcount

	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006

Strokes: Research

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) financial and (b) other support her Department provides to charities involved in stroke research; and if she will make a statement. [145042]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Section 64 General Scheme of Grants to voluntary organisations is the Department's main funding source to voluntary organisations; however, the Department cannot award grants if the grant will support research as the Department supports research through the National Institute for Health Research.

Notwithstanding this fact, in recent years, the Department has supported a series of non-research stroke projects proposed by the Stroke Association. In the 2007-08 round the Department also approved stroke related projects by the Afiya Trust and Connect—the Communication Disability Network.

Organisation	Project	Funding period	Amount (£)
Connect—the Communication Disability Network	Enabling new connections	2007-08 to 2009-10	148,210
The Afiya Trust	Stroke Awareness for Black & Minority Ethnic Communities	2007-08 to 2009-10	138,300
The Stroke Association	Stroke is a Medical Emergency: Know the Warning Signs	2006-07 to 2008-09	88,000
The Stroke Association	Blood Pressure Awareness: African Caribbean Communities	2006-07 to 2008-09	117,500
The Stroke Association	Blood Pressure Awareness: Active Intervention	2006-07 to 2008-09	151,500
The Stroke Association	Stroke Prevention: South Asian Communities	[1]2004-05 to 2006-07	70,500

[1] Completed

The Department is working closely with voluntary organisations, including those listed in the previous table and others, in the development of the National Stroke Strategy.

The Department has also taken separate steps to support stroke research. The Department's National Institute for Health Research is investing £20 million over five years in the United Kingdom Stroke Research Network set up in 2005. The Network is supporting clinical trials and other well designed studies conducted by public and private sector funders.

More broadly, over the last ten years, the main part of the Department's total expenditure on health research has been devolved to and managed by national health service organisations. Details of individual NHS supported research projects are available on the national research register at www.dh.gov.uk/research.

Surgery

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of admitted pathways in (a) gastroenterology, (b) cardiology and (c) neurosurgery (i) at the university hospital of North Staffordshire and (ii) in England were completed. [145570]

Referral to treatment (RTT) times for university hospital of North Staffordshire NHS trust and England, March 2007

	Admitted pathways—percentage completed within 18 weeks
Treatment function	University hospital of North Staffordshire NHS trust	England (commissioner based)

Sussex Hospital: Admissions

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many accident and emergency patients were treated at the Sussex County Hospital in Brighton in each of the last (a) 12 months and (b) five years; and how many of them were subsequently admitted to hospital. [145831]

Andy Burnham: The Department does not collect accident and emergency (A&E) attendance or admission data at individual hospital level. Information is available at trust level.

The information in the tables is for all types of A&E department. Published information is available only at quarterly intervals.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many times the Sussex County hospital has been put on red alert in respect of patient influx in the last three years. [145832]

Andy Burnham: The information requested is not collected centrally. National health service organisations will have their own locally determined policy on how to provide health care in times of increased demand.

Tomography: Finance

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects the £20 million extra capital expenditure on new position emission tomography and computed tomography facilities announced on 12 October 2005 to come on stream in clinical practice. [144771]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not routinely collect information on the number, location and operational status of positron emission tomography (PET) scanners or computed tomography (CT) scanners.

The £20 million additional capital expenditure is being made available to strategic health authorities (SHAs) in the financial years 2006-08, through the national health service bundle. It will be for SHAs to decide how best to use this money to meet the needs of its population for PET-CT services.

Tuberculosis: Vaccination

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS care trusts in London have provided the BCG vaccination to all children following the July 2005 issue of the Chief Medical Officer's Directive on national BCG vaccinations; and what the incidence of tuberculosis was in each trust area in the latest period for which figures are available. [145949]

Caroline Flint: On 6 July 2005 the Chief Medical Officer announced that the Bacillus Calmette Guerin (BCG) Vaccination programme would change to a targeted risk based programme. Data on the number of children offered BCG by primary care trust is not held centrally, although the number of children receiving BCG vaccine is collected by the Information Centre and published in the booklet NHS Immunisation Statistics, England 2005-06, a copy of which is available in the Library.

The incidence rate of tuberculosis (TB) is collected by the Health Protection Agency (HPA). The incidence rate for all London primary care trusts in 2005 is shown in the following table:

Vaccination

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the take-up was of (a) measles, mumps and rubella, (b) pneumococcal and (c) menc vaccines in each of the last five years; and what assessment she has made of the impact of the take-up rate of each on the incidence of preventable disease and death. [144435]

Caroline Flint: Information about the uptake of measles, mumps and rubella (MMR) and meningitis C vaccines, along with other childhood immunisations, is published annually in the Department's statistical bulletins. The latest bulletin, NHS Immunisation Statistics, England: 2005-06, has been placed in the Library and on the Department's website at:

www.ic.nhs.uk/statistics-and-data-collections/health-and-lifestyles/immunisation/immunisation-statistics-england-2005-2006.

Information on uptake of pneumococcal vaccine in children is not yet available.

The impact of vaccination on diseases has been immense. Before vaccination was introduced, there used to be over 500,000 cases of measles in some years. In recent years, the number of cases has been under 1,000. I would like to see the rise in MMR uptake to continue so that the number of cases of this serious but preventable disease decline significantly.

The impact of the pneumococcal vaccination programme is already being seen through disease surveillance carried out on our behalf by the Health Protection Agency. The number of cases of serious pneumococcal infection caused by the strains of bacteria that the vaccine protects against is already declining in young children.

The Meningitis C vaccination programme has been a great success, with the rates of the disease falling by over 97 per cent. in all age groups vaccinated.

Voluntary Organisations: Finance

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the reasons are for the changes in funding for (a) the Opportunities for Volunteering fund and (b) section 64 grants. [145636]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Funding through the Opportunities for Volunteering Scheme (OFV) and the section 64 General Scheme of Grants has not changed. We are about to start a strategic funding and investment review into the Department's funding of the Third Sector. This will cover the Department's primary third sector funding streams—S64 and OFV—as well as contracts and grants across the range of departmental programmes.

The aim is to develop a framework for more coherent investment in the sector by the Department that transforms current piecemeal arrangements into a strategic portfolio of investments to support the Department in meeting its objectives more effectively. This will include examination of the potential for reforming the OFV scheme following its 25 years of operation.

West Sussex Primary Care Trust: Expenditure

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money has been spent on preparing West Sussex primary care trust's Fit for the Future consultation exercise; and how much more is budgeted. [145828]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not held centrally. Any proposals for major service change are a matter for the national health service locally.

West Sussex Primary Care Trust: Finance

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the budget is for West Sussex Primary Care Trust in the current year; and what its anticipated budget is in each of the next two years. [145835]

Caroline Flint: West Sussex Teaching Primary Care Trust (PCT) received revenue allocations of £952.5 million in 2006-07 and £1,034.0 million in 2007-08. These represent a cash increase of £155.4 million or 17.7 per cent. over the two years, compared with a national average of 19.5 per cent. West Sussex Teaching PCT will be 2.4 per cent. over target by 2007-08.

Revenue allocations post 2007-08 have not yet been determined.

West Sussex Primary Care Trust: Manpower

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have been employed by West Sussex Primary Care Trust and its predecessor organisations in each of the last five years expressed as (a) full-time equivalent and (b) headcount. [145836]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is provided in the following table:

Written Questions

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will answer question 139039, tabled on 21 May 2007 by the hon. Member for Bournemouth East, on Bournemouth hospital's accident and emergency department. [144760]

Andy Burnham: A reply was given on 19 June 2007, Official Report, column 1628W.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders were (a) issued and (b) breached in each year since their introduction in (i) Suffolk, (ii) Bedfordshire, (iii) Cambridgeshire, (iv) Essex, (v) Hertfordshire, (vi) Norfolk and (vii) England. [143943]

Mr. Coaker: The available information (up to 31 December 2005, latest available) is given in the table. The first table shows the number of orders issued (by year and by area) and the second the number of breach convictions (by area and by year). It is of course possible that an order recorded as having been breached in, say, 2004 could have been issued in 2003, and therefore the two tables are not directly comparable.

1. Previously issued data have been revised following joint Home Office/Court Service data reconciliation exercises.
2. Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

Antisocial Behaviour Orders: Custodial Treatment

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the Answer of 22 March 2007, Official Report, column 1059W, on antisocial behaviour orders: custodial treatment, how many breaches of anti-social behaviour orders occurred in 2005; and how many ended in custodial detention. [130727]

Mr. Coaker: In England and Wales during 2005, there were 7,556 occasions where breach of an ASBO was proven in court. A custodial sentence was given on 3,440 of those occasions.

Antisocial Behaviour Orders: Mentally Ill

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received on antisocial behaviour orders imposed on children and young people with (a) mental health problems and (b) other special needs. [144773]

Mr. Coaker: We have received no such representations. We have regular discussions with interested parties including those that represent children's interests. For example we worked with a wide range of stakeholders on revising our guidance on antisocial behaviour orders for practitioners which includes information on vulnerable people who commit antisocial behaviour. We monitor the overall use of ASBOs on an ongoing basis and adjust policy in response. We will continue to build on that and extend existing ASBO legislation as appropriate. For example, we announced that we would be seeking to put on a statutory footing the existing good practice, as set out in our comprehensive guidance, that juveniles' ASBOs should be reviewed after one year.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for how many failed asylum seekers resident in the UK the Immigration Service does not have a valid current address. [125956]

Mr. Byrne: As the Home Secretary set out in his evidence to the Home Affairs Select Committee on 23 May 2006, following the dismantling of embarkation controls beginning in 1994, no Government have been able to produce an accurate figure for the number of people who are in the country illegally, and that remains the case. On 7 March the Border and Immigration Agency published its enforcement strategy 'Enforcing the Rules' available to view at:

http://www.bia.homeoffice.gov.uk/aboutus/ourplans/enforcementstrategy.

This strategy sets out clear objectives and measures to tackle and identify, amongst others, those individuals who have been refused asylum and not removed and re-enforces the Border and Immigration Agency's commitment to ensuring and enforcing compliance with our immigrations laws.

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what mechanisms are in place to reimburse local authorities for the cost of providing housing and other forms of support for asylum seekers who have exhausted all avenues of appeal waiting for deportation. [110845]

Mr. Byrne: Asylum seekers whose claims are unsuccessful are required to leave the UK. However destitute unsuccessful asylum seeking families with minor dependants normally continue to receive support under section 95 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 from the Border and Immigration Agency. Other destitute unsuccessful asylum applicants who meet the eligibility criteria may be supported by the Agency under section 4 of the 1999 Act.

Local authorities may in some circumstances have a responsibility to provide support, including accommodation, to unsuccessful asylum seekers under section 21 of the National Assistance Act 1948. Support may also be necessary under the Children Act 1989. This may include ongoing support for those leaving care. Eligibility for support under these provisions is subject to the application of the provisions of schedule 3 to the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002.

Local authorities receive funding from central Government towards their revenue expenditure on social services and education. Local authorities also receive funding from DfES for those leaving care. There is no additional payment made in respect of failed asylum seekers.

The Home Office has agreed to establish a working group to discuss a wide range of issues raised by local authorities in respect of asylum seekers and failed asylum seekers, including the costs of supporting those who are destitute but are not supported directly by the Home Office.

Asylum: Deportation

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many failed asylum seekers have been deported to countries which have not signed the UN Convention against Torture 1988 during the last 12 months, broken down by country. [129795]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 26 March 2007]: The table shows the number of principal asylum applicants removed from the UK in 2006 as a result of enforcement action, to countries which have not signed the UN Convention against Torture (1984). A number of countries have ratified the Convention, but have not formally signed it. Removals to these countries have been included in the table.

Voluntary departures are included in figures on removals and therefore it is not possible to say at what stage in the asylum process people are removed, since those departing voluntarily can leave the UK at any time.

The UK looks at all asylum claims, and claims relating to torture on their individual merits and with anxious scrutiny. We take into account the individual's circumstances, the circumstances in the country to which they would be removed and any other relevant information, including, where relevant, any undertakings given by that country. We would not return any individual to a country where it was considered that there was a real risk that he/she would be tortured or made to suffer inhuman or degrading treatment. The decision to remove anyone who claims to fear torture is subject to the right of appeal to the independent Asylum and Immigration Tribunal, or, where applicable, to the Special Immigration Appeals Commission, and from there to the higher courts.

Published statistics on immigration and asylum are available on the Home Office's Research, Development and Statistics website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Asylum: English Language

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking to assist asylum seekers who have no access to English language learning to manage everyday tasks. [127897]

Mr. Byrne: The Border and Immigration Agency provides assistance, support and funding to asylum seekers throughout the asylum process. The application is managed by a single case owner who explains how the asylum process works, is responsible for any support issues, is the single point of contact at any stage during the claim, and who provides information about how to seek access to legal representatives. An interpreter will be provided, if required, at each key event—the screening interview, the first reporting event, the asylum interview and the decision service event.

Key voluntary sector partners are funded by the Border and Immigration Agency to provide a national network of One Stop Services where provision of advice and support is given to asylum seekers, wherever possible in their own language. This is in addition to separate information, given in a language that is understood, which accommodation providers relay to asylum seekers about the property and the locality in which they live, and about how to access statutory and non-statutory services, including the voluntary sector.

Asylum: Expenditure

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent in the last 12 months on (a) specialist support systems, (b) appropriate (section 20) accommodation and support and (c) culturally sensitive counselling services for (i) asylum-seeking children and (ii) asylum-seeking children who have had experiences of torture, political violence or been victims of trafficking and other forms of persecution. [140612]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 4 June 2007]: The Home Office does not collate expenditure for the different items listed and does not keep separate expenditure data for asylum-seeking children and asylum-seeking children who have had experiences of torture, political violence or who have been victims of trafficking and other forms of persecution.

Dependent children within asylum-seeking families are provided with support in the form of accommodation and the payment of cash for subsistence.

Responsibility for providing support to Unaccompanied Asylum Seeking Children (UASC) rests with local authorities which provide an appropriate range of services according to their assessment of the needs of individual children. The Border and Immigration Agency (BIA) reimburse local authorities for most of these costs through the UASC expenditure grant. In the financial year 2005-06, the most recent year for which audited accounts are available, the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) paid local authorities £151 million in UASC grants.

Asylum: Housing

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many accommodation centres have been set up under section 16 of the Immigration, Asylum and Nationality Act 2006. [143605]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 18 June 2007]: Section 16 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 provided for the establishment of accommodation centres. None have been established and we have no plans do so.

Bicycles: Theft

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how bicycle thefts were reported in each police authority in each of the last five years. [145443]

Mr. McNulty: The available data relate to offences of theft of a pedal cycle recorded by the police and are given in the following table:

Borders and Immigration Agency: Correspondence

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what average time was taken for the transfer of files between the Borders and Immigration Agency casework unit and correspondence unit in the last 12 months. [144555]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

British Nationality: Applications

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been made to retake the Knowledge of Life in the UK test due to test centres not administering the test correctly. [141598]

John Reid: The information requested could be obtained only by detailed examination of individual case records at disproportionate cost.

British Nationality: Assessments

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 12 April 2007, Question 130039, on the Life in the UK test, what the average test results were of (a) the British citizens participating in the test pilot and (b) the pilot group as a whole. [133330]

John Reid: The Department used an independent contractor, Ufi, to conduct the pilot tests. Ufi have indicated that in respect of the pilot group as a whole, 73 per cent. of the 245 candidates who completed pilot tests achieved a pass.

In seeking to establish the information requested on the average test results for British citizens, I can also provide further clarification to the hon. Gentleman about the figure of 25 per cent. given for British citizens participating in the pilot test given in my previous answer of 16 April 2007, Official Report, column 470W. This figure of 25 per cent. referred to a benchmark figure of how many native speakers of English (of which British Citizens could be included) the Department asked Ufi to take part in the pilot scheme and not the nationality of participants.

Although the information collected cannot be broken down by nationality, this does not affect the usefulness of the pilot to developing the test proper. The test is not designed to compare whether citizens and non-citizens are achieving similar results and nor was the pilot conducted in that spirit.

British Nationality: Eligibility

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what offences and behaviours are considered to be not conducive to the public good, leading to deprivation of citizenship under section 56 of the Immigration, Asylum and Nationality Act 2006. [143601]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 18 June 2007]: As was explained to Parliament during passage of the Immigration, Asylum and Nationality Bill, deprivation of citizenship might be considered appropriate in cases involving national security (including espionage), war crimes; serious and organised crime; and unacceptable behaviours such as glorification of terrorism.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been deprived of citizenship under section 56 of the Immigration, Asylum and Nationality Act 2006. [143602]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 18 June 2007]: None so far. One person has been deprived and one case is in train under the powers which preceded section 56.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been given penalties under section 15 of the Immigration, Asylum and Nationality Act 2006. [143603]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 18 June 2007]: Section 15 of the Immigration, Asylum and Nationality Act 2006, which replaces section 8 of the Asylum and Immigration Act 1996, has yet to be commenced. This part of the Act is currently the subject of a public consultation which was launched on 15 May 2007. Following this, and subject to the responses, the proposals are due to be implemented by the end of this year.

Crime: Firearms

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) confiscations of firearms and (b) convictions for the illegal possession of firearms there were in each police authority area in each of the last eight years. [139507]

Mr. Coaker: On (a), this data is not collected centrally.

On (b), data from the court proceedings database held by the Ministry of Justice, showing the number of defendants convicted at all courts for possessing or distributing prohibited weapons or ammunition in England and Wales, broken down by police force area and for the years between 1998 to 2005, is shown in the following table.

[1] These data are on the principal offence basis.
[2] Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete.
However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts and police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.
[3] Includes the following statutes and offences:
Firearms Act, 1968 Sec 5(1) (Group I) as amended by Criminal Justice Act 2003 S.288
Possessing or distributing prohibited weapons or ammunition.
Firearms Act 1968 Sec 5(1)(b) (Group I) as amended by Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sec. 288
Possessing or distributing prohibited weapons designed for discharge of noxious liquid etc.
Firearms Act 1968 Sec 5(1A)(a) (Group I) as amended by Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sec. 288
Possessing or distributing firearm disguised as other object
Firearms Act 1968 Sec 5(1A)(b),(c),(d),(e),(f) or (g) as amended by Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sec. 288
Possessing or distributing other prohibited weapons
[4] Staffordshire police force were only able to submit sample data for persons proceeded against and convicted in the magistrates courts for the year 2000. Although sufficient to estimate higher orders of data, these data are not robust enough at a detailed level and have been excluded from the table.

Crimes of Violence: West Mercia Police

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many incidents of so-called honour (a) attempted murders, (b) other acts of violence and (c) forced imprisonment have been reported to his Department by the West Mercia Police in the last 12 months. [144226]

Mr. Coaker: In terms of the recorded crime statistics, there is no requirement for any police force to notify the Home Office of 'honour' crimes. It is the offence as defined by law which will be recorded by the police and reported to the Home Office e.g. serious wounding, common assault, etc. Details of the circumstances for individual offences are not collected centrally.

Deepcut Barracks

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when he was informed that Devon and Cornwall police were of the view that Surrey police should have held a murder inquiry only into the deaths at Deepcut Army Barracks; and if he will make a statement; [143276]

(2) if he will request that a murder inquiry be opened into the deaths of Army recruits at Deepcut Barracks; and if he will make a statement; [143400]

(3) if he will require the publication of the report by Devon and Cornwall police into Surrey police's handling of the investigations of the deaths at Deepcut Army Barracks; and if he will make a statement. [143401]

Mr. McNulty: The report by Devon and Cornwall police was prepared at the request of the chief constable of Surrey police. It is for the chief constable to decide whether to publish the report.

The decision on whether to treat an incident as a possible criminal matter is an operational issue for the police and Ministers have no role in the decision making process.

Departments: Aviation

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many flights to overseas destinations were taken by (a) civil servants and (b) Ministers in his Department in each of the last three calendar years; and what the total cost of such flights were. [144942]

Mr. Byrne: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost. Since 1999, the Government have published on an annual basis, a list of all overseas visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500, as well as the total cost of all ministerial travel overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. Information for 2006-07 is currently being compiled and will be published before the summer recess. All travel is undertaken in accordance with the Civil Service Management Code, the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers.

Departments: DVD

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which DVDs have been produced by his Department in the last 12 months; how many copies of such DVDs were produced; and what the cost to the public purse was of the (a) development, (b) production and (c) distribution of each DVD. [144562]

Mr. Byrne: DVDs are one of a wide range of communication approaches used by the Department. They are only produced if considered the most appropriate vehicle for communicating a particular message or range of information to the audience.

Information on the number of DVDs produced by the Department is not held centrally.

Departments: Energy

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many energy saving light bulbs were purchased by his Department for use on the departmental estate in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [144941]

Mr. Byrne: Home Office policy on the procurement of energy saving light bulbs is to meet the minimum environmental standards outlined in the guidance provided in the Office for Government Commerce Buying Solutions' 'Quick Wins 2007' framework. There is no requirement to monitor the number of energy saving light bulbs purchased. This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in his Department have been allowed to work from home for part of the week in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on home working. [143881]

Mr. Byrne: Information about the number of individuals working from home is not collated centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Home working is one of the flexible working options available to Home Office staff, but there is no entitlement to it. All members of staff are able to apply to work flexibly, including working at home. Applications are subject to local management agreement, based on a number of factors including the particular circumstances of the request and the business and operational needs of the department.

Departments: ICT

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the (a) originally estimated, (b) most recently estimated and (c) outturn cost was of each of the five largest information technology contracts agreed by his Department with outside suppliers over the last five years. [135695]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is provided in the following table:

£ million

Business area	Contract	Original estimate of cost	Most recent estimate of cost	Outturn Cost
NOMS	OMNI (Steria)	250	250	[1]250
IND	TBC (Atos Origin)	200	200	[1]200
IND	Mycroft (SERCO)	42	42	[1]42
IND	Semaphore (IBM)[2]	30	37.16	45.7
Corporate Services	EDRM (CapGemini/ Sirius)	16.5	16.8	8.9

[1] Forecast.

[2] The approved budget for Semaphore was increased in March 2006 in response to terrorist attacks in the UK in July 2005, and to the requirement from the Home Secretary to extend e-Borders data capability.

Departments: Manpower

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were employed in his Department in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [144756]

Mr. Byrne: The Information requested is contained in the Home Office Annual Report(s) 2006-07 and 2004-05 respectively which are available in the Library of the House and on line at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/documents/annual-report-06.pdf?view=Binary (Page 119)

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/documents/annual-report-0405/annrep2005-0-complete?view=Binary (Page 131)

Departments: Marketing

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what promotional items bearing his Department's name or logo or other branding have been procured in each of the last five years; at what cost, broken down by item; and how many units of each item were purchased over that period. [141383]

Mr. Byrne: There is no central record of procured promotional items bearing the Department's name or logo or other branding. To manually examine files across all areas of the Department for specific procured items in each of the last five years would incur disproportionate cost, however, the total expenditure for promotional material for the financial year 2006-07 was £110,000 and for 2005-06 £101,000. Expenditure information for these two years is available following the implementation of the Department's Adelphi Enterprise Resource Planning (ERP) system Accounts Payable Module.

Departments: Official Cars

Mr. Simon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what make and model of car (a) he and (b) each Minister in his Department selected as their official ministerial car; and what criteria were used when making the decision in each case. [141986]

Mr. Byrne: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for South Thanet (Dr. Ladyman) on 14 June 2007, Official Report, column 1269W.

Departments: Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the current rate of employer contribution is to each public sector pension scheme for which his Department has responsibility; what the revenue impact would be of capping the employer contribution to each such scheme at 14 per cent. and if he will make a statement. [144297]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Office has policy responsibility for police pensions. The employer contribution rate is 24.6 per cent. of an officer's pensionable pay. This rate is common to members of the 1987 Police Pension Scheme and the 2006 Police Pension Scheme and applies across all forces and ranks.

It would involve disproportionate costs to calculate the complex effects of capping the employer contribution rate at 14 per cent.

Departments: Public Participation

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many public consultations his Department has undertaken in the last 12 months; and what the cost was of each consultation. [145278]

Mr. Byrne: Over the 12 months to end May 2007, the Home Office launched 20 formal public consultations in order to inform the Department's policy development. Information on the cost of each consultation and the total cost of all consultations could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Public Relations

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) much was spent by his Department on public relations in each of the last five years; [139426]

(2) which (a) advertising agencies and (b) other organisations supplied consultancy services for advertising campaigns for (i) his Department and (ii) its agencies in each of the last five years; and what the cost of these services was. [139437]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Office uses the Central Office of Information's (COI) framework of agencies to work on advertising campaigns.

Under the terms of the COI framework agreements, advertising agencies are contracted to supply advertising services only, i.e., creative products based on a communications strategy. Advertising agencies on COI's roster do not supply broader consultancy services. On occasion wider ranging consultancy projects may inform campaign work but the costs would not be attributed to the campaign.

Departments: Recruitment

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department and its agencies paid to recruitment consultants in each year since 1997. [140027]

Mr. Byrne: The Department maintains records of expenditure on agency and temporary staff. It does not maintain separate records of fees paid to recruitment agencies. To provide such detailed information could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Research

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his Department's expenditure on communications research was in each year since 1997-98; and how much of this cost was accounted for by producing (a) reports on the public perceptions of his Department or its agencies, (b) stakeholder surveys, (c) national media evaluations, (d) regional media evaluations and (e) other research. [136993]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is given the table.

For the years for which consistent records are available, expenditure on communications research is as follows:

	2001-02	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06	£ 2006-07

Departments: Work Permits

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many work permits were applied for by (a) his Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years. [126803]

John Reid: The following table shows the number of applications for a 'Work Permit' where the employer was recorded as either 'The Home Office' or one of its agencies, namely: the Criminal Records Bureau, the Identity and Passport Service and HM Prison Service. It is not viable to identify any applications where the employer name was not recorded in this way.

The figures do not include applications from Independent Inspectorates and Ombudsmen or non-departmental public bodies.

The figures quoted are not provided under National Statistics protocols and have been derived from local management information and are therefore provisional and subject to change.

Deportation: Afghanistan

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people whose asylum claims have failed are awaiting deportation to Afghanistan. [142274]

Mr. Byrne: As the Home Secretary set out in his evidence to the Home Affairs Select Committee on 23 May 2006, following the dismantling of embarkation controls beginning in 1994, no Government have been able to produce an accurate figure for the number of people who are in the country illegally, and that remains the case. The Home Secretary has set a clear goal of reintroducing systems to count everyone in and out of Britain.

Detainees

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department embassy officials from which countries have met asylum seekers detained in the UK in the last 12 months. [141405]

John Reid: Certain countries have specific arrangements with the Border and Immigration Agency to interview individuals, for the purpose of agreeing to issue an Emergency Travel Document if nationality cannot be confirmed by other means. We do hold the information requested but agreements between the Home Office and other countries are sensitive and disclosure could damage our relationship with the country concerned, our relations with other states and prejudice our ability to operate an efficient removals system.

Countries where return is facilitated by documents other than an Emergency Travel Document may also request an interview to establish nationality. Data is not centrally collated on these cases and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Detainees: Correspondence

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances correspondence between hon. and right hon. Members and detainees is opened by staff in immigration removal centres before it reaches recipients; and if he will make a statement. [144733]

Mr. Byrne: Correspondence between hon. and right hon. Members and detainees is not opened by staff in Immigration Removal Centres.

A situation may arise where the centre manager has reasonable cause to believe that the contents of an envelope may endanger the security of the centre or the safety of others. Under these circumstances the envelope may be opened in front of the detainee.

EC Accession

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will write to the hon. Member for Glasgow South West, as referred to in the answer of 8 November 2006, Official Report, column 1646W, on accession countries. [104855]

Mr. Byrne: I wrote to the hon. Member on 21 June 2007.

Edward Chininga

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what mechanisms Edward Chininga was permitted to transit via Gatwick; whether officials were aware of his position on the EU no fly list for selected Zimbabwean nationals; at what point Ministers were made aware of his transiting; and if he will make a statement. [133087]

Mr. Byrne: I shall write separately to the hon. Member.

Entry Clearances

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what consideration is given to service in the UK armed forces by non-UK nationals when deciding who is eligible to reside in the UK; [141396]

(2) under what criteria non-UK nationals can legally (a) reside and (b) work in the UK; [141397]

(3) what criteria are used to measure whether an individual has strong ties with the UK when considering whether or not to allow that person to reside in the UK. [141398]

John Reid: The rules applying to applications for indefinite leave to enter or remain in the United Kingdom by foreign and Commonwealth nationals discharged from HM Forces and by former Gurkhas who completed their service on or after 1 July 1997 are set out in paragraphs 276E to 276Q of the Immigration Rules. They include the requirement for a minimum of four years' service to have been completed prior to discharge. I would refer the hon. Member to the relevant policy contained on the Border and Immigration Agency website at:

http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/lawandpolicy/immigrationrules/part7

Discretion may be exercised for former members of HM Forces discharged from service before 1 July 1997 or discharged more than two years prior to the date of application where there are strong reasons why settlement in the UK is appropriate. In such cases there is the same requirement for a minimum of four years' service to have been completed prior to discharge. The relevant guidance is contained in Chapter 15, Section 2A of the Immigration Directorate Instructions at:

http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/documents/idischapter15/

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many work permits were issued in each year since 2000; and how many of them were for (a) nurses, (b) doctors, (c) lecturers and (d) teachers for overseas nationals from (i) Africa, (ii) Asia, (iii) South America and (iv) the Caribbean. [144097]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 19 June 2007]: The following table shows the number of work permit applications which were approved for overseas nationals, in the period 1 January 2000 to 31 May 2007 from (a) Africa, (b) Asia (c) South America and (d) The Caribbean.

The figures quoted are not provided under National Statistics protocols and have been derived from local management information and are therefore provisional and subject to change.

Entry Clearances: Domestic Service

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to end the domestic worker visa programme; and if he will make a statement. [125200]

Mr. Byrne: Under the points-based system, there will not be a separate route for overseas domestic workers in private households.

We intend, however, to make provision for "domestic assistants" under revised arrangements for business visitors, in the latter part of next year. Before doing so, we are undertaking some research to better understand the ways in which victims of trafficking and exploitation entered the UK, especially to understand the risks associated with those entering as domestic workers. On the back of this research we will consult publicly on the business visitor arrangements and the safeguards around them.

Fixated Threat Assessment Centre

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what criteria the Fixated Threat Assessment Centre use to decide whom to investigate; [143132]

(2) how many people have been (a) detained, (b) sectioned and (c) investigated by the Fixated Threat Assessment Centre; [143141]

(3) what the (a) names and (b) job descriptions are of the employees of the Fixated Threat Assessment Centre; [143142]

(4) who authorised the establishment of the Fixated Threat Assessment Centre. [143033]

Mr. McNulty [holding answers 15 June 2007]: The Fixated Threat Assessment Centre (FTAC) was established in order to better protect the public and vulnerable individuals in response to evidence that a significant proportion of people who engage in bizarre communications or contact with prominent people in public life are severely and acutely mentally ill and urgently need professional help. A small but significant number of such individuals can pose a risk to the public, the prominent person, and themselves, particularly in environments where there are armed police officers. The Home Office, the Department of Health and the Metropolitan Police Service agreed to establish a joint police/mental health unit, on a pilot basis, to assess and manage the risk posed by such individuals. Where appropriate, FTAC will introduce (or reintroduce) the individuals into existing community mental health care through established pathways. If offences are disclosed, and the circumstances warrant such intervention, consideration will also be given to a criminal investigation.

Since its creation in October 2006, FTAC has dealt with 168 cases. FTAC does not detain people in psychiatric hospitals. When it encounters an individual in need of mental health care it alerts their general practitioners and psychiatrists, who then provide appropriate help under existing legislation. FTAC may make use of police powers under section 136 of the Mental Health Act 1983 to take a person who appears to be suffering from mental disorder, and in immediate need of care or control, to a place of safety. When people are removed to hospital under section 136, they are examined by a registered medical practitioner and interviewed by an approved social worker, not associated with FTAC, in order to make any necessary arrangements for their treatment or care. To date, FTAC personnel have used this power on nine occasions.

The remainder of the information sought by the hon. Gentleman relates to operational matters which are the responsibility of the Metropolitan Police Service. I have asked the Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police Service to write to the hon. Gentleman to provide him with this information.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many individuals have been detained by the Fixed Threat Assessment Centre since its inception, broken down by (a) gender and (b) ethnic origin; what the (i) average and (ii) maximum length of detention has been; and how many are currently detained; [141343]

(2) what safeguards are in place to ensure that individuals detained as a result of actions by the Fixed Threat Assessment Centre are only detained under the appropriate legislation; [141344]

(3) what reasons underlay the decision to establish the Fixed Threat Assessment Centre; who decided it should be established; how many (a) police officers, broken down by rank, (b) psychiatrists and (c) psychologists are assigned to the centre; and if he will make a statement. [141345]

Mr. McNulty [holding answers 11 June 2007]: The Fixated Threat Assessment Centre (FTAC) was established in order to better protect the public and vulnerable individuals in response to evidence that a significant proportion of people who engage in bizarre communications or contact with prominent people in public life are severely and acutely mentally ill and urgently need professional help. A small but significant number of such individuals can pose a risk to the public, the prominent person and themselves, particularly in environments where there are armed police officers. The Home Office, the Department of Health and the Metropolitan Police Service agreed to establish a joint police/mental health unit, on a pilot basis, to assess and manage the risk posed by such individuals. Where appropriate, FTAC will introduce (or re-introduce) the individuals into existing community mental health care through established pathways. If offences are disclosed, and the circumstances warrant such intervention, consideration will also be given to a criminal investigation.

FTAC is comprised of nine police officers (one chief inspector, one inspector, one sergeant and six police constables) and five mental health professionals (three full-time community psychiatric nurses, a half-time forensic psychiatrist and a half-time forensic psychologist).

FTAC does not detain people in psychiatric hospitals. When it encounters an individual in need of mental health care it alerts their general practitioners and psychiatrists, who then provide appropriate help under existing legislation. FTAC may make use of police powers under section 136 of the Mental Health Act 1983 to take a person who appears to be suffering from mental disorder, and in immediate need of care or control, to a place of safety. When people are removed to hospital under section 136, they are examined by a registered medical practitioner and interviewed by an approved social worker, not associated with FTAC, in order to make any necessary arrangements for their treatment or care. To date, FTAC personnel have used this power on nine occasions (comprising six white, north European males, one white, south European male, two white, north European females).

Foreigners: Health Services

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are in place to ensure that visitors to the UK from (a) inside and (b) outside the EU have health insurance for the duration of their stay. [144523]

Mr. Byrne: Visitors from the EU, other EEA countries and Switzerland are covered by EU regulations whereby member states reimburse each other for medical treatment for which the need arises during a visit to another member state. In addition, the UK has similar bilateral healthcare arrangements with a number of non-EEA countries.

Overseas visitors not covered by these arrangements are not entitled to free NHS hospital treatment unless they or the treatment received are exempt from charges under the provisions of the NHS regulations. Overseas visitors managers in hospitals check a patient's eligibility for free treatment and apply charges if appropriate.

People who are not entitled to free treatment are therefore advised to take out appropriate health insurance before visiting the UK but this is not compulsory. However, if an immigration officer has reason to believe that a passenger is seeking entry with the intention of seeking NHS treatment to which he or she is not entitled, entry may be refused.

The cross-Government strategy Enforcing the Rules: a strategy to ensure and enforce compliance with our immigration laws published on 7 March commits to reviewing the rules on access to the NHS by foreign nationals, and to running a pilot in three NHS trusts with a view to improving the collection of revenue from those who are not entitled to free treatment.

Gurkhas

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on Government policy on UK residency for former Gurkhas. [140708]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 7 June 2007]: The rules applying to applications for indefinite leave to enter or remain in the United Kingdom by former Gurkhas who completed their service on or after 1 July 1997 are set out in paragraphs 276E to 276K of the Immigration Rules. I would refer the hon. Gentleman to the relevant policy contained on the Border and Immigration Agency website at:

http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/lawandpolicy/immigrationrules/part7

Discretion may be exercised for Gurkhas discharged from service before 1 July 1997, and who are not covered by the Immigration Rules, where there are strong reasons why settlement in the UK is appropriate. This guidance is contained in Chapter 15, Section 2A of the Immigration Directorate Instructions at:

http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/documents/idischapter15/

Highly Skilled Migrant Programme

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of abuse of the Highly Skilled Migrant Programme he identified prior to the changes to the Programme. [117781]

John Reid: The reason for recent changes to the new verification policy in the Highly Skilled Migrant Programme is to strengthen the grounds on which we can refuse applications where there is a strong case to indicate that they are not genuine. The new Immigration Rules provide the Border and Immigration Agency with the legal basis to refuse applications under the Highly Skilled Migrant Programme to tackle particular instances of abuse. Namely, they allow us to:

Refuse an application if a non-genuine document has been submitted including in circumstances where that document was not material to the outcome of the application.

Refuse an application if we have reasonable doubts about a document and our verification checks have not been able to show whether or not the document is genuine.

We have still been able to refuse most applications in the past where forged documents were submitted.

HSMP has been a robust scheme, but we are tightening it up even further in line with our aim of cutting down on abuse within the migration system.

Identity Cards

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 27 November 2006, Official Report, columns 390-2W, on identity cards, what the value was of each contract; what other contracts his Department has signed with external organisations on the (a) identity cards project and (b) National Identity Register; and what the value was of each additional contract. [104624]

John Reid: The following table details the external organisations to which the Home Office Identity Cards Programme let contracts or made payments between the financial years 2004-05 and 2005-06.

Since the merger of the Home Office Identity Cards Programme and the UK Passport Service to create the Identity and Passport Service on 1 April 2006, projects to deliver biometric passports, identity cards and other improvements have been necessarily combined. As much of the functionality needed to implement identity cards is also required for the implementation of biometric passports, this is the most cost-effective way to deliver these initiatives (e.g. both the implementation of biometric passports and identity cards will require a very similar application procedure as well the procurement of biometric recording equipment, data storage capability for biographical and biometric information and offices to facilitate enrolment).

As a result, much of the work conducted by Identity and Passport Service cannot be categorised, both financially and operationally, as contributing towards either the introduction of biometric passports or identity cards alone. The work is accounted for as future development projects.

Equally, contracts with external organisations are signed on the basis of providing services to project or activities which can apply to both existing passport operational business as well as the future development of biometric passports, identity cards and future improvements. As a result, a breakdown of payments made to such organisations for the purposes of the development of identity cards or the National Identity Register in the financial year 2006-07 cannot be provided.

However, the following provides a list of external organisations from which the Identity and Passport Service has obtained either consulting services and/or contracted staff in the financial year 2006-07 and the level of payment which has been attributed to the future development of both biometric passports, identity cards and associated improvements in that financial year. The list excludes payments attributed to organisations providing legal and professional services.

Even without the introduction of identity cards, a significant proportion of this expenditure would have been required in order to prepare for the introduction of second biometric passports. Overall, it is estimated that around 70 per cent. of the total cost of the scheme would need to be incurred in order to introduce the second biometric passport incorporating fingerprint biometrics.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 21 March 2007, Official Report, column 970W, on identity cards, what estimate he has made of each strand of the national identity project that are (a) required and (b) not required for biometric passports. [130331]

John Reid: Since the merger of the Home Office Identity Cards Programme and the UK Passport Service to create the Identity and Passport Service on 1 April 2006, projects to deliver biometric passports, identity cards and other improvements have been necessarily combined. As much of the functionality needed to implement identity cards is also required for the implementation of biometric passports, this is the most cost-effective way to deliver these initiatives (e.g. both the implementation of biometric passports and identity cards will require a very similar application procedure as well the procurement of biometric recording equipment, data storage capability for biographical and biometric information and offices to facilitate enrolment).

As a result, much of the work conducted by Identity and Passport Service cannot be categorised, both financially and operationally, as contributing towards either the introduction of biometric passports or identity cards alone. The work is accounted for in future development projects. My estimate is that only one project relating to card production would solely relate to the introduction of identity cards but the work of this project at this stage of the programme primarily involves analysis related to common aspects for both passport and identity card developments (e.g. specification for and procurement of chip technology). The cost can therefore not be disaggregated at this stage of the programme.

Illegal Immigrants: Identity Cards

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of illegal immigrants who are likely to be detected each year as a result of the introduction of the identity cards scheme. [136991]

Joan Ryan: Although no such estimates have yet been made, one of the statutory purposes of the identity cards scheme is to provide a secure and reliable method of identifying people resident in the United Kingdom, where that is in the public interest, including for the purposes of the enforcement of immigration controls, and this will act as a major deterrent to potential illegal migrants.

Immigrants: Turkey

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many migrants from Turkey were granted (a) exceptional leave and (b) indefinite leave to remain as a result of the provisions of the Ankara Agreement in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [142515]

Mr. Byrne: No grants of exceptional leave to remain were given as a result of the provisions of the Ankara Agreement.

Only three grants of indefinite leave to remain was given during the period requested, one in 2004 and two in 2006.

Information on decisions relating to Turkish nationals making applications for the period May 2005 to December 2006 was published by the Department in February 2007. It can be found at the following website:

http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/6353/aboutus/ECAA_final.pdf

Immigration and Nationality Directorate: Standards

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the legacy was of case records still to be decided by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate on (a) 16 July 2006 and (b) 12 March 2007; what estimate he has made of the time it will take to clear these cases; and whether the legacy of cases is being dealt with (i) after and (ii) at the same time as new cases. [127657]

Mr. Byrne: In his statement to Parliament on 19 July 2006, the Home Secretary advised that there was a legacy of between 400,000 and 450,000 electronic and paper records relating to unresolved asylum cases, and that we would aim to clear these cases in five years or less. It is our intention to complete consideration of all current legacy cases by July 2011.

The Director General of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to the Home Affairs Committee on 19 February with an update on the Legacy Programme. A copy of the letter is in the Library.

Immigration Control

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his Department will liaise with the Scottish Parliament Cabinet Secretary of Justice to consider the creation of a new international organisation to promote common international standards and technology in border control. [144405]

Mr. Byrne: We are in the very early stages of considering the potential for development of such a body. This work will be taken forward in liaison with interested parties in the UK and abroad.

Immigration: Appeals

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average cost of an immigration appeal, excluding deportation and asylum appeals, before the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal where his Department is represented by (a) a presenting officer and (b) Treasury counsel was over the last 12 months. [141410]

John Reid: The average cost of an immigration appeal before the tribunal where the Home Office is represented by a Home Office Presenting Officer is £981. The average cost where the Home Office is represented by Treasury Counsel is estimated to be £1,448.

The figures represent an estimated average of all immigration appeal hearings before the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal, excluding deportation and asylum appeals, for the last financial year including the costs incurred by the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal and the average cost for providing a Presenting Officer or Treasury Counsel.

Immigration: Kosovo

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average waiting time was for citizenship application forms to be processed for applicants from Kosovo in the latest period for which figures are available. [141765]

Mr. Byrne: The average waiting time for the processing of citizenship applications from receipt to decision for applicants from Kosovo was 3.53 months for the 12 month period up to 31 May 2007.

This information has not been quality assured, and is not a national statistic. It should be treated as provisional management information.

Labour Party: Conferences

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the estimated costs are of policing the Special Labour Party Conference on 24 June in Manchester; and who will meet the costs. [144988]

Mr. McNulty: The chief constable of Greater Manchester police has advised that he estimates the costs of policing the event will be £200,000. I have spoken to the chief constable and the chair of the Police Authority to discuss the issue and explained the procedures for applying to the Home Office for special grant support. The force has expressed its intention to submit a grant which will be processed in the usual way.

Members: Correspondence

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will provide a substantive answer to Question 123572, on removal proceedings, tabled on 21 February by the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hallam for answer on 23 February. [141355]

John Reid: I replied to the hon. Member on 21 June 2007, Official Report, column 2065W.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department expects to respond to the letter of 14 March from the hon. Member for Billericay on Mr. I. Clarke of Billericay. [145612]

Mr. Byrne: I wrote to the hon. Member for Billericay on 22 June 2007.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the Minister of State for Nationality, Citizenship and Immigration to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Inverness, Nairn, Badenoch and Strathspey of 19 March 2007, reference SP2271, on employees of Strathaird Salmon Ltd, Inverness. [140446]

Mr. Byrne: I wrote to the hon. Member on 21 June 2007.

Nathalie Ketchanou

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what basis Miss Nathalie Ketchanou was immediately returned to the UK from Kenya following her deportation from the UK; and at what cost. [134975]

Mr. Byrne: I wrote to the hon. Member on 21 June 2007.

National Police Memorial Day

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to attend the National Police Memorial Day on 30th September 2007. [143203]

Mr. McNulty: It is very likely that my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary and myself will attend the National Police Memorial day as was the case in 2006 in Belfast.

Offenders: Deportation

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign national prisoners were removed from the United Kingdom by administrative removal in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [144736]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested could be obtained only by the detailed examination of individual records at disproportionate cost.

On 14 June the Chief Executive of the Border and Immigration Agency wrote to the Home Affairs Committee to provide the most recent information available on foreign national prisoners. In this letter the Director reported that 2784 foreign national prisoners were deported or removed in the financial year 2006-07. A copy of this letter is available from the Library of the House.

Offensive Weapons: Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were (a) injured and (b) killed as a result of knife crime offences in West Lancashire in each year since 1997. [144823]

Mr. Coaker: The information available centrally relates to homicides by sharp instrument recorded each year between 1997-98 and 2005-06. As figures are not collected below police force area level, data relating to Lancashire police are given in the table.

Offences currently recorded[1] as homicide by sharp instrument[2] by Lancashire police: 1997-98 to 2005-06

Year offence initially	Lancashire police

Passports: Interviews

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations (a) his Department and (b) the Identity and Passport Service have received on the account taken of the need for interviews in the costs of first-time passport applications. [144460]

Joan Ryan: Any representations received in the Home Office on issues relating to British passports are passed on to the Identity and Passport Service.

The statistical breakdown of complaints received by the Identity and Passport Service does not show this issue as a separate category. From correspondence dealt with in the Identity and Passport Service HQ in 2007, one representation on the account taken in passport fees of the costs of interviews has been identified.

Police Air Support Units

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police authorities operate shared police air support units. [145440]

Mr. McNulty: The following police authorities operate joint police air support units in formal shared-cost arrangements:

Avon and Somerset
Gloucestershire
Cambridgeshire
Essex
Suffolk
Derbyshire
Nottinghamshire
Leicestershire
Northamptonshire
Warwickshire
Northumbria
Cleveland
Durham
South Wales
Gwent
Thames Valley
Bedfordshire
Hertfordshire
West Mercia
Staffordshire

Police: Boats

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were employed in Marine Units in each police authority in each of the last 10 years. [143932]

Mr. McNulty: The available data relate to the number of people primarily employed in the function "marine". This includes all individuals who predominately conduct marine or boat patrols including supervisors, and those who perform support functions within marine sections or units. This does not include those individuals who carry out underwater searches.

The available data for police officers are from 2002-03 onwards, and the available data for police staff are from 2004-05 onwards, both are given in the following tables.

Police: Cameras

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when he expects the police head camera pilot project to be completed; and what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the pilot in reducing levels of violent crime; [143244]

(2) which police authorities are using head camera technology. [143245]

Mr. McNulty: The Plymouth Body Worn Video Devices Pilot project ended on 31 March 2007.

The final assessment report into the effectiveness of the cameras during the pilot in reducing crime, increasing numbers of offenders brought to justice and reducing police bureaucracy will be published, together with the associated guidance for the Police use of Body Worn Video Devices, at a launch event on 12 July 2007 in Plymouth.

42 police forces across the UK have expressed an interest in this head camera project. The Home Office does not hold statistics on how many forces have implemented the technology to date.

Police: Disciplinary Proceedings

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 14 June 2007, Official Report, column 1240W, on police: disciplinary proceedings, what steps he is taking to address the level of suspensions of (a) full-time police officers and (b) police community support officers; and if he will make a statement. [144784]

Mr. McNulty: The new police officer misconduct procedures that are currently being developed will modernise the police officer disciplinary process and should lead to a speedier resolution of misconduct matters and thereby reduce the time that police officers are required to be suspended. The new procedures do not however apply to PCSO's, who are subject to their employment contract and decisions to suspend are for the forces concerned.

Police: Helicopters

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has issued to police authorities on the procurement of police helicopters; and if he will make a statement. [145437]

Mr. McNulty: The current procurement basis for Police aircraft (helicopters and aeroplanes) is the extant 1993 National Air Support Strategy. This document established Home Office capital funding (originally on a 49 per cent. (half grant and half credit approval)/51 per cent. basis) to encourage the rapid growth of Air Support Units. It also encouraged forces to operate in consortia, to share costs, and set funding priorities for new aircraft, equipment and infrastructure.

In 2004 the funding arrangements were revised to provide up to a 40 per cent. (all grant) contribution to capital projects from a total allocation of £5 million.

Police: Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crime scene investigators are in post in each police force in West Lancashire; and what percentage of those are civilian. [144957]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is not collected centrally in the police personnel statistics. The available information is the number of police officers and police staff who are primarily involved in the function "Scenes of Crime".

The available data are for the Lancashire police force, and are given in the following table.

Scenes of crime function[1,2] (FTE)[3] in Lancashire police force as at 31 March 2006

	Number/percentage
Total number of officers/staff	74
Percentage of civilian staff in total number	93

[2] Overall force totals including those on career breaks or maternity/paternity leave. The data in the function breakdown is from unpublished sources and therefore totals may not match totals found in the published data.

Police: Manpower

Mark Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there were in each police force in England and Wales in each of the last 10 years. [142957]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is set out in the following table.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police staff were dedicated solely to the recovery of stolen works of art in each of the last 10 years. [142965]

Mr. McNulty: This is a matter for each local constabulary.

Police: Motor Vehicles

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many accidents police vehicles were involved in each of the last five years; how many injuries were sustained by (a) police officers and (b) police community support officers in such accidents; and if he will make a statement. [143199]

Mr. McNulty: The available data are from 2002-03 onwards and are given in the tables. The data are not available by rank.

Police: Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his latest estimate is of the total cost of all police pensions as a share of police spending in each year from 1990-91 to 2020-21; and if he will make a statement. [144276]

Mr. McNulty: Information on the total cost of police pensions as a share of police spending since 1990-91 is not held centrally as the administration of the police pension schemes is the responsibility of individual police authorities. Information on financial statistics, including expenditure on police pensions and overall spending, for police forces is included in the annual reports published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy (CIPFA). This information is gathered independently of the Home Office.

The following figures are the most recently published projections of total future expenditure on police pensions in England and Wales, net of the contributions made by serving officers. These were produced by the Government Actuary's Department (GAD) as part of the consultation process on the new system for funding police pensions in 2005. GAD advise that in view of the time elapsed since the figures were produced they should be viewed only as indicative of the likely future trend of police pensions expenditure. No projections are available for 2013-14 to 2020-21:

Financial year	Estimated pensions expenditure (£ billion)
2007-08	1.61
2008-09	1.74
2009-10	1.88
2010-11	2.00
2011-12	2.12
2012-13	2.25

Police spending is based on government grants on which no decisions have yet been taken for the comprehensive spending review (CSR) years and on police precept which is a matter for local authorities. Information on projected police spending for 2007-08 is included in the annual reports published by CIPFA.

The system for financing police pensions changed on 1 April 2006. Under the new system, police authorities no longer have to meet the cost of pensions in payment out of their operating accounts. Police authorities now have a separate pensions account for this purpose, into which are paid officers' contributions and a new employer's contribution. Where the pensions account does not have enough funds to meet the cost of pensions in any year it is topped up with a grant from central Government; any surplus is recouped. A key benefit of this change is that it takes away from police authorities the responsibility for meeting the rising cost of pensions in payment as a result of an increase in the number of pensioners.

Police: Vocational Training

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to promote the Fullbright Fellowship in Police Studies scheme. [145417]

Mr. McNulty: The National Policing Improvement Agency is responsible for the Fulbright Fellowship in Police Studies. Details of the Fulbright Fellowship are currently available on the Home Office Website. The NPIA, ACPO and the Fulbright Commission will be working together to promote the scheme across the police service.

Police: Weapons

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent on the development of non-lethal weaponry to be used by the police in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [143755]

Mr. McNulty: Funding dedicated to the development of less lethal technologies for the police through the Home Office Scientific Development Branch—previously the Police Scientific Development Branch—is set out in the following table.

2002-03	623,551
2003-04	50,300
2004-05	274,140
2005-06	111,409
2006-07	132,711

In addition, the breakdown of cross-Government spend through the Defence Science and Technology Laboratory on developing the Attenuated Energy Projectile (AEP), its predecessor the L21A1 and the Discriminating Irritant Projectile (DIP), is set out in the following table.

2002-03	168,005
2003-04	715,885
2004-05	1,338,189
2005-06	401,053
2006-07	768,191
2007-08	92,097

The development of the L21A1, the AEP and the DIP is overseen by the UK Steering Group on Alternative Policing Approaches Towards the Management of Conflict, set up in line with recommendations 69 and 70 of the Patten Report to establish less potentially lethal alternatives to the baton round and expand the range of tactical options available to operational commanders. The development of less lethal alternatives also addresses the Government's responsibilities arising from article 2 of the UN Basic Principles on the use of Force and Firearms which states that Governments and law enforcement agencies should develop a range of means as broad as possible and equip law enforcement officials with various types of weapons and ammunition that would allow for a differentiated use of force and firearms.

Prisoners: Foreigners

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign national prisoners were transferred from immigration removal centres to open prisons in each of the last three years; and what the criteria were for transferral. [132349]

John Reid: Time-served foreign national prisoners who are held in the Border and Immigration Agency's Removal Estate would only be transferred to prison accommodation where their behaviour threatens the security or control of the Removal Centre concerned or where they are subject to further criminal charges.

Those transfers relating to issues of security or control would not be to category D prisons. Where an individual is transferred back to prison custody because they are subject to further criminal charges, they would be transferred to a closed prison near the court before which they were to appear.

Radio Frequency Identification

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on the regulation of the use of radio frequency identifiers; and to what use information derived from these is put. [145015]

Margaret Hodge: I have been asked to reply.

The use of radio frequency identifiers (RFID) is regulated by Ofcom under the terms of the Wireless Telegraphy Act. Licenses may be granted setting out permitted power levels, frequency bands and antenna configurations to reduce the likelihood of interference with other radio spectrum users.

Harmonised standards maximise the benefits of RFID use in global supply chains. In January 2006 Ofcom responded to a recommendation from the European Conference of Postal and Telecommunications Administrations (CEPT) making harmonised spectrum available for RFID use in the UK.

The need for further harmonisation was noted in the April 2007 European Commission Communication (7544/07) 'Radio Frequency Identification (RFID) in Europe: steps towards a policy framework'. The Government support this approach.

RFID is an important business technology in food production, logistics, supply chain and retail. Information derived from it is used for quality assurance and audit and for efficient management of shipping, supply chain, warehousing and stock. It is used increasingly in documents, banknotes and ticketing to reduce counterfeiting. Millions of RFID enabled cards are used by commuters, easing access to transport systems. RFID is starting to be used in health care where it can significantly enhance patient safety.

Information derived from RFID normally describes objects. Where information pertains to, or is associated with, persons that information is subject to the terms of the Data Protection Act. The Government believe the current regulatory regime is adequate but keeps it under review in light of future technological and market developments.

Sea Carrier Liaison Officers

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) pursuant to the written statement of 18 June 2007, Official Report, columns 76-77WS, on the Managing of Global Migration Strategy, how many of the proposed Sea Carrier liaison officers will be stationed in Scotland; and at what ports they will be stationed; [144402]

(2) what plans his Department has to liaise with the Scottish Parliament Cabinet Secretary for Justice on the deployment of the proposed Sea Carrier liaison officers. [144403]

Mr. Byrne: Based on the successful model of the Airline liaison officer, we are examining the concept of a Sea liaison officer who could undertake a similar function at major sea ports of embarkation to the UK. This work is at an early stage and will be taken forward in liaison with all interested parties in the UK and abroad. It is too soon to say where such officers would be located or how many there would be.

Seasonal Workers

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many EU nationals registered to enter the United Kingdom to work as seasonal workers in agriculture in 2007, broken down by nation and region of origin; and if he will make a statement. [132081]

Mr. Byrne: Provisional figures indicate that the nine contracted operators, administering the Home Office Seasonal Agricultural Workers Scheme (SAWS), issued 1,535 SAWS work cards to Bulgarian nationals and 890 to Romanian nationals for a set period not exceeding six months in the period 1 January 2007 to 31 March 2007.

We are unable to provide geographical data broken down by region of origin.

Data on Bulgaria and Romania are available on the BIA website by following the link below:

http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/aboutus/reports/bulgarianandromanianaccession

The figures quoted are not provided under National Statistics protocols and have been derived from local management information and are therefore provisional and subject to change.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign students registered to enter the United Kingdom to work as seasonal workers in agriculture in each of the last 10 years, broken down by nation and region of origin; and if he will make a statement. [132080]

Mr. Byrne: The following table shows the number of Seasonal Agricultural Workers Scheme (SAWS) work cards issued based on the date the work card was printed. It is broken down by the top 20 nationalities for each year from 2004 to March 2007.

For 1997 to 2003 inclusive, nationality data is not available.

The figures quoted are not provided under National Statistics protocols and have been derived from local management information and are therefore provisional and subject to change.

Security Measures

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 6 June 2007, Official Report, columns 618-20W, on security measures, how many individuals have been (a) charged with and (b) convicted of an offence of encouraging terrorism under the Terrorism Act 2006. [144380]

Mr. McNulty: Statistics are not broken down in the format requested. Figures compiled from police records show that between 13 April 2006 and 12 April 2007, 30 people have been charged under the Terrorism Act 2006. These individuals are currently awaiting trial.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 6 June 2007, Official Report, columns 618-20W, on security measures, how many individuals have been denied asylum under the provisions of section 54 of the Immigration, Asylum and Nationality Act 2006; and on how many occasions he has certified that an appellant is not entitled to the protection of the Refugee Convention under section 55 of the Act. [144381]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collated centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 6 June 2007, Official Report, columns 618-20W, on security measures, what the timetable is for consulting on setting a maximum time limit for all future extradition cases involving terrorism; and when he expects to reach a decision on that matter. [144382]

Joan Ryan: The working group referred to in the answer of 6 June 2007, Official Report, columns 618-20W, has engaged in a continuous consultation on extradition request made to the UK involving allegations of terrorism.

A statutory maximum time limit might hinder the ability of our independent courts to give full consideration both to the arguments of the requesting state and to those of the wanted person. Under the Extradition Act 2003 and its predecessor legislation, different procedures have had to be applied to different cases. Accordingly, the duration of each stage in each terrorist-related extradition case is now being expedited, so far as possible, through the working group.

Since the working group was initiated under the Prime Minister's 12-point plan, seven people have been extradited for terrorist-related offences; while two have exhausted all domestic proceedings under extradition legislation but have outstanding applications before the European Court of Human Rights.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 6 June 2007, Official Report, columns 618-20W, on security measures, how many individuals have breached their control orders. [144390]

Mr. McNulty: The Secretary of State reports quarterly on the exercise of his powers under the Prevention of Terrorism Act 2005. This includes the number of charges and convictions for breach. I refer the hon. Member to my most recent statement of 21 June 2007, Official Report, columns 109-11W.

Sexual Offences: Wales

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of serious sexual crimes reported in Wales resulted in conviction in the courts in each of the last three years. [145461]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I have been asked to reply.

The statistics are not available in the form requested. Recorded sexual offences statistics relate to offences and convictions data relates to offenders. In addition, recorded crime data are published on a financial year basis and conviction data are published on a calendar year basis. For these reasons, the two data sources are therefore not directly comparable.

Figures for the number of offences recorded and the number of convictions are as follows:

	Number
Sexual offences recorded by the police in Wales
2003-04	2,121
2004-05	2,595
2005-06	2,670

	Number
Persons convicted of sexual offences in Wales
2003	162
2004	182
2005	201

Speed Limits: Cameras

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 12 June 2007, Official Report, column 977W, on speed limits: cameras, what estimate he has made of the overall proportion of time spent by traffic police on each of the five main objectives; and whether there has been any change in the priorities over the last 10 years. [145659]

Mr. McNulty: The statement setting out the joint Home Office, Department for Transport and ACPO Roads Policing Strategy was issued in January 2005. It listed formally for the first time the five main objectives of roads policing and has not subsequently been amended. How police resources are deployed to meet those objectives, including the amount of time spent on each of them, is an operational matter for individual chief officers of police. Information is not collected centrally.

Srichand Hinduja

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost was of the Hammond Review of the circumstances surrounding the application for naturalisation by Mr. S. P. Hinduja. [143707]

Mr. Byrne: Sir Anthony Hammond carried out two reviews for the Prime Minister. The first was to establish the circumstances of any approaches to the Home Office about an application for naturalisation by Mr. S. P. Hinduja and the later grant of that application. The second followed on to examine certain additional papers. The reviews were supported by members of Home Office staff. The costs were in the region of £20,000.

Terrorism: Finance

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the names of (a) suspected terrorists subject to control orders and (b) any such suspected terrorists who have absconded have their names automatically passed to HM Treasury for the purpose of freezing their assets. [144564]

Mr. McNulty: The passing of such information to HM Treasury is decided on a case-by-case basis and is subject to operational and security considerations.

Terrorism: Sri Lanka

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking to prevent the financing from the UK of Tamil Tiger terrorists in Sri Lanka. [145575]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Office works closely with law enforcement agencies and other Government Departments to prevent the financing of terrorism.

Tul Bahadur Pun UI

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria were first used to decide whether former Rifleman Tul Bahadur Pun UI should be admitted to the UK; and what the revised criteria were which led to the final decision in his case. [141033]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 11 June 2007]: The rules applying to applications for indefinite leave to enter or remain in the United Kingdom by former Gurkhas who completed their service on or after 1 July 1997 are set out in paragraphs 276E to 276K of the Immigration Rules. I would refer the hon. Gentleman to the relevant policy contained on the Border and Immigration Agency website at:

http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/lawandpolicy/immigrationrules/part7

Discretion may be exercised for Gurkhas discharged from service before 1 July 1997, and who are not covered by the Immigration Rules, where there are strong reasons why settlement in the UK is appropriate. This guidance is contained in chapter 15, section 2A of the Immigration Directorate Instructions at:

http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/documents/idischapter15/

The circumstances surrounding Tul Bahadur Pun's case are clearly exceptional. In the light of this, the Secretary of State and I reviewed the case and made the decision to grant Mr. Pun a settlement visa. Our decision was not taken lightly and reflected the extraordinary nature of this case, in particular Mr. Pun's heroic record in service of Britain which saw him awarded the Victoria Cross. Full account was also taken of Mr. Pun's current medical condition.

Work Permits

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many IT, communications and electronics work permits were withdrawn due to non-compliance with the terms of the scheme in (a) 2004, (b) 2005 and (c) 2006. [145080]

Mr. Byrne: The number of work permits that were revoked during the years in question is in the table.

The revocation process was not developed until late 2004. Employers are given the opportunity to make representations on the permits that are to be revoked and any such representations are considered carefully so the process takes several weeks. This is why permits were not revoked until 2005.

The figures quoted are not provided under National Statistics protocols and have been derived from local management information and are therefore provisional and subject to change.

	Number
(a) 2004	No work permits were revoked
(b) 2005	6 IT work permits relating to seven employers
	No communications work permits
	No electronics work permits
(c) 2006	196 IT work permits relating to 52 employers
	No communications work permits
	One electronics work permit relating to one employer

Work Permits: Fraud

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many investigations the Home Office Work Permits Section carried out into complaints of work permits abuse in (a) 2004, (b) 2005 and (c) 2006. [145078]

Mr. Byrne: This information is not recorded centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Work Permits: IT

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which 10 sponsoring companies were issued the largest number of work permits for IT workers in each year since 2000; and how many such permits were issued to each company in each year. [145014]

Mr. Byrne: The Border and Immigration Agency is unable to release details of individual companies who have been issued with work permits. We consider the information provided by applicants to be confidential and that disclosure of such information would constitute a breach of confidence.

Workers Registration Scheme: North East Region

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many EU workers were registered in the Worker Registration Scheme in each local authority in the North East at the most recent available date. [144406]

Mr. Byrne: The following table shows the last published data by local authority for the number of workers when they first registered to the Worker Registration Scheme (WRS) in the 'North East' Government Office Region for the period 1 May 2004 to 31 March 2007.

The figures quoted are not provided under National Statistics protocols and have been derived from local management information and are therefore provisional and subject to change.

Notes:
1. 94 per cent. of approved nationwide applications have an accurate post code. Applications where post codes could not be matched to the Office of National Statistics database are excluded from this data-set.
2. Figures based on employers address and the date the application is approved, rather than the date on the application form as used and published in the Accession Monitoring Report.
3. Figures are rounded to nearest 5.
4. Because of rounding, figures may not add up to total shown.

Written Questions

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to answer questions (a) (i) 123879, (ii) 123878, (iii) 123877, (iv) 123875, (v) 123876 and (vi) 123961, on immigration and (b) 114916, on the emergency services, tabled by the hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham. [128535]

Mr. Byrne: I replied to the hon. Member as follows: (a) (i) on 16 April 2007, Official Report, column 462W, (ii) on 20 June 2007, Official Report, column 1960W (iii), (iv), (v) on 16 April 2007, Official Report, column 462W; (vi) on 16 April, Official Report, column 460W.

My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State (Mr. Coaker) replied to question 114916 on 5 June 2007, Official Report, column 404W.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to answer question 123878, on arrests at the liquid natural gas terminal in Pembrokeshire, tabled by the hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham on 22 February. [135526]

Mr. Byrne: I replied to the hon. Member on 20 June 2007, Official Report, column 1960W.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when he expects to answer question 124194, on identity cards, tabled by the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South on 26 February 2007; and what the reasons are for the delay; [144582]

(2) when he expects to reply to question 124194, on identity cards, tabled by the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South for answer on 28 February 2007. [135944]

Joan Ryan: I replied to the hon. Member on 19 June 2007, Official Report, column 1779W.

Yarl's Wood Detention Centre

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons women in Yarl's Wood Detention Centre may be denied (a) access to their mobile telephones and (b) access to satellite news broadcasts. [144839]

Mr. Byrne: Access to a mobile phone would be denied only during a period of temporary confinement away from the main accommodation areas. There has never been any attempt to deny the women at Yarl's Wood access to satellite television news broadcasts.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons women detainees at Yarl's Wood Detention Centre may be (a) handcuffed and (b) given medication when being taken to UK airports. [144840]

Mr. Byrne: Handcuffs can be applied following a risk assessment where the detainee is deemed to present a control or security risk. Only medication associated with an extant medical condition, properly prescribed at the centre would accompany the individual.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what basis the (a) prices and (b) level of profit at the shops at Yarl's Wood Detention Centre are arrived at. [144841]

Mr. Byrne: Prices in the shop at Yarl's Wood are set in line with the recommended retail price. The level of profit at the shop is capped at 10 per cent.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what access to medical care is available to detainees at Yarl's Wood Detention Centre. [144842]

Mr. Byrne: All detainees are seen by a nurse in reception on arrival at the centre. Within 24 hours all detainees are offered an appointment to see a doctor. Thereafter, a doctor's surgery and nurses clinics are offered on a daily basis and operate on an appointment system. Secondary care is provided by the primary care trust and access to these services mirror those in the community.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the daily allowance is to detainees of Yarl's Wood Detention Centre; and on what basis it may be denied. [144845]

Mr. Byrne: All detained adult persons receive a weekly allowance of £5.00. Children receive a weekly allowance of £2.50. Monies are credited on a daily basis at the rate of £0.71 for adults and £0.35 for children. The daily allowance is never denied.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what privacy is accorded to women detainees in Yarl's Wood Detention Centre, with particular reference to male guards (a) entering rooms without warning and (b) searching rooms. [144848]

Mr. Byrne: All staff at Yarl's Wood Removal Centre receive training outlining the appropriate behaviour to be used when entering detainees' rooms. All staff, both male and female, are advised to knock first and then slightly open the door after a brief while if no response has been made. They will then announce themselves and then wait again before entering the room. In cases of emergency, to preserve life or detainee safety a member of staff may have to enter a room without warning. All such instances are required to be documented.

In line with the searching procedures agreed by the Home Office, all rooms are searched on a regular basis as a requirement of the contract.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) women and (b) children have been detained in Yarl's Wood Detention Centre for (i) up to six months, (ii) between six and 12 months, (iii) between 12 to 18 months and (iv) longer than 18 months; and if he will make a statement. [144850]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Office publishes a quarterly snapshot of people detained solely under Immigration Act powers on the last Saturday of each quarter. The latest published information pertains to people detained as at 31 March 2007.

The accompanying table shows the number of women and children detained solely under Immigration Act powers in Yarl's Wood Immigration Removal Centre as at 31 March 2007 by length of detention.

Information on the number of persons detained solely under Immigration Act powers is published in the Quarterly Asylum Bulletins, on the Home Office's Research, Development and Statistics website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Persons recorded as being in detention at Yarl's Wood Immigration Removal Centre in the United Kingdom solely under Immigration Act powers as at 31 March 2007, by length of detention[1]

Length of detention[2,3]	Number of women[4]	Number of children[5]
Less than 6 months	270	50
6 months to less than 12 months	20	—
12 months to less than 18 months	5	—
18 months or more	*	—
Total	300	50

[1] Figures rounded to the nearest five ('—' = 0, * = 1 or 2) and may not sum to the totals shown because of rounding. Figures exclude persons recorded as detained under both criminal and immigration powers.
[2] Relates to current period of sole detention only.
[3] Six months is defined as 182 days; 12 months is defined as 365 days; 18 months is defined as 547 days.
[4] Females recorded as being 18 or over on 31 March 2007.
[5] Persons recorded as being under 18 on 31 March 2007.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many hours in each day women in Yarl's Wood Detention Centre are confined to their rooms; and in what circumstances this figure may be varied. [144851]

Mr. Byrne: Women at Yarl's Wood Removal Centre are not confined to their rooms at any stage during the day. All detainees are required to be in their rooms to enable a roll check but once this has been completed they are able to move freely within their accommodation units.

JUSTICE

Association of Panel Members: Finance

Mr. Watson: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice (1) what discussions she has held on the funding arrangements for the Association of Panel Members; and if she will make a statement; [145422]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 23 April 2007, Official Report, column 976W, on the National Appropriate Adult Network: finance, what steps he is taking to support the work of the Association of Panel Members; and if he will consider meeting the Chair of the Association of Panel Members; [145455]

(3) pursuant to the answer of 23 April 2007, Official Report, column 976W, on the National Appropriate Adult Network: finance, if his Department will consider the merits of providing similar departmental funding to the Association of Panel Members. [145477]

Bridget Prentice: Funding for referral panels is provided to Youth Offending Teams by the Youth Justice Board (YJB) which is in turn funded by the Ministry of Justice. The Youth Justice Board supports the work of referral panel members by providing training and guidance. In January 2007 the Association of Panel Members approached the YJB and inquired about funding. The YJB replied that no funding was available and although the matter could be reviewed at a later date, no commitment could be made regarding future funding. There are no plans for the Secretary of the State to meet the Chair of the Association of Panel Members.

Chelmsford Prison

Mr. Burns: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice (1) how many places are available in Chelmsford Prison; [145613]

(2) how many prisoners at Chelmsford Prison share a room with (a) one and (b) two other prisoners. [145614]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Operational capacity at Chelmsford is 695. At unlock on 22 June the population was 692. 306 prisoners in total were sharing a cell with one other prisoner. No prisoners were three to a cell.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many inmates committed suicide in Chelmsford Prison in each of the last 10 years. [145615]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested is provided in the following table.

Self-inflicted deaths[1], Chelmsford

	Number
1997	1
1998	2
1999	1
2000	1
2001	1
2002	1
2003	0

Self-inflicted deaths[1], Chelmsford

2004	0
2005	1
2006	1
2007 to date[2]	1

[1] Self-inflicted deaths include all deaths where it appears the individual acted specifically to take their own life, not only those that received a suicide or open verdict at inquest.
[2] Up to 21 June 2007.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice if she will consider funding the Mentoring 4 U project in Chelmsford Prison. [145616]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The funding of offender learning and skills, including meeting the needs of those with learning difficulties and/disabilities—and those with dyslexia—is the responsibility of the Department for Education and Skills and its agencies. Consequently, the Ministry of Justice will not be providing funding for this project.

I understand that the Skills Minister has written to the hon. Member directly on this matter.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many prisoners are expected to be released from Chelmsford Prison under the recently announced planned early release initiative. [145929]

Mr. Hanson: I estimate that around 2,500 prisoners per month will be eligible for release on an End of Custody Licence. This is a national figure. Data are not currently available to break down this number by prison establishment.

Courts: Clothing

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice if she will bring forward proposals for the reform of court dress, with particular reference to wigs. [145473]

Ms Harman: This is a matter for the Lord Chief Justice. He has been consulting on this issue and intends to make an announcement about judges' working dress in the near future.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice (1) what the budget of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority is for 2007-08; [145758]

(2) what budget surplus or deficit the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority has recorded in the last two years. [145759]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The planned annual budget for the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority in 2007-08 is £187.749 million in resource DEL and £1.2 million in capital DEL. The near-cash budget is £225.789 million.

The budget is currently held by the Home Office and will transfer to the Ministry of Justice later this year.

CICA's annual report and accounts 2005-06, laid before Parliament on 21 June 2007, shows (at page 15) that the retained surplus for the financial year 2005-06 after transfers from reserves and reversal of notional cost of capital was £5.290 million, while the deficit for 2004-05 was £45.335 million. Figures for 2006-07 are not yet available and will be subject to audit in the usual way.

Crown Court Cells

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice whether all inmates detained in Crown Court cells have been subject to cell sharing risk assessments; who has conducted such assessments; what level of training they had received; and if she will make a statement. [143417]

Mr. Sutcliffe: All court cells used are single occupancy only.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice whether all inmates detained in Crown Court cells have been subject to assessment for self-harm as laid down in Prison Service Order 2700; who has been responsible for such assessments; what level of training they had received; and if she will make a statement. [143418]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Prisoners previously held in prison accommodation will have been assessed in line with PSO 2700.

All prisoners, whether or not previously held in custody, have a "Prisoner Escort Record" (PER) form, on which issues giving rise to concern are noted. Contractor staff and the on-site constables are also able to open a Suicide/Self Harm Warning form or an ACCT form and take management action as appropriate. At each court a clinic is held each night by a qualified health care professional to identify and help address any health issues arising.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice whether all Crown Court cells used to detain inmates overnight were subject to risk assessments to ensure that they were suitable for that purpose; what assessment was made of the availability of ligature points in the cells and the consequent risks posed; who was responsible for carrying out such assessments; where the risk assessments records are held; and if she will make a statement. [143419]

Mr. Sutcliffe: All court cells used to hold prisoners overnight have been assessed by NOMS for health and safety issues, including fire risks. NOMS has also carried out an assessment of the staffing levels appropriate to each site.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what contingency plans cover the holding of prisoners in Crown Court cells overnight; who agreed the contingency plans; and if she will place a copy of these plans in the Library. [143420]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The use of court cells takes place only as a measure of last resort if accommodation in prison and police cells is exhausted.

Their use is underpinned by arrangements between NOMS, HM Court Service and other operational delivery agencies such as HM Prison Service.

These plans are for use as management information only.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice whether all Crown Court cells used for detaining prisoners overnight have integral sanitation. [143554]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Most court cells do not have integral sanitation. However, prisoners held in court cells overnight have access to sanitary facilities within the custody area.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice whether any prisoners on an open ACCT or 2052SH form have been detained in Crown Court cells overnight. [143555]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Based on current information I am not aware that any prisoners with an open ACCT or 2052SH form have been held overnight in court cells. One occasion has been identified where an ACCT form was opened on a prisoner in the course of the night by medical staff on site in accordance with operating procedures.

Custodial Treatment: Sexual Offences

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what proportion of convictions for (a) rape and (b) other sexual offences in (i) Suffolk, (ii) Bedfordshire, (iii) Cambridgeshire, (iv) Essex, (v) Hertfordshire, (vi) Norfolk and (vii) England resulted in custodial sentences in each year since 1997. [143925]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Data from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the percentage of defendants convicted at all courts for offences relating to rape of males and females, and sexual offences not including rape of males and females, who were given immediate custody in certain police force areas and England for the years 1997 to 2005 can be viewed in the following table.

Court proceedings data for 2006 will be available in the autumn of 2007.

Data Protection: Prosecutions

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many prosecutions against data controllers for failure to notify the Information Commissioner of the processing of personal data under the Data Protection Act 1998 were brought in each year since the coming into force of that Act. [144330]

Vera Baird: The Data Protection Act 1998 (DPA) came into effect on 1 March 2000.

Prosecutions for non-notification under section 17 of the DPA can be instituted by the Information Commissioner or by, or with the consent of, the Director of Public Prosecutions.

Data on all prosecutions under the DPA are collected by the Ministry of Justice's Office for Criminal Justice Reform. Data are collected under specific codes and not on individual case circumstances. Data on the number of prosecutions for non-notification of the processing of personal data under section 17 of the Act therefore cannot be separately identified and data are not available. The information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Information Commissioner's Office maintains details of prosecutions that they have instituted for non-notification under section 17 of the DPA. These figures are as follows:

2000	0
2001	0
2002	1
2003	0
2004	3
2005	8
2006	13
2007	1

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many prosecutions for non-notification of the processing of personal data under the Data Protection Act 1998 have been brought by (a) the Information Commissioner, (b) the Director of Public Prosecutions and (c) others with the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions. [144331]

Vera Baird: The Information Commissioner's Office has instituted a total of 26 prosecutions for non-notification under section 17 of the Data Protection Act 1998 (DPA).

Data on prosecutions under the DPA are collected by the Ministry of Justice's Office for Criminal Justice Reform. Data are collected under specific codes and not on individual case circumstances. Data on the number of prosecutions for non-notification of the processing of personal data under section 17 of the Act brought by, and with the consent of, the Director of Public Prosecutions therefore cannot be separately identified and data are not available. The information could be provided at only disproportionate cost.

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice (1) how many prosecutions for non-notification of the processing of personal data under the Data Protection Act 1998 have resulted in convictions; and what penalty was imposed in each case in which no further proceedings are active; [144332]

Vera Baird: Prosecutions for non-notification under section 17 of the Data Protection Act 1998 (DPA) can be instituted by the Information Commissioner or by, or with the consent of, the Director of Public Prosecutions.

Data on all prosecutions under the DPA are collected by the Ministry of Justice's Office for Criminal Justice Reform. Data are collected under specific codes and not on individual case circumstances. Data on the number of prosecutions for non-notification of the processing of personal data under section 17 of the Act therefore cannot be separately identified and data are not available. The information could be provided only at disproportionate cost

The Information Commissioner's Office maintains details of prosecutions that they have instituted for non-notification under section 17 of the DPA. Since the introduction of the DPA on 1 March 2000 the Information Commissioner's Office has successfully prosecuted 26 cases under section 17 of the DPA, the details of the penalties imposed in these cases are: one penalty was a conditional discharge, one penalty was linked with other more serious charges and resulted in a sentence of 18 months probation and 150 hours of community service and 24 of the penalties were fines as shown in the table:

Number of convictions	Amount of fine (£)

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many requests for prosecutions against data controllers for failure to notify the Information Commissioner of the processing of personal data under the Data Protection Act 1998 have been made to (a) the Information Commissioner and (b) the Director of Public Prosecutions since 30 June 2005. [144333]

Vera Baird: Neither the Information Commissioner's Office or the Crown Prosecution Service, who deal with prosecutions on behalf of the Director of Public Prosecutions, keep details of requests made for prosecutions against data controllers for non-notification offences under the Data Protection Act 1998.

Departments: Aviation

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many flights to overseas destinations were taken by (a) civil servants and (b) Ministers in her Department in each of the last three calendar years; and what the total cost of such flights was. [144956]

Ms Harman: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost. Since 1999, the Government have published on an annual basis, a list of all overseas visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500, as well as the total cost of all ministerial travel overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. Information for 2006-07 is currently being compiled and will be published before the summer recess. All travel is undertaken in accordance with the Civil Service Management Code, the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers.

Departments: Energy

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many energy saving light bulbs were purchased by her Department for use on the departmental estate in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [144955]

Ms Harman: It is the Ministry of Justice's Procurement Policy to purchase sustainable goods and services wherever appropriate and possible. All Ministry of Justice Procurement staff have a responsibility to promote and support the Governments Sustainable Development agenda by working closely with both customers and suppliers.

There is no historical data or system in place to record the number of energy saving light bulbs purchased.

Departments: Foreign Relations

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many Memoranda of Understanding are in force as a result of agreements with foreign governments entered into by Ministers in her Department; and what executive actions each entails. [144467]

Ms Harman: The Ministry of Justice has two Memoranda of Understanding in force with China relating to training programmes for Chinese lawyers and judges. The Ministry funds and oversees both programmes.

Departments: Marketing

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice pursuant to the Answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 208W, on Departments: marketing, what the sources are of the additional costs which (a) have been incurred since 9 May 2007 and (b) may yet be incurred. [144503]

Vera Baird: There has only been one approved item of additional cost since 9 May 2007. This is for an IT Project Manager to migrate projects from the Home Office to the Ministry of Justice.

The new Ministry is currently reviewing its organisational structure and operating model. Depending on the outcome of this review, further costs may be incurred, e.g. on additional integration. Also, there will be costs relating to the various project teams who will take forward any actions arising from the review.

Any additional costs will, where possible, be required to be absorbed into current budget allocations. Where this is not possible, the MoJ Steering Group will approve the expenditure.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice pursuant to the Answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 208W, on Departments: marketing, if she will provide a breakdown of the figure of £1.5 million by main budget heading; and what the evidential basis was for the estimate. [144504]

Vera Baird: The £1.5 million estimate provided in previous answers is made up of the following budget headings:

Budget heading	Approximate costs (£ million)
Policy (consultancy; policy documents)	0.07
IT (capital: hardware; accessibility; branding: templates; desktop)	0.70
Project Management	0.08
Commercial (consultancy support; resolution and accountancy issues)	0.16
Estates (new offices; signage)	0.28
Communications (logo; presentation stands; branding; internet/intranet development)	0.13
Human Resources (rebranding; staff)	0.04
Private Offices (IT improvements)	0.04
Total	1.50

All business cases for MoJ transitional expenditure are presented to the Ministry of Justice Steering Group.

Mrs. May: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice which advertising and marketing campaigns were run by her Department in each of the last five years; which external agencies were involved; and what the cost was of each campaign. [144627]

Vera Baird: Since my Department was created on 9 May 2007, the Ministry of Justice's spend on advertising has been as follows:

£2,100 on advertising for the Camberwell Green magistrates court payback scheme through Barkers

£3,700 on recruitment through Euro ESCG Riley.

£22,900 on magistrates recruitment (no agency used).

£54,435 on senior judicial recruitment through TMP UK and Michael Page International.

Spending by the Ministry on marketing cannot be separated from other communications expenditure without incurring disproportionate costs.

Departments: Northern Ireland

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice if she will place in the Library a copy of the concordat governing the relationship between her

Department and the Northern Ireland administration. [145935]

Vera Baird: Ministry of Justice was created on 9 May and does not have a concordat with the Northern Ireland Executive. The principles set out in the Memorandum of Understanding and Supplementary Agreements between the UK Government, Scottish Ministers, the Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales and the Northern Ireland Executive, published in 2001, continue to underpin our working relationship with the Northern Ireland Executive.

Departments: Public Relations

Grant Shapps: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how much was spent by her Department and its predecessor on public relations in each of the last five years. [139422]

Vera Baird: The Ministry of Justice, in line with other Government Departments, maintains and funds a communications capability and makes use of external communications services, including public relations services.

Since its establishment on 9 May, the Ministry of Justice has spent £3,113.75 on public relations to raise awareness of human rights.

Since it was set up in June 2003, its predecessor Department, the Department for Constitutional Affairs, or public bodies sponsored by the DCA, spent the following on public relations.

The Commission for Judicial Appointments (a non-departmental public body) engaged a PR firm to promote its views on the merits of the judicial appointments processes at the following cost:

2003-04	44,478
2003-05	33,228
2003-06	45,173

Her Majesty's Courts Service contracted PR firms for the following initiatives:

2005-06: To provide communications for its estates strategy—£17,500

To raise public awareness of the legal status of cohabitation:

2004-05	179,000
2005-06	180,000

Departments: Sign Language

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what assessment she has made of the merits of providing British Sign Language (BSL) videos on her departmental website for the benefit of those whose first language is BSL. [142497]

Ms Harman: The Ministry of Justice has not assessed the merits of using British sign language videos on either its corporate website, www.justice.gov.uk, or on its corporate intranet. However, the website has been fully tested for usability and accessibility and it conforms to the web accessibility initiative AAA standards. The website has been user-tested by disabled employees to check that the site's functionality and content can be effectively accessed via assistive technologies such as screen readers.

The Ministry of Justice has not received any requests to provide information in BSL via its corporate website. If however a request were received then, in line with our duties under DDA, we would consider the cost; the practicability and the extent to which presenting information via BSL video would overcome the barrier or disadvantage experienced by the disabled person.

Driving Offences: Convictions

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many (a) women, (b) men, (c) women under 30 years and (d) men under 30 years were found guilty of causing death by careless driving under influence of drink or drugs in each of the last 10 years. [143679]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The number of females and males, found guilty at all courts for the offence of causing death by careless driving when under the influence of drink or drugs, for age group 10 to 30, and all ages in England and Wales, 1996 to 2005 which can be viewed in the following table.

Driving Offences: Mobile Phones

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many (a) prosecutions were brought against and (b) fixed penalty notices were imposed on drivers in each police authority area using mobile telephones while driving in 2005. [144306]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The data requested for 2005 will be available in the autumn of 2007.

Driving Under Influence

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice (1) how many drivers were convicted for drink-driving offences (a) directly related to an incident in which death or serious injury was occasioned and where the alcohol-related incapacity of the driver was judged to be the primary cause of the incident and (b) unrelated to any incident in which death or serious injury was occasioned, in each year from 1997 to 2006; [144857]

(2) how many of the drivers convicted for drink-driving offences in each year from 1997 to 2006 had previously been banned from driving for drink-driving offences while a ban was still current; [144858]

(3) how many drivers who had not previously held a full driving licence were convicted of drink-driving offences in each year between 1997 and 2006. [144910]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The specific information requested concerning individual circumstances of persons convicted is not recorded on the Court Proceedings Database, held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many drivers were convicted of drink-driving offences in each year from 1997 to 2006; how many were repeat offenders; and how many of those repeat offenders had been convicted (a) twice, (b) three times, (c) four times and (d) more than four times. [144859]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Available information taken from the Court Proceedings Database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform, from 1997 to 2004 (latest available) is provided in the table.

Notes:

1. It is known that for some police force areas, the reporting of court proceedings in particular those relating to summary motoring offences, may be less than complete. Work is under way to ensure that the magistrates courts case management system currently being implemented by the Ministry of Justice reports all motoring offences to the Office for Criminal Justice Reform. This will enable more complete figures to be disseminated.

2. Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many drivers were breathalysed in each year between 1997 and 2006; how many tests were positive; and how many were subsequently confirmed as positive by blood testing. [144911]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The available information is given in the table for 1997 to 2004. Data for 2005 will be available later in the year. 2006 data will be available in 2008.

Information is not collected centrally on the number of positive tests subsequently confirmed by blood testing.

[1] Following the introduction of new breath testing equipment in Greater Manchester in 1998, it became apparent that the total number of tests had been over-estimated in 1997 and adjustments were made.

[2] As from 1998 onwards, following a comparison between the number of positive breath tests reported by each police force annually and the number of court proceedings for drink/driving-related offences, it became clear that there was under-reporting in a number of forces. As a result, in some cases, court proceedings figures have been substituted for the positive breath test figures.

However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by police forces. [2] Immediate Custody = Detention and Training Order, Young Offender Institution and Unsuspended sentence of imprisonment.

[3] Disqualifications given as a secondary disposal. This covers cases where a disqualification from driving was given instead of a licence endorsement. This excludes cases where a defendant was disqualified under the penalty points or "totting up" system (s35 Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988). S.35 R.T.O.A. data for specific offences at force area level are not sufficiently robust.

Notes:
1. Standard Rate maximum fine is Level 5 (£5,000). None were issued within the force area for the years for which data are provided.
2. It is known that for some police force areas, the reporting of court proceedings in particular those relating to summary motoring offences, may be less than complete. Electoral Register

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many and what percentage of people whose names are entered on UK electoral registers are (a) UK citizens, (b) citizens of the Irish Republic, (c) Commonwealth citizens and (d) European Union citizens. [144388]

Bridget Prentice: This information is not collected centrally. The Office for National Statistics is responsible for producing electoral registration figures, but they are not required to collect data on the nationality of people registered to vote.

Family Law: Legal Aid Scheme

Annette Brooke: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what the total legal aid bill for family law cases was in each of the last four years. [145589]

Vera Baird: The information requested is shown in the following table. The corresponding figures relating to 2006-07 are not yet available.

Fixed Penalties

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many and what percentage of fixed penalty notices issued in each of the last 10 years were paid in full within the 14 day deadline. [144152]

Mr. Sutcliffe: None of the fixed penalty schemes for which the Office for Criminal Justice Reform holds data has a 14 day deadline. The Penalty Charge Notice (PCN) scheme for on-street parking contraventions allows for notices to be paid within 28 days and the motoring offences Fixed Penalty Notice (FPN) scheme requires payment within 28 days. The PCN scheme does however allow for a discount if payment is made within 14 days. Data on notices paid within this period are in the table below. The Penalty Notices for Disorder (PND) scheme requires payment within 21 days.

Information relating to fixed penalty notices for environmental offences, for which there is a standard period for payment of fixed penalties, set in legislation at 14 days, is a matter for the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA).

Number and proportion[1] of Penalty Charge Notices issued and paid within 14 days[2], England and Wales[3], 1999[4]-2004

Million and Percentage

Penalty charge notices	1999	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004
Penalty charge notices issued	4.0	4.7	5.3	6.4	7.1	7.7

Percentage[1]	40	40	45	44	46	48
Number of local authorities issuing PCNs[5]	10	26	45	62	84	99

[1] These percentages differ from those within the annual 'Motoring Offence etc.' statistical bulletin which are based on known outcomes.
[2] These notices must be paid within 28 days, but if paid within 14 days there is a reduction in the charge.
[3] The first Welsh local authority joined the scheme in 2004.
[4] Data for years prior to 1999 are unreliable.
[5] All London local authorities within the scheme are counted as one for this table.
Notes:
1. No local authority outside London was using Penalty Charge Notices (PCNs) during 1995, but Winchester city council began issuing PCNs in 1996. Up to and including 2004 there are 90 local authorities outside London issuing PCNs.
2. Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrate data systems generated by local authorities. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collections processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

Haverigg Prison

Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice (1) if she will consider the possibility of further expansion of HMP Haverigg, following completion of the current expansion programme; [145609]

(2) what the maximum inmate capacity is of HMP Haverigg; what she expects the capacity of HMP Haverigg to be following the completion of the expansion programme; and how many inmates are housed at HMP Haverigg. [145610]

Mr. Sutcliffe: A further 1,500 places were announced by the Lord Chancellor on 19 June 2007 on top of the 8,000 already planned for delivery by 2012. We are currently investigating options for providing this further increase in capacity.

As of 25 May 2007, the operational capacity (total number of prisoners that can be held taking into account control, security and the proper operation of the planned regimes) of HMP Haverigg was 568 and the population 562. The planned expansion scheme will provide an additional 64 places.

Haverigg Prison: Manpower

Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice (1) how many new staff she expects to be employed at HMP Haverigg as a result of the expansion programme; [145378]

(2) what the staff levels are at HMP Haverigg. [145379]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It is expected that an additional 42.5 staff will be employed at Haverigg as a result of the expansion programme.

The current level of staffing at Haverigg is 336, including casual staff employed to supervise the new build work.

Haverigg Prison: Prisoners Release

Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many inmates at HMP Haverigg will be eligible for early release under the recently announced measures. [145611]

Mr. Hanson: I estimate that around 2,500 prisoners per month will be eligible for release on an End of Custody Licence. This is a national figure. Data is not currently available to break down this number by prison establishment.

Judges: Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what her estimate is of the savings from capping the employer contribution to the Judicial Pension Scheme at 14 per cent.; and if she will make a statement. [144271]

Ms Harman: No formal estimate has been made as there are no plans to cap the employer contribution to the Judicial Pension Scheme at 14 per cent.

Law Society Children Panel: Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many children's panel solicitors are registered in West Lancashire; and how many were so registered in each of the last five years. [144815]

Bridget Prentice: The Law Society's Children Panel is maintained by the Law Society and is independent of Government. The Law Society has informed me that they do not keep records of members of the Children Panel in West Lancashire or historical data on different regions. However, they did inform me that there are currently 167 members in Lancashire as a whole.

Legal Aid

Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how much was paid in legal aid in each region in each of the last five years. [142703]

Vera Baird: The following tables provide the information requested.

[1] These figures are for cases not forming part of the five main categories of work dealt with by CIS Direct. A regional breakdown for these categories is not available.

Legal Aid Scheme: Wales

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many law firms in Wales have not signed new contracts with the Legal Services Commission. [145512]

Vera Baird: The unified contract for civil work was issued to 200 solicitors' offices in Wales. 196 contracts have been returned signed. 29 contracts were issued to not-for-profit organisations in Wales and all have been returned signed.

Legal Profession: Regulation

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what the Government's policy is on the provision of funding to cover the start-up costs of regulatory bodies overseeing the legal professions. [145411]

Bridget Prentice: The Ministry of Justice will be making a contribution of £2.4 million towards the implementation costs, the legal profession should fund the start up costs associated with establishing the proposed Legal Services Board and the Office for Legal Complaints. Legal service providers enjoy exclusive access in the provision of reserved legal services, which often leads to the commission of ancillary legal services. In addition the professions stand to benefit from the increased consumer confidence that these reforms will generate. It is, therefore, totally appropriate that they should meet both the implementation and running costs associated with legal services reform.

Magistrates: Wales

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many magistrates are employed in courts in Wales; how many of those are expected to leave the magistracy in 2007-08; and how many magistrates her Department expects to recruit to courts in Wales in 2007-08. [145511]

Ms Harman: At the financial year ending 31 March 2007, there were 1,949 serving magistrates throughout Wales.

During the financial year 2007-08, 50 magistrates are due to retire throughout Wales. An unknown number of magistrates are expected to leave due to other reasons such as resignation, transfer etc.

During the financial year 2007-08, it is expected that 82 magistrates will be recruited throughout Wales. This is based on predicted business need.

Miscarriages of Justice: Pensions

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice (1) what steps have been taken by the Government to check whether pursuant to section 133 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 the Assessor for Compensation for Miscarriages of Justice has notified the Information Commissioner of the processing of personal data of applicants for compensation; [144335]

(2) what resources have been (a) sought by and (b) paid to the Assessor for compensation for miscarriages of justice in relation to his obligations to notify the Information Commissioner of the processing of personal data of applicants for compensation; [144336]

(3) what assessment of Lord Brennan's knowledge of the content and principles of the Data Protection Act 1998 and his compliance with his obligations under that Act was made as part of the re-appointment procedure conducted in 2006. [144237]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Lord Brennan, the independent Assessor of compensation for miscarriages of justice, acts on behalf of the Secretary of State in making assessments of compensation. The Ministry of Justice's notification to the Information Commissioner covers personal data processed by him and staff of the Office of Criminal Justice Reform. No resources have, therefore, been sought by or paid to Lord Brennan in this context. His knowledge of the Data Protection Act 1998 was not a criterion used in the consideration of his re-appointment It is a matter of fact, however, that in his private practice Lord Brennan is registered with the Information Commissioner as a data controller.

Police Custody

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what the range is of the nightly cost of police cells used by her Department and the Prison Service; and which such cells are the most expensive. [144968]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The estimated average cost of holding a prisoner in a police cell is £385 per night. Actual cost depends on the size of the units made available, the length of time they are required and any additional costs incurred. Police forces invoice NOMS for the use of police cells in arrears. Not all invoices have yet been received and so the full range of costs is not yet known.

Prison Service: Manpower

Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what the recommended ratio is between staff and inmates in HM Prison Service. [145380]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There is no one recommended ratio. Staff to prisoner ratios are determined by a range of factors including type and geography of the establishment; type and mix of prisoners and security and control issues.

Prison Service: Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice at what age a prison officer is allowed to draw his or her full pension. [144273]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Under the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme, the normal pension age is 60, but for prison officers with reserved rights under the 1987 'Fresh Start' Agreement, the pension age is 55.

Prisoner Escapes

Mr. Swire: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many inmates have absconded from prison in each year since 1997, broken down by individual prison. [145824]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested is set out in the following table and covers the period from 1 April 1997 to 31 March 2007. Figures for 2006-07 are provisional and subject to validation.

Prisoners Release: Northern Ireland

Lady Hermon: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice whether her recent announcement about the early release of prisoners who are coming to the end of their sentences on licence extends to Northern Ireland. [145750]

Mr. Hanson: The announcement made on 19 June does not apply to prisoners in Northern Ireland, which remains the responsibility of the Northern Ireland Office.

Prisoners Release: Ribble Valley

Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many prisoners set to be released under the new release scheme have residential addresses in the Ribble Valley. [145960]

Mr. Hanson: I estimate that around 2,500 prisoners per month will be eligible for release on an End of Custody Licence. This is a national figure. Data is not currently available to break down this number by area.

Prisons: Construction

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how much the Government budgeted to spend on the construction of new prisons in 2006. [145533]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The National Offender Management Service had an overall budget for increased prison places in 2006-07, including places in existing prisons. £35.7 million was spent in 2006-07 in respect of potential new prisons.

Probation: Expenditure

Norman Lamb: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how much was spent on probation services in each year since 1997; what expenditure is expected for the forthcoming financial year; and how much of this spending (a) was and (b) will be dedicated to (i) mental health services, (ii) substance abuse rehabilitation services and (iii) vocational education in each of these years. [144165]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Expenditure on probation services is as follows:

	Resource	£ million Capital
2007-08	976	15
2006-07	959	11
2005-06	872	32
2004-05	793	29
2003-04	742	38
2002-03	641	40
2001-02	595	34
2000-01	539	16
1999-2000	491	23
1998-99	466	22
1997-98	464	17
1996-97	467	22

The financial data includes probation boards, National Probation Directorate and latterly National Offender Management Service HQ.

Comparisons over a long period of time are difficult due to machinery of government changes and accounting changes.

After adjusting for organisational changes, accounting changes and inflation, the real terms increase in the Resource budget from 1996-97 to 2006-07 is about 70 per cent.

Expenditure is not recorded in the categories requested under (i), (ii) and (iii).

Notes:

All figures exclude electronic monitoring.

Financial data for 2006-07 is subject to audit and for 2007-08 is planned expenditure.

Rape: Sentencing

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice (1) what the average sentence handed down by courts in Wales for rape was in each of the last three years; [145456]

(2) what the average sentence handed down by courts for rape was in (a) England and (b) each of the regions in each of the last three years. [145457]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested, for the years 2003 to 2005, is contained in the following table.

Information for 2006 will be published in the autumn.

Average custodial sentence length for rape offences[1], all courts, England and Wales, 2003 to 2005

Security Measures

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice pursuant to the answer of 6 June 2007, Official Report, columns 618-20W, on security measures, by how much court capacity has been expanded to deal with existing and anticipated case load relating to terrorism; and how much further expansion is planned. [144389]

Ms Harman: I can confirm that a review is currently taking place on the capacity of the courts to deal with existing and anticipated case load relating to terrorism. The review includes a security upgrade programme of appropriate existing courts, which is already in progress and feasibility studies which have been commissioned to look at any additional court capacity which may be required in the future.

Sexual Offences: Wales

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many people were (a) prosecuted and (b) convicted of sexual offences in Wales (i) in total and (ii) broken down by offence in each of the last three years. [145459]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Data extracted from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform showing the number of people proceeded against and found guilty of sexual offences in Wales, by offence class, 2003 to 2005 is in the following table.

Number of persons proceeded against at magistrates courts and found guilty at all courts, for all sexual offences, broken down into Offence Class, in Wales, 2003 to 2005[1,2]

	Proceeded against			Found guilty

[1]These data are on the principal offence basis.
[2]Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts and police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

Supreme Court

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice pursuant to the written ministerial statement of 14 June 2007, Official Report, columns 60-62WS, on the Supreme Court, how much will be spent on (a) professional adviser fees and (b) the non-capital element of the fit out costs, including (i) loose furniture, (ii) IT services and (iii) library books. [145843]

Vera Baird: As mentioned in the written ministerial statement, 14 June 2007, Official Report, columns 60-62WS, the set-up costs related to the Middlesex Guildhall are expected to be an additional £14.3 million. These costs will be spread over the five years of the programme and are broken down as follows;

Breakdown of Supreme Court set up costs

	£ million
Resource costs
Furniture and artwork	3.4
IT costs	2.6
Decant	1.0

Terrorism: Greater London

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice whether the Government is reviewing the cap placed on the level of compensation which victims of the 7/7 bombing may gain from public funds; and if she will make a statement. [145448]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Victims of the 7/7 bombings and other terrorist incidents in Great Britain are eligible for compensation under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme on the same basis as other blameless victims of other violent crime in Great Britain.

In its Green Paper "Rebuilding Lives: supporting victims of crime", the Government sought views on a range of proposals for reforming the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme. One of the questions on which views were sought was whether the maximum award limit of £500,000 should be increased.

Reform of the Scheme is a complex matter. We are considering the issue carefully and will make an announcement in due course.

Young Offenders

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what the purpose was of the visit undertaken by (a) the governor of HM Young Offender Institution Feltham and (b) the Deputy Head of Women and Young People's Directorate to Australia in November 2005; and if she will make a statement. [139567]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information is as follows:

TREASURY

11 Downing Street: Charities

David Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which of the charities other than the Smith Institute which have organised events at No. 11 Downing Street since 1997 has used it most frequently. [144012]

John Healey [holding answer 19 June 2007]: Many charities have used No. 11 on multiple occasions. Any charities who use or want to use 11 Downing Street can apply for more extended access if this is their wish and subject to availability.

Abbott Mead Vickers BBDO

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) value, (b) date and (c) purpose was of each payment made by (i) his Department and (ii) its agencies to Abbott Mead Vickers BBDO in each year since 1997. [144542]

John Healey: The Treasury has no record of having made any payments to Abbott Mead Vickers since 2002-03, when a new accounting system was introduced. Information prior to that date could be provided only at disproportionate cost. None of the Department's agencies has any record of payments having been made since 1997.

Accommodation Rule

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what revenue was received from the available accommodation rule in the last full year before its abolition; and what estimate he has made of revenue which would have been received if the rule had applied in 2006-07. [145040]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated revenue was published in the Financial Statement and Budget Report 1993, in table 4.1—Direct effects of Budget measures. No more current estimates are available.

Aggregates Levy: Wind Power

Stephen Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much aggregates levy was raised from the construction of wind farms in the latest year for which figures are available. [145885]

John Healey: This information is not available; as revenue from this source is not separately identified in aggregates levy returns.

Al-Yamamah Project

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which aspects of the financial arrangements relating to the Al-Yamamah defence contract fell to be approved by his Department since May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [144254]

Mr. Timms: The Treasury's involvement was concerned with the accounting and budgeting arrangements for the management fee received by the Ministry of Defence from the Saudi Arabian Government. The fee covers the costs of the UK Government's involvement in the Al-Yamamah programme. The Treasury reviews such arrangements to ensure that they are in accordance with the principles of Government Accounting.

Birth Rate

Andrew George: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many live births there were in each English region in each year since 1997. [144287]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 25 June 2007:

As the National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question about how many live births there were in each region of England in each year since 1997. (144287)

The latest year for which figures are available is 2006. The accompanying table shows numbers of live births in England by Government Office Region for the years 1997 to 2006.

British Corps

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 5 June 2007, Official Report, column 462W, on the British Corps, whether the Chancellor's announcement on the British Corps referred to the work of the Russell Commission and charity V. [144520]

Dawn Primarolo: Yes. On 31 January 2005, the Chancellor gave a speech at the HM Treasury Volunteering Conference, referring to consideration of a new British corps, which trailed the expected outcomes of the Russell Commission report on youth action and engagement. The Russell Commission reported in March 2005 and the Government endorsed the recommendations in Budget 2005. V was established in May 2006 to take forward the recommendations.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the net effect on annual Treasury revenues of abolishing taper relief for capital gains tax. [144567]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of the cost of capital gains tax taper relief for individuals and trusts for 2005-06 and 2006-07 on an accruals basis were published in Table A3.1 of the Budget Report 2007. The figures exclude any behavioural change caused by the abolition of taper relief.

Cash Dispensing: Fees and Charges

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer at which locations in Wales free-of-charge ATMs are (a) installed and (b) yet to be installed under the free cash machines in low-income areas scheme. [145496]

Ed Balls: As I announced on 19 June, excellent progress has been made towards the goal of providing over 600 new free ATMs across 1,707 low-income target areas identified by the ATM working group as lacking convenient access. I am pleased to say that of the 198 low-income target areas in Wales, 95 are now expected to benefit from convenient access to free cash withdrawals as a result of free new cash machines already in operation or under contract to be installed. I have made available specific details about the location of new free ATMs installed and outstanding target areas still requiring free ATMs in Wales in the Library of the House.

Cash Dispensing: North East Region

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps his working group has taken on the super output areas identified by the Treasury Committee as not having access to free cash machines in Newcastle East and Wallsend. [145071]

Ed Balls: As I announced on 19 June, the industry has made excellent progress towards the goal of providing over 600 new free ATMs across 1,707 target areas identified by the ATM working group as lacking convenient access. I am pleased to say that two new machines are now under contract for installation in East Newcastle and Wallsend. These are expected to provide all the super output areas within East Newcastle and Wallsend with convenient access to free cash withdrawals. I will be writing to my right hon. Friend the Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, East and Wallsend shortly with further details about the new machines.

Census

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what new information attributes the 2007 Census Test is collecting on (a) individuals and (b) their properties. [145236]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 25 June 2007:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what new information attributes the 2007 Census Test is collecting on (a) individuals and (b) their properties. (145236)

The questions being asked in the Test are the result of wide consultation with users of Census statistics. Census data is of crucial importance for local and national planning and resource allocation. The Office for National Statistics seeks to prioritise the competing user needs and develop questions which are acceptable to the majority of respondents. The Test provides the opportunity to test new and updated questions, and the Test questions are not necessarily those which will be included in the Census in 2011.

Those topics or questions which are new for the Census Test are:-

a) Individuals

Q4 Expanded marital status question to include civil partnership

Q8 Month and year of entry into UK;

Q10 Nature of long standing health condition;

Q12 National identity;

Q15 Language Proficiency;

Q16 Frequency of use of Welsh (in Wales only);

Q17 Second Residence;

Q18 Type of Second Residence;

Q19 Time spent at second residence;

Q28 Sources of income;

Q29 Income.

b) Properties

H6 Accommodation type has an additional response option for 'linked by garage'.

H10 State of Repair

The Census Test is about much more than testing of questions. The key aims of the Census Test are to:

assess the feasibility of the major innovations in the proposed 2011 Census design; assess the effectiveness of new address questions and residence definitions to capture multi-residence information:

further advance understanding of the drivers of, and barriers to, public response, in particular to assess the effect on response of the inclusion of a question on income and the use of post-out to deliver questionnaires; assess the effectiveness of different enumeration approaches in maximising response for different population and area types; develop a detailed understanding of the requirements of business systems to support the census operation and the interfaces between them; assess the performance of alternative suppliers as part of the procurement of services for the 2011 Census; develop effective ways of working with local authorities to improve the enumeration process.

Child Benefit: Overseas Residence

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much was paid in child benefit to parents in respect of children living abroad in each of the last 12 months for which figures are available; [144211]

(2) how many applications for child benefit were received in respect of children living overseas in each of the last 12 months for which figures are available; [144212]

(3) how much was paid in child tax credit to parents in respect of children living overseas in each of the last 12 months for which figures are available. [144213]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) by my right. hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 12 June 2007, Official Report, column 943W.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many applications for child tax credit were received by the international claims processing section of HM Revenue and Customs in respect of children living abroad in each of the last 12 months for which figures are available. [144214]

Dawn Primarolo: This information is not available.

Children: Death

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many deaths there were following recorded injuries of children aged (a) 0 to four, (b) five to eight, (c) nine to 12 and (d) 13 to 16 years which took place (i) in the home, (ii) at school, (iii) in hospital, (iv) on a sports ground or other place where sporting activities occur, (v) in public parks and (vi) in other places in each year since 1997; [144259]

(2) how many deaths there were following recorded injuries of children aged (a) 0 to four, (b) five to eight, (c) nine to 12 and (d) 13 to 16 years in each year since 1997; [144262]

(3) how many deaths there were of children aged (a) zero to four, (b) five to eight, (c) nine to 12 and (d) 13 to 16 years in each year since 1997. [144278]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 25 June 2007:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your four recent questions about deaths of children listed here:

How many deaths there have been following recorded injuries of children aged (a) 0 to four, (b) five to eight, (c) nine to 12 and (d) 13 to 16 years which have taken place (i) in the home, (ii) at school, (iii) in hospital, (iv) on a sports ground or other place where sporting activities occur, (v) in public parks and (vi) in other places in each year since 1997; (144259)

how many deaths there have been following recorded injuries of children aged (a) 0 to four, (b) five to eight, (c) nine to 12 and (d) 13 to 16 years in each year since 1997; (144262)

how many fatalities there were of children aged (a) zero to four, (b) five to eight, (c) nine to 12 and (d) 13 to 16 years in each year since 1997; (144278)

how many fatalities there were of children aged (a) zero to four, (b) five to eight, (c) nine to 12 and (d) 13 to 16 years where the cause of death occurred in (i) the home, (ii) at school, (iii) in hospital, (iv) on a sports ground or similar space where sporting activities occur, (v) public parks and (vi) other places in each year since 1997. (144277)

Not all of the information you requested exists. The Office for National Statistics does not collect information on recorded injuries but does collect data on all registered deaths, including those with an underlying cause of injury, categorised by coroner's verdict—accident, intentional self-harm, homicide, and injury of undetermined intent. Information on place of occurrence of death is collected at registration for all deaths.

However, information on place of occurrence of the cause of death (i.e. where the person was when they were injured or became ill) is only collected on coroner's certificates of cause of death after inquest for deaths from injury and poisoning with a verdict of accident (including misadventure). The coroner is asked to select one often pre-specified categories of 'place where the accident occurred'.

The place of accident is then coded by ONS according to the revision of the International Classification of Diseases in use at the time (Ninth Revision 'ICD-9' from 1979 to 2000, and Tenth Revision 'ICD-10' since 2001). 'Home' and 'place of sport or recreation', are specified categories in both revisions, but school and hospital are not. They are subsumed in much larger categories: both are in 'public building' in ICD-10, but hospital was classified in 'resident institution' in ICD-9. Place of occurrence of injury is not coded in the same way for deaths from transport accidents, but the vast majority of these are motor vehicle accidents, and for most the place of accident would be street or highway. We have shown transport accidents separately in attached tables.

The tables below show the number of deaths in children by age group for all deaths, and deaths with a coroner's verdict of accident by place of occurrence of accident, between 1997 and 2005 in England and Wales.

Council Tax Benefits: Scotland

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the funds allocated to the Scottish Executive for council tax benefit will continue to be made available for the equivalent purpose to the Scottish Administration if the Administration moves ahead with plans to replace council tax. [145221]

Dawn Primarolo: Council tax benefit is a reserved matter.

Council Tax: Valuation

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) road wheels and (b) measuring tapes the Valuation Office Agency has purchased in the last 36 months; and what the cost has been. [143645]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is as follows.

(a) Measuring Road Wheels—36 at a cost of £2,934

(b) Measuring Tapes—111 at a cost of £1,075

Cox Review

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps have been taken to implement the five key recommendations of the 2005 Cox Review. [143987]

Margaret Hodge: I have been asked to reply.

The Government are working closely with the Design Council to ensure that the five key recommendations of Sir George Cox's Review of creativity in business are implemented effectively. Good progress is being made in all five areas:

Raising the awareness, understanding and performance by making widely available a Design Programme for Business—Regional Development Agencies are committed to implementing the Design Council's Designing Demand Programme and a full roll out across UK regions is expected by end 2007-08. The programme has already been rolled out in South Yorkshire, South East and West Midlands.

Educating the next generation of business leaders, creative specialists and engineers while in higher education—The Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) is appraising applications from six Higher Education Institutions to act as Centres of Excellence for the development of multidisciplinary courses. In May 2007 HEFCE awarded funding towards £5.8 million for the first centre of excellence, in London. Design-London at RCA-Imperial will create an 'innovation triangle' between design (represented by the Royal College of Art), engineering and technology (represented by Imperial College Faculty of Engineering) and the business of innovation (represented by Imperial's Tanaka Business School).

Improving effectiveness of R and D Tax credits—Specialist units within HMRC launched in November 2006 are improving the consistency and certainty for firms claiming the R and D tax credit. Furthermore, in Budget 2007 the Government announced that it intends to increase the support available under R and D tax credits. The rate of relief for large companies will increase to 130 per cent. of qualifying R and D expenditure. In the case of the SME R and D tax credit scheme, the rate of relief will increase to 175 per cent. for companies claiming enhanced deductions against profits. The value of the payable credit available will remain broadly at its current value (24 per cent. of qualifying expenditure). The SME credit will also be extended to companies with 250-500 employees. Changes to the SME scheme are subject to State Aid clearance by the European Commission.

Raising the profile of the UK's creative capabilities through a network of Centres of Creativity across the UK—A feasibility study by the London Development Agency (LDA) concluded that there is a strong case for an International Design-Business Exchange to act as an international market place for design led innovation, ideas and expertise. The Design Council is working with the LDA on how a prototype programme might operate.

Maximising the power of public sector procurement by encouraging more imaginative solutions from suppliers—The Office of Government Commerce is leading on this recommendation and there has been positive activity on early procurer engagement with suppliers, simplifying pre-qualification and forthcoming guidance on finding and procuring innovative solutions.

Crown Estate: Research

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the value was of applications made to the Crown Estate's Research Committee for research proposals in financial years 2005-06 and 2006-07; how many applications were made for funding; what the value of research funding allocated was; and how many applications were successful in each of those years. [140471]

John Healey: The Crown Estate does not invite open applications for research, rather, areas of research are decided by the Crown Estate through discussions with industry.

The figures for research funding are:

		£000
	2004-05	2005-06
Scottish Aquaculture Research Fund	100	100
Aquaculture Research Fund	100	196
Offshore Research Fund	97	120

Financial information for 2006-07 is not yet available.

It has been drawn to my attention that the answer given by the former Financial Secretary on 14 September 2004, Official Report, column 1506W, was incorrect. The figures given in that answer were for applications for funding from the Communities and Renewables Fund which finances community projects in areas where there are marine renewable energy developments; and from the Marine Stewardship Fund, which funds community initiatives that further good management of the marine estate. These are not applications for research. As stated above, funding for research comes from the Scottish Aquaculture Research Fund, the Aquaculture Research Fund and the Offshore Research Fund.

The table includes the revised figures for 2004-05.

Debts: Developing Countries

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the amount of money from the UK public purse which has been lost to vulture funds from aid paid (a) directly to other countries and (b) through the EU. [144267]

Ed Balls: My right hon. Friend, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, made a statement on 10 May, setting out actions the Government are taking to tackle the problem of so-called vulture funds. As he made clear, we are deeply concerned by the extent to which aggressively litigating creditors deplete the resources of developing countries, that might otherwise be used for productive social expenditures and poverty reduction. We are also concerned that these creditors are free-riding on the efforts of the international community, including through the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) initiative and the Multilateral Debt Relief Initiative (MDRI), to cancel the debts of the world's poorest countries.

Along with debt relief, the UK provides direct bilateral development assistance and multilateral development assistance, including through the EU, to the world's poorest countries. These countries also have other sources of revenue—not least from domestic taxation. In these circumstances, it is not possible for us to quantify a loss to the UK public purse. However, I share my hon. Friend's concern about the diversion of the limited resources of these countries away from productive social expenditures.

Defence: Finance

Mr. Harper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the virements between different sections within (a) Request for Resources (RfR) 1: Provision of Defence Capability and (b) RfR 2: Conflict Prevention he (i) agreed and (ii) refused for financial years 2001-02 to 2006-07. [145203]

Mr. Timms: Where HMT has approved virements within MOD RfRs they are listed in winter and spring supplementaries. These can be found at:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/documents/public_spending_reporting/estimates/psr_estimates_supplementary.cfm

Records of any virements that have been refused are not routinely retained.

Departments: Aviation

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many flights to overseas destinations were taken by (a) civil servants and (b) Ministers in his Department in each of the last three calendar years; and what the total cost of such flights was. [144938]

John Healey: Information relating to 2005 and 2006 is given as follows:

Calendar year	Number of trips by air	Total cost (£)
2005	835	959,393
2006	753	1,052,232

Information for 2004 and the breakdown requested of flights by Ministers and officials are not available.

Since 1999, the Government have published annually a list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government have also published each year since 1995-96 the total annual cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House.

Departments: Buildings

Grant Shapps: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost of leasing buildings and office space was for (a) his Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years. [139460]

John Healey: The cost of leasing buildings and office space for the Department and its agencies in each of the last five years is given in the following table:

					£000
	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06	2006-07
HM Treasury	n/a	439	423	436	475
Debt Management Office	1,130	1,569	1,553	1,566	1,605
Office of Government Commerce	5,250	5,786	5,176	5,469	5,867
Office of Government Commerce—vacant residual estate holdings	9,385	4,018	3,553	1,403	1,379

Departments: Databases

Mr. Harper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the schema for his Department's Combined Online Information System database. [145201]

John Healey: I have arranged for a listing of the Combined Online Information System (COINS) dimensions to be placed in the Library. The listing provided sets out, in a readable form, the structures within which data are held on the database.

Information on public expenditure plans and outturn from the COINS database is provided to Parliament, and the public more widely, in the form of a range of publications. These publications, copies of which are held in the House of Commons Library, include:

Main Estimates

Budgets and Spending Reviews

Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses (PESA) and Departmental Reports

Departments: DVDs

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which DVDs have been produced by his Department in the last 12 months; how many copies of such DVDs were produced; and what the cost to the public purse was of the (a) development, (b) production and (c) distribution of each DVD. [144563]

John Healey: In the last 12 months HM Treasury has produced one e-learning DVD as part of a pan government project for the National School of Government at a total cost of £50,000. There were 150 copies of this DVD produced.

Departments: Energy

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many energy saving lightbulbs were purchased by his Department for use on the departmental estate in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [144937]

John Healey: Light bulbs for the Treasury building are purchased by our PFI service provider. For details of the lighting in 1 Horse Guards Road, I refer to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Rayleigh (Mr. Francois) on 12 July 2006, Official Report, column 1841.

Departments: Foreign Relations

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many memoranda of understanding are in force as a result of agreements with foreign governments entered into by Ministers in his Department; and what executive actions each entails. [144464]

John Healey: The information requested is not retained centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate costs.

Departments: Marketing

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which promotional items were produced by or for his Department in each of the last three years. [144571]

John Healey: The information requested is not readily available and could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what advertising and marketing campaigns have been run by (a) his Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years; which external agencies were involved; and what the cost was of each campaign. [144629]

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was spent by his Department on advertising in the last 12 months. [145911]

John Healey: For the costs of advertising in the past five years, I refer to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Welwyn Hatfield (Grant Shapps) today. In addition to those costs, direct marketing spend by National Savings and Investments was as follows:

	£000
2002-03	5,968
2003-04	3,626
2004-05	6,471
2005-06	4,405
2006-07	3,422

National Savings and Investments' advertising and marketing campaigns promote their products, including Premium Bonds, Index Linked Savings Certificates, the Guaranteed Equity Bond and Children's Bonus Bonds, using Chick Smith Trott and OMD UK.

The main campaigns run by HM Revenue and Customs have been on self assessment, tax credits, the child trust fund, and the helpline for the newly self employed. The main agencies used have been MCBD, M and C Saatchi, and United London.

Departments: Ministerial Policy

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) pursuant to the answer of 5 June 2007, Official Report, column 465W, on Departments: Ministerial policy advisers, what procedures govern the use of Government resources by his special advisers as part of his leadership campaign; [144962]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 5 June 2007, Official Report, column 465W, on Departments: Ministerial policy advisers, and the Cabinet Secretary's letter of May 2007, whether any costs of his leadership campaign have been (a) incurred and (b) reimbursed by his Department. [144977]

John Healey: All Treasury officials and advisers conduct is in line with the requirements of the Civil Service and Special Advisers' Codes. Special advisers' involvement in party political matters is conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Code of Conduct for Special Advisers (available at www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk), including paragraph 7 on the use of official resources, and the guidance issued by the Cabinet Secretary in December 2006 and May 2007, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Departments: Mobile Phones

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost was of the mobile phone bill for his departmental special advisers in each of the last two years. [144537]

John Healey: The Treasury's accounting records do not separate mobile phone costs from other telecoms costs, and costs incurred by special advisers are not recorded separately from the telecoms costs of civil servants.

Departments: Northern Ireland

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the concordat governing the relationship between his Department and the Northern Ireland Administration. [145909]

Mr. Timms: The principles set out in the Memorandum of Understanding and Supplementary Agreements between the UK Government, Scottish Ministers, the Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales and the Northern Ireland Executive, published in 2001, continue to underpin our working relationship with the Northern Ireland Executive. My Department has a Concordat with the Northern Ireland Executive in place and I have arranged for a copy to be placed in the Library of the House.

Departments: Older Workers

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of staff in his Department were over 60 years of age in each of the last three years. [145690]

John Healey: The percentage of staff in HM Treasury aged 60 and over is as follows:

Year (as at 1 April)	Staff (percentage)
2007	0.6
2006	0.2
2005	0.2

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people aged (a) over 55 years of age and (b) over 60 years of age have been recruited by his Department in each of the last three years; and what percentage in each case this is of the number of new recruits in each year. [145697]

John Healey: The number and percentage of new recruits in HM Treasury in the 55+ and 60+ age categories are contained in the following table:

	All recruits aged 55 to 59		All recruits aged 60+
	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage
2006-07	3	1	1	0.3
2005-06	3	0.9	1	0.3
2004-05	3	0.9	1	0.3

Departments: Publicity

Grant Shapps: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was spent on advertising by (a) the Department and (b) its non-departmental agencies in each of the last five years. [139526]

John Healey: The information requested is in the following table.

Departments/Agencies	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06	2006-07

[1] The Treasury's costs of £3,115,000 for 2005-06 include £3,032,000 relating to a media campaign for stakeholder savings and investment products.
[2] The DMO's costs include advertising the issuances of gilt-edged securities.
[3] Information for OGCbuying.solutions for 2002-03 and 2004-05 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.
[4] The VGA's 2004-05 figure includes £321,000 relating to the Summary Valuations Public Information Campaign.
[5] Figures shown for HM Revenue and Customs for the years prior to 2005-06 are the aggregate of the former Inland Revenue and HM Customs and Excise.
[6] Figures for The Royal Mint have been excluded from the answer as they are commercially sensitive.
[7] National Savings and Investments costs for 2005-06 and 2006-07 include NS and I's television advertising campaign.
[8] Figures for the Office for National Statistics include promotion and publicity. Advertising could be disaggregated at disproportionate cost only.

Departments: Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff surveys his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and at what total cost. [145267]

John Healey: HM Treasury conducts an annual staff attitude survey and quarterly management surveys. Information relating to the costs of these surveys is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

EC Budget

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what financial contribution (a) the UK and (b) each other member state is expected to make to the European Union in 2008. [145546]

Ed Balls: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Surrey Heath (Michael Gove) on 31 January 2006, Official Report, columns 398-400W, which gives an estimate of United Kingdom gross and net contributions to the EC Budget in 2008.

Updated calendar year estimates for the United Kingdom's contributions to the EC Budget will be published annually in the Government's 'European Community Finances' White Paper. The 2007 edition of this White Paper (Cm 7090) was published on 22 May 2007.

HM Treasury does not, as a matter of course, forecast the gross and net contributions of all the other member states as this is a matter for their respective Governments. Figures for the 2008 gross contribution of each member state will be included in the 2008 EC adopted budget which will be published in the European Commission's Official Journal, L (Legislation) series, in due course.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much the UK contributed to the Central European Fund in 2006; and what the contributions made by other European member states were in that year. [145551]

Ed Balls: I am unaware of the Central European Fund. However, figures for the United Kingdom's gross contribution, after taking account of the UK abatement, to the EC Budget in 2006 can be found in Table 3 (page 47) of the European Community Finances White Paper (Cm 7090) published on 22 May 2007. European Commission estimates of all member states' gross contributions, after taking account of the UK abatement, to the 2006 EC Budget can also be found in this White Paper (Tables 2A (€ million), page 45, and 2B (£ million), page 46).

Employment: Graduates

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the employment rate is of (a) women and (b) men of (i) white, (ii) Afro-Caribbean and (iii) Asian ethnicity who graduated in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [145397]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 25 June 2007:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the employment rates for (a) women and (b) men, who are of (i) Afro-Caribbean and (ii) Asian ethnicity who graduated in each of the last five years, (145397)

The attached table shows the working age employment rates by gender and ethnicity among the people who graduated with a degree in the years 2000 to 2004. These rates are from the Annual Population Survey (APS) for the twelve months period ending December 2005.

As with any sample survey, estimates from the APS are subject to a margin of uncertainty. This is particularly true for the employment rates of some ethnic groups.

ONS Annual Population Survey (APS)

Employment: Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in West Lancashire were recorded as being in full-time employment in the financial year ending (a) March 1997 and (b) March 2007; and how many were women in each case. [144973]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 25 June 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking how many people in West Lancashire were recorded as being in full-time employment in the financial year ending (a) March 1997 and (b) March 2007; and how many were women in each case. (144973)

The Office for National Statistics compiles employment statistics for local areas from the annual local area Labour Force Survey (LFS) and the Annual Population Survey (APS) following International Labour Organisation definitions.

Estimates of the number of people in full-time employment, resident in the West Lancashire constituency, as well as all the other parliamentary constituencies in Great Britain, was provided in an Answer on 3rd May 2007 (Hansard: column 1806W-1807W, reference 135561).

There were 10,000 women, aged 16 and over, resident in the West Lancashire constituency, in full-time employment for the 12 month period ending in February 1997 based on data from the annual local area LFS. The corresponding estimate, for the 12 months ending in September 2006, the latest available data from the APS, was 11,000.

As these estimates are for a subset of the population in small geographical areas, they are based on small sample sizes, and are therefore subject to large margins of uncertainty.

Employment: Warrington

Helen Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Warrington residents were in employment (a) in April 1997 and (b) at the latest date for which figures are available. [145468]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 25 June 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question asking how many Warrington residents were in employment (a) in April 1997 and (b) the latest date for which figures are available. (145468).

The Office for National Statistics compiles employment statistics from local areas from the annual local area labour force survey (LFS) and the annual population survey (APS) following international labour organisation definitions.

There ware 91,000 people., aged 16 and over, in employment, resident in the Warrington unitary authority, for the 12 months ending February 1997, from the local area LFS. There were 97,000 people aged 16 and over, in employment, resident in the Warrington unitary authority, for the 12 months ending September 2006, from the latest available data from the APS. The corresponding headline employment rates, for persons of working age (males aged 16:to 64 and females aged 16 to 59) are 75 per cent. for the 12 months ending February 1997 and 78 per cent. for the 12 months ending in September 2006.

As these estimates are for a subset of the population in small geographical areas, they are based on small sample sizes, and are therefore subject to large margins of uncertainty.

First-time Buyers

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps his Department is taking to help more first-time home buyers. [145549]

John Healey: The Government recognise concerns over housing affordability, particularly amongst first-time buyers, and is acting to alleviate these pressures on various fronts including by tackling supply constraints; bringing forward public sector land for development; increasing the starting threshold for stamp duty land tax; building more social housing; and helping people into home ownership through supporting shared equity schemes. The Treasury is working with Departments across Government in support of this agenda.

Foundation Degrees

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the employment rate is of those who completed foundation degrees and did not go on to higher education in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [145396]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 25 June 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the employment rate for those who completed a foundation degree but did not go on to higher education in the last five years. (145396)

The attached table shows the working age employment rate for those who completed a foundation degree and did not go on to higher education. The table gives estimates for the three months to December in each year from 2004 to 2006. Information is not available prior to 2004. The data have not been seasonally adjusted.

Estimates are taken from the Labour Force Survey (LFS). As with any sample survey, estimates from the LFS are subject to a margin of uncertainty.

Employment rates[1] of people of working age[2] who have completed foundation degrees[3] and not continued with higher education, 2004 to 2006—United Kingdom, not seasonally adjusted

HM Revenue and Customs: East Kilbride

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the local office of HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) is required to be able to give definitive advice to Arun (a) district council as grantor and (b) councillors as grantees on the tax position relating to the take-up of the £500 council grant for members towards the purchase of a personal computer for council work; what targets the office has been set for technical experts returning calls; when the HMRC employers' Contact Us and Send An Email webpage will cease to display the message that an email service cannot be offered; when Arun district council will receive a response from HMRC East Kilbridge Glasgow office's compliance officers; if he will take steps to ensure that HMRC resolves the matter with Arun district council; and if he will make a statement. [144414]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC has customer service targets across all of its main lines of business. For post, the target is to deal with 80 per cent. of correspondence within 15 days and 95 per cent. within 40 days. Since you asked your question HMRC has been in touch with Arun district council and the issue is being dealt with.

The HMRC website tells its customers the services which are available including the latest position on which services are offered by email. The website is updated regularly.

HM Revenue and Customs: Job Satisfaction

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the morale of (a) tax credits staff and (b) all HM Revenue and Customs staff in (i) November 2006, (ii) May 2006, (iii) November 2005 and (iv) May 2005; what assessment he has made of trends in morale; and if he will make a statement. [144865]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC takes the morale and well-being of its staff very seriously. It conducts a staff survey twice a year, which questions a sample of all staff.

Results for surveys conducted in May and November 2005 and 2006 are published on the HMRC Internet at http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/research/.

HM Revenue and Customs: Manpower

John McDonnell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many post reductions there were in HM Revenue and Customs in each of the last three financial years, broken down by grade. [144712]

Dawn Primarolo: The changes in numbers of staff in post by grade in HMRC since 1 April 2004 are shown in the following table.

	Full-time equivalent units in post (as at 1 April each year)				Increase/(decrease) in year
	2004	2005	2006	2007	2004-05	2005-06	2006-07

Higher Officer	12,249	12,479	11,282	10,719	231	(1,197)	(564)
Officer	24,905	25,152	23,551	22,161	247	(1,601)	(1,390)
Asst Officer	36,275	32,006	35,859	35,258	(4,269)	3,853	(602)
Admin Asst	16,484	18,828	13,607	12,564	2,344	(5,221)	(1,043)
Total	98,369	97,073	92,888	88,936	(1,296)	(4,185)	(3,953)

Figures for 2004-05 are based on the figures for HM Customs and Excise and Inland Revenue prior to the formation of HMRC.

The Department's staffing baseline at 1 April 2004 is now 97,755 after adjustment for machinery of government changes and changes in the definitions of published data.

HM Revenue and Customs: Pay

John McDonnell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was spent on bonus payments made to senior civil servants in HM Revenue and Customs in 2006-07. [144713]

Dawn Primarolo: During 2006-07 bonus payments totalling £1,913,547 were made to senior civil servants in HM Revenue and Customs.

HM Revenue and Customs: Public Expenditure

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to publish the HM Revenue and Customs 2006-07 accounts; and if he will make a statement. [144869]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC plans to lay its 2006-07 accounts before the House rises for the summer recess.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for which years since 1996 the Comptroller and Auditor General has qualified his opinion of the Trust Statements of (a) HM Revenue and Customs and (b) the Inland Revenue; for what reason in each case; and if he will make a statement. [144903]

Dawn Primarolo: This information is available in the Comptroller and Auditor General's Certificate and Report on the Trust Statements which can be found at: http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/about/reports.htm

HM Revenue and Customs: Standards

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what performance targets apply to HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) on the time taken to process claims for tax rebate from receipt of application to settlement of claim; what assessment he has made of recent levels of compliance with those targets; and what assessment he has made of the compliance of HMRC, Centre 1, East Kilbride with the targets in the latest period for which figures are available. [144281]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs target is to deal with 97 per cent. of formal repayment claims, from customers outside PAYE or Self Assessment who have had tax deducted from investment income, within 15 days. All such repayment claims are now dealt with in HMRC's Leicester office and HMRC currently meets the published target. HMRC do not have specific targets in respect of repayment claims from other contact with customers.

Housing: Environment Protection

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the budget is for the eco-towns programme; [145542]

(2) what funding his Department is providing for his proposed eco-towns programme. [145222]

John Healey: The Government are committed to delivering sustainable housing growth, and announced at Budget 2006 an ambition that all new homes would be zero carbon within a decade. The Department for Communities and Local Government have said they will consider plans for eco-towns put forward by local authorities. Funding for eco-towns and housing growth more generally is a matter for the Comprehensive Spending Review.

IBM

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer who directed that Mr. Attwood and Mr. Bishop of Inland Revenue should undertake a review in August 1999 of the hon. Member for North Wiltshire's constituent Mr. Gerard Churchhouse's contribution to the transfer pricing review of IBM; and whether the report of the review still exists. [144042]

Dawn Primarolo: Due to HM Revenue and Custom's statutory duty of confidentiality it is not possible to comment on any aspect of IBM's affairs nor confirm whether any particular document exists.

Immigration

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations (a) his Department and (b) the Office for National Statistics has received from local authorities on the accuracy of the Government's immigration statistics; what funds he has made available to local authorities to deal with the demands of immigration; and on what formula such funds were distributed. [142367]

John Healey: HM Treasury and the Office for National Statistics (ONS) have received representations from local authorities about the ONS's population estimates and population projections used in the local government finance settlements, some of which cover the estimation of the international migration component.

The ONS announced planned improvements to the methods for estimating the international migration component of local authority population estimates in August 2006.

The amount of money apportioned to all local authorities is based to a large degree upon the local population (including long-term migrants). The formula that Communities and Local Government use for apportioning this sum between individual local authorities can be found at:

http://www.local.odpm.gov.uk/finance/0607/grant.htm

Income Tax

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the number of people who will be subject to a higher marginal rate of taxation as a result of Budget 2007 in each year from 2007-08 to 2009-10; and if he will make a statement; [131114]

(2) if he will estimate the number of people who will pay more income tax as a result of Budget 2007 in each year from 2007-08 to 2009-10; and if he will make a statement. [131115]

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate he has made of the number of people (a) whose income will be reduced by the abolition of the 10p income tax rate, broken down by gender, and (b) whose loss of income caused by the abolition of the 10p income tax rate will be made up by tax credits; [131290]

(2) how many taxpayers will see their tax bill increase as a result of the proposed abolition of the 10p starting rate; and how many of this group will have the tax increase covered (a) completely and (b) in part by increased eligibility for tax credits. [132415]

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the effect of the abolition of the 10p tax band on an individual earning £10,000 per annum who is (a) in receipt of tax credits and (b) not in receipt of tax credits. [137865]

Ed Balls: In 2008-09, all 31 million taxpayers would have benefited from the 10p rate of income tax. Some 28 million of these taxpayers stand to gain from the cut in the basic rate of income tax to 20p.

As a result of the personal tax package changes in Budget 2007 as a whole, four in five households will be better off or see no change in household income. This means 21 million households will see their net tax payments fall or stay the same.

The final impact on individual families' living standards will depend upon final levels of wages, the national minimum wage, indexation and levels of benefits such as the child tax credit and the pension credit.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the likely net effect on annual Treasury revenues of a four pence reduction in the basic rate of income tax. [144566]

Dawn Primarolo: The Exchequer effect of a 4p reduction in the basic rate of income tax can be derived from table 1.6 'Direct effects of illustrative tax changes' on the HM Revenue and Customs website at http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/tax_expenditures/table 1-6.pdf.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the (a) number and (b) proportion of detached properties in (i) England and (ii) Wales which have a value above the inheritance tax threshold. [145235]

Dawn Primarolo: The number of detached properties in England with a gross value which exceeded £285,000 in 2006 is estimated at 1.9 million, or 41 per cent. of all detached properties in England. Only 27 per cent. of properties are detached, and overall only 18 per cent. of all properties were valued at more than £285,000. Corresponding figures for Wales are not available but 19 per cent. of sales of detached properties sold for prices over £285,000 in 2006.

In the same year only 6 per cent. of estates were liable to IHT. Budget 2007 announced that the IHT nil-rate band will increase to £350,000 in 2010-11; in addition, assets left to a surviving spouse or civil partner are completely exempt from IHT.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the merits of hypothecating monies from inheritance tax to pay for an individual's care costs, with particular reference to cost of accommodation in a care home when an individual has an estate above the inheritance tax threshold. [145723]

Dawn Primarolo: No such assessment has been made.

The revenue raised from IHT, along with that from other revenues, funds essential public services that benefit the whole country.

Legal Services Bill

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with Ministerial colleagues in the Ministry of Justice on the impact of the Legal Services Bill. [145412]

Mr. Timms: Treasury Ministers have regular discussions with their ministerial colleagues on a wide range of issues. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such discussions.

Marginal Tax Rates

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of taxpayers with marginal deduction rates of over (a) 60 per cent., (b) 70 per cent., (c) 80 per cent., (d) 90 per cent. and (e) 100 per cent. (i) in 2008-09 and (ii) 2009-10. [131357]

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of people who in 2008-09 will have a marginal tax rate of (a) over 50 per cent., (b) over 60 per cent., (c) over 70 per cent., (d) over 80 per cent. and (e) over 90 per cent. [132122]

Greg Clark: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people he estimates will face a marginal deduction rate of (a) over 60 per cent. and (b) over 70 per cent. following the tax and benefit changes in the Budget which take effect from April 2008. [139723]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of the number of families facing marginal deduction rates above 60 per cent. are published in Budget 2007 Table 4.2.

Consistent with past practice, estimates of the number of families who may face marginal deduction rates above 50 per cent. in 2008-09 will be published in the 2007 pre-Budget report.

Members: Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to reply to the letter of 9 May from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. and Mrs. Iqbal. [145739]

Dawn Primarolo: I have replied to the right hon. Member.

Michael Ellam

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) on what date he expects Michael Ellam to cease employment in his Department; [144536]

(2) whether Michael Ellam has been a civil servant from 1 January 2007 to date. [144981]

John Healey: Michael Ellam has been a civil servant throughout his Treasury employment.

Ministerial Powers

Mr. Harper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the ministerial directions of which his Department has been notified since May 1997. [145200]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 22 November 2005, Official Report, column 1910W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice).

Ministerial Residences

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the costs of refurbishment of the flat above Number 10 Downing Street have been in financial year 2006-07. [111294]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 43W, which the Minister for the Cabinet Office gave the hon. Member for Rayleigh (Mr. Francois).

Motor Vehicles: Testing

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) meetings and (b) discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Transport on the lengthening of the allowable period between MOT tests. [145125]

John Healey: Treasury Ministers and officials have discussions with a wide range of organisations and individuals in the public and private sectors as part of the process of policy development and delivery. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such discussions.

National Debt

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the level of national debt is; and what steps his Department is taking to reduce it. [145552]

John Healey: The latest estimate of net debt can be found in the latest public sector finances data release, jointly published by HM-Treasury and the ONS on June 20 2007. This is available at:

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk=805

The performance of fiscal policy is judged against the Government's two fiscal rules, the golden rule and the sustainable investment rule. The sustainable investment rule states that public sector net debt, as a proportion of GDP, will be held over the economic cycle at a stable and prudent level. Other things being equal, net debt will be maintained below 40 per cent. of GDP over the economic cycle. The Budget 2007 projections show that the Government are meeting both fiscal rules.

National Income: Public Holidays

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the effect on gross national product of each bank holiday in the UK in 2006. [144570]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 25 June 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question concerning what estimate has been made of the effect on gross national product of (a) all bank holidays in the UK in 2006 and (b) each such bank holiday. (144570)

Most headline economic statistics are seasonally adjusted, so that the timing of bank holidays does not affect comparisons across months, quarters and years. The ONS does not however make any assessment of the impact of bank holidays on the level of economic activity.

Office of Government Commerce: Consultants

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much the Office of Government Commerce spent on external consultants in each of the last five years. [136997]

John Healey: Information on OGC's administration costs consultancy spending in 2003-04 to 2006-07 is set out in table 7.4 of HM Treasury's Annual Report and Accounts, published on HM Treasury's website. In addition, in 2005-06, a further £3.45 million of programme consultancy costs were incurred as part of the OGC's Efficiency Challenge Fund work stream.

For 2002-03, information on OGC's own consultancy spend could be disaggregated from costs of services engaged on behalf of other bodies only at disproportionate cost.

PAYE

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many open Pay as You Earn cases there were at the end of each of the three last financial years; and if he will make a statement. [141463]

Dawn Primarolo: The number of open PAYE cases at the end of each of the three last financial years were:

	Million
2005	7.0
2006	12.2
2007	13.0

The number of open cases arising at the year-end has been increasing steadily because of increase in the number of employments in existence and changes in the pattern of employment.

Numbers have also increased in the last two years because of a delay in the processing of P14 information received from employers. This has now been resolved and HMRC are working hard to reduce the number of open cases. HMRC will reduce the number of open cases to 10.5 million by April 2008.

Pension Funds: Taxation

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate he has made of the aggregate value of pension fund surpluses, as defined for tax purposes, on 1 July 1997 or the nearest available prior date; [141523]

(2) what the estimated value was of actuarial liabilities against which the £60 billion surplus referred to in the Inland Revenue's note to him of 27 May 1997 was measured; [141524]

(3) whether the estimated £60 billion actuarial surplus in all pension funds as estimated in the Inland Revenue's note to him of 27 May 1997 was (a) a net figure which included schemes reporting deficits and (b) a gross figure which excluded such schemes; [141525]

(4) what method was used to extrapolate the position of all pension schemes from the sample of 32 large pension schemes by the Inland Revenue in the memorandum addressed to him dated 27 May 1997. [141539]

Ed Balls: Advice to Ministers was published on 30 March 2007. Further details of the analysis underpinning advice to Ministers in 1997 beyond that which we have published are not held in electronic archives. Information on aggregate pension fund surpluses and actuarial liabilities was not held centrally.

Pensions

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the likely net effect on total annual contributions to pension funds of the abolition of higher tax rate relief on pension contributions. [144565]

Ed Balls: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 27 April 2007, Official Report, columns 1371-72W.

Pensions: Public Sector

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which public sector pension schemes remain open to new workers up to 1 July 2007 with a retirement age of 60 years or less; and if he will make a statement. [144075]

Mr. Timms: Information on the pension ages currently applied in all public sector schemes is not held centrally, but the position as regards new entrants to the main schemes for which UK Government Ministers are responsible is:

Armed forces, police and firefighters pension schemes have pension ages of 60 or below, and age 65 for those with preserved pension rights. The lower pension ages in these schemes reflect the physical requirements of these occupations.

The NHS, teachers and the civil service pension scheme have been or are being reformed so that new entrants have a pension age of 65 from January 2007 for teachers, July 2007 for civil servants and a date to be finalised in 2008 for the NHS.

The local government pension scheme already had a pension age of 65.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made to the extent to which public sector pension reform since 2005 meets the criteria of (a) affordability, (b) fairness relative to the private sector and (c) fairness within the public sector; and if he will make a statement. [144077]

Mr. Timms: The Government view public service pensions as a key part of the remuneration package of public servants, aimed at attracting and rewarding the skills and professionalism required to maintain a high quality public sector work force. Like other employers, the Government have to manage the increasing pension costs associated with rising longevity. Public service pension schemes have been reformed or are undergoing reform in order to make them affordable and sustainable in future. Following the Public Services Forum agreement in 2005, the reforms being introduced in the three major unfunded public service pension schemes—the NHS, teachers and the civil service schemes—include increases in the normal pension age for new entrants and mechanisms that ensure that any future increases in cost will be shared fairly between employers and employees. In addition, there will also be an upper limit on the cost to the taxpayer, should costs increase.

Similar reforms have also been agreed in other public service schemes including the local government pensions scheme.

Expenditure on public service pension schemes as published in the latest Long Term Public Finance report (2006) is projected to be affordable and sustainable.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost to the public purse of public sector pensions in (a) cash terms, (b) real terms and (c) as a share of gross domestic product for each year from 2007 to 2058; and if he will make a statement. [144265]

Mr. Timms: Current estimates and future projections (until 2055-56) of public service pensions costs are available in the latest Long Term Public Finance Report (LTPFR) published in December 2006—also available at the HM Treasury website:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/media/6/0/pbr06_longtermpublicfinancereport_476.pdf)

A note by the Government Actuary's Department (GAD) and HM Treasury on the assumptions used for the unfunded public service pension projections in the latest LTPFR is now available on the GAD website:

www.gad.gov.uk

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the proportion of reductions in public expenditure arising from public sector pension reform which will be made in respect of (a) existing staff and (b) new entrants; and if he will make a statement. [144266]

Mr. Timms: Savings estimates made at the time of the Public Services Forum agreement in 2005 on the reform of the three main unfunded pension schemes—the NHS, Teachers and the Civil Service Pension schemes—showed that over the next 50 years 85 per cent. of savings as a result of these reforms were expected to come from new entrants.

The assumptions on which the 2005 savings estimates were based have now been superseded. Moreover, these estimates did not take account of reforms that were agreed later, such as cost sharing between employers and employees and capping of employer contribution rates.

Scheme reforms are still being finalised, and scheme costings are being updated as part of the scheme valuation process. The latest valuations for the NHS pension scheme and the civil service pension scheme, for example, are due for publication by 2008. Updated savings estimates may be possible once the valuations are complete.

Personal Income

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many households with a household reference person aged (a) 16 to 20, (b) 21 to 25, (c) 26 to 30, (d) 31 to 40, (e) 41 to 50, (f) 51 to 60, (g) 61 to 65, (h) 66 to 75, (i) 76 to 85 and (j) over 85 had an income of (i) less than 80 per cent., (ii) less than 60 per cent. (iii) less than 40 per cent. and (iv) less than 20 per cent. of the median household income for such households in the last period for which figures are available; and how many adults live in such households in each case. [133834]

Mr. Jim Murphy: I have been asked to reply.

Figures on the 20 per cent. of median income threshold are not statistically robust as the sample sizes are too small.

The available information is in the tables.

Table 1: Number of households (million) below different thresholds of median income: 2005-06 before housing costs: by age-band of household reference person

Personal Savings

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the average value of savings per person in each UK region in each of the last five years. [144581]

Ed Balls: The information requested is not available.

Public Expenditure: Surveys

Mr. Harper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library copies of all extant public expenditure survey (PES) papers; and if he will make it his policy to make PES papers publicly available on his Department's website. [145202]

Mr. Timms: Most Public Expenditure System papers containing standing guidance have been incorporated into the Consolidated Budgeting Guidance, available on Treasury's website. Remaining extant papers generally contain time-limited guidance and are withdrawn as they become out of date.

I have arranged for copies of extant PES papers to be published on Treasury's website as soon as practically possible, and all future PES papers will likewise be published.

Public Sector: Pensions

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the Government's unfunded public sector pension liabilities are if calculated using a discount rate based on index linked gilts; and what discount rate he uses for the calculation. [118104]

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the Government's total accrued liability in relation to public service pension schemes was as at March 2006; [127765]

(2) what recent estimate he has made of the liabilities of public sector pension schemes for which he is responsible; and if he will make a statement. [140303]

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the total liabilities of unfunded public sector pension schemes as at 31 March 2006. [137977]

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the liabilities of public sector pension schemes for which he is responsible. [140307]

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) when his Department plans to publish the latest estimates of public sector unfunded pension liabilities; and if he will make a statement; [141940]

(2) what the reasons are for the delay in the publication of the latest estimate of the cost of unfunded public sector pension liabilities; and if he will make a statement; [143622]

(3) what his estimate is of the total unfunded public sector pension liability as at 31 March 2006; and if he will make a statement; [144270]

(4) on what date his Department plans to release the (a) estimate and (b) analysis of the total liability of unfunded public service occupational schemes at (i) 31 March 2006 and (ii) 31 March 2007; and if he will make a statement; [144561]

(5) what discount rate the Government are using to calculate the net present value of public sector pension commitments; and if he will make a statement; [144575]

(6) what estimate he has made of the impact on the net present value of unfunded public sector pension schemes of changing the discount rate by 0.1 per cent.; and if he will make a statement; [144693]

(7) what change in the discount rate for public sector pension schemes was made on 31 March 2007; and if he will make a statement; [144895]

(8) what the Government's policy is on the choice of a discount rate for public sector pension scheme liabilities; and if he will make a statement. [144896]

Mr. Timms: The unfunded public service pension liability as at 31 March 2005 was estimated to be £530 billion, and a technical paper explaining the methodology underlying this estimate is in the House Library. A new estimate will be published in due course.

The total liability estimate covers all the pensions due to be paid to current and future pensioners in unfunded pension schemes, which will be paid at different times over the next eight decades, and which have been earned by around 10 million current and former public servants and their dependants over the last eight decades.

The cash payments needed to service these payments remain stable and fully affordable. In 2004-05, around £18 billion was spent on paying unfunded, public service occupational pensions. This compares with around £17 billion in 2003-04. Both of these figures are in cash terms.

And as the latest Long Term Public Finance Report demonstrates, these annual cash payments are projected to remain completely affordable in the long-term, rising gradually to only 2 per cent. of GDP in 50 years time, contributing to the strong position the UK economy is in to meet the fiscal challenges of the future.

Small Businesses

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with the Confederation of British Industry on the position of small businesses. [145543]

John Healey: The Chancellor is in frequent dialogue with the Confederation of British Industry as well as other representative bodies, discussing a number of issues including the position of small businesses.

Stillbirths

Andrew George: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many stillbirths there were in each English region in each year since 1997. [144286]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 25 June 2007:

As the National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question about how many stillbirths there were in each region of England in each year since 1997. (144286)

The latest year for which stillbirth figures are available is 2005. The accompanying table shows numbers of stillbirths in England by Government Office Region for the years 1997 to 2005.

Stillbirths by Government Office Region[1] in England 1997 to 2005

Tax Allowances: Armed Forces

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what tax relief schemes are in place for members of the military serving overseas. [145547]

Dawn Primarolo: Members of the military serving overseas are entitled to the tax relief available to taxpayers generally, provided they satisfy any qualifying conditions. The Government have also introduced a specific tax exemption in Finance Bill 2007 for members of the armed forces who are paid the newly introduced operational allowance. There is also a tax exemption under section 299 Income Tax (Earnings and Pensions) Act 2003 that covers any foreign service allowance paid to members of the armed forces to cover the extra cost of having to live outside the United Kingdom when serving overseas.

Tax Collection

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps his Department is taking to recover tax uncollected by HM Revenue and Customs in the period 2005-06. [145550]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) take a number of steps to recover outstanding tax debts. These include:

The issue of printed reminders and letters

Telephone pursuit campaigns and calls to individual cases

Recovery visits to business and home addresses and, if the debt is still unpaid instigation of legal proceedings via distraint, court and/or insolvency action. 2005-06 debt still outstanding is being managed and will now be subject to recovery action, time to pay arrangements, legal proceedings or insolvency action although some of the debt will still be under dispute.

The Department is also introducing more flexible payment methods to make it easier for customers to pay tax liabilities.

Tax Credit Office: Pay

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what bonuses were paid to staff working on tax credits in each (a) month, (b) quarter and (c) year from April 2003 to May 2007; and if he will make a statement; [141494]

(2) how many bonus payments were made to Tax Credit Office staff in each year since 2003, broken down by value of payment. [143595]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available for all staff working on tax credits. I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend gave him on 25 July 2006, Official Report, column 1393W. As she explained, staff in various parts of HM Revenue and Customs, not only the Tax Credit Office, may be deployed to tax credits work or deal with tax credits in addition to other work. It is not possible to isolate those in receipt of bonus payments.

For the number and value of bonus payments made to Tax Credit Office staff since new tax credits were introduced in 2003, I refer the hon. Member to the answers my right hon. Friend gave him on 23 October 2006, Official Report, column 1646W, 25 July 2006, Official Report, column 1393W, 29 June 2006, Official Report, column 587W, and 12 December 2005, Official Report, columns 1792-93W.

The Director of the Tax Credit Office continues to recognise exceptional performance—including examples of excellent customer service—through a Recognition Bonus Scheme. The number and value of bonus payments made to Tax Credits Office staff from October 2006 to May 2007 inclusive are shown as follows:

	Number of Staff awarded a bonus payment	Total value paid (£)
2006
October	3	750
November	17	1,900
December	7	1,200
2007
January	7	1,600
February	44	5,400
March	63	15,850
April	2	800
May	23	3,400

Tax Credit Office: Sick Leave

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many sick days were taken by Tax Credit Office staff in each year since 2003; and what the average number of sick days was per staff member. [143596]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is given in the following table:

	Full-time equivalent days taken	Average number of working days lost per member of staff
2003	56,726	16.86
2004	69,032	16.88
2005-06	48,692	16.71
2006-07 (provisional)	44,258	13.16

Tax Credits: Research

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the evaluation strategy for research and development tax credits includes assessments of whether the final beneficial owner of the entity claiming the tax credits is based offshore. [145039]

John Healey: The research survey conducted in 2005 as part of the evaluation of R and D tax credits collected information on a range of characteristics of the R and D companies responding, including whether they were part of a larger foreign company or group. The findings are published as Research Report 12 on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/research/index.htm

Taxation: Overseas Residence

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy not to appoint individuals who hold non-domicile tax status as economic advisers or give them access to official papers on economic policy. [145030]

John Healey: The appointment and conduct of special advisers is in accordance with the Ministerial Code, Civil Service Code and Code of Conduct for Special Advisers.

Taxation: Pensioners

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many home visits were made by HM Revenue and Customs staff to pensioners to provide assistance with completing self-assessment tax return forms in each of the last five years. [145478]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is not held centrally.

Taxation: Self-Assessment

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many 2005-06 tax returns have been lost. [145452]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on the number of lost tax returns is not recorded centrally. HMRC have a rigorous system for logging and handling returns in order to minimise the risk of losses.

Taxation: USA

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the recent enforcement actions taken by the US Inland Revenue Services against two large accountancy partnerships located both in the US and the UK have been discussed at joint meetings of the UK and US tax authorities. [144694]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by the Financial Secretary on 13 June 2007, Official Report, column 1124W.

I am unable to comment on particular cases.

Unemployment: Warrington

Helen Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in Warrington were unemployed (a) in April 1997 and (b) at the latest date for which figures are available, broken down by (i) age group and (ii) local government ward. [145467]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, 25 June 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question asking how many people in Warrington were unemployed (a) in April 1997 and (b) the latest date for which figures are available, broken down by (i) age group and (ii) local government ward. (145467)

For unitary and local authorities, the Office for National Statistics (ONS) produces estimates of total unemployment, following International Labour Organisation (ILO) definitions, from a statistic model. For all other estimates of unemployment for local areas, ONS compiles statistics from the Annual Population Survey (APS) following ILO definitions.

Table 1, attached, shows modelled estimates of the total number of unemployed, for the Warrington unitary authority, for the 12 months ending in February 1997 and the 12 months ending in September 2006. Estimates by age group are provided from the annual local area LFS for the 12 months ending in February 1997 and from the APS for the 12 months ending in September 2006. Corresponding estimates for local government wards are not available.

As these estimates are for a subset of the population in small geographical areas, they are based on small sample sizes and are therefore subject to large margins of uncertainty.

ONS also compiles statistics for local areas of people claiming Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA). Table 2, attached, shows the total numbers of people, and the numbers by age group, resident in the Warrington unitary authority, claiming JSA in April 1997, April 2007 and in May 2007, the latest available data. Also shown are the total numbers of claimants as percentages of the resident working age population. Table 3, attached, shows the numbers of JSA claimants in each local authority ward in Warrington, and these numbers as percentages of the resident working age populations, for May 2007.

Data for 2003 Census Area Statistics wards are provided for the latest period only, as data for the same ward boundaries, for April 1997, are not available.

Valuation Office Agency

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 26 January 2007, Official Report, column 2134W, on the Valuation Office Agency (VOA), if he will place in the Library copies of staff magazines produced by the VOA since the January 2006 edition. [142401]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer of 8 January 2007, Official Report, column 432W, which confirmed that a copy of the Valuation Office Agency's staff magazine for June 2006 was placed in the Library. Two subsequent editions have now been placed in the Library.

Michael Gove: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library copies of the Valuation Office Agency's Audit Committee minutes from the last 12 months. [143661]

Dawn Primarolo: The meeting summaries, which will be published on the Valuation Office Agency's (VOA) website—www.voa.gov.uk—have been placed in the Library.

Valuation Office: Databases

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the Valuation Office Agency's target is for increasing the number of photographs of (a) domestic and (b) non-domestic properties held on its electronic database. [145223]

Dawn Primarolo: The VOA has no target to increase the number of photographs on the electronic database.

Valuation Office: Manpower

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 27 March 2007, Official Report, column 1513W, on the Valuation Office: manpower, what the figure was in each year from 1990 to 1999. [145345]

Dawn Primarolo: The numbers of full-time equivalent staff employed by the agency as at the end of March each year are shown in the following table:

	Number of full-time equivalent staff
1997	4,301
1998	4,110
1999	4,072

The VOA does not retain records prior to 1997. Therefore we are unable to produce Staff In Post reports before this year.

Valuation Office: Training

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much the Valuation Office Agency spent on media training in each year since 2001. [145224]

Dawn Primarolo: The Valuation Office Agency spent £20,000 in 2004 on media training.

Valuation Office: Visits Abroad

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the foreign countries which representatives of the Valuation Office Agency have visited on official business since 1 January. [145234]

Dawn Primarolo: Since 1 January 2007, VOA staff visited Australia, Canada, New Zealand, USA and Lithuania on official business.

VAT

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of total uncollected VAT revenues in the last year for which figures are available. [126242]

Dawn Primarolo: Recoverable VAT revenue uncollected at the end of financial year 2005-06 was estimated at £1.1 billion.

This figure is a snapshot of the amount unpaid at the end of the financial year and fluctuates throughout the year.

This debt is being actively managed and will be subject to recovery action, time to pay arrangements, legal proceedings and insolvency action.

VAT: Home Information Packs

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the expected (a) gross and (b) net revenue is from VAT on (i) home information packs (HIPs), (ii) the home condition report element of a HIP and (iii) energy performance certificates; [145228]

(2) whether VAT will be payable on the entire contents of a home information pack. [145229]

Dawn Primarolo: The extent to which VAT will be payable on the costs incurred by a prospective house seller in compiling a home information pack will depend on the contents of each individual pack, and on how it is compiled.

HM Revenue and Customs does not have the information required to make these specific estimates.

VAT: Registration

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect on businesses of the time taken to approve VAT applications; what steps he intends to take to reduce this timescale; and if he will make a statement. [144729]

Dawn Primarolo: It is right that HM Revenue and Customs take steps to prevent abuse of the VAT system—including by those who seek to register for fraudulent purposes. While these steps aim to target abuse, HMRC recognise that unacceptable delays for legitimate businesses should be minimised. HMRC are introducing new working practices and processes designed to improve the service.

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 18 June 2007, Official Report, column 1500W, on VAT: registration, how many VAT applications not processed within 21 days of receipt in March 2007 related to (a) mobile telephones, (b) other electrical equipment and (c) other activities. [145175]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs does not record processing times for businesses involved specifically in mobile phones or electrical equipment.

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 18 June 2007, Official Report, column 1500W, on VAT: registration, how many such complaints were from companies seeking VAT registration to conduct business activities relating to (a) mobile telephones, (b) other electrical equipment and (c) other activities. [145177]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs does not record details of the trading activities of businesses that made complaints.

VAT: Solar Power

Stephen Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much VAT was raised from the sale of solar panels for the latest year for which figures are available. [145884]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs does not collect data on VAT from individual goods and services.

Welfare Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of what the expenditure on (a) tax credits and (b) child benefit will be in 2006-07; and on what assumptions including take up rates this figure is based. [144554]

Dawn Primarolo: Provisional estimates of tax credit and child benefit expenditure in 2006-07 is published in Table 1.3b "Monthly and quarterly Child and Working Tax Credits and Child Benefit net payments", which is available on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/tax_receipts/menu.htm

These estimates may be subject to revision when definitive annual totals are released with the 2007 HMRC Trust Statement.

No assumptions are made in producing these statistics.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what backlogs there are in HM Revenue and Customs offices of unprocessed (a) tax credit claim forms and (b) declaration forms; and if he will make a statement. [144709]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs aims to deal with 86 per cent. of new claims, renewals and changes of circumstances within five working days and 95 per cent. in 30 working days.

The latest figures that are available show there are no backlogs of unprocessed new claims or 2006-07 annual declaration forms.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many of the Parliamentary Ombudsman's recommendations for reform of the tax credit system were fully implemented as at 31 May; and if he will make a statement; [144710]

(2) what steps are being taken to bring to the attention of tax credit claimants their potential entitlement to additional payments due to in-year restrictions on recovery; [144740]

(3) what action has been taken to implement a period of notice before recovery of a tax credit overpayment; what period of notice is to be given; and if he will make a statement; [144741]

(4) what action had been taken as at 31 May 2007 to ensure that all claimants who are asked to repay overpaid tax credits are automatically made aware of the reasons for any overpayment; and if he will make a statement; [144742]

(5) why the Government have not implemented the Parliamentary Ombudsman's third recommendation on tax credits in relation to displaying appeal rights on overpayments on the award notice; and if he will make a statement; [144743]

(6) what action his Department takes to notify tax credit claimants of the circumstances in which they can have recovery of overpaid tax credits waived; and if he will make a statement; [144744]

(7) pursuant to the debate of 15 March 2007, Official Report, column 181WH, on tax credits, what the evidential basis was for the statement by the Paymaster General that the vast majority of the Parliamentary Ombudsman's recommendations on tax credits had been implemented; and if he will make a statement. [144750]

Dawn Primarolo: Progress against each of the ombudsman's recommendations of her report, "Tax Credits: Putting Things Right (HC 124), can be seen in the following table:

	Summary of Recommendation	Progress
1	Steps to ensure staff recognise the situations where interim payments of tax credits are appropriate.	Implemented. Guidance sent out 2005.
2	The Revenue should not seek to recover until it has come to a decision on whether it should be recovered under COP 26 (the 'pause').	Work in progress. Suspension of recovery of disputed overpayments became possible from November 2005. From November 2006 this became fully automatic. Government accepted the case in principle for a period of notice before recovery of an overpayment begins.
3	On the 'payments page' of an award notice, customers should be alerted to the fact that recovery can be disputed under COP 26.	Implemented. Clearly displayed in the one-page notes accompanying the award notice.
4	Recovery should be at the same rate as those for previous year overpayments.	Implemented. Part of package of measures announced at PBR 2005.
5	Steps to ensure that staff who have contact with tax credit customers are alert to the circumstances when Additional Tax Credits (ATCs) might be appropriate.	Implemented. Guidance sent out 2005. Special arrangements from January to ensure in-year restriction is available without claimants having to ask for this.
6	Where in-year recovery of excess tax credits is justified, the Revenue should take steps to pay ATCs automatically to families in receipt of income support and income-based jobseeker's allowance.	Implemented. This recommendation has been overtaken by the announcement in PBR 2005 to align cross and in-year recovery rates. This will occur for all in-year recoveries, whether or not the claimant is in receipt of IS or I/B JSA.
7	Details of the availability of ATCs should be printed prominently on the 'payments' page of an award notice and the guidance notes.	Implemented. More prominent on both these documents. Overtaken by the announcement in PBR 2005 to align cross and in-year recovery rates.
8	Overpaid customers to be sent a letter outlining: The total amount they owe; The reasons why the overpayment occurred and the date or dates when it happened; and The repayment arrangements which will apply in their case. The letter to enclose a copy of COP 26 and draw particular attention to the circumstances when recovery can be waived and the availability of ATCs in cases of hardship.	Implemented. Revised award notice explains in more detail how the award is made up, the payment schedule and details of how payments are affected by recovery action. The guidance notes give greater prominence to overpayments and recovery, the availability of COP26, waiver and additional payments. A full Playback introduced in November 2006, as part of the latest computer release, and will mean that a claimant's finalisation/renewals notice from April 2007 will contain information on their award throughout the previous tax year. This will help with explaining "why did this overpayment occur".

	Summary of Recommendation	Progress
9	Whenever a Revenue mistake is identified which has led to an overpayment, the customer should be immediately notified of exactly what has happened and informed of the circumstances when recovery can be waived.	Implemented. When an IT system problem is identified which has led to an overpayment, HMRC will contact those affected. Award notice contains the amount and how it will be recovered on the notice. The accompanying guidance notes tell claimants that HMRC's approach to overpayments is outlined in COP 26. HMRC cannot always identify where a mistake has been made as it often needs individual customer contact.
10	Write off all overpayments caused by official error which occurred during 2003-04 and 2004.	Not accepted. The Government have to balance duty of care to tax credit claimants with their duty to all taxpayers and the public purse.
11	Statutory test for recovery of overpayments consistent with the test that is currently applied to social security benefits, with a right of appeal to an independent tribunal.	An alternative approach is being piloted. Claimants can complain if they disagree with the decision or matters are not resolved to their satisfaction. HMRC are planning with the adjudicator to provide a fast track independent review for disputed overpayments. Pilot will start in the next few months to test arrangements.
12	The Revenue should consider the way it organises delivery of tax credits in order to deliver a better, more complete service to the customers it now serves. A different model is needed in complex cases and where something has gone wrong. More sustained and informed communication with customers about their case is essential.	Implemented but will always be subject to ongoing work. Special team set up in the Tax Credits Office (TCO) to deal with more complex cases (known as "Group 33") who adopt a whole case approach. TCO have reviewed their complaints processes and made a number of changes. In particular to have a named caseworker who will take ownership of the complaint until it is resolved. More generally we have taken a more radical long-term look at the way we delivery tax credits. This now forms part of the Department's Transformation programme.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the budgeted provision is for administering the tax credits system in (a) 2006-07, (b) 2007-08 and (c) 2008-09; and if he will make a statement. [144711]

Dawn Primarolo: The costs of administering the tax credits system are reported annually in HMRC's Trust Statement, available at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/about/reports.htm

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many interim payments of tax credits there were in each month since October 2005. [144738]

Dawn Primarolo: For information up to and including January 2007, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 27 March 2007, Official Report, columns 1513-14W.

Information for the period February 2007 to May 2007 inclusive is:

	Manual payment instructions processed (Thousand)
February 2007	55
March 2007	54
April 2007	25
May 2007	31

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many additional tax credit payments were made in each month from April 2003 to June 2007; and if he will make a statement. [144739]

Dawn Primarolo: For the number and value of additional tax credits payments in 2003-04, 2004-05 and 2005-06, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 27 June 2006, Official Report, columns 376-77W.

It is no longer necessary for HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) to issue manual payments in cases of hardship following an in-year adjustment. Instead, a new process allows for an adjustment on the tax credits system to reduce the rate of recovery of an overpayment in-year.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit cases were dealt with by the Group 33 tax credits team in each month from April 2003 to June 2007; and if he will make a statement. [144746]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is given in the table as follows.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action is being taken as part of the Department's Transformation Programme to review the long-term operation of the tax credits system; and if he will make a statement. [144747]

Dawn Primarolo: The Tax Credits Transformation Programme, which is part of the Departmental Transformation Programme, aims to improve the delivery of tax credits by tailoring services and communications to the needs of the customers. As part of the Tax Credits Transformation Programme, HMRC has started to pilot some improvements in customer service, for example in helping customers whose circumstances change as the result of the breakdown of a relationship.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps are planned further to simplify tax credit award notices. [144748]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Batley and Spen (Mike Wood) on 26 February 2007, Official Report, column 1104W.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of trends in tax credit fraud and error between (a) 2003-04 and 2004-05 and (b) 2004-05 and 2005-06; and if he will make a statement; [144870]

(2) if he will make a statement on current levels of fraud and error in tax credits. [144874]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer the Chief Secretary to the Treasury (Mr. Timms) gave him on 13 June 2007, Official Report, column 1126W.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate he has made of the level of official error in the tax credits system; and if he will make a statement; [144749]

(2) what his latest estimate is of the level of software error in the tax credits system; and if he will make a statement. [144871]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the evidence given to the Treasury Select Committee on 14 March 2007 in response to the hon. Member for Newcastle-Upon-Tyne, Central (Jim Cousins).

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the cost of the £2,500 tax credit income disregard for 2004-05; and if he will make a statement. [144877]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 18 July 2006, Official Report, column 361W.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many tax credit claims were disallowed after (a) pre-payment and (b) post-payment verification checks in each quarter from April 2003 to June 2007; and if he will make a statement; [144878]

(2) how many tax credit claims were examined by the Compliance Unit in each month since April 2003; and if he will make a statement; [144879]

(3) how many potential organised tax credit fraud cases were identified by HM Revenue and Customs pre-payment checks in each month since May 2005; and if he will make a statement; [144880]

(4) what the estimated yield was in 2006-07 from HM Revenue and Customs tax credit pre-payment checks; and if he will make a statement; [144881]

(5) how many suspect tax credit applications by organised fraudsters were stopped by HM Revenue and Customs in (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2006-07; and if he will make a statement; [144882]

(6) how many checks on tax credit awards before payment were made in each quarter from April 2001 to April 2007. [145247]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on tax credits compliance activities for 2005-06 was published in the Comptroller and Auditor General's Standard Report on HMRC's Accounts. HMRC's 2006-07 Accounts are due to be presented to the House of Commons before it rises for summer recess.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what sample site was used for 2004-05 tax credit awards to check the level of tax credit fraud and error; and if he will make a statement. [144897]

Dawn Primarolo: The United Kingdom.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 11 June 2007, Official Report, column 830W, on welfare tax credits, if he will break down the figures given in table 4 of the publication child tax credit and working tax credit, take up rates, 2004-05 by those with (a) two working parents, (b) two parents, one of whom is working, (c) a single parent and (d) other family circumstances. [145188]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not available except at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the backlog of cases is in the Tax Credit Calculating and Scheduling Group; and how long cases took to resolve in the last period for which figures are available. [145211]

Dawn Primarolo: Currently, the Tax Credit Calculating and Scheduling group has around four days work on hand. Information about how long cases take to resolve is not available

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what targets have been set for reducing error and fraud in the tax credit system; and if he will make a statement. [145245]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer you to the evidence given to the Public Accounts Committee on 23 October 2006 in response to questions 10-12 (which can be found at: http://www.publications.parliament.uk/pa/cm200506/cmselect/cmpubacc/cmpubacc.htm#evid).

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent assessment he has made of the level of service from HM Revenue and Customs received by tax credit claimants; and if he will make a statement. [145249]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to HM Revenue and Customs 2007 departmental report available at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/about/reports.htm

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much of the total amount of tax credits paid out due to error or fraud in (a) 2003-04, (b) 2004-05, (c) 2005-06 and (d) 2006-07 he estimates will never be recovered. [145449]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer to my statement to the House on tax credits on 11 July 2006, Official Report, column 1281. Estimates for subsequent years are not yet available.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions his Department has had with officials from HM Revenue and Customs on the administration of tax credits. [145548]

Dawn Primarolo: Treasury officials meet regularly with HMRC officials to discuss a wide range of tax credits subjects as part of the process of policy development and delivery.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes have been made to his Department's procedures to prevent people from claiming tax credit in respect of non-existent children. [143810]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC check tax credits claims and carry out enquiries to make sure that claims are genuine, that any children claimed for actually exist and the circumstances of the family genuinely qualify.

HMRC prosecutes frauds and tax credits cheats face fines, jail and a criminal record.

HMRC is constantly looking at ways to improve our procedures to prevent tax credits fraud.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the amount lost to tax credit fraud recovered in the latest period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [144872]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the statement I made to the House on 11 July 2006, Official Report, column 1281W.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people were prosecuted for tax credit fraud in each quarter since April 2003; and if he will make a statement. [144873]

Dawn Primarolo: This information is not available.

For total prosecution figures for 2004-05 and 2005-06 I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 25 July 2006, Official Report, columns 1393-94W.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many organised tax credit fraud cases the Organised Fraud Strategy Board investigated in each quarter since April 2003; and if he will make a statement. [144875]

Dawn Primarolo: The Organised Fraud Strategy Board is a governance body and it does not investigate any cases of tax credit fraud directly.

Welfare Tax Credits: Appeals

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit claimants appealing against overpayments exercised their right to attend an oral hearing by an appeal tribunal in each (a) month, (b) quarter and (c) year since April 2003; and if he will make a statement. [145244]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested on the number of oral hearings requested at tribunal is not available.

Tax credits claimants have a right of appeal against decisions about their tax credit entitlement but HM Revenue and Customs' (HMRC) Code of Practice 26 'What happens if we have paid you too much tax credit' gives the reasons why claimants might be able to dispute an overpayment and how they should do this.

Welfare Tax Credits: EC Countries

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether EU citizens entitled to claim child-related benefits or tax credits in their home country are eligible to claim (a) child tax credit and (b) child benefit in the UK for the same child; and if he will make a statement. [144115]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 12 June 2007, Official Report, column 943W.

Welfare Tax Credits: ICT

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many computer software errors there were in the tax credits system which have potentially caused errors in payments in each reporting period from April 2003 to June 2007; and if he will make a statement. [144902]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 1 November 2006, Official Report, column 543W.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the IT system used for working families tax credit (WFTC) was the same system used for family credit or a new system; and whether the system used for the new tax credits is the same as that used for WFTC. [145085]

Dawn Primarolo: The IT system used for working families tax credit (WFTC) was the same system used for family credit (FamC).

The IT system used for the new tax credits is a different system to that used for WFTC.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on tax credit computer system-generated errors following change of client circumstances. [145210]

Dawn Primarolo: Treasury Ministers have received a number of representations on various aspects of the administration of the tax credits system and I have reported regularly to the House on its operation.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what total payments have been made to date to organisations awarded the contract to run the tax credits computer system. [145627]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) on 27 March 2007, Official Report, column 1516W.

Welfare Tax Credits: Internet

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he plans the tax credits e-portal to be opened again by 31 December 2007; and if he will make a statement. [144904]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 20 June 2007, Official Report, column 1890W.

Welfare Tax Credits: Manpower

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the numbers of staff working at the expense of the public purse on tax credit work in each reporting period since April 2003; and if he will make a statement. [144906]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 31 October 2006, Official Report, column 320W.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which HM Revenue and Customs sites in the UK contain staff working (a) on tax credits policy, (b) on tax credit debt management, (c) in tax credit contact centres, (d) in tax credit enquiry centres, (e) in the tax credits office, (f) in the tax credit programme office, (g) on tax credit compliance, (h) on the tax credit IT live service and (i) in tax credit IT development; how many staff work at each site; and if he will make a statement. [145404]

Dawn Primarolo: For staff figures I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him today (144906). Information on how to contact HMRC can be found at www.hmrc.gov.uk under "contact us".

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many staff are employed in the assisted adjudicator's office of HM Revenue and Customs dealing with tax credit disputes; [145450]

(2) how many staff are employed by HM Revenue and Customs to deal with tax credit disputes. [145451]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs currently has around 220 full-time equivalent staff members dealing with tax credits complaints.

Welfare Tax Credits: Migrant Workers

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what checks are in place to ensure that migrant workers in receipt of tax credits do not continue to receive payments after they have returned to their home countries; and if he will make a statement; [145248]

(2) what checks are in place to validate claims of EU migrant workers for child tax credits in respect of children who live abroad; and if he will make a statement; [145250]

(3) what proportion of child tax credit claims for migrant workers (a) were rejected in each year since 2003-04 and (b) have been rejected in 2007-08; what the principal reasons have been for the rejection of such claims; and if he will make a statement. [145251]

Dawn Primarolo: Section 3 (3) and (7) of the Tax Credits Act 2002 provides a general requirement for all claimants to be in the UK to be eligible for the child and working tax credits, unless prescribed exceptions apply. HMRC have a range of checks in place to determine the overall risk of a claim, both pre- and post-payment, and intervene where they suspect a claim may be wrong or fraudulent. These checks apply to all claimants, irrespective of nationality.

Claims by EU migrant workers for family benefits in the UK (child benefit and child tax credit) under the co-ordinating rules in EC Regulations 1408/71 and 574/72 are subject to checks between HMRC and the competent authorities of the other member state on the composition of the worker's family resident in the other member state and whether family benefits are in payment in that other state. In addition, claimants may be required to provide a birth or adoption certificate for the child in question or a certified copy.

The other information requested is not available.

Welfare Tax Credits: Overpayments

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people were taken to court for non-payment of tax credit overpayments in (a) April and (b) May; and if he will make a statement. [144552]

Dawn Primarolo: No cases were taken to court for recovery of tax credit overpayments in April and May.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether it is his policy to categorise tax credit overpayments due to failure to declare a partner as fraud or as error; and if he will make a statement. [144695]

Dawn Primarolo: Whether overpayments arising from a failure to disclose a partner are categorised as error or fraud is dependent on the individual circumstances of a case.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the cost to date of tax credit overpayments due to failure to declare a partner. [144696]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated cost of error and fraud by claimants failing to declare a partner, in 2003-04, is published in table 6 of the HMRC publication "Child and Working Tax Credit. Error and Fraud Statistics. 2003-04", which is available on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/error-fraud.htm

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit forms TC846 were issued in each month from April 2003 to June 2007. [144697]

Dawn Primarolo: This information is not available.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the average cost of handling each tax credit overpayment appeal; and if he will make a statement. [144698]

Dawn Primarolo: This information is not available.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit overpayment demands were overturned by (a) the Ombudsman and (b) the Adjudicator in each reporting period from 2003-04 to 2007-08; and if he will make a statement. [144699]

Dawn Primarolo: For information about the independent adjudicator and the ombudsman, I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Wycombe (Mr. Goodman) on 30 January 2006, Official Report, column 143W. The independent adjudicator subsequently published her 2006 report on 20 June 2006 and the parliamentary ombudsman published her report on 12 July 2006.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the guidelines given to HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) staff for recovering overpaid tax credits; what powers HMRC staff have to make calls at the claimant's home address; and if he will make a statement. [144700]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) has a standard process for direct recovery of tax credit overpayments, the primary objective being to encourage the claimant to make contact. The process includes printed reminders for payment, at least three attempts at making personal contact by telephone or a visit to the claimant's home address if telephone contact not possible. And finally a letter warning of legal proceedings is issued before cases are taken to court. The process includes a facility for the Tax Credits Office to withdraw, at any time, any case under dispute.

HMRC staff operate under a general power, without which the Commissioners would be unable to undertake their duty to collect the revenue for which they are responsible, under section 5 Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 (which includes tax credits under S5(1)(c).

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recovery procedure checks are in place in HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) which must be implemented before HMRC can take to court tax credit claimants with overpayments; and if he will make a statement. [144703]

Dawn Primarolo: Instructions to staff on the prime procedural checks, which must be implemented before court action is instigated for recovery of a tax credit overpayment, state that the overpayment must be appropriate for recovery. The procedure includes:

a check to ensure that the case is not in dispute, subject to a time to pay arrangement or a potential hardship case a check to ensure that the claimant is not in receipt of income support or jobseekers allowance a check for any special circumstances that suggest the case is not appropriate for recovery action.

a check by a higher grade officer to ensure that the case is suitable for court action and that all the procedures have been carried out.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many errors HM Revenue and Customs staff are allowed to make in dealing with a tax credit case before an overpayment is written off; and if he will make a statement; [144705]

(2) whether a tax credit overpayment is deemed recoverable if, due to official error, a tax credit award notice records both zero income and the claimant's place of work and hours of work; and if he will make a statement. [144707]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC's approach to handling tax credits overpayments is set out in its code of practice 26: "What happens if we have paid you too much tax credit?" available at http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/leaflets/credit.htm

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what targets have been set by HM Revenue and Customs for its staff involved in dealing with tax credit overpayment appeals; and if he will make a statement. [144706]

Dawn Primarolo: Tax credits claimants have a right of appeal against decisions about their tax credit entitlement but HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) code of practice 26 "What happens if we have paid you too much tax credit?" gives the reasons why claimants might be able to dispute an overpayment and how they should do this.

HMRC aims to deal with 80 per cent. of correspondence within 15 working days of receipt and 95 per cent. within 40 working days.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the introduction of reduced rates of recovery from tax credit overpayments. [144708]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to my written statement to the House on 6 December 2006, Official Report, column 15WS and the evidence I gave to the Treasury Select Committee on 14 March 2007 in response to question 20.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made in using a pilot to test the possibility of the adjudicator working with HM Revenue and Customs to provide a fast track independent review for disputed tax credit overpayments; and if he will make a statement. [144745]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC is planning with the adjudicator to provide a fast track independent review for disputed overpayments. A pilot will start in next few months to test arrangements.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the number of (a) disputed overpayments of tax credits and (b) disputed overpayments of tax credits written-off in each month since February 2007; and if he will make a statement. [144866]

Dawn Primarolo: The numbers of disputed overpayments received and the numbers of overpayments written off either fully or partially because of official error since February 2007 were around:

Month 2007	Number of disputes received	Number written off (fully or partially)
February	19,500	500
March	20,000	450
April	14,000	350
May	16,000	400

The figures for overpayments written off do not directly relate to those disputes that were received in the same month. TCO does not separately record whether an overpayment is written off in part or in full.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reasons the number of disputed tax credit payments which were written-off declined between 2005 and 2006; and if he will make a statement. [144867]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the oral evidence taken before the Treasury Committee on 14 March 2007.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether his Department's estimates of overpaid tax credits in 2003-04 and 2004-05 include amounts paid out due to fraud and error; and if he will make a statement; [144898]

(2) what estimate he has made of the proportion of tax credit overpayments which involved some element of official error in the latest period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [144901]

Dawn Primarolo: The HMRC statistical publications on overpayment of tax credits in 2003-04, 2004-05 and 2005-06 do not include any claims identified as error (claimant or official) or fraud.

The HMRC publication "Tackling Error and Fraud in the Child and Working Tax Credits" provides an explanation on what information is included in the overpayment and Error and Fraud publications. This document is available on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/error-fraud.htm

Welfare Tax Credits: Payments

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit (a) maladministration and (b) consolatory payments were made in each month from April 2003 to June 2006. [144704]

Dawn Primarolo: The circumstances in which HM Revenue and Customs will make compensation payments to its customers are explained in the Department's fact sheet, "Complaints and Putting Things Right", which is available at:

www.hmrc.gov.uk

The Department will pay compensation for reasonable costs incurred as a direct result of its mistakes or delays and to recognise worry and distress caused by those mistakes and delays. It does not keep separate details of compensation payments made specifically due to "maladministration" or "poor service".

For the number and value of compensation payments made up to 30 September 2006, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 26 October 2006, Official Report, columns 2027-28W.

Welfare Tax Credits: Personation

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many residents of Bexleyheath and Crayford had tax credits suspended due to identity theft in (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2006-07. [144113]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not available.

Welfare Tax Credits: Publicity

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total spending on all forms of tax credit publicity and advertising was in (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2006-07; if he will list the spending on each tax credits campaign; and if he will make a statement. [145242]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is as follows:

(a) I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 31 October 2006, Official Report, column 319W.

(b) I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury gave to the hon. Member for Rayleigh (Mr. Francois) on 14 May 2007, Official Report, column 566W.

Information is not available at campaign level.

Welfare Tax Credits: Take-up

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the take-up of tax credits for those with incomes of between £10,000 and £20,000 per annum; and if he will make a statement. [145241]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of the take-up rate of tax credits by band of income in 2004-05, the most recent year of available data, are available in table 4 of the publication "Child Tax Credit and Working Tax Credit. Take-up rates. 2004-05." This publication is available on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/takeup-rates2004-05.pdf

Welfare Tax Credits: Telephone Services

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many calls were made to the tax credits helpline in each month from April 2003 to April 2007; and how many of these calls were unanswered, broken down by reason for the call. [141492]

Dawn Primarolo: I would refer the hon. member to previous answers of 10 October 2005, Official Report, column 322W, 14 March 2006, Official Report, column 2137W, 20 June 2006, Official Report, column 1858W, and 5 June 2006, Official Report, columns 187-88W, where elements of the requested information have already been provided. Within the limits of readily available information, the following table aims to show calls received and calls engaged/busy and abandoned for those periods not previously answered where this information has not previously been provided.

It is not possible to establish the reason for calling if a call was unanswered.

Working Tax Credits: Farmers and Fishermen

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many and what proportion of farmers were in receipt of working tax credits in (a) Cornwall, (b) the South West and (c) the UK in each year since 2000; [144220]

(2) how many and what proportion of fishermen were in receipt of working tax credits in (a) Cornwall, (b) the South West and (c) the UK in each year since 2000. [144236]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) on 15 May 2007, Official Report, column 691W.

Written Questions

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to answer questions (a) 131114, on the marginal rate of taxation, and (b) 131115, on income tax, tabled on 28 March; and if he will make a statement. [143316]

Ed Balls: I have answered the two questions concerned.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Access to Work Programme: Hearing Impaired

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what guidelines are issued to Access to Work staff on the provision of communication support professionals for deaf and hard of hearing employees; and how they are enforced. [145592]

Mrs. McGuire: Updated and strengthened guidance on the provision of support workers, including communication support for deaf and hard of hearing people, was issued to all Access to Work Business Centres in December 2006. The guidance describes the types of support that may be suitable, for example British Sign Language Interpreters, lip speakers and palantypists, as well as the steps to take to establish the type and level of appropriate support.

A National Access to Work Delivery Team has been established and has been fully operational since April. The National Access to Work Delivery Manager has appointed two senior operations managers who are responsible for improving consistency of decision making nationally and for regularly monitoring that business centres comply with national guidelines.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what level of proficiency is expected of a sign language interpreter booked through Access to Work; and how his Department ensures that this standard is met. [145594]

Mrs. McGuire: The proficiency of sign language interpreters can vary from junior trainee interpreter to someone who is a Member of the Register of Sign Language Interpreters. Access to Work will fund the level of interpretation services appropriate for each individual situation. In order to decide on the required level, Access to Work staff need to consider a range of factors, for example the type and size of the event or meeting.

A national Access to Work delivery team has been established and has been fully operational since April.

The national Access to Work delivery manager has appointed two senior operations managers whose duties include the regular monitoring of business centres to ensure they comply with national guidelines.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the Access to Work scheme will pay for the use of more than one sign language interpreter for deaf British sign language users attending meetings lasting more than two hours. [145595]

Mrs. McGuire: I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer I gave the right hon. Member for Gordon (Malcolm Bruce) on 15 January 2007, Official Report, column 880W.

Carer's Allowance

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the cost of removing the gainfully employed rule which prevents carers from earning over £87 a week if they are claiming carer's allowance. [145243]

Mrs. McGuire: The estimated cost of removing the gainfully employed rule from carer's allowance would be around £450 million per year.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people are in receipt of the carer's allowance in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) the North East and (d) the UK; and how many received this allowance in each case in each year since its inception. [146008]

Mrs. McGuire: The available information is in the following table.

Carer's allowance—cases in payment (caseload)

	November 2006	August 2006	August 2005	August 2004	August 2003
Jarrow parliamentary constituency	900	880	850	840	790
South Tyneside local authority	1,600	1,590	1,530	1,470	1,400
North East	26,470	26,350	25,950	25,380	24,640
Total GB	458,930	456,700	445,430	426,340	400,180

Notes:
1. Caseload figures are rounded to the nearest 10.
2. Some additional disclosure control has also been applied.
3. Totals may not sum due to rounding.
4. Totals show the number of people in receipt of an allowance, and excludes people with entitlement where the payment has been suspended.
5. Prior to August 2003, figures are based on those with entitlement only. This means that caseloads cannot be broken down by whether or not a case is in payment.
6. The total in receipt also includes a small number of people who are temporarily abroad so not actually present in GB.

Carer's Allowance: Blackpool

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (a) receive and (b) are entitled to carers' benefits. [143978]

Mrs. McGuire: The available information is in the following table.

Number of people in Blackpool, North and Fleetwood parliamentary constituency in receipt of and entitled to carers' benefits—November 2006

	In receipt	Entitled
Carer's allowance (CA)	970	2,000
Income support with a carer premium	480	480

Notes:
1. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.
2. Recipients of IS carer's premium may also be entitled to or receiving CA.
3. CA recipient totals show the number of people in receipt of an allowance, and excludes people with entitlement where the payment has been suspended.
4. CA entitled totals show the number of people who are entitled to receive CA, including those who receive no actual payment.

Source:
DWP Information Directorate 100 per cent. WPLS

The vast majority of these entitled to but not receiving CA are pensioners and are likely to be receiving state pension and may receive the carers' premium in pension credit. Only one benefit at a time can be paid for the same purpose. While the circumstances that give rise to entitlement to CA and the state pension are different, both benefits are designed to provide a degree of replacement for lost or forgone income.

Carer's Allowance: Forms

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent representations he has received from voluntary organisations on the ease of use of carer's allowance claim forms DS700(1) and DS700(2). [145846]

Mrs. McGuire: The administration of carer's allowance is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Disability and Carers Service, Mr. Terry Moran. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Terry Moran, dated 25 June 2007:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what recent representations he has received from voluntary organisations on the ease of use of carer's allowance claim forms DS700(1) and DS700(2).

The Minister for Disabled People, Anne McGuire MP, promised you a substantive reply from the Chief Executive of the Disability and Carers Service (DCS).

I can confirm that there have been no recent representations received concerning the ease of use of the Carers Allowance claim forms DS700(1) and DS700(2). However, very positive comments have been received following the introduction of a shorter Carers Allowance claim form (DS700 (SP)) last year.

This form asks customers of pension age only the basic, relevant questions for claiming Carers Allowance and is intended to be used where the customer's State Pension is in payment and will overlap with payment of Carers Allowance.

In developing this form, the DCS were proactive in seeking the comments of the voluntary sector by consulting with the DCS Advisory Forum, which is our main consultation mechanism and consists of representatives from 17 national customer organisations. We received many helpful comments that helped to shape the final claim form.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Carers: Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the value of the pension pot secured by a median carer in a defined benefit opted-out scheme from the opted-out rebates paid from age 25 to 65 years; and if he will make a statement. [144993]

James Purnell: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave him on 18 June 2007, Official Report, column 1541.

Child Support Act 1991

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his estimate is of the cost of repealing sections 6 and 46 of the Child Support Act 1991; and if he will make a statement. [145365]

Mr. Plaskitt: The overall impact of the measures in the Child Maintenance and Other Payments Bill are set out in the regulatory impact assessment (RIA) which was published alongside the Bill. The impact of the repeal of section 6 and 46 can be found in the RIA, paragraphs 34 to 53.

Child Support Agency: Internet

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) individual hits there were on and (b) unique users of the Child Support Agency website in each month since 2001. [143590]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 25 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many individuals hits and unique users used the Child Support Agency (CSA) website in each month since 2001.

Such information as is available is in the attached table. We do not have any information collected for this prior to September 2002.

Please note that:

A visit is what we count when someone comes to the web site.

A hit is a request to the server for information. If a page contains images then there is one hit for the page and one for each image contained on the page. For instance someone viewing the home page of the website will count as one visitor but six hits—one for the page itself and one for each of the five images on the page.

Unique visitors are individuals who visited the site during the report period. If someone visits more than once, they are counted only the first time they visit.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Child Support Agency: Marketing

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how much was spent on (a) managing the Child Support Agency's (CSA) corporate identity in each year since 1997-98 and (b) branding of the CSA in each of the last two years; [133913]

(2) how much was spent by the Child Support Agency on (a) staff parties, (b) newspapers, magazines and periodicals, (c) stationery and (d) other promotional merchandise branded with the name of the Child Support Agency in each of the last five years; [133914]

(3) how much was spent by the Child Support Agency on branding in each year since 1997. [136014]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Child Support Agency: Prosecutions

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Child Support Agency cases have resulted in court proceedings in the last 12 months. [142900]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 25 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many Child Support Agency cases have resulted in court proceedings in the last 12 months. [142900]

Such information as is available is contained in the attached tables. There are two forms of court proceedings undertaken by the Child Support Agency; Civil and Criminal. The Child Support Agency Quarterly Summary Statistics provides the latest available information you require for Civil Court proceedings to January 2007. I have attached this information and additional information on Criminal Court proceedings in Annex A.

A copy of the Child Support Agency Quarterly Summary Statistics is available in the House of Commons Library, or on the Internet via the following link:

www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/asd1/child_support/csa_quarterly_mar07.asp

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Table 1: Civil court proceedings

	February 2006 to January 2007
Total Civil Proceedings undertaken	34,015
England and Wales
Liability Orders	12,490
Distress Actions	12,985
County Court Judgments	1,840
3rd Party Debt Orders	1,995
Charging Orders	1,685
Scotland
Liability Orders Granted	845
Attachments	255
Arrestments	615
Bills of Inhibition	850
England, Wales and Scotland
Suspended committal sentences	385
Committal Sentences	40
Suspended driving licence disqualifications sentences	30
Driving licence disqualification sentences	5

Notes:

1 The table details the number of civil proceedings undertaken and not the number of Child Support Agency cases resulting in court proceedings.

2. A liability order is a document obtained from the court showing that they legally recognise that the debt is owing. This is the same in both England and Wales and Scotland. This is required before the Agency can use litigation powers (Diligence in Scotland).

3. Distress actions refers to bailiff actions in England and Wales. This is where, once the debt has been legally recognised, the Agency has passed the debt to a bailiff company for collection (or equivalent).

4. County court judgment orders apply only to England and Wales. Registers the person with a county court judgment order, which remains on their credit record for six years.

5. Third party debt orders in England and Wales instruct a third party to pay any funds owed to, or held on behalf of, the non-resident parent to the Agency instead. In practice, this is typically used for banks and building societies.

6. Charging orders in England and Wales are where a county court order for the legally recognised debt is attached to the equity in the non-resident parent's property. They are then unable to re-mortgage or sell the property without satisfying the debt. If they satisfy the debt by other means, the charge is removed.

7. Attachments refer to actions taken by sheriff officers in Scotland on the Agency's instruction to attach certain goods and remove for auction if the debt is not settled.

8. Arrestments refer to actions taken by sheriff officers in Scotland on the Agency's instruction to serve an arrestment on a third party holding funds owed to, or held on behalf of, the non-resident parent to pay to the Agency instead. In practice this is typically used for banks and building societies.

9. Bills of Inhibition in Scotland do not attach directly to the non-resident parent's property, but are a personal prohibition preventing heritable property being transferred, alienated or disposed of by the non-resident parent.

10. Note that the figures for the most recent months are provisional, and may be subject to retrospective revisions.

11. Figures are rounded to the nearest five.

12. The figures included in this table do not themselves have National Statistics status, but are included in this publication in order to give a fuller picture of the Agency's performance.

Table 2: Criminal court proceedings

Total Criminal Proceedings	498
Failure to provide information	490
Knowingly providing false information	4
Failure to implement a deduction from earnings order	2
Obstructing an Inspector	2

Notes:
1. Criminal proceedings are undertaken when a non-resident parent either fails to comply with a request for information; knowingly makes a false statement, or provides information they know to be false.
2. Criminal proceedings can also be made against employers for failing to apply a deduction of earnings order when asked or for obstructing a child support inspector in the course of their duties or for failing to co-operate with the inspector.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total caseload of the Child Support Agency was in each (a) quarter and (b) year since 2003; what he estimates the caseload of the Agency and its successor will be in each (i) quarter and (ii) year to 2014; and if he will make a statement. [145371]

Mr. Plaskitt: I refer the hon. Member for Yeovil to parliamentary question 141939 answered today.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) third party debt orders and (b) charging orders were (i) sought by and (ii) granted to the Child Support Agency in each (A) quarter and (B) year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [145373]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 25 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question regarding the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many (a) third party debt orders and (b) charging orders were (i) sought by and (ii) granted to the Child Support Agency in each (A) quarter and (B) year since 1997; and if he will make a statement.

Once a liability order has been registered with the County Court the Agency may apply to the court for a charging order and/or third party debt order. The following table details the number of applications made to the court for each enforcement action.

The Agency does not routinely collate the number of final orders granted by the court. The following table details the number of applications made to the county court for each enforcement action since 1998.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Children: Maintenance

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how long, on average, parents with care in receipt of benefits awaited payment in (a) old scheme and (b) new scheme Child Support Agency cases in each month since January 2003. [122890]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is the matter for the Chief Executive.

He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 25 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how long on average parents with care in receipt of benefits awaited payment in (a) old scheme and (b) new scheme Child Support Agency cases in each month since January 2003.

Such information as is available can be found in the attached table, which shows both the number of months that parents with care in receipt of benefits and with a positive liability, to whom maintenance is due have been awaiting payment from the non-resident parent and the median average wait experienced by all parents with care on benefits. Figures for the new scheme should be taken in the context of that for a new caseload, and that for the old scheme in the context of an ageing caseload that is no longer receiving any new cases. In addition, any increase in the total number of non-compliant cases should be viewed in the context of an increase in the overall caseload over the same period.

It should be noted that, in establishing whether a parent with care was in receipt of benefit, the Agency has to match its data to DWP benefit data. The DWP information is only available on a quarterly basis; the latest available is for August 2006.

As you will be aware, the Agency has committed in its Operational Improvement Plan, published in February 2006, to improve performance, including that 80 per cent. of new applications will be cleared within 12 weeks of receipt by March 2009 and helping 200,000 more children to benefit from maintenance payments, equating to an additional £140 million in maintenance collected, by March 2008, growing to £250 million by March 2009.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Notes to table:

1. Due to limitations with available management information, it is not possible to calculate the mean average time that cases have been waiting for a payment; hence the table shows the median average time band (in months) either since a payment was received on the case or since the case was calculated as having a positive liability.
2. The table shows cases where the parent with care was on benefit at the end of the month shown. This does not necessarily mean that the parent with care has been on benefit for the entire duration of the CSA claim.
3. Cases are classed as waiting if they are currently open, either non-compliant or have a calculation/assessment but no active charging schedule in place, and no maintenance has been received in the quarter ending with the month shown.
4. The table includes both old scheme cases on the old computer system and old scheme cases, which have been migrated onto the new computer system.
5. The table starts from May 2003, as this is the first month it is possible to provide comparable data across both the new and old schemes.
6. Numbers are rounded to the nearest thousand. '-' Indicates a figure less than 500.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what measures are in place for the Child Support Agency to reimburse payments of child maintenance collected by the Agency through deductions from earnings orders imposed after liability had ceased; whether interest accrued is passed on; and what time limits are set for the Agency to effect reimbursements. [138698]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 25 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what measures are in place for the Child Support Agency to reimburse payments of child maintenance collected by the Agency through deductions from earnings orders imposed after liability had ceased; whether interest accrued is passed on; and what time limits are set for the Agency to effect reimbursements. [138698]

It is Child Support Agency Policy that any money sent in error must be refunded; even if the receipt has already been paid out to the third party. Where a deduction from earning order continues in force once liability has ceased, the Agency aims to reimburse such payments of child maintenance to employers, with ten working days following a request to reimburse. The Agency does not calculate interest accrued on individual payments. However the Agency is able to consider redress where the non-resident parent has suffered financial loss as a result of an error made by the Agency.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what proportion of Child Support Agency liability order applications were inaccurate in any particular for each quarter since March 1997; and if he will make a statement; [141936]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of liability orders made by the Child Support Agency which were incorrect in each year since 1997. [143583]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 25 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what proportion of Child Support Agency Liability order applications were inaccurate in any way for each quarter since March 1997; and if he will make a statement. [141936]

And;

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what estimate he has made of the number of Liability Orders made by the Child Support Agency, which were incorrect in each year since 1997. [143583]

To ensure the Agency applies for an appropriate Liability Order, a number of management checks are undertaken prior to a Liability Order application being made, including the provision of an account audit. In a small percentage of cases the Agency may identify a case where a Liability Order has been granted but subsequently discovered an issue, which requires remedial action before further civil proceedings can be considered. This information is set out in the attached Table 1.

In addition, although Magistrates are not able to consider the accuracy of the Agency's debt calculation, the Courts can dismiss an Agency Liability Order application following representation from the Non-Resident Parent. Information on cases dismissed by the courts is set out in the attached Tables 2 & 3.

The software for recording data was introduced in 2003, therefore information is not available on the earlier years.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what assessment he has made of the likely effect on Child Support Agency compliance levels of naming and shaming on a website those non-compliant non-resident parents who have been successfully prosecuted; what the annual cost of the procedure is estimated to be; and if he will make a statement; [141937]

(2) how many names of non-compliant non-resident parents he expects to be placed on the Child Support Agency website in each of the next five years; and if he will make a statement. [141938]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 25 June 2007:

In reply to your recent parliamentary question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for work and Pensions, what assessment he has made of the likely effect in Child Support Agency compliance levels of naming and shaming on a website those non-compliant non-resident parents who have been successfully prosecuted; what the annual cost of the procedure is estimated to be; and if he will make a statement. [141937]

and

how many names of non-compliant non-resident parents he expects to be placed on the Child Support Agency website in each of the next five years; and if he will make a statement. [141938].

The decision to publish the names of successfully prosecuted non-compliant parents on the Child Support Agency website is only one measure in a broad programme aiming to build a culture of compliance among non-resident parents. The intention is to promote the message that not paying for your children is not a choice you can make, refusal to pay brings consequences including being named and shamed.

The cost of publishing this information is negligible; information on successful prosecutions is currently gathered as a matter of course and publishing names on our website will take place as part of regular maintenance activity, any remaining cost relates to our decision to consult parents with care which places little burden on our resources.

The number of names published on the Agency website is dependent on the numbers of non compliant non-resident parents found guilty in open court of refusing to provide information to enable child maintenance assessment to be made. In the 12 months to March 2007, there were 485 such successful prosecutions. However we hope that even those who are most determined to avoid their legal responsibilities will respond positively, such that this measure is not required in the future.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the caseload of the Child Support Agency and its successor, the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission, for each quarter from March 1997 to March 2012; and if he will make a statement. [141939]

Mr. Plaskitt: The caseload of the Child Support Agency is published in the Quarterly Summary Statistics (QSS). The table 1 of the QSS shows the reported caseload of the Child Support Agency between May 1999 and March 2007. The caseload before this date is not reported by the Quarterly Summary Statistics as changes in the calculation methodology mean that the numbers are not comparable. Table 6 of the QSS shows the number of CSA cases with a calculation from February 1997. The table can be found at:

http://www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/asd1/child_support/csa_quarterly_mar07.asp

It is estimated that the steady state caseload of the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission will be approximately one million. However, this estimate is subject to significant behavioural uncertainty and is dependent on the exact policy design and future decisions made by the Commission. It is therefore not possible to give quarterly estimates due to these dependencies.

The research report "Summary of Child Maintenance Redesign Survey—Indications of future behaviour and choices" was published on 22 June and provides further evidence to underpin the planning assumptions. The Department for Work and Pensions is currently conducting further research to assess demand for the services that the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission will offer through the Relationship Separation Survey which is due to be published in spring 2008.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much outstanding liability there is in respect of (a) interest under the Child Support (Arrears, Interest and Adjustment of Maintenance Assessments) Regulations 1992 (S.I. 1992/1816) and (b) fees under the Child Support Fees Regulations 1992 (S.I. 1992/3094). [143039]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

In reply to your recent parliamentary question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how much outstanding liability there is in respect of (a) interest under the Child Support (Arrears Interest and Adjustment of Maintenance Assessments) Regulations 1992 (S.I. 1992/1816) and (b) fees under the Child Support Fees Regulations 1992 (S.I. 1992/3094).

The Child Support Fees Regulations 1992 , S.I. 1992/3094 were repealed in 1996 and the Agency no longer charges interest on arrears of child support maintenance. As at March 31March 2006, £1.966 million in interest has been charged on outstanding maintenance.

Fees under the Child Support Fees Regulations 1992 (S.I. 1992/3094) have not been charged since the 1994-95 financial year as the Agency no longer has the powers to charge interest since the powers to do so were repealed in 1996. As at 31 March 2006 the outstanding balance on fees recoverable from non-resident parents was £12.35 million.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how the 100 parents with care written to by the Child Support Agency (CSA) in June 2007 informing them that their non compliant non-resident parent's name would be displayed on the CSA website unless they objected were selected; [143588]

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of the letter sent to parents with care which informed them that their non compliant non-resident parent's name would be displayed on the Child Support Agency (CSA) website unless they objected. [143589]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

If he will place in the Library a copy of the letter sent to parents with care which informed them that their non compliant non-resident parent's name would be displayed on the Child Support Agency (CSA) website unless they objected (143589).

The Agency identified those non-resident parents who were successfully prosecuted from January to March 2007 for either supplying incorrect information or failing to provide information.

We did not write to the parents with care where our records indicated that there was a possibility that the non-resident parent was potentially violent, where the case status was 'closed' or where there was insufficient contact details for the parent with care.

I have placed a copy of the letter sent to the parents with care in the Library, as requested.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the (a) average and (b) maximum time has been for child maintenance payments to be processed by the Child Support Agency and made available to the parent with care in the last 12 months. [143804]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 19 June 2007]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 25 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what the (a) average and (b) maximum time has been for child maintenance payments to be processed by the Child Support Agency and made available to the parent with care in the last 12 months.

Information is available for those cases on the Agency's CS2 computer system. Equivalent data on CSCS payments is not available.

In the year to March 2007 the average number of calendar days between a payment being cleared in the Agency's bank account and paid out to the Parent With Care was 2 days. This excludes the time taken to clear the funds on receipt from the Non-Resident Parent.

Around 32 per cent. of payments are paid out on the same day, and 93 per cent. are paid out within 7 days of the money being cleared. Unfortunately information on the maximum number of days is not routinely recorded, and therefore not readily available. We cannot provide an answer to part b) of your question.

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many driving licences were seized from payment defaulters as a result of enforcement action by the Child Support Agency in each year since the sanction was introduced. [144061]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to my hon. Friend with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 25 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many driving licences were seized from payment defaulters as a result of enforcement action by the Child Support Agency in each year since the sanction was introduced.

The power to withdraw driving licences was brought into effect on 2 April 2001 (under the Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Act 2000). The court, not the Agency selects the withdrawal of driving licences, committal to prison or a suspended sentence following a successful action brought by the Agency.

The information provided in the attached table, relates to the total driving licence sentences passed for the United Kingdom. Prior to 2002, the Agency did not maintain a robust system for reporting sentences. The Agency's system for reporting includes sentences passed for England, Wales and Scotland.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many parents with care written to by the Child Support Agency (CSA) have not agreed to have the details of their non-compliant non-resident parent displayed on the CSA website. [144120]

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many Parents with Care written to by the Child Support Agency (CSA) have not agreed to have the details of their non-complaint Non-Resident Parent displayed on the CSA website.

The Agency, as part of the Enforcement Campaign, issued letters to parents with care on 6 June 2007, requesting their consent to name successfully prosecuted non-resident parents on the Agency website. The parent with care was asked to reply before 20 June 2007. The target date has now passed, and the Agency has the active consent to publish the names of 40 non-resident parents to date. Only 18 parents with care have actively refused to consent to the non-resident parent being named.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many unprocessed cases in each London borough were held by the Child Support Agency in each of the last 12 months. [145213]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 25 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many unprocessed cases in each London borough were held by the Child Support Agency in each of the last 12 months.

The Agency begins to process new applications as soon as they are received and continues until they have been cleared. Any applications that have not yet been cleared can be regarded as outstanding. The amount of work required to achieve clearance and the elapsed time it involves varies considerably depending on, amongst other things, the circumstances of the parents and how readily they cooperate with the Agency.

I have provided the available information on uncleared cases in the attached table. It should be noted that that an uncleared application is not necessarily the same as an unprocessed one. Uncleared applications will be at varying stages in the application processes, with very few being completely unprocessed.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Notes:
1. A potential new application is cleared when it:
has had a calculation and a payment arrangement set up (new scheme only);
has had an assessment (old scheme only);
has been closed (both schemes);
has been identified as having had a good cause decision accepted (both schemes); has been identified as being subject to a reduced benefit decision (both schemes); has been identified as a change of circumstances to an existing case, as opposed to a new application (new scheme only).
An application remains uncleared until it achieves one of the states above. It should be noted that that an uncleared application is not necessarily the same as an unprocessed one. As such, uncleared applications will be at varying stages in the application processes, with very few being completely unprocessed.
2.Volumes are rounded to the nearest ten. '—' indicates a figure less than 5.
3. This table counts applications for Child Support. Not all applications become live cases. It is not possible to quantify the extent to which the Agency's clerical new-scheme caseload is or is not included in the above numbers.
4. This table does not include those cases where the parent/person with care's residential postcode is not recorded. In some of these cases, the Agency holds a residential address without a postcode; a "contact" address; or a business address. We have excluded cases that have not yet reached the stage in the process where the postcode information has been confirmed, as it is not possible to associate them to a local authority. At March 2007 there were 35,200 cases with an 'unknown' Local Authority. This equates to 17% of all cases in March 2007.
5. The figures are subject to revision and therefore may differ slightly from previously released figures.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what budget will be allocated to the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission to allow it to assist parents in making their own private arrangements for child maintenance; and if he will make a statement. [145364]

Mr. Plaskitt: It will be up to the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission to decide how best to deploy its resources to meet its statutory objectives. The overall level of resources allocated to the Commission will be negotiated in the usual way as part of the Department's planning processes.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his estimate is of the average level of maintenance payments for two children (a) through the existing Child Support Agency on the new scheme and (b) through the new Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission; and if he will make a statement. [145366]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information requested is as follows.

(a) The average maintenance liability for cases where there are two qualifying children through the existing Child Support Agency on the new scheme is £30 per week.

(b) With the increased focus on voluntary arrangements and the ending of the requirement that parents with care on benefit be treated as applying for child maintenance, not all of the current Child Support Agency caseload will choose to use the statutory maintenance service. Since we do not know the precise composition of the resulting caseload, it is not possible to estimate the average level of maintenance liabilities that will arise.

However, the new formula has been chosen to broadly replicate the current system, although the new rates mean that non-resident parents with two qualifying children at most income levels will pay slightly more as the following table shows:

	Two qualifying children
Weekly gross income	2003 rules	Proposed rules
£50	5	7
£150	17	20
£250	41	40
£350	55	56
£450	68	72
£550	82	88
£650	96	104
£750	110	120
£1,000	141	152
£3,000	377	392

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of child maintenance cases under the new Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission are expected to be calculated using HM Revenue and Customs gross income figures for the previous year; and if he will make a statement. [145367]

Mr. Plaskitt: Initial estimates are that in steady state around 90 per cent. of cases will have their liability based on HMRC income data or DWP benefits data.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of child maintenance cases which will have (a) overpayments and (b) underpayments under the new Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission; how such under and overpayments will be managed; and if he will make a statement. [145368]

Mr. Plaskitt: No estimates have been made on the number of child maintenance cases that will have overpayments and underpayments under the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission. The management of such payments will be an issue for C-MEC to consider and take steps as necessary.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what provision there will be for those paying maintenance under the new Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission to request in-year reviews of their maintenance liabilities when their income changes; and if he will make a statement. [145369]

Mr. Plaskitt: Immediate in-year reviews will be allowed when a non-resident parent's income changes by at least 25 per cent.

Other immediate in-year reviews will still be allowed. These will include:

The non-resident parent leaves work and goes onto benefit—or vice versa.

A qualifying child dies, or moves abroad, or starts work.

Maintenance is applied for in respect of a new child from the same non-resident parent.

An application for a variation is successful.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much of the Child Support Agency's maintenance arrears were collected in each (a) month and (b) quarter since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [145370]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 26 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how much of the Child Support Agency's maintenance arrears were collected in each (a) month and (b) quarter since 1997; and if he will make a statement.

The information you asked for is included in the attached tables. Data on the old scheme was only recorded quarterly (until March 2003). Monthly figures are available from March 2003 onwards.

The Agency now collects more than double the amount of arrears payments each quarter, than in 1997. We will continue to focus on collecting arrears of maintenance during 2007/08, as we aim to increase the total maintenance collected to £970 million, collecting at least £120 million in maintenance arrears.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Notes:
1. Arrears are accrued when the non-resident parent does not pay the full amount of regular maintenance due.
2. In mid 2003 the month in which this data was collected changed, therefore, there is a change in the quarterly time series between February 2003 and June 2003.
3. Monetary values are rounded to the nearest 0.1 million.
4. Monthly amounts of maintenance collected (total regular and arrears) will not sum to the financial year figures published in the Annual Accounts, as they do not include end year adjustments.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people (a) were sent to prison and (b) lost their driving licences for failing to co-operate with the Child Support Agency in each (i) quarter and (ii) year since April 1997. [145374]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 25 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many people (a) were sent to prison and (b) lost their driving licences for failing to co-operate with the Child Support Agency in each (i) quarter and (ii) year since April 1997.

The power to withdraw driving licences was brought into effect on 2 April 2001 (under the Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Act 2000).

The attached table relates to information from 2002, as prior to this the Agency did not maintain a robust system for reporting sentences. The Agency's system for reporting includes sentences passed for England, Wales and Scotland. Numbers of committals and driving licence disqualifications are not routinely collected quarterly and are not readily to hand.

Commitment to prison or disqualification from holding a driving licence is the ultimate sanction available to the courts for recovery of arrears of Child Support maintenance. If the non-resident parent is found guilty of wilful refusal or culpable neglect the court will decide which of the available sanctions is the most appropriate.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Notes:
1. The figures marked with an asterix are sourced from the Agency's Quarterly Summary Statistics. Prior to April 2004, the figures given were clerically collated and are actual figures, not subject to rounding.
2. Figures sourced from the Agency's Quarterly Summary Statistics are rounded to the nearest five.
3. The figures for 2006-07 are from February 2006 to January 2007 and these are the latest figures published available.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many non-resident parents paid maintenance through the Child Support Agency only by deductions of up to £5 per week from benefits in each quarter since 2000-01. [145494]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive.

He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 25 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many non-resident parents paid maintenance through the Child Support Agency only by deductions of up to £5 per week from benefits in each quarter since 2000-01 and if he will make a statement.

Such information as is available on the number of cases, which have a deduction from benefit in place from February 2000 to March 2007, is presented in the attached table. Information covering the period of December 2002 to September 04 is not available.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Notes:
1. Numbers are rounded to the nearest hundred.
2. The data in the table covers those old-scheme cases with either a Full Maintenance Assessment or an Interim Maintenance Assessment; plus those new-scheme cases with either a Full Maintenance Calculation, or a Default Maintenance Decision. New-scheme cases being processed clerically are excluded from this analysis.
3. Robust management information covering the period December 2002 to September 2004 is not available.

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps his Department is taking to improve the child maintenance and support arrangements for parents with responsibility for care in situations where the non-resident parent is unemployed and is unable to provide full maintenance payments. [145514]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 25 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what steps his Department is taking to improve the child maintenance and support arrangements for parents with responsibility for care in situations where the non-resident parent is unemployed and is unable to provide full maintenance payments.

The amount of child support maintenance assessed depends on the income of the non-resident parent and will therefore differ from case to case. The Agency believes parents on benefit have as much of a responsibility for their children's upkeep as those who are working. Child Support Reforms introduced in 2003 required non-resident parents on benefit to pay child support maintenance at a flat rate of £5 per week. The Child Maintenance and Other Payments Bill will, subject to Parliamentary approval, increase the flat-rate amount payable to parents with care, from £5 to £7 per week.

Parents with care who are also unable to work are of course eligible to claim benefit. Those on Income Support or income based Jobseekers Allowance will benefit from the Child Maintenance Premium which allows parents with care on benefit to keep a higher proportion of child support maintenance, up to £10 each week without it affecting their benefit.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Children: Poverty

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many children were in households below (a) 60 per cent., (b) 50 per cent., (c) 40 per cent., (d) 30 per cent., (e) 20 per cent. and (f) 10 per cent. of median income in each year since 1994-95, broken down by (i) working and non-working households and (ii) household type. [135355]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 2 May 2007]: Figures on the 30 per cent. of median income threshold and any lower thresholds are not statistically robust as the sample sizes are too small.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of children removed from relative poverty due to payment of child support in each year since 1997. [143586]

Mr. Plaskitt: Information relating to the number of children removed from relative poverty due to payment of child support before 2003-04 is only available at disproportionate cost. For the years 2003-04 to 2005-06, estimates are given in the following table.

Number of children removed from poverty due to payment of child support

2003-04	80,000
2004-05	90,000
2005-06	100,000

Notes:
Figures are rounded to the nearest 10,000. Poverty is defined here as living in a household which has less than 60 per cent. of median income on an equivalised basis before housing costs. The poverty threshold is contemporary, so is 60 per cent. of median income in that year. Figures are produced using the McClements equivalisation scale, except for 2006-07 which uses the OECD equivalisation scale. Figures are based on a survey and so are subject to measurement error; changes in the numbers between years cannot be considered statistically significant.

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost of administering vaccine damage payments was to (a) his Department and (b) the public purse in the last financial year for which figures are available. [145091]

Mrs. McGuire: The administration of vaccine damage payments is a matter for the chief executive of the Disability and Carers Service, Mr. Terry Moran. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Terry Moran, dated 25 June 2007:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what the cost of administering vaccine damage payments was to (a) his Department and (b) the public purse in the last financial year for which figures are available.

The Minister for Disabled People, Anne McGuire MP, promised you a reply from the Chief Executive of the Disability and Carers Service.

Vaccine Damage Payments are administered exclusively by the Department for Work and Pensions. In answer to your question, the total cost to the Department, and therefore the public purse, for administering Vaccine Damage Payments for the financial year ending 31 March 2007 was £73,549.63.

I hope this is helpful.

Departments: Advertising

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was spent by his Department on advertising in the last 12 months. [145913]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department runs a number of promotional campaigns aimed at increasing awareness of rights and responsibilities. The following table details spend on advertising campaigns run by the Department in the 2006-07 financial year.

Government policies and programmes affect the lives of millions of people and in order for them to work they must be communicated effectively. But that also has to be done with cost efficiency in mind and there are strict rules to ensure value for money on Government advertising.

Departmental advertising costs 2006-07	£000
Age Partnership Group	9
Age Positive	40
Targeting benefit fraud	5,418
Reducing customer error	45
The Pension Service core benefit take up	881
Winter fuel payments	343
Child maintenance enforcement	107

Lone parent	171

Departments: Aviation

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many flights to overseas destinations were taken by (a) civil servants and (b) Ministers in his Department in each of the last three calendar years; and what the total cost of such flights was. [144954]

Mrs. McGuire: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost. Since 1999, the Government have published, on an annual basis, a list of all overseas visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500, as well as the cost of all ministerial travel overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. Information for 2006-07 is currently being compiled and will be published before the summer recess.

All travel is undertaken in accordance with the Civil Service Management Code, the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers.

Departments: Booktrust Charity

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much funding his Department has provided to the Booktrust charity in each year since 2001. [142755]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 14 June 2007]: DWP supports Bookstart via the Sure Start programme. Sure Start is a joint initiative with DfES, although the funding for the programme is held within the DfES Delegated Expenditure Limit.

For details of the amount of funding, I refer the hon. Member to the written answer given by my right hon. Friend, the Minister of State for Children, Young People and Families on 18 June 2007, Official Report, columns 1464W.

Departments: Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was spent by staff in his Department via departmental (a) credit, (b) procurement and (c) fuel cards in each of the last three years. [145304]

Mrs. McGuire: The total spent by staff in the Department is in the following tables.

(a) Credit cards. Information prior to December has been archived and can be obtained only by incurring disproportionate costs.

2005-06 (December to March only)	14,858
2006-07	57,431

2004-05	645,341
2005-06	634,491
2006-07	477,446

Departments: Energy

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many energy saving lightbulbs were purchased by his Department for use on the departmental estate in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [144953]

Mrs. McGuire: Light bulbs are supplied to the Department by our Estates Partners, Land Securities Trillium under the terms of our PFI contract for serviced accommodation. As information is not collected or retained centrally on the volume of light bulbs purchased for the Department's 1,221 sites it is not possible to provide this information. It is, however, departmental policy that energy saving light bulbs are used wherever practicable.

Departments: Foreign Relations

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Memoranda of Understanding are in force as a result of agreements with foreign Governments entered into by Ministers in his Department; and what Executive actions each entails. [144463]

Mr. Plaskitt: Ministers have signed a number of bilateral co-operation agreements, including some formal Memoranda of Understanding, with countries including China, France, Ireland and the Netherlands. Most of these aim to facilitate exchanges of information and experience on employment and labour market policies or combating welfare fraud.

Departments: Manpower

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people granted (a) temporary part-time, (b) temporary full-time, (c) permanent part-time and (d) permanent full-time contracts of employment in his Department in each of the last three years were (i) male, (ii) female, (iii) registered disabled and (iv) aged 55 years or over; [143905]

(2) what percentage of staff in his Department are (a) male, (b) female, (c) registered disabled and (d) aged 55 or over. [143923]

Mrs. McGuire: The information requested in both questions is in the following tables:

As at 31 March each year

Departments: Marketing

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which advertising and marketing campaigns were run by (a) his Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years; which external agencies were involved; and what the cost was of each campaign. [144623]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department runs a number of promotional campaigns aimed at increasing awareness of rights and responsibilities. The following table details spend on advertising and marketing campaigns run by the Department in each of the last five complete financial years.

Government policies and programmes affect the lives of millions of people and in order for them to work they must be communicated effectively. But that also has to be done with cost efficiency in mind and there are strict rules to ensure value for money on Government advertising and communications.

Departments: Northern Ireland

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place in the Library a copy of the concordat governing the relationship between his Department and the Northern Ireland Administration. [145910]

Mrs. McGuire: My Department has concordats with the Northern Ireland Executive in place and I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library of the House.

Departments: Official Cars

Mr. Simon: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what make and model of car (a) he and (b) each Minister in his Department selected as their official ministerial car; and what criteria were used when making the decision in each case. [141995]

Mrs. McGuire: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 14 June 2007, Official Report, column 1269W.

Departments: Older Workers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of staff in his Department were over 60 years of age in each of the last three years. [145692]

Mrs. McGuire: The percentage of staff who were over 60 years of age in each of the last three years in the Department for Work and Pensions is in the following table.

	Percentage of staff over 60 years
31 March 2005	2.8
31 March 2006	3.2
31 March 2007	3.8

Note:
Percentages are a point in time at each of the specified dates.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people aged (a) over 55 years of age and (b) over 60 years of age have been recruited by his Department in each of the last three years; and what percentage in each case this is of the number of new recruits in each year. [145695]

Mrs. McGuire: The number of people recruited by the Department for Work and Pensions who were aged over 55 years and over 60 years in each of the last three years is in the following table, which also includes the percentage of the total recruits in each year.

	Number of recruits over 55 years	Percentage of total recruits	Number of recruits over 60 years	Percentage of total recruits
2004-05	301	6.3	57	1.2
2005-06	408	6.1	73	1.1
2006-07	390	6.8	78	1.4

Note:
Figures are headcount not full-time equivalent.

Departments: Public Participation

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many public consultations his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and what the cost was of each consultation. [145285]

Mrs. McGuire: Over the 12 months to the end of May 2007, the Department for Work and Pensions launched 18 formal consultation exercises, of which seven were full public consultations, in order to inform the Department's policy development. Information on the cost of each consultation, and the total cost of all consultations, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Remploy

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) services and (b) products his Department has procured from Remploy in the last 12 months; and at what cost. [143784]

Mrs. McGuire: In the last 12 months, the Department for Work and Pensions has directly procured printing services from Remploy and also New Deal for Disabled People job broking services at a total cost of £3,002,559.

Through third party main contractors, Remploy also provides the Department with secure disposal and recycling of IT equipment; distribution and order fulfilment of printed matter; contact centre staff for print and leaflet ordering and recruitment services for catering and cleaning staff.

Departments: Sick Leave

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what average number of days per year was taken by staff in his Department as sick leave in each of the last five years for which records are available. [143109]

Mrs. McGuire: The available information is in the following table.

Official figures on the level of sickness absence in the Civil Service are reported by the Cabinet Office annually in a report titled 'Analysis of Sickness Absence in the Civil Service'. The last report is for the year 2005. Data for 2006 are being compiled currently and the report will be published later this year.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many sick days were taken by staff of his Department and its executive agencies in the latest period for which figures are available; and what the average number of sick days taken by staff members was. [143580]

Mrs. McGuire: The available information is in the table. Official figures on the level of sickness absence in the Civil Service are reported by the Cabinet Office annually in a report titled 'Analysis of Sickness Absence in the Civil Service'. The latest report is for the year 2005. Data for 2006 are being compiled currently and will be published later this year.

Departments: Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff surveys his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and at what total cost. [145253]

Mrs. McGuire: Two DWP-wide staff surveys have been conducted in the last 12 months: a survey of all staff in November 2006 and a sampled survey in May 2007. Smaller Pulse surveys of 1,000 people are carried out monthly between the main surveys. Overall cost is £150,000 project cost and £130,000 annual staff salary cost. This represents a unit cost of approximately £2.25 per DWP staff member per annum.

Disability Living Allowance

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 26W, on disability living allowance, in what format the information referred to is recorded. [144764]

Mrs. McGuire: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave him on 19 June 2007, Official Report, column 1739W.

Disability Living Allowance: Children

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will extend the mobility component of the disability living allowance to parents of children below the age of three years; and if he will make a statement. [143144]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 15 June 2007]: In April 2001 as a result of medical evidence, we reduced the age limit for entitlement from five to three years as the earliest point at which it can be reasonably determined whether a child's inability, or virtual inability, to walk is the result of physical disability.

Therefore we have no current plans to make further changes to the lower age limit for entitlement to the higher rate of the disability living allowance mobility component.

Employment: Disabled

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the ability of the new personal capability assessment contained within the Welform Reform Bill (a) to assess accurately patients with long-term, fluctuating conditions and (b) to ensure that such patients receive the support necessary to get back into employment; and if he will make a statement. [145170]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The review of the Personal Capability Assessment (PCA) will ensure that it continues to be a fair, robust and accurate assessment of limited capability for work which takes account of all conditions, including those that are long-term and the fluctuate. Testing and development of the PCA is still progressing, and a report by the technical working group undertaking this work is expected to be published in the summer. Currently, the health care professionals who undertake the PCA are trained to consider the position of customers with any condition, including long-term fluctuating conditions, and this approach will be carried forward into the revised PCA when it is introduced for the purposes of employment and support allowance in 2008.

The revised PCA will bring structured help to support and encourage a return to work by exploring a person's ability to engage with back to work support provided by the Pathways to Work programme and the various health or workplace interventions.

Employment: Qualifications

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what guidance he provides to employers on procedures for checking the authenticity of qualifications claimed by job applicants. [143983]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Department does not provide guidance to employers on checking qualifications of job applicants. Information on checking references and qualifications of job applicants is available from the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service (ACAS).

Financial Assistance Scheme

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much of the additional £6 billion to be paid into the Financial Assistance Scheme he estimates will be spent annually over the next five years. [130359]

James Purnell [holding answer 27 March 2007]: The following table sets out the estimates of the additional and total cost of providing FAS at the level announced by the Chancellor on 21 March 2007. The total figure does not take into account 2007-08.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was spent on (a) administration and (b) legal fees for the Financial Assistance Scheme in each month since its inception; and if he will make a statement. [136631]

James Purnell: The Financial Assistance Scheme was announced in May 2004. Information on monthly expenditure is not available in comparative terms covering the period 2004-05 and 2005-06. However, total expenditure on administration in 2004-05 was £1.06 million, in 2005-06 £4.73 million and in 2006-07 £3.988 million. One-off legal fees of £2,089 arose in March 2005.

Figures for 2006-07 are in the following table. In addition to administration costs these also include IT design and implementation costs and ongoing IT running costs.

Full Employment Agency: Scotland

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the proposed Full Employment Agency in Scotland. [144217]

Mr. Jim Murphy: We have set ourselves a long-term aim of achieving a UK employment rate equivalent to 80 per cent. of the working age population. Good progress has been made in Scotland, which currently has an employment rate of 76.5 per cent.; above the UK average of 74.3 per cent. The Department will continue to work closely with all agencies in Scotland to extend employment opportunity even more widely.

There are no current plans for a Full Employment Agency in Scotland.

Health and Safety Executive: Freedom of Information

Sir Peter Soulsby: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Freedom of Information requests were submitted to the Health and Safety Executive in the last 12 months; how many were refused; and on what basis each was refused. [145669]

Mrs. McGuire: The following information has been retrieved from statistics HSE has provided to the Ministry of Justice (previously known as Department of Constitutional Affairs) which have been published in the 'Second Annual Report on the operation of the FOI Act in Central Government 2006'. This can be found at:

http://www.justice.gov.uk/publications/freedomofinformationquarterly.htm

HSE is unable to provide a breakdown as to the why individual requests were refused, because it does not collate this information.

Homelessness

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects his Department to complete the evaluation of the Working Futures scheme. [145166]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Working Future project is led by the Greater London Authority (GLA) and East Thames (a large registered social landlord). Although the Department for Work and Pensions is supporting the project, the GLA is responsible for its evaluation.

Incapacity Benefit: Appeals

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average length taken for an incapacity benefit claimant losing benefit to have his or her appeal heard was in (a) 1997 and (b) the latest period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement on his Department's plans to shorten the period between loss of benefit and an appeal hearing taking place. [144892]

Mrs. McGuire: The available information is in the following table.

Incapacity benefit appeals: average clearance time from lodged to cleared at hearing

	Average clearance time (weeks)
1997-98[1]	23.1
2005-06	20.3

Notes:
1. All figures are subject to change as more up to date data become available.
2. Figures for the latest months may increase substantially as information feeds through to the Appeals Service.

Source:
100 per cent. download of the Generic Appeals Processing System

The Department is continually working to improve the speed of the whole claims process, including reconsiderations and appeals. The appeals process involves a number of stages, from the lodging of the appeal, through reconsideration of the decision, to referral of the appeal submission to the Tribunals Service. The Tribunals Service is part of the Ministry of Justice. In Jobcentre Plus, the target time, from the lodging of an appeal to referral of a submission to the Tribunals Service, is 50 days. In 2006, this process took an average of 37 days.

Industrial Accidents

Sir Peter Soulsby: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of workplace deaths resulted in (a) prosecution and (b) conviction in each of the last five years. [145626]

Mrs. McGuire: HSE does not hold this information in a manner allowing the question to be answered in detail without incurring disproportionate cost. Work is in hand to allow regular reporting of this information from 2007-08 onwards.

Industrial Accidents: Construction

Sir Peter Soulsby: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of workplace deaths in the construction industry resulted in (a) prosecution and (b) conviction in each of the last five years. [145625]

Mrs. McGuire: HSE does not hold this information in a manner allowing the question to be answered without incurring disproportionate cost. Work is in hand to allow regular reporting of this information from 2007-08 onwards.

In response to a recent exercise to respond to an FOI request HSE prepared figures for the years 2000-01 to 2002-03 inclusive. There are still some prosecutions ongoing from these years, and we cannot give figures for 2003-04 onwards because of significant numbers of outstanding prosecutions.

The as yet unvalidated data that are available are:

	2000-01	2001-02	2002-03
Fatal accidents	113	85	75
Successful prosecution (to date)	46	36	28
Successful prosecution (percentage)	41	42	37

Industrial Accidents: Foreigners

Sir Peter Soulsby: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of workplace deaths of non-British nationals resulted in (a) prosecution and (b) conviction in each of the last five years. [145623]

Mrs. McGuire: Workplace deaths are reportable to HSE under RIDDOR (Reporting of Injuries Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 2005). RIDDOR does not require employers to provide information on the nationality of an injured person. Therefore this information could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Industrial Health and Safety: Custodial Treatment

Sir Peter Soulsby: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many employer representatives were given custodial sentences for offences relating to their failure to comply with health and safety law in each of the last five years. [145670]

Mrs. McGuire: HSE's prosecution data is not recorded in a way that enables the answer to be provided in the format requested without incurring disproportionate cost. However, the limited analysis undertaken by HSE indicates that, between 1994 and 2004, 111 company directors were prosecuted, with 86 convicted under Health and Safety at Work legislation. 11 were given custodial sentences.

Industrial Health and Safety: Fines

Sir Peter Soulsby: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what average fine was imposed on employers for breaches of health and safety regulations in the last period for which figures are available. [145624]

Mrs. McGuire: The average fine imposed for breaches of health and safety legislation during 2005-06 was £29,997.

Industrial Health and Safety: Foreigners

Sir Peter Soulsby: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what measures are being taken to ensure health and safety policy in the workplace is effectively communicated to non-English speakers. [145737]

Mrs. McGuire: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) has published guidance and press articles for employers on how to meet legal requirements for communicating clearly to non-English speaking workers information about risks at work, and the measures needed to avoid them. It has also set out clearly what workers should expect from employers on this, in a leaflet (produced jointly with the TUC) currently available in 24 languages, together with other leaflets on specific topics. HSE visiting staff have clear instructions on the need to address this issue at site visits.

Sir Peter Soulsby: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions he has had with (a) the Health and Safety Executive and (b) trade unions on health and safety concerns related to the employment of non-English speaking nationals in the building and construction industry. [145738]

Mrs. McGuire: My colleague Lord McKenzie of Luton, Minister with responsibility for health and safety, meets regularly with the Chair of the Health and Safety Commission and with the Health and Safety Executive's Chief Executive and Chief Inspector of Construction. His discussions encompass not only general health and safety issues, but those covering issues specific to construction—including vulnerable groups such as migrant workers.

Industrial Health and Safety: Hearing Impaired

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what provisions have been made in the workplace to allow for deaf employees to carry out their work efficiently in the last five years. [145504]

Mrs. McGuire: In the last five years, the Government have significantly improved the protection afforded to disabled people, including people with hearing impairments, under the Disability Discrimination Act (DDA). For example, from 1 October 2004, we extended the employment provision of the Act to cover all employers and all previously excluded occupations with the exception of service in the armed forces.

The DDA requires employers to make reasonable adjustments for disabled employees or job applicants where the disabled person would otherwise be at a substantial disadvantage compared with a non-disabled person. For a deaf person, this may include installing induction loops or visual warning displays in place of, or in addition to, audible warnings.

Provision of assistance for people with a hearing impairment is available through Access to Work. As well as giving advice and information to disabled people and employers, grants are available towards the approved costs that arise because of an individual's impairment. For example, Access to Work can help pay for communication support for people who are deaf or have a hearing impairment. Funding for Access to Work has increased from £51 million in 2002-03 to £64 million in 2007-08.

Updated and strengthened guidance on the provision of support workers, including communication support for deaf and hard of hearing people, was issued to all Access to Work Business Centres in December 2006. The guidance describes the types of support that may be suitable, for example sign language interpreters, lip speakers and palantypists, as well as the steps to take to establish the type and level of appropriate support.

Jobcentre Plus: Chard

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many (a) people on incapacity benefit and (b) lone parents were assisted back into employment by the job centre in Chard in each of the last five years; what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of that job centre, and if he will make a statement; [143617]

(2) what awards have been made to the Job Centre in Chard by his Department over the last two years; and if he will make a statement; [143618]

(3) how many customers have used the job centres in (a) Chard, (b) Bridport and (c) Frome in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [143623]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mel Groves, dated 25 June 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about Chard Jobcentre. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to Lesley Strathie as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus. I am replying on her behalf as Acting Chief Executive.

Information on the number of people on Incapacity Benefit and the number of Lone Parents who were assisted back into employment by Chard Jobcentre is only available from 2004. The available information is in the table below.

Chard Jobcentre has received two Jobcentre Plus awards. The office received a South West Performance Award for the period October to December 2006. It also received a South West Regional Customer Service Award in 2007.

We do not routinely collect data on the number of customers who use our Jobcentres and, therefore, do not have actual customer numbers for Chard, Bridport and Frome Jobcentres over the last 12 months. We are analysing the number of customers using Chard Jobcentre as part of the office network review. This monitoring commenced on 21 May 2007 and is being undertaken over a six week period. Frome and Bridport Jobcentres do not form part of this review.

I hope this is helpful.

Jobcentre: Christchurch

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his recent correspondence with the hon. Member for Christchurch, in what ways the report to him from Jobcentre Plus suggested that the closure of the Christchurch Jobcentre Plus office would enable his Department to provide a better service to the residents of Christchurch than it had previously been able to provide; and what assessment he made of the conclusions of that report before making his decision to go out to consultation on the closure of that office. [144987]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mel Groves, dated 25 June 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the proposed closure of Christchurch Jobcentre. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to Leslie Strathie as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus. I am replying on her behalf as Acting Chief Executive.

As our Minister of State, Jim Murphy, outlined in his letter of 15 May, this is part of the work being undertaken to review the services we provide to our wide range of customers through our network of Jobcentre Plus offices. Advances in technology and increased availability of Contact Centre facilities mean that increasing numbers of customers access our services by using the telephone or via the internet. At the same time, given the continuing pressure on our resources, it is critical that we make the most effective and equitable use of them.

The proposal for the closure of the Christchurch site reflects the low level of customers in the catchment area and the major investment of public money in the development of a new Bournemouth Jobcentre Plus office, which is located five miles away. No final decision will be made on the closure until after the six-week consultation exercise is concluded on 2 July 2007.

I hope this is helpful in clarifying the current position.

Jobcentres: Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many job vacancies were available through job centres in West Lancashire in the financial year ending (a) March 1997 and (b) March 2007. [144972]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The available information is in the following table:

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many claimants of jobseeker's allowance had their claims terminated on the grounds of failing to actively seek work in each of the last 10 years. [138005]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Jobseeker's allowance claims are not terminated on the grounds of failing to actively seek work although jobseeker's allowance is not paid for any period when a jobseeker has failed to actively seek work.

In order to check that jobseekers are actively seeking work, they are asked to provide evidence at their fortnightly intervention of the steps that they have taken. Each fortnight is looked at separately.

When there is any doubt, the jobseeker's evidence is referred to a decision maker. If the decision maker determines that the jobseeker has failed to actively seek work, their jobseeker's allowance award will stop for the period in doubt. That is, the jobseeker will not be paid for that fortnight. However the claim is not terminated. Jobcentre Plus staff work with the jobseeker to ensure they are clear about what steps are required and will check those steps have been taken at the next fortnightly intervention; if so, their jobseeker's allowance will be paid. If following the sanction the jobseeker fails to attend, and after a further five days has failed to make contact, their claim will be closed, because they failed to sign.

The available information on the number of sanctions applied to jobseeker's allowance claimants is in the following table.

Jobseeker's Allowance: Voluntary Work

Mr. David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what restrictions are placed on the ability to claim jobseeker's allowance of an individual undertaking voluntary work; [144808]

(2) what steps his Department has taken to encourage individuals on jobseeker's allowance to undertake voluntary work which benefits their local community. [144809]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide my hon. Friend with the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 25 June 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions concerning individuals undertaking voluntary work who wish to claim jobseeker's allowance (JSA). This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The Department recognises that not only does voluntary work make an invaluable contribution to society and local communities, but it can also help improve an individual's readiness for employment. In particular, those jobseekers who have been away from the labour market for some time will find a period of voluntary work not only develops important skills but also helps develop behaviours valuable to prospective employers.

For these reasons, arrangements are in place to ensure benefit recipients are not discouraged from undertaking voluntary work. Volunteers receiving any benefits can continue to perform their voluntary activity for as many hours as they wish, without affecting their benefit entitlement in any way. For JSA recipients, this is subject to the underlying conditions for JSA being met. These conditions include:

being available for, and actively seeking work each week; and having a Jobseeker's Agreement in force.

JSA recipients are required to be able to take up employment immediately of up to 40 hours per week. Jobcentre Plus arrangements, however, provide an important exception to this rule for people undertaking voluntary work. These volunteers must be willing and able to take up employment on being given one week's notice and to attend a job interview within 48 hours. These arrangements allow volunteers to continue to receive benefits while being engaged in voluntary work.

In addition, Jobcentre Plus advisers treat involvement in voluntary work as one of the steps a jobseeker can take to improve their chance of securing work. The steps are recorded on the Jobseeker's Agreement, used to monitor jobsearch activities and to inform any additional help that the jobseeker may require.

Low Incomes

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of people were living in households with (a) below the (i) mean, (ii) mode and (iii) median averages of income in each year since 1992 and (b) below 60 per cent. of each of those averages of income. [136108]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 8 May 2007]: The available information is in the following tables.

Information on the modal income cannot be provided as effectively everyone has different incomes.

The median is the middle value of the income—i.e. there are 50 per cent. of the population above the line and 50 per cent. below the line.

For our income child poverty threshold we take the value of 60 per cent. of this median—the fact that we have cut this means that we have moved children from below 60 per cent. of median income to over this threshold.

The mean income is the average of all individuals and is much higher than the median, this is because of the very high incomes at the top of the income distribution moving the average upwards; the mean is largely driven by the highest incomes.

By contrast, fraction-of-median poverty lines are unaffected by the highest incomes. Instead they focus, as is appropriate for a poverty measure, on the gap between the poorest and typical families, so they are very clearly measures of poverty rather than inequality.

2005-06	10.4	18

Notes:
1. Data are for Great Britain up to 1997-98 and for the United Kingdom from 1998-99 onwards. This is because we have imputed information for Northern Ireland for years 1998-99 to 2001-02 for the low-income thresholds related to the median for trend tables in HBAI.
2. By definition, the percentage of people living below median income will always be 50 per cent.
3. Figures are based on OECD equivalisation factors and therefore will not be the same as any figures previously published that were based on McClements equivalisation factors.

National Insurance Contributions: Rebates

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what estimate he has made of the effect on costs to the Exchequer of the cap on the level of the age-related national insurance rebates for contracted-out pension schemes for each year from 1992-93 to 2007-08; and if he will make a statement; [141453]

(2) what the saving to the public purse has been from capping contracted-out rebates to (a) money purchase schemes and (b) appropriate personal pensions since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [141179]

James Purnell: Age-related national insurance rebates are paid from the National Insurance Fund. Information on the effect of the cap on the rebates is in the following table.

Costs

£ million

	Contracted-out money purchase schemes	Contracted-out personal pension schemes
1997-98	200	600
1998-99	100	700
1999-2000	100	600
2000-01	100	600
2001-02	100	600
2002-03	[1]0	1,000
2003-04	[1]0	900
2004-05	100	700
2005-06	[1]0	500
2006-07	[1]0	400
2007-08	200	1,400

[1] Denotes where savings are less than £50 million

Notes:
1. Figures represent savings to the National Insurance Fund arising from the capping of age-related rebates.
2. Figures are for GB and are expressed cash terms rounded to the nearest £100 million.
3. Figures are consistent with long-term PBR 2006 projections.
4. Age-related rebates were not introduced until 1997-98 so had no impact on the National Insurance Fund for the period 1992-93 to 1996-97.
5. Figures for 2007-08 are based on DWP estimates. Figures before that are based on actual out-turn data but are still subject to a high degree of uncertainty due behavioural effects associated with the rebate cap.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 18 June 2007, Official Report, column 1540W, on national insurance contributions: rebates, for what reasons the Government are expecting the number of people in contracted-out defined benefit pension schemes to fall between 2006-07 and 2015-16; and if he will make a statement. [145375]

James Purnell: The reason estimates of the number of individuals contracted out in defined benefit pension schemes between 2006-07 and 2015-16 is shown to be declining, is due to a fall in the number of private sector contracted-out defined benefit schemes, and a fall in the number of such schemes open to new members. This is based on evidence from the 2004 and 2005 GAD Occupational Pension Schemes Survey.

New Deal for 50 Plus

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many participants of the New Deal 50 Plus left the programme for employment in each month since its inception. [140714]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 6 June 2007]: Since April 2001, over 170,000 people have gained a job while registered with new deal 50 plus.

Information on the number of people leaving new deal 50 plus who are recorded as having an immediate destination of employment, by the month they left, is provided in the table. This information is only available from February 2004.

The figures in the table do not include all people who have gained a job while registered with new deal 50 plus.

New Deal for Partners

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people the Government estimate to have been eligible to participate in the New Deal for Partners in each month since 2004. [145882]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The information is not available.

New Deal for Young People

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what training is compulsory for people who are entering the new deal for young people for the (a) first time and (b) second and subsequent times. [143568]

Mr. Jim Murphy: New deal for young people is a mandatory programme for participants. Those who have not found work and left jobseeker's allowance after completing the Gateway part of the programme are required to participate in one of four Options: the Employment Option; the Full Time Education and Training Option; the Voluntary Sector Option or the Environment Task Force Option. Participants will discuss and agree the most appropriate Option with a Personal Adviser, taking into account their specific needs. Although it is compulsory for participants to choose an Option, it is not compulsory for them to undertake training or choose the Full Time Education and Training Option, whether joining the programme for the first or subsequent time.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many participants there were on the new deal for young people in each month since 1998; and how many of them left the scheme for sustainable employment in each month. [145145]

Mr. Jim Murphy: People entering new deal for young people (NDYP) receive intensive help to support them into work. This is delivered through the Gateway, the NDYP Options and the follow-through period.

The available information on the number of participants on NDYP in each month, and the number of those leaving the programme in each month to sustained employment is in the table.

Notes:
1. A person participating on the programme for more than one month will be included in the table for each month that they are participating.
2. People leaving the programme to sustained employment are counted in each month for the duration of their participation on the programme, for example, a person starting the programme in January 2005, who leaves for sustained employment in May 2005, will be counted in January, February, March, April and May 2005.
3. A person is defined as leaving new deal for young people for employment if they have not returned to claim jobseeker's allowance within 13 weeks.
4. Numbers and proportions of people leaving to sustained employment in more recent months would be expected to be lower as some of these people will only recently have joined the programme and will not have had time to leave to sustained employment.
5. Information on participants is only available from July 1998.
6. Latest data is to November 2006.
7. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.

New Deal Schemes

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what percentage of applicants on each New Deal programme were placed in jobs lasting (a) 13 weeks and under and (b) over 13 weeks in each region in each quarter since 1998. [140583]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Information is not available on the duration of employment obtained through new deal 50-plus and new deal for partners.

Information on sustained employment through new deal for disabled people is only available to March 2006, as separate data on whether a job is sustained or not have not been collected centrally since then.

The available information has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was spent on each New Deal programme in each year since 1998; and what proportion of this expenditure consisted of administrative costs in each year. [140590]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Information is not available beyond 2002-03, following agreement with HM Treasury in 2002-03 when ring-fences were removed from new deal. As a result, it is no longer possible to identify the costs of administering each new deal separately. The available information is in the tables.

New deal for partners was introduced in April 1999. Costs for 1998-99 and 1999-2000 are coded as 100 per cent. admin as they were either set-up costs or adviser caseload-activity only, which only incurs admin costs.

1. Expenditure data includes start-up costs.
2. New deal 25-plus programme includes costs associated with a mandatory Intensive Activity Period introduced in April 2001.
3. Programme start dates are: new deal for young people: January 1998; new deal 25-plus: July 1998; new deal for lone parents: October 1998; new deal for partners: April 1999; new deal 50-plus: April 2000; new deal for disabled people: July 2001 (new deal for disabled people pilots ran from September 1998 to June 2001).
4. Costs in 2002-03 for new deal for partners are also coded as 100 per cent. Admin as all activity in that year was adviser caseload action, and did not include any contracted provision. The programme was re-launched the following year and was enhanced to offer partners the same level of help and support available through new deal for lone parents.

New Deal Schemes: Disabled

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make changes to the new deal self-employment test trading scheme so that disabled people in receipt of incapacity benefit can access it. [142837]

Mr. Jim Murphy: New deal self-employment test-trading provision is already available to incapacity benefit recipients who are eligible through new deal for lone parents and new deal for partners. Additionally, we already have powers to offer test-trading as part of Pathways to Work, which will be rolled-out nationally by April 2008. We amended the Social Security (Incapacity for Work) Regulations 1995 in 2006 to ensure that participants do not lose their incapacity benefit because of their work or earnings under test-trading.

Occupational Pensions

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 19 December 2006, Official Report, column 2005W, on pensions, what was assumed about the (a) mean salary and (b) median salary of people eligible for auto-enrolment and choosing not to opt out, when calculating the cost to employers of auto-enrolling staff into existing open schemes on existing terms. [141467]

James Purnell: The wage assumption used to calculate the costs to employers of auto-enrolling staff into existing schemes was based upon data from the 2005 Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings, the derived estimates were broken down by standard industry classification and firm size. The mean salary used in the analysis was approximately £19,000. The median salary is £15,000.

These wages are lower than the national averages as employees without pensions are more likely to be low to moderate earners.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate how many of the estimated 10.8 million employees listed as eligible for automatic enrolment in figure 1.xi of Security in retirement: towards a new pension scheme work for employers with defined benefit schemes that are still open to new members; and how many active members there are in these schemes. [141544]

James Purnell: The information is not available in the format requested.

However we estimate that approximately 10 per cent. of employees eligible for automatic enrolment work for employers where the defined benefit scheme is the main open option. We cannot estimate how many of these would be eligible to join that scheme.

Estimates from the Government Actuary Department[1] suggest the number of private sector employees in open defined benefit schemes is approximately 2.1 million.

[1] Government Actuary Department Survey of Occupational Pensions 2005

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place in the Library the information his Department holds on the industrial classification of employers which have kept defined benefit schemes open to new employees. [141545]

James Purnell: Information on the industrial classification of employers with open occupational schemes was published in table 5.11 of DWP Research Report No. 207 "Employers' Pension Provision 2003". The publication can be found at http://www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/asd5/rports2003-2004/rrep207.asp

I have placed a copy of the table in the Library.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of the estimated 10.8 million employees listed as eligible for automatic enrolment in figure 1.xi of security of retirement: towards a new pension system who work for (a) employers who currently make no pension contributions, (b) employers who currently offer pension contributions worth less than three per cent. of salary, (c) employers who currently offer pension contributions worth at least three per cent. of salary but less than six per cent. and (d) employers who currently offer pension contributions of six per cent. of salary or more. [141554]

James Purnell: The information is not available in the format requested. Information from another data source suggests the approximate proportions shown in the following table:

Employer contribution	Proportion of the eligible population (percentage)
No provision	60
0-2.99 per cent.	1
3-5.99 per cent.	10
6 per cent. or more	20

Note:
DWP analysis based on the employer pension provision survey (2005) and the annual survey of hours and earnings (2005).

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment has been made of the impact on public sector defined benefit schemes of requiring automatic re-enrolment every three years. [141558]

James Purnell: Forthcoming legislation will require both public sector and private employers to operate automatic re-enrolment. The detailed framework is under development. We are giving the business processes careful consideration so that any burdens on business are minimised.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what analysis his Department has undertaken comparing the different levels of pension provision recorded by the Office for National Statistics' Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings, his Department's Employers' Pension Provision Survey and the Government Actuary's Department's Occupational Pension Scheme's Survey; and what conclusions he has drawn. [143545]

James Purnell: The three surveys have different sample populations and provide alternative perspectives and information on pension provision and membership.

The Employers' Pension Provision (EPP) survey examines pension provision among private sector employers in Britain. Results focus on pension provision (occupational pension schemes, group personal pensions and stakeholder pension) analysed by size of employer. The survey also provides some information about the characteristics of employers that had no pension provision. This survey does not provide robust estimates of numbers of pension schemes and memberships as the interaction between employers and pension schemes is complex: some employers, particularly larger employers may have several pension schemes and some pension schemes are multi-employer schemes.

The Occupational Pension Schemes Survey (OPSS) is now conducted by the Office for National Statistics and provides information about occupational schemes for both public and private sector employers. This survey provides more robust information about the number of schemes and scheme memberships than is available from the EPP. There will be double counting of scheme members within the OPSS results as an individual employee could be an active member of one scheme, but be a deferred member or in receipt of a pension from another scheme.

The Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE) provides detailed information about job details, hours and earnings and employer-sponsored pension arrangements for employees. Results are used primarily to provide National Statistics estimates of average earnings, minimum wage and gender pay gap. Results from this survey provide analyses about demographic and socio-economic characteristics of pension scheme members (age, sex and income level) by scheme type which is not available from the other two surveys. This survey also provides valuable information about the characteristics of employees who are not active members of a pension scheme.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the numbers of members of workplace pension schemes (defined benefit and defined contributions) where the total contribution from employers and employees is between £3,600 and £5,000, broken down by steps of £100. [144219]

James Purnell: The numbers of members of workplace pension schemes (defined benefit and defined contribution) where the total contribution from employers and employees is between £3,600 and £5,000 are shown in the following table:

Total contribution	Number of employees
£3,600 to £3,699	130,000
£3,700 to £3,799	130,000
£3,800 to £3,899	140,000

Notes:
1. All figures are estimates and are taken from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (Office for National Statistics). 2006 is the latest year for which the data are available. The coverage of the survey is Great Britain.
2. Results are rounded to the nearest 10,000.
3. Results only include employees aged 16 to State Pension age.
4. Results cover defined benefit schemes and defined contribution schemes only.
5. Total pension contributions include both employee and employer contributions.
6. The figures provided exclude the value of contracted-out rebates.
7. Individuals who are members of a pension scheme but where there is no information about employer or employee contributions have not been included.

On 14 June, 2007, the Government published their summary of responses to the White Paper Personal accounts: a new way to save consultation exercise. This document contained further analysis on the personal accounts contribution limit and concluded that an annual limit of £3,600 would be an appropriate figure. Such a figure will ensure that Personal Accounts will stay focused on the target market, complementing rather than competing with existing provision, while still providing moderate to low earners with sufficient room to meet benchmark replacement rates.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will answer questions (a) 102062, (b) 102127, (c) 102163, (d) 102160, (e) 102198, (f) 102211, (g) 102219, (h) 102220, (i) 102157, (j) 102248, (k) 102259, (l) 102232 and (m) 102115, tabled on 17 November 2006, and questions (i) 103216, tabled on 21 November 2006, (ii) 104255, tabled on 22 November 2006, and (iii) 107249, tabled on 28 November 2006, by the hon. Member for Yeovil. [112148]

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether his Department has discussed (a) the traffic light grading of Parliamentary Questions and (b) unanswered Parliamentary Questions in the last 12 months. [123121]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department's aim has always been to answer Parliamentary Questions within the deadlines specified by Parliament, and no longer colour codes questions as part of their processing. Information relating to internal discussion and advice is not disclosed in order to protect frankness and candour.

Pension Credit

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people the Pensions Service has written to in the last 12 months to encourage them to apply for pension credit. [143431]

James Purnell: During the last 12 months The Pension Service sent 2,810,002 direct mailings to our customers encouraging them to apply for pension credit.

Pension Credit: IT

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether a new IT system was commissioned for the introduction of pension credit. [145086]

James Purnell: The processing of Pension Credit was delivered on an existing system, namely the Income Support Computer System. However to support the requirement for an enhanced customer experience and a targeted marketing campaign, a new Electronic Customer Relationship Management application was developed—Pension Credit Front End (PCFE). PCFE enabled the customer to provide the information required to make a Pension Credit application via the telephone, which resulted in a pre-completed application form being issued to the customer for them to return to the Pension Service.

Pension Credit: Telephone Services

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the running cost was of the freephone Pension Credit telephone number which advises pensioners where to send their Pension Credit application form in the latest period for which figures are available. [138035]

James Purnell: The Pension Credit Application Line (PCAL) is for people over the age of 60, or those approaching 60, who wish to apply for or make an enquiry about pension credit.

The service supplied by BT, under contract to DWP, delivered the infrastructure (networks, hardware and software) required to deliver the PCAL operation from an advanced telephony contact centre. Telephony services include advanced call routing (to deliver calls to the appropriate agent), management information in real time via wallboards and via historic reporting, call records (that make it easier to trace a call) and call recording (for quality and monitoring purposes). This service is backed up by appropriate service levels for availability and incident fix times.

The total number of calls the pension credit application line (0800 991234) received for the six months, 12 September 2006 to 11 March 2007 was 517,624. The total telephone charge for this period was £759,450.

Pensioners: Council Tax Benefits

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of eligible pensioners in Stoke-on-Trent who do not claim council tax benefit; and what steps he is taking to reduce this number. [145353]

Mr. Plaskitt: Estimates of take-up are not available below the level of Great Britain. The latest estimates of the take-up of the main income-related benefits: income support, pension credit, housing benefit, council tax benefit and jobseeker's allowance (income-based) in Great Britain can be found in the DWP report entitled "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-Up in 2004-05". Copies of the publication are available in the Library.

We are taking steps to improve awareness and take-up of benefits for specific groups. For example, The Pension Service is undertaking a wide range of steps to encourage eligible pensioners to claim pension credit, including writing to everyone who may have an entitlement and encouraging them to apply. All pensioners applying for pension credit can now access housing benefit and council tax benefit over the phone at the same time.

Pensions

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he has taken to protect the assets of pension schemes in wind-up with a deficiency of assets, pending the outcome of the review he has established. [137976]

James Purnell: It is not for the Government to offer advice to trustees on whether and when they should purchase annuities. Trustees must act in the best interests of their members and in accordance with scheme rules and their statutory obligations. The government would not want to issue advice that may conflict with these responsibilities in some circumstances. It is important that trustees continue the process of winding up including data cleansing and determination of asset shares. They may, however, wish to consider whether it is in the best interest of their members to purchase annuities ahead of the interim findings of the assets review which have been promised in the summer.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the scope will be of the initial report to be published this summer on pension scheme assets held by schemes in wind-up with a deficiency of assets. [143544]

James Purnell: The focus of the review is to examine how we make best use of the assets in pension schemes that are winding up under funded with an insolvent employer or who come within the extension for solvent employers whose schemes signed a compromise agreement. The intention of the review is to determine how these or other sources of non-public expenditure funding (that have not already been allocated) could be used to increase assistance for affected scheme members.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 19 February 2007, Official Report, column 365W, on pensions, how employer contributions to funded defined benefit schemes were apportioned to individual employees when calculating the number of employees with combined employer and employee contributions in excess of £5,000; and whether special contributions aimed at reducing pension deficits are included in these calculations. [144528]

James Purnell: Results published in the table at column 365W of the Official Report for 19 February 2007 were produced using data from the annual survey of hours and earnings (ASHE). ASHE collects for individual employees their pensionable pay and the pension contribution amounts made by them and their employer for a pay period in April, and no apportioning to individuals is therefore necessary. For the 2005 survey special contributions were not explicitly excluded from the data collection. However, such payments made as lump sums that cover more than one employee cannot be easily attributed to an individual and so are not in scope of the ASHE survey. In addition as the survey collects data for a specific period in April it does not cover pay exclude the majority of special contributions made in that year.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimate is of the number of people in (a) contracted in and (b) contracted out (i) defined benefit and (ii) defined contribution pension schemes in each year from 1997-98 to 2020-21; if he will break down his estimate for defined contribution schemes between (A) occupational schemes and (B) personal pensions; and if he will make a statement. [145361]

James Purnell: The information requested is not available. Information as is available is in the following tables.

Pensions: Advisory Services

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the Pensions Service follow-up procedure is once a home visit has been carried out. [141832]

James Purnell: The Pension Service local service was developed to provide face-to-face access for our customers, including home visits. Following a home visit, applications for pension credit are sent to the appropriate pension centre for processing. Applications for other benefits or entitlements are forwarded to the appropriate authority for consideration.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many employees of the Pensions Service are deployed on undertaking home visits. [141833]

James Purnell: The Pension Service local service employs 1,728 staff to carry out home visits. Due to various working patterns such as part year contracts and reduced hours, this figure equates to 1,545.76 whole time equivalent staff.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many home visits a member of the Pensions Service visit teams is expected to undertake on average over the course of a year. [141834]

James Purnell: There are no targets for the number of visits undertaken by a member of local service visit teams.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the local partners with which the Pensions Service has been working in its efforts to identify harder-to-reach customers. [141877]

James Purnell: As well as national voluntary sector organisations such as Age Concern and Help the Aged, the Pension Service also works closely with numerous local groups and representatives. As these are community based there is no definitive list held.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the Pensions Service follow-up procedure is once a pensions forecast has been provided. [141879]

James Purnell: The Pension Service does not initiate any follow up action with pension forecast customers.

Pensions: Budget March 2007

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when (a) he and (b) his officials first learned of changes in the Budget 2007 which would affect (i) the reforms to the state second pension in the Pension Bill and (ii) his proposals for the personal accounts earnings band. [144218]

James Purnell: In the period leading up to Budget 2007 Ministers and officials from the Department for Work and Pensions and Her Majesty's Treasury were in frequent contact, including on a range of pension measures. In addition, in line with the normal Budget convention regarding tax matters, the Paymaster General wrote to DWP Ministers on Budget Day to confirm the changes. DWP and HMT officials are currently working together to implement these changes.

Pensions: Compensation

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will assess the merits of the use of unclaimed assets in the financial sector as a source of compensation for people who have lost pension savings as part of his review of pension scheme assets. [136023]

James Purnell: The focus of the assets review is to examine how we make best use of the assets in pension schemes that are winding up under funded with an insolvent employer or who come within the extension for solvent employers whose schemes signed a compromise agreement. The intention of the review is to determine how these or other sources of non-public expenditure funding (that have not already been allocated) could be used to increase assistance for affected scheme members. The review will be open to any suggestions from interested and concerned parties, including those made by the hon. Member. The review will provide an initial view in the summer, consult formally in the autumn and then report by the end of the year.

Pensions: Financial Assistance Scheme

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the cost of extending the level of Pension Protection Fund benefits to all those in the Financial Assistance Scheme (FAS), including those who have lost their pensions but who fall below the age cut-off for the FAS (a) in net present value terms using 2006-07 prices and (b) in cash terms for each year from 2007-08 to 2060-61; what allowance has been made in these estimates for reduced means-tested benefit payments and higher tax yields; and if he will make a statement. [121447]

James Purnell: We estimate that it will cost £2.5 billion in net present value terms (in 2006-07 prices) over the next 60 years to extend the level of Pension Protection Fund benefits to all those in the Financial Assistance Scheme (FAS), including those who have lost their pensions but who fall below the current age cut-off for the FAS. This represents an additional £640 million in net present value terms on the costs of the extended FAS as announced in the Budget 2007.

The impact of FAS payments on means-tested benefits and income tax payments will depend on the total incomes of potential FAS recipients, which cannot be reliably projected. As a result, no allowance has been made for these in the estimates.

The additional annual cost of this in cash terms (in 2006-07 prices) compared to the budget extension is presented in the following table.

Additional annual cash costs of providing PPF benefits to everyone in FAS compared to the Budget Extension

Additional annual cash costs of providing PPF benefits to everyone in FAS compared to the Budget Extension

	Cash (£ million)
2059-60	16
2060-61	14

[1] 2007-08 figure is high because it includes the cost of paying arrears for 2004-05 to 2006-07. It is assumed that the FAS Operational Unit is able to pay all those eligible for FAS as soon as they turn 65.

Notes:

These sums refer to the amount that would be required to replicate—as far as possible—the benefits the PPF provides within the administrative structures of FAS.

Costs are rounded to the nearest 1 million and expressed in 2006-07 prices.

These estimates have made no allowance for reduced means-tested benefit payments or higher tax yields.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the potential role of the Financial Assistance Scheme in helping occupational pension schemes in wind up to get their data department in order to accelerate the assessment phase of the process. [141883]

James Purnell: Currently the Financial Assistance Scheme Operational Unit (FASOU) offers support and guidance to individual trustees or administrators to help improve the quality of the data being provided to them. In the last year the FASOU has visited 34 trustees and administrators, (who are responsible for over 50 per cent. of qualifying schemes) to discuss these issues and clarify FAS requirements.

FASOU is also working with external experts, in particular Mercers, to deepen staff understanding of pension schemes; particular processes and issues.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 19 June 2007, Official Report, column 1745W, which pension funds now eligible for the Financial Assistance Scheme had previously declared a pensions holiday. [145376]

James Purnell: The information requested is not available.

Pensions: Forecasts

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people received combined pension forecasts in the last year for which figures are availa[illegible] [141546]

James Purnell: From April 2006 to March 2007 the Pension Service has provided information to employers and other pension providers to enable them to issue 4,382,761 combined pension forecasts to their employees and customers.

Pensions: Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people retiring in the past 12 months and gaining a full retirement pension had (a) one to five, (b) six to 10 and (c) 11 to 15 years national insurance credits as a result of claiming incapacity benefit. [144727]

James Purnell: Figures are not currently available on the number of people retiring over the past 12 months and gaining a full retirement pension who have received national insurance credits as a result of claiming incapacity benefit.

The most recent figures on national insurance contributions held by the Department for Work and Pensions relate to those retiring in the 2004-05 year, and are detailed in the table.

The table details the number of people retiring in 2004-05, gaining a full retirement pension, having had full years national insurance credits in each qualifying year as a result of claiming incapacity benefit.

Personal Accounts

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many participants in qualitative work sponsored by his Department mentioned during his Department's survey work on the proposed personal accounts an interest in investing in social, ethical or environmental funds (a) spontaneously and (b) after prompting. [143549]

James Purnell: In early 2006, the Department carried out in-depth qualitative research on public attitudes to personal accounts[1]. Some of the younger participants in this research (aged 20 to 34) spontaneously said that they felt it was important that they are able to invest their money ethically. Respondents were not specifically prompted about whether they were interested in investing in social, ethical or environmental funds. Qualitative research identifies the range of views and experiences people hold and provides insight into attitudes and beliefs. It does not provide statistics, so it is not valid to give numbers of participants who expressed a particular view.

[1] This research was published in the Department's research report series; Hall S, Pettigrew N and Harvey P, 2006, Public attitudes to personal accounts: Report of a qualitative study, DWP Research Report No. 370

Personal Income

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answers of (a) 5 June 2007, Official Report, column 350W, on low incomes and (b) 10 May 2007, Official Report, column 465W, on personal income, if he will place in the Library the datasets corresponding to the Households Below Average Income—income distribution graphs, figures 2.1, 4.1, 5.1 and 6.1. [145179]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Specific information regarding low income for the United Kingdom is available in "Households Below Average Income 1994/95-2005/06 (Revised)". The report uses 60 per cent. of median income as the low income threshold. This threshold is the internationally recognised measure of poverty.

The information requested has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

The figures are based on OECD equalisation factors and will therefore not be on the same basis as any figures that were based on McClements equalisation factors.

Personal Savings

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in what terms the proposed £10,000 limit on contributions to personal accounts in their first year of operation is expressed. [141531]

James Purnell: On 14 June 2007 the Government published their response to the consultation on the White Paper Personal Accounts: a new way to save. This put forward a proposal for a £10,000 limit on contributions in the first year of the personal accounts scheme in order to encourage saving prior to the introduction of personal accounts in 2012. However, we will continue to work with others across Government, the financial industry and consumer representatives to explore how we can best encourage people to save prior to 2012.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the proportion of the 5.7 million employees identified on page 94 of the regulatory impact assessment to Personal Accounts: a new way to save as being offered contributions greater than 6 per cent. who are (a) non-members of these schemes but eligible to join and (b) non-members of the schemes who are not currently eligible to join. [141543]

James Purnell: The data requested are not available.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in what terms the £5,000 annual limit on contributions proposed in Personal Accounts: A New Way to Save is expressed. [141532]

James Purnell: The personal accounts White Paper "A New Way to Save" consulted on an annual contribution limit of £5,000. The summary of responses, published on 14 June 2007, contains detail on both the level of the limit and also how it is to be designed. After further analysis, the Government believe that a contribution limit of £3,600 balances the need to focus personal accounts on the target market and the need to allow individuals to save flexibly for their retirement.

Remploy: Contracts

Mr. McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many contracts have been awarded under the Public Procurement Regulations 2006 to (a) Remploy and (b) other supported employers. [145749]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department has not awarded any new contracts to (a) Remploy and (b) other supported employers under the Public Procurement Regulations 2006.

The Department has not entered into any new contracts since the 2006 regulations, with either Remploy or other supported employers but we have extended Remploy's two existing contracts twice from April 2006 to March 2007 and from April 2007 to March 2008. They were also successful in a recent limited competition in winning extra NDDP business (volumes) within their existing contracts.

Sea Containers: Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps his Department is taking to ensure that Sea Containers, based in Bermuda, properly funds its UK-based pension schemes; and if he will make a statement. [145402]

James Purnell: This is a matter for the Pensions Regulator.

I understand that following an oral hearing before the Pension Regulator's Determinations Panel on 12 and 13 June 2007, the panel determined that a financial support direction should be issued requiring Sea Containers Ltd. to put in place financial support for the two pension schemes of its UK based subsidiary. This is the first time that the Regulator has used its financial support powers which were introduced in the Pensions Act 2004 to ensure that, when it is reasonable, companies cannot leave a pension scheme with a service company or weak member of the group without guaranteeing the pension promise.

The Financial Support Direction will come into effect 28 days from the date of the determination notice or, if an appeal is made to the Pensions Regulator Tribunal, from the date of determination of that appeal. Any person that appears to be directly affected by the determination may appeal to the Pensions Regulator Tribunal within 28 days of the determination notice being issued.

Self-Employed: Disabled

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what training is available to disabled people in receipt of incapacity benefit wishing to become self-employed. [141667]

Mr. Jim Murphy: We already have powers to offer training to disabled people in receipt of incapacity benefit through New Deal for Disabled People and Pathways to Work. Pathways to Work will be rolled out nationally by April 2008, primarily via the private and voluntary sectors in 60 per cent. of the country. Contracts will not specify exactly what programme of support should be available, enabling providers to offer innovative work-focused support which is tailored to the needs of individual customers and could potentially include self employment training.

Further assistance may also be available from Jobcentre Plus, which offers a wide range of practical and financial help to assist customers, such as career development loans. Specially trained personal advisers are available to discuss with customers any barrier that is preventing them from starting self-employment. They also provide a booklet 'Work For Yourself' which gives advice and information on starting a small business or arranging a franchise.

They are also able to give advise on further sources of support; including The Prince's Trust, Business Link, Training for Work in Scotland and Work Based Learning in Wales.

In addition, the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) offers a wide range of small business support information and packages, including a small suite of grants, loans guarantees and subsidised consultancy to address a range of business issues. They also have information about finance and grants for starting up and developing a small business and can provide practical support for the key stages of innovation or research and development and helps businesses to become more efficient, competitive and profitable.

Severe Disablement Allowance

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people are in receipt of severe disability allowances; and what expenses such allowances are intended to cover. [145001]

Mrs. McGuire: At November 2006, there were 2,845,750 disability living allowance (DLA) cases in payment and 1,679,360 people entitled to attendance allowance, which includes those who have had payment of their benefit suspended, for example because they were in hospital.

DLA and AA are the main benefits paid by this Department to people with severe disabilities. These benefits are intended to provide a contribution towards the general extra costs faced by severely disabled people as a result of their disabilities, allowing recipients to use the benefit according to their own priorities.

Severe Disablement Allowance: Eligibility

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what criteria his Department uses to determine severe disablement; and what definition of severe disablement is used. [145000]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department does not use one specific definition to determine severe disability. A range of benefits are available to people with disabilities, and definitions of disability are dependent on the benefit being claimed and reflect the purpose of that benefit.

Social Security Benefits: Disabled People

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how benefits for disabled people are adjusted to take into account increases in the cost of living; and whether such adjustments reflect increases in the cost of fuel and its impact upon heating costs. [144999]

Mrs. McGuire: Benefits such as disability living allowance and attendance allowance are increased every April by the rate of inflation as measured by the movement in the retail prices index (RPI). In calculating the RPI, account is taken of price changes in a wide range of goods and services, which includes the cost of fuel and heating.

Social Security Benefits: Fraud

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his estimate is of the cost of the most expensive organised fraud against the benefit system since 1 May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [145246]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available.

Social Security Benefits: Overpayments

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will publish his Department's rules for deciding whether overpaid benefits should be recovered from claimants where the overpayment has resulted from departmental error, including staff error; and if he will make a statement. [144883]

Mr. Plaskitt: Where someone receives public money to which they are not entitled we have a duty to seek recovery, even if the overpayment was caused by an official error. I have arranged for the relevant guidance to be placed in the Library.

State Retirement Pension: National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the total net cost of bringing forward the new rules for the number of years of national insurance required to qualify for a full basic state pension from April 2010 to (a) April 2001, (b) April 2005, (c) April 2006 and (d) April 2007 in each year from 2001 to 2030; how many additional people in each year would receive a full basic state pension as a result; and if he will make a statement. [144114]

James Purnell: The information requested is not currently available. However, the estimated net costs of bringing forward the new rules for the number of years of national insurance required to qualify for a full basic state pension from 2008 are given as follows.

	Net cost (£ million)
2008	50
2009	140
2010	170
2011	170
2012	170
2013	160
2014	160
2015	150
2016	150
2017	140
2018	140
2019	130
2020	130
2021	120
2022	120
2023	120
2024	110
2025	110
2026	100
2027	90

	Net cost (£ million)
2028	80
2029	80
2030	70

Notes:
1. Estimates in 2007-08 prices, UK and overseas.
2. Estimates rounded to the nearest £10 million.
3. Estimates are net of savings in income related benefits but do not include any savings from tax increases.

Estimated additional beneficiaries in Great Britain of a full basic state pension

	2008	2009
Men	25,000	25,000
Women	75,000	70,000
Total	100,000	95,000

State Retirement Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assumptions the Government has made in its costings of a Universal Enhanced State Pension, with offsetting of accrued rights to the State Earnings Related Pension and the State Second Pension, in respect of the relationship between the level of pensions paid to single pensioners and couples; and if he will make a statement. [144994]

James Purnell: The proposal for a Universal Enhanced State Pension was made by the Pensions Commission. The costs and assumptions behind it are set out in the Commission's Second Report "A New Pension Settlement for the Twenty-First Century".

Unemployment Benefits: Warrington

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was spent on benefits for unemployed people in Warrington (a) for the year ending March 1997 and (b) in the last year for which figures are available, broken down by type of benefit. [145476]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information requested is in the following table.

Spend on benefits for unemployed people in Warrington. (Warrington, North and Warrington, South parliamentary constituencies)

£ million

	1996-97	2006-07
Jobseeker's Allowance (Income based)	3.5	4.7
Jobseeker's Allowance (Contribution based)	1.0	2.0
Unemployed Benefit	1.2	—
Income Support for the unemployed	4.9	—

Notes:
1. Figures are in cash terms and are rounded to the nearest 100,000.
2. Figures are consistent with Budget 2007.
3. Unemployed Benefit and Income Support for the unemployed were benefits prior to Jobseeker's Allowance which were paid in 1996-97 along with Jobseeker's Allowance which was introduced in October 1996.
4. Figures are based on 5 per cent. samples and are therefore subject to sampling variation.

Winter Fuel Payments: Disabled People

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what consideration his Department has given to the extension of the winter fuel allowance to disabled people. [145002]

James Purnell: We have no plans extend winter fuel payments to disabled people aged under 60. Help is already available through disability benefits and the disability premium in income-related benefits in recognition of the extra costs, including heating, which disabled people may have.

Written Questions

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects to answer Question (a) 122108 and (b) 122109, tabled for answer on 22 February 2007 by the right hon. Member for Birkenhead, on 18 to 24 year olds who are not in employment, education or training. [128542]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 19 March 2007]: Replies were given to my right hon. Friend's question number 122108 on 3 May 2007, Official Report, column 1830W and to question number 122109 on 21 June 2007, Official Report, column 2248W.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will answer Question (a) 138125, tabled on 15 May 2007, on Pension Credit, (b) 121447, tabled on 8 February 2007, on the Financial Assistance Scheme, (c) 102309, tabled on 20 November 2006, on council tax and (d) 102211, tabled on 17 November 2006, on Incapacity Benefit, by the hon. Member for Yeovil. [144922]

Mr. Plaskitt: The hon. Member's question 138125 was replied to on 19 June 2007, Official Report, column 1742W. Question 121447 was replied to today, 25 June 2007. Question 102309 was transferred to the Department for Communities and Local Government and question 102211 was transferred to HM Treasury.

TRANSPORT

A21: Construction

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made on the construction of the A21 upgrade between Flimwell and Hurst Green; and if he will make a statement. [145660]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency has no plans at present to upgrade the A21 between Flimwell and Hurst Green.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funding his Department has provided for the construction of the A21 upgrade between Flimwell and Hurst Green. [145661]

Gillian Merron: None. The proposed A21 upgrade between Flimwell and Hurst Green has not been prioritised by the South East region as part of its advice to Ministers on projects to be funded by the Regional Funding Allocation for the period up to 2016.

A38: Safety Measures

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make changes to the slip road off the A38 at Lee Mill as a matter of urgency to reduce the risk of motorists entering it from the wrong direction. [145191]

Dr. Ladyman: The layout of the road at this junction is designed to discourage road users from entering from the wrong direction. In view of the recent fatal accident that has taken place on the A38 near this junction, the Highways Agency wish to review the outcome of police investigations and consider whether further enhancements to the road layout are necessary.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to ensure greater safety at the Deep Lane junction at Plymouth on the A38. [145192]

Dr. Ladyman: Site work is currently under way to improve the capacity and safety of Deep Lane junction. As a result of identifying an increased accident rate, a safety study is also to be carried out at the westbound on-slip road. In addition, major improvements to the junction are proposed which will accommodate a growth in demand from nearby developments.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to assess the safety of the informal junctions on the A38 at Lyneham, Cadleigh and Choakford as a matter of urgency. [145193]

Dr. Ladyman: These junctions currently serve small local communities and have a relatively good safety record. They will continue to be monitored closely and action taken as necessary. Closure of the eastbound on-slip at Lyneham (Voss Farm) is imminent in order to prevent use by construction vehicles from Langage Power Station.

Aviation

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the number of people who took (a) no, (b) one, (c) two, (d) three or four and (e) five or more single or return flights (i) in total, (ii) to UK destinations, (iii) to European destinations and (iv) to worldwide destinations in the last 12 months, broken down by (A) income quintile and (B) classification of residential neighbourhoods. [145237]

Gillian Merron: The following table shows the number of flights in percentage terms taken by adults in Great Britain during the last 12 months (2006). Data are not available by income quintile, but in five broad bands as shown as follows.

Data are not available by destination or broken down by classification of residential neighbourhoods.

Aviation: Accidents

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents involving (a) large aircraft, (b) light aircraft, (c) ultralight aircraft and (d) helicopters occurred in England and Wales in each of the last five years. [145433]

Gillian Merron: The number of reportable accidents occurring within the London Flight Information Region of the UK, which equates approximately to England and Wales, for each of the last five years is set out as follows. The number of those accidents which involved fatalities is shown in brackets.

	Large aeroplanes (above 5,700 kg)	Light aeroplanes (5,700 kg and below)	Microlights	Helicopters
2002	15 (1)	145 (4)	13 (1)	23 (2)
2003	16 (0)	159 (6)	25 (2)	23 (3)
2004	12 (0)	117 (7)	22 (3)	16 (3)
2005	13 (0)	137 (11)	22 (2)	14 (1)
2006	11 (0)	142 (6)	30 (2)	22 (1)

Aviation: Baggage

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will take steps to transfer responsibility for setting allowances for the number and weight of passenger hand baggage to airports and airlines; [145899]

(2) what discussions he has had with airlines on the current hand baggage restrictions in the last three months; and if he will publish the minutes of such meetings; [145900]

(3) what assessment he has made of the impact of the hand baggage regulations on the airline industry; [145901]

(4) what discussions he has had with airports and airlines on the (a) implementation of, (b) amendments to and (c) alleviation of the current restrictions on the number of pieces of hand baggage allowed per passenger in the last three months. [145902]

Gillian Merron: The one cabin bag per passenger is part of a package of measures to manage the current very real threat to aviation in the UK. The resulting reduction in the number of x-ray images per passenger ensures that the security checks are undertaken to the highest possible standard. The current security regulations are kept under constant review; and we have made clear throughout our readiness to remove the one bag limit once industry—collectively—is confident of its ability to deliver security effectively without it.

The Secretary of State and officials have discussed the current cabin baggage restrictions with industry representatives at formal meetings such as the National Aviation Security Committee, and also during informal discussions with airline and airport operators. Since security measures are discussed, minutes of meetings are classified Restricted, and it would not be appropriate to publish them.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the reasons are for the different hand baggage allowance for passengers leaving the UK and passengers arriving in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [143349]

Gillian Merron: The Department has currently placed a limit of one cabin bag per passenger in order to manage the current threat to aviation in the UK, which is higher than for most other countries. The resulting reduction in the number of x-ray images per passenger ensures that the security checks are undertaken to the highest possible standard. This measure has not been adopted by other states.

The Department has invited industry to put forward proposals to facilitate the screening of more than one bag per passenger, while still delivering effective security.

Aviation: EU Emissions Trading Scheme

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether it is the Government's policy to support the inclusion of EU aviation within the Emissions Trading Scheme. [145745]

Gillian Merron: The UK has taken the lead in securing aviation's inclusion into the EU Emissions Trading Scheme. This is in line with the Government's plans to tackle aviation's climate change impacts as set out in "The Future of Air Transport" White Paper.

Aviation: Exhaust Emissions

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of greenhouse gas emissions he expects air travel to represent in the next 20 years. [140188]

Gillian Merron: Estimates of aviation emissions in 2030 were provided in Aviation and Global Warming published by the Department for Transport in 2004 and are available on the Department's website at:

Aviation: Fuels

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the aviation industry's progress towards its aim of improving fuel efficiency by 50 per cent. from 2000 to 2020. [145743]

Gillian Merron: The aviation industry's sustainable aviation progress report 2006 available at www.sustainableaviation.co.uk includes information on progress towards this goal set by the Advisory Council on Aeronautics Research in Europe (ACARE).

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what change there was in the aviation industry's fuel efficiency per seat between 2000 and 2005; and what assessment he has made of the implications of this trend for the possibility of meeting future targets. [145744]

Gillian Merron: The Government do not collect this information. The aviation industry's "Sustainable Aviation Progress Report 2006" available at www.sustainableaviation.co.uk includes a graph setting out aggregated airline fuel efficiency in litres per revenue tonne kilometre between 2000 and 2005.

Bus Services: Concessions

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions his Department has had with (a) the Scottish Executive, (b) the Welsh Assembly Government and (c) other interested and relevant parties to discuss the mutual cross-border recognition of concessionary bus passes. [144827]

Gillian Merron: The Concessionary Bus Travel Bill, currently before Parliament, contains a power to allow, via future regulations, for mutual recognition of bus passes across the UK. The Department had initial discussions with the Devolved Administrations about the proposal and all indicated support for including the power in the Bill. However, they also acknowledged that we would need to discuss it further and work together to resolve the various technical and resource issues before mutual recognition could be pursued in practice.

The issue of mutual recognition of passes within the UK has also been discussed at meetings of both the Department's Concessionary Fares Working Group and the Concessionary Fares Stakeholder Users' Group.

Local authorities in England already have the flexibility—which the Bill does not change—to offer more than the statutory concession to their residents, taking into account local circumstances, for example, free travel in the vicinity of the local authority, which could include, across borders.

Cycling: Hampshire

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many cycle routes or paths are available in (a) Portsmouth, (b) Southampton and (c) Hampshire; what their total length is; and what targets there are for future provision; [145837]

(2) how much was spent on the (a) provision and (b) maintenance of dedicated cycle routes or paths in (i) Hampshire, (ii) Southampton and (iii) Portsmouth in each of the last three years; and how much he expects will be spent in each of the next three years. [145838]

Mr. Tom Harris: Provision of cycling facilities is the responsibility of the Local Highway Authority and their strategy for cycling provision is set out in their Local Transport Plan (LTP).

Published figures for cycling facilities in the LTP and associated documents are not available in the form requested, but are expressed in the following table. Future spend on provision and maintenance is not sufficiently detailed to give a cycle only perspective.

	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
Portsmouth
Number of cycle tracks/lanes[1]	8	7	9
Length by km	3	4	5
Expenditure on cycle schemes (£000)	45	37	70
Southampton
Number of cycle tracks/lanes[1]	6	33	11
Length by km	5	6	5
Expenditure on cycle schemes (£000)	305	244	250
Hampshire
Number of cycle tracks/lanes[1]	12	4	6
Length by km	7	3	8
Expenditure on cycle schemes (Cycle tracks or lanes only) (£000)	452	548	380

[1] Includes new schemes and improvements or extensions to existing.

Cycling: Helmets

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate his Department has made of the number of cycling fatalities which would have been avoided in each of the last five years if a helmet had been worn by the cyclist. [145444]

Dr. Ladyman: No such estimate has been made by the Department, however the evidence indicates that cycle helmets provide protective benefits in the event of a collision and therefore prevent and reduce injuries. Research suggests that between one third and one half of pedal cycle casualties attending hospital sustained an injury to the head or face (see DFT Road Safety Research Report No. 30, a copy of which is in the House Library).

Cycling: Safety Measures

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his policy is on dropped (a) kerbs and (b) central refuges to accommodate cyclists. [145010]

Gillian Merron: Policy on dropped kerbs and central refuges for cyclists is contained in the Department's publication "Cycle Friendly Infrastructure", copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with the Highways Agency on the provision of dropped (a) kerbs and (b) central refuges to accommodate cyclists; and if he will make a statement. [145011]

Dr. Ladyman: Although there have been no recent discussions with the HA, dropped kerbs and central refuges for cyclists are routinely delivered as part of the Highways Agency's programme of smaller scheme improvement works. Within the current spending review (CSR04 2005-06 to 2007-08) some £300 million has been allocated towards making better use of the network including measures to improve accessibility such as cycle provision.

Cycling: Standards

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many cycling proficiency tests were (a) taken and (b) passed in each of the last five years, broken down by local authority. [145416]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Department does not hold this information. Local authorities in England deliver a range of types of cycle training including Bikeability and other, less comprehensive, training such as the cycling proficiency test. Approximately a third of Year 6 pupils receive cycle training.

The Department has worked with over 20 organisations including local authorities, the Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents and the CTC to develop a new national cycle training Standard to update the old style cycling proficiency test to provide the on-road skills needed to handle modern traffic conditions. In March, we launched Bikeability—the award scheme for cyclists in England trained to the new standard. During the six month pilot phase, 5,000 children completed Bikeability training up to level 2: the level required to enable most children to cycle to school.

We are encouraging local authorities to deliver Bikeability training and have grants available to help both instructors with the cost of being trained to deliver Bikeability and local authorities to adopt national standards. Grants totalling £1.25 million have also been made available this year to local authorities in England to provide additional training places.

Dartford Tunnel

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport from which local authority areas the largest number of responses came to his Department's recent consultation on changes to charges at the Dartford crossing. [145025]

Dr. Ladyman: The largest number of consultation responses from which an address could be identified were from the Dartford and Thurrock areas.

Departments: British Airports Authority

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff his Department employs who previously worked for BAA; and if he will make a statement. [145381]

Gillian Merron: The Department does not keep this information in a form that can be accessed without disproportionate costs being incurred.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many of his Department's employees left the Department to take up employment by BAA in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [145382]

Gillian Merron: The Department does not record this information in a form that can be accessed without disproportionate costs being incurred.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many of his Department's staff are seconded to BAA; how many were seconded in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [145383]

Gillian Merron: The Department has no staff currently seconded to BAA. One member of staff was seconded to BAA in 2005.

Departments: Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent by staff in his Department via departmental (a) credit, (b) procurement and (c) fuel cards in each of the last three years. [145301]

Gillian Merron: The following table shows the total spend by staff in the Department via credit, procurement and fuel cards during the last three complete financial years.

	Total spend
Type of card	2004-05	2005-06	2006-07
Credit	0	0	0
Procurement—GPC and corporate card	5,508,294	7,241,140	12,334,227
Fuel card	856,468	1,935,628	3,853,181
Total	6,364,762	9,176,768	16,187,408

The procurement card figure includes spend using the Government procurement card (GPC) for purchasing low value goods and services and corporate cards for some official travel and related expenditure, issued under the umbrella of the OGC buying solutions pre-tendered national framework contract. The Department does not issue official credit cards.

Departments: Foreign Relations

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many Memoranda of Understanding are in force as a result of agreements with foreign Governments entered into by Ministers in his Department; and what executive actions each entails. [144465]

Dr. Ladyman: Records of Memoranda of Understanding are not held centrally in the Department and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Legal Costs

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent by his Department on legal fees in each of the last five years. [139300]

Gillian Merron: In each of the past five years the Department for Transport has spent the following on legal fees:

2002-03	451,466
2003-04	2,718,545
2004-05	3,793,752
2005-06	3,030,728
2006-07	3,143,937

Notes

1. In the year 2002, Legal Services Directorate was part of both DfT and ODPM (now DCLG).
2. The Driving Standards Agency can only provide answers from 2003.
3. The Vehicle Certification Agency has a nil return within UK. In respect of its overseas offices it is less than £2,000 per annum over the last five years.
4. The Government Car and Despatch Agency accounting practices do not record legal costs arising from work carried out by Treasury Solicitors and private practice separately.

Departments: Northern Ireland

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a copy of the concordat governing the relationship between his Department and the Northern Ireland Administration. [145908]

Gillian Merron: The Department does not currently have a Concordat with the Northern Ireland Executive but will work with colleagues in the Devolved Administration in Northern Ireland to develop one. A copy will be laid in the House when this has been done.

The principles set out in the Memorandum of Understanding and Supplementary Agreements between the UK Government, Scottish Ministers, the Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales and the Northern Ireland Executive, published in 2001, continue to underpin our working relationship with the Northern Ireland Executive.

Departments: Older Workers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of staff in his Department were over 60 years of age in each of the last three years. [145689]

Gillian Merron: The figures requested are as follows:

	Percentage
2005	5.1
2006	5.0
2007	5.4

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people aged (a) over 55 years of age and (b) over 60 years of age have been recruited by his Department in each of the last three years; and what percentage in each case this is of the number of new recruits in each year. [145698]

Gillian Merron: The following table provides details of responses from DfT and its agencies to the request for information.

	Number over 55	Percentage new recruits	Number over 60	Percentage new recruits	Total new recruits
2004-05	155	8.5	68	3.75	1,818
2005-06	227	8.9	82	3.2	2,565
2006-07	109	6.3	35	2.0	1,729

Departments: Private Finance Initiative

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the value is of the unitary payments of each private finance initiative scheme overseen by his Department over the lifetime of the contract expressed in 2007-08 prices and discounted to present value. [145871]

Gillian Merron: HM Treasury website provides updated details (on a six-monthly basis) of unitary payments on PFI projects overseen by the Department for Transport. This information is available at:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/documents/public_private_partnerships/ppp_pfi_stats.cfm

The unitary payments are based on outturn prices. On average, the appropriate real discount rate for deriving the present value would be 3.5 per cent., as set out in the Treasury Green Book.

The forecasts of future payments are subject to the performance of the private sector contractors.

The unitary payments represent repayments for the capital value (sum of the capital spend) of the project and will also frequently include inflation, service provision, capital repayments and major refurbishments.

Departments: Public Participation

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many public consultations his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and what the cost was of each consultation. [145283]

Gillian Merron: Department and its Agencies published 71 consultations in the 12 month period to the end of May 2007.

They are available on our website http://www.dft.gov.uk.

The Department regularly consults key stakeholders on a less formal basis through meetings or seminars to help inform policy development.

Information on the cost of each consultation and the total cost of all consultations could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff surveys his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and at what total cost. [145266]

Gillian Merron: The Department for Transport including its Executive Agencies conducted eight staff surveys in the last 12 months at a total cost of £275,922.26.

Driving Offences: Insurance

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what steps he (a) has taken and (b) plans to take to encourage young drivers who are driving without insurance to take out an insurance policy; [145393]

(2) what plans he has to raise awareness of the requirement for third party insurance and the consequences of not obtaining insurance. [145409]

Dr. Ladyman: The requirements for motor insurance are given in the Highway Code and all new and young drivers should be aware of this. Separately the Department has a section on the Direct.Gov website detailing among other things the motor insurance requirements and the consequences of uninsured driving.

At the end of 2005 the police were given new powers to seize vehicles being driven uninsured. Additionally the Road Safety Act 2006 provides for the introduction of a new scheme of continuous insurance enforcement which is planned for 2008.

The Department is planning a publicity and awareness campaign to ensure that all drivers, including young drivers, are fully aware of the requirements, the risks and the consequences of driving uninsured, and are encouraged to take out a policy of motor insurance. It is intended that this campaign will commence shortly before the proposed scheme of continuous insurance enforcement is commenced so that programme can include details of this scheme.

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to review the penalties available to magistrates in dealing with uninsured drivers. [145405]

Dr. Ladyman: The range of penalties open to magistrates when dealing with uninsured driving offences are already extensive, ranging from a fine at up to £5,000 and an obligatory requirement for 6 to 8 points on an offenders driving licence. In addition the police now have powers to seize and dispose of any vehicles being found driven uninsured. Separately the Road Safety Act 2006 provided for a scheme of continuous insurance enforcement with significant penalties, including seizure of vehicles being used uninsured. The Department is currently preparing detailed implementation plans for this scheme. Once this scheme is operational we will be reviewing the full range of penalties and sanctions available to tackle uninsured driving, and to see what further actions might be needed.

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he has taken to address the issue of uninsured driving by eliminating abuse of the current practice of allowing a 14 day grace period for renewal of car insurance policy after the policy lapses. [145406]

Dr. Ladyman: All motorists have at all times had to have a current policy of motor insurance covering their use of a motor vehicle. The practice of allowing a 14 day grace period to renew a lapsed motor insurance policy was an insurance industry practice. The Department has been assured that industry has taken steps to ensure that this practice is discontinued.

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to introduce school-based programmes highlighting the risk of uninsured driving. [145788]

Dr. Ladyman: A publicity and awareness campaign is being planned to ensure that all drivers, including young drivers, are fully aware of the requirements, the risks and the consequences of driving uninsured, and are encouraged to take out a policy of motor insurance. It is our intention that this campaign will commence shortly before the scheme of continuous insurance enforcement, powers for which were granted in the Road Safety Act 2006, is commenced so that the campaign can include details of this scheme. We will be considering all opportunities and channels, including school based programmes, to ensure a fully effective campaign.

Driving Under Influence

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment he has made of the likely effect on the number of drivers per year convicted for drink-driving of the introduction of a statutory blood alcohol limit of 50 milligrammes per 100 millilitres of blood; [144912]

(2) what estimate he has made of the timetable for implementation of a statutory blood alcohol level for drivers reduced from the current maximum to 50 milligrammes; [145022]

(3) what estimate he has made of the annual cost of implementing a statutory blood alcohol level for drivers of 50 milligrammes; [145023]

(4) what assessment he has made of the (a) costs and (b) benefits of reducing the permitted blood alcohol level from the current statutory level to 50 milligrammes. [145109]

Dr. Ladyman: Any limit is aimed primarily at persuading people not to drink and drive in the first place, rather than at a target for convictions, and so no specific assessment has been made of the effect of a 50mg legal limit on drink driving convictions. A change in the legal limit would require public consultation and the making of a statutory instrument subject to negative resolution procedure.

Such a statutory instrument would require an impact assessment, which would include an assessment of the likely cost impact of a lower limit. An assessment of the estimated effect on road traffic casualties of lowering the legal alcohol limit was made in the Department's consultation paper "Combating Drink Driving: Next Steps" (February 1998), a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Government Car and Dispatch Agency: Motor Vehicles

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many vehicles are owned by the Government Car and Dispatch Agency, broken down by vehicle excise duty band; [144802]

(2) what percentage of vehicles in use by the Government Car and Dispatch Agency fall into each vehicle excise duty band. [144803]

Dr. Ladyman: The vehicles in use by the Government Car and Despatch Agency and their vehicle excise duty bands are as follows:

Vehicle excise duty band	Number in GCDA fleet	Percentage of GCDA fleet
Band B	98	40
Band C	5	2
Band F	86	35
Band G	3	1
Light Goods Vehicles	45	19
Registered before 1 March 2001	6	2

Lorries

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the increase in expected wear rate of an (a) A class road and (b) motorway is for an additional traffic volume per day of (i) 400, (ii) 500, (iii) 800, and (iv) 1,000 heavy goods vehicle movements. [145735]

Dr. Ladyman: The increases in heavy vehicle flow referred to are unlikely to have significant effects on structural or surface wear rates for A class roads and motorways designed in accordance with the Highways Agency's standards.

Lorries: Noise

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the change in noise level adjacent to an (a) A class road and (b) motorway arising from an additional traffic volume per day of (i) 400, (ii) 600, (iii) 800 and (iv) 1,000 heavy goods vehicle movements. [145734]

Dr. Ladyman: The method used in the UK for calculating road traffic noise requires a baseline volume of traffic. The change in road traffic noise, including from heavy goods vehicles (HGVs), is calculated from the change in the baseline traffic level. A change in traffic noise level cannot be calculated with only absolute increases in traffic volumes.

If all the other factors that influence road traffic noise remained unchanged, a 10 per cent. change in HGVs is approximately equivalent to a one decibel noise change.

Lorries: Tolls

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent developing the lorry road user charge before it was integrated into the National Road Pricing scheme. [141857]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

Total expenditure on the lorry road user charge from May 2002 until its integration into the National Road Pricing scheme was £65.4 million.

Merchant Shipping: Oil

David Mundell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Government have the power under merchant shipping legislation to block ship-to-ship oil transfers; and what the Government's response is to the environmental and public concern raised on the proposal for ship-to-ship oil transfer in the Firth of Forth. [145656]

Dr. Ladyman: Currently, it is not for the Secretary of State to decide whether ship-to-ship transfers in a harbour authority area may or may not take place.

However, Forth Ports, as the statutory harbour authority for the Firth of Forth has public duties to which it must have regard when exercising its functions. These include Forth Ports' role as a competent authority under the European Community's Habitats Directive in relation to decisions on whether or not to authorise the proposed ship-to-ship transfers in the Firth of Forth.

Nevertheless, it is understood that the Scottish Executive is intending to introduce a new control on harbour authorities in Scotland and that this control would be achieved through a Scotland-only amendment to Part IV of the Habitats Regulations. The introduction of this control is intended to address local concerns about the situation in the Firth of Forth.

The UK Government are considering making regulations under section 130 of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 to regulate ship-to-ship transfer of oil carried as cargo in those areas within the 12 nautical mile limit of the UK's territorial sea where there is a higher risk because there is not an appropriate oil spill contingency plan prepared under the Merchant Shipping (Oil Pollution Preparedness, Response and Co-operation Convention) Regulations 1998.

Nonetheless, the Department is closely monitoring the views expressed concerning the proposal for ship-to-ship transfers of oil in the Firth of Forth.

Ministers: Official Cars

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 11 June 2007, Official Report, column 727W, on Ministers: official cars, how many cars are allocated to Ministers in each Government Department, broken down by (a) Minister and (b) car model given in the answer. [145453]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested in respect of the number of cars allocated to Departments is currently being collated and will be published in the coming weeks.

Motor Vehicles: Cherished Number Plates

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport why a vehicle inspection is required for a vehicle over 15 years old before a cherished number plate transfer can take place. [145588]

Dr. Ladyman: The instruction to inspect all vehicles over 15 years old from date of manufacture/first registration whichever is earlier, was issued by the DVLA after a review of cherished transfer and retention applications. Vehicles over 15 years old were identified as being in a 'higher risk' category for fraudulent applications. A subsequent review of this instruction reveals it's introduction as effective, as applicants are now aware that vehicles will be called for inspection to ensure that the vehicle exists.

Motor Vehicles: Exhaust Emissions

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the full emissions profile per mile is, both laden and unladen, for (a) 38 tonne heavy goods vehicle (HGV), (b) 44 tonne HGVs, (c) transit type vans and (d) family saloons. [145736]

Dr. Ladyman: Vehicle emissions vary significantly depending on the exact operating conditions. In the case of local pollutants, emissions depend greatly on the age of the vehicle and hence the emissions standards it was designed to meet. The following data are based on the vehicle emissions factors used in the National Atmospheric Emissions Inventory which are derived from Department for Transport (and other) vehicle emissions test data. The figures quoted relate to average emissions over all UK roads for the year 2005 fleet. Emissions may be significantly different for specific sections of road and will decrease for subsequent years as vehicles meeting the latest emissions standards enter the fleet.

	g/km
Vehicle type	NOx	PM_{10}	CO	HC	CO_2
Petrol Passenger Car	0.31	0.0029	1.1	0.08	186
Diesel Passenger Car	0.57	0.049	0.11	0.04	178
Diesel Light Goods Vehicle	0.87	0.14	0.46	0.10	291
Articulated HGV	10.6	0.26	2.1	0.92	1677

The emissions factors underlying the aforementioned data are based on testing up to the year 2001. The Department is in the process of updating these factors based on new test data accumulated over the last five years.

The aforementioned data represent vehicles at typical load conditions. The Department does not hold data on the unladen and fully laden emissions of vehicles or the relative emissions of articulated HGVs of different gross vehicle weights. However, we are conducting research on the impacts of payload on fuel consumption and hence CO_2 emissions. Preliminary results from this work suggest a reduction of 0.112 miles per gallon per tonne of payload. This equates to in the region of a 1.1 per cent. increase in fuel consumption and CO_2 emissions per tonne.

Motor Vehicles: Insurance

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he plans to set a target of having real time data entry in the Motor Insurance Database of insurance polices by the end of 2008. [145392]

Dr. Ladyman: There are continuing discussions with the Insurance industry on the targets for updating the Motor Insurance Database (MID), but there is no current plan to set a target of the end of 2008 for real time data entry to the MID.

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department has met the recommended target date set by the Greenaway report for reducing the permitted interval between an insurance policy being issued and details uploaded in the Motor Insurance Database from 14 days to seven days by the end of 2006. [145407]

Dr. Ladyman: The Motor Insurers' Bureau (MIB) (owned by the insurance industry) own and operate the Motor Insurance Database (MID). The latest figures for mid June indicate that 94.4 per cent. of all appropriate records are provided by the insurance industry to the MID within seven days which is in line with expectations to meet the new target date of January 2008 agreed with the Department.

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of motor insurance providers' capacity to comply with the requirements of rapid data entry to the Motor Insurance Database. [145408]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department receives regular reports from the Motor Insurers' Bureau (MIB) on the update status of the Motor Insurance Database (MID) and these show that insurers are achieving good results.

The Department has made no recent assessment of insurers capacity to move to rapid or real time data entry for the MID. However the Department will continue to discuss improvements to the MID update targets with the Industry.

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he has taken to improve the recording of information by insurance providers on claims settled directly in connection with incidents involving uninsured drivers, as recommended by the Greenaway report. [145410]

Dr. Ladyman: The insurance industry has had extensive consultations on this recommendation. These have not yet resulted in a final solution and officials from the Department will be having further discussions with the industry with the intention of implementing this recommendation.

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will bring forward proposals for more severe penalties for insurance providers who do not comply with permitted interval period between an insurance policy being issued and details uploaded to the motor insurance database. [145789]

Dr. Ladyman: The Motor Insurer's Bureau (MIB) (owned by the insurance industry) own and operate the Motor Insurance Database (MID). There is a statutory requirement for all motor insurers to be members of the MIB and, as part of the requirements of membership, all motor insurers are required to meet the agreed targets for updating the MID. The MIB have the power to impose a penalty of up to £250,000 for non compliance. The insurance industry is currently achieving the standards agreed with this Department and consequently more severe penalties are not required.

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to require motor insurance providers to notify the motor insurance database and the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency immediately of any insurance policy cancellation. [145790]

Dr. Ladyman: Motor insurers are required to notify the Motor Insurers' Bureau (MIB), who maintain and operate the Motor Insurance Database (MID) of all changes (including cancellations) to motor insurance policies. I have no intention to require insurers to also notify the DVLA as dual notification would not deliver any additional benefits but would introduce additional costs.

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will require every motor insurance policy issued to contain information on both the insured driver and the vehicle they are insured to drive. [145791]

Dr. Ladyman: Motor insurers are required to keep information about all vehicles insured under all motor insurance policies, and to supply such information to the Motor Insurers' Bureau (MIB). Motor insurers are also required to keep information about the persons, or classes of person, entitled to drive a vehicle under any particular policy. For most private policies the drivers are specified on the policy. However fleet policies often cover the use of many hundreds or thousands of vehicles and drivers and in these cases the policy merely specifies a class of driver, for example, any authorised employee. Any requirement for insurers and others to record by individual name all drivers covered by a large fleet policy, and to process all changes to the lists of authorised drivers, would potentially be a large and onerous administrative burden which would have limited value to the enforcement authorities. It is not proposed to change the current arrangements, at the present time.

Motor Vehicles: Testing

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many representations he has received asking for the MOT testing regime to be extended to every other year; and if he will place in the Library copies of such representations. [145117]

Dr. Ladyman: Nine letters have been received by the Department in support of the proposals in advance of the formal consultation on the subject.

A copy of each of these letters has been placed in the Library. These have been anonymised because there was no indication from the authors whether or not they objected to their full details being made public.

Parking: Fees and Charges

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much income was derived by local authorities from parking (a) charges and (b) penalties in the most recent financial year available, broken down by region. [145358]

Gillian Merron: I refer the hon. Member to my answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Regent's Park and Kensington, North (Ms Buck) on 27 March 2007, Official Report, column 1425W.

Railways: Kent

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has estimated the cost of subsidy by South East Trains of free rail transport for Kentish passengers seeking to join Eurostar at Ebbsfleet. [145647]

Mr. Tom Harris: The arrangement between Southeastern and Eurostar, announced on 8 June, whereby passengers can use services from any Southeastern station to connect with Eurostar trains at Ashford or Ebbsfleet is a commercial agreement between the two companies. There is no additional call on subsidy as a result of this arrangement.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has made an estimate of the expected change in the (a) passenger miles and (b) carbon footprint which will result from passengers having to join Eurostar for Brussels at Ebbsfleet rather than at Ashford. [145648]

Mr. Tom Harris: No estimate has been made to date, but this information has been requested from Eurostar following a meeting I had with MPs local to Ashford on 11 June 2007. I will write to the hon. Gentleman to confirm the response from Eurostar in due course.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the reduction in journey time from London to Ramsgate via Ashford that he expects to follow the introduction of fast link trains on domestic routes. [145649]

Mr. Tom Harris: The journey time from St. Pancras to Ramsgate via Ashford using the new high-speed service is expected to be one hour 25 minutes, compared with one hour 45 minutes currently from London Bridge.

Railways: Standards

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many trains were cancelled in each of the last 12 months, broken down by region. [145215]

Mr. Tom Harris: Train cancellation data for the rail network as a whole are collected and processed by Network Rail. For a response, the hon. Member may wish to contact Network Rail's Chief Executive at the following address:

John Armitt
Chief Executive Network Rail
40, Melton Street
London
NW1 2EE

Railways: Theft

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many thefts of (a) luggage and (b) other items were reported on (i) the East Coast and (ii) West Coast main lines in the most recent 12 month period for which figures are available. [145742]

Mr. Tom Harris: This information is not held by the Department for Transport but by the British Transport Police who can be contacted at:

British Transport Police
25 Camden Road
London
NW1 9LN
e-mail: general.enquiries@btp.pnn.police.uk.

Railways: Tickets

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment he has made of the availability of ticket machines at unstaffed stations; [144282]

(2) what performance targets train operating companies are set on ticket sales at stations; [144283]

(3) what recent discussions he has had with the rail industry on the sale of tickets at stations. [144284]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Secretary of State has made no assessment of ticket machines at unstaffed stations, as ticket selling is the responsibility of the relevant train operator.

At staffed stations, operators are obliged through their passenger licence and franchise agreement to use reasonable endeavours to limit ticket office queuing times to three minutes at off-peak times and five minutes at peak times.

The Secretary of State has had no discussions about changing this obligation, but has discussed how new technology such as smartcards, print-at-home tickets or tickets sent directly to mobile phones might be used to avoid the need to queue at ticket offices at all. Several operators are already trialling such tickets.

Roads: Devon

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make an urgent assessment of the safety of the Devon Expressway between Marsh Mills and Ivybridge. [145194]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency monitors the safety of each section of road and junctions with a view to implementing improvements as priority allows. Accident statistics for this length of road are approximately 10 per cent. lower than national average for trunk road dual carriageways. The Agency is aware of the potential increase in future demand from major developments in and around Plymouth and work is under way to provide improved signing and CCTV monitoring of this corridor as well as to identify local improvement measures as traffic volumes increase.

Roads: Repairs and Maintenance

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the tunnelling machine used in the A3 Hindhead improvement can be used in future road improvement schemes. [145693]

Dr. Ladyman: The A3 Hindhead improvement scheme will not be using a tunnel boring machine for tunnel construction. The excavators and associated support equipment that will be used would be suitable for use in future road improvement schemes.

Roads: Safety

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether a regulatory impact assessment was produced on the provisions of the Road Safety Act 2006 which repealed Section 75 of the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1976; [145501]

(2) what estimate he has made of the cost to (a) community and voluntary sector groups and (b) county councils of the repeal of Section 75 of the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1976. [145651]

Gillian Merron: A copy of the Regulatory Impact Assessment for Section 53 of Road Safety Act 2006, which provides for repeal of section 75 (1) (b) of the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1975, has been placed in the Library of the House.

This gives our estimate of the overall costs across all sectors. We however made no specific estimate of the costs for the community and voluntary transport sectors or for county councils.

It should be borne in mind that many private hire vehicle contracts will already be carried out by drivers, vehicles and operators that are already licensed or to whom the contract exemption did not apply. Furthermore, the proportion of licensing cost which will be passed on to those awarding contracts will depend on contracts terms in each case.

ScotRail: Franchises

Ms Katy Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the financial details of the procurement process for the Scotrail franchise were made available by the Scottish Rail Authority to the (a) Scottish Executive and (b) Strathclyde Passenger Transport Authority, during the refranchising process. [145567]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Strategic Rail Authority undertook the replacement of the ScotRail franchise on behalf of the Scottish Executive. The SRA's processes incorporated the provision of information to and consultation with both the Scottish Executive and Strathclyde Passenger Transport Authority during the franchising process.

Ms Katy Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the final costs were of the tendering process for the current Scotrail franchise; and on which date the figure was reached for the final cost of the tendering process for the current franchise. [145568]

Mr. Tom Harris: The ScotRail franchise was re-let by the Strategic Rail Authority on behalf of the Scottish Executive, at a cost to the Authority of £3.753 million. The process was completed on 18 October 2004.

Speed Limits: Cameras

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) reviewed on the relative effectiveness of conspicuous and inconspicuous speed cameras in reducing numbers of speeding motorists. [144104]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 20 June 2007]: The Department's guidance DfT Circular 01/2007 Use of Speed and Red-Light Cameras for Traffic Enforcement: Guidance on Deployment, Visibility and Signing, which is available in the House Library, recommends cameras are positioned conspicuously and at locations where excessive speed represents a road safety problem. The annual independent evaluations of the national safety camera programme show that conspicuous enforcement is proven to reduce speeding and accidents. The Department has not commissioned or reviewed research on the relative effectiveness of conspicuous and covert cameras at reducing the number of speeding motorists, but has always made clear that it remains open to the police to conduct covert enforcement of speed limits. The Department introduced high visibility speed enforcement in 2001 as part of the Government's decision to make the camera netting-off scheme available nationally.

Train Operating Companies: Subsidies

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what Government subsidy was provided to each train operating company in each year since 1997. [144285]

Mr. Tom Harris: Historic subsidies paid and premiums received to and from franchised train operators were published in the annual report and accounts of the Strategic Rail Authority up to 2004-05.

Beyond that the information is contained in National Rail Trends. Copies of these documents are in the Library of the House.

Transport: Baggage

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received on (a) air, (b) bus and (c) rail passenger hand baggage policy. [145898]

Gillian Merron: The Secretary of State has received written representations from industry and business representatives, and correspondence from members of the public, drawing his attention to the impact the restriction on the number of items of cabin baggage is having on UK air travellers.

Following the London attacks in July 2005 the Department received a limited amount of correspondence from members of the public about restricting the carriage of luggage on the London Underground and rail networks.

Transport: Greater London

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how much funding for which his Department is responsible was allocated to each London borough in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement; [145214]

(2) how much central government funding was allocated to each London borough for road improvements in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [145216]

Gillian Merron: Capital funding to London boroughs for improvements to transport, including highways, is a matter for the Mayor. The Department gives a block grant to Transport for London, from which borough transport improvements can be funded.

Additionally, under the Mixed Priority Route Road Safety Demonstration Project, £1 million in grant was allocated to the London borough of Southwark and the London borough of Lambeth for highway works between 2002-03 and 2006-07. Over three years from 2001 to 2003 funding was also provided for the Kerbcraft scheme to equip local volunteers to work with small groups of 5-7 year olds on improving basic roadside skills. The funding was allocated to the London boroughs as shown in the chart as follows.

Payments to London boroughs running 'Kerbcraft' schemes[1]

[1] Payment was made after the end of the financial year in which the training was carried out.

The Department has also awarded PFI credits to London boroughs in order to support them to enter into a PFI contract to improve their street lighting. The PFI credits awarded to London boroughs for street lighting schemes in the last five years are:

London borough	Month of award	PFI credits awarded (£ million)
London borough of Islington	May 2003	12.2
London borough of Ealing	July 2005	25.3
London borough of Lambeth	November 2005	17.2
London borough of Barnet	March 2006	27.8
London borough of Enfield	March 2006	23.7

Transport: Noise

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department is taking to address noise generated by (a) road traffic, (b) trains and (c) aviation. [145597]

Gillian Merron: On aircraft noise, the Government's objective is to strike a fair balance between the local and national benefits that can be gained from airport expansion and the local environmental costs that might be imposed on people who live nearest to airports.

One of the aims of the 2003 Future of Air Transport White Paper was that the number of people in the UK significantly affected by aircraft noise should be limited and, where possible, reduced. In helping airports deliver this aim, the Civil Aviation Act 2006 strengthened airport operators' powers to control noise at airports.

The Environmental Noise Directive requires the production of strategic noise maps for large urban areas, major roads, major railways and major airports. The maps will be used to prepare noise action plans during 2008 setting out how environmental noise, including that from transport sources, will be managed. To inform the development of these plans, the Department for Transport will work closely with DEFRA and transport stakeholders in reviewing how transport noise is currently managed and what additional mitigation measures might be needed.

In assessing the impact of new road proposals on the environment, noise annoyance is taken into account in scheme appraisal. Road construction projects will include high standards of environmental mitigation to ensure that, so far as reasonably possible, the impact of noise is minimised in accordance with this policy.

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received on noise nuisance generated by (a) aviation and (b) road traffic. [145598]

Gillian Merron: The Department regularly receives representations regarding noise generated by aviation and road traffic. The views are used in developing measures to address noise nuisance from transport.

Transport: Sustainable Development

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the project on the sustainability of land use and transport in outer neighbourhoods has been completed. [145596]

Gillian Merron: This project is due to be completed later this year. A copy of the report from the first phase can be found in the Library of the House.

Vehicles

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the projected change is in the number of vehicles on roads in England up to 2,025, broken down by category of vehicle. [139550]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department's TEMPRO (Version 5) System forecasts car ownership, alongside other data on trips. However, it does not forecast other vehicle categories. Current projections are that the change in the number of cars between 2003 and 2025 could be 7.9 million or 34 per cent.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Adoption

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what average time a child waited in local authority care to be placed (a) with foster parent(s) and (b) with a parent(s) for adoption in each of the last five years. [144432]

Mr. Dhanda: The information requested on the average time a child waited in local authority care to be placed with foster parents is not collected centrally.

Information on the average time between the date it was decided that a looked after child should be placed for adoption and the date this child was actually placed for adoption is shown in the following table.

[2] Historical data may differ from older publications. This is mainly due to the implementation of amendments and corrections sent by some local authorities after the publication date of previous materials.

[3] Figures were rounded to the nearest year and to the nearest month.

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children are in local authority care facilities waiting for placement (a) with a foster parent(s) and (b) for adoption. [144433]

Mr. Dhanda: The information requested is not held centrally.

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) couples and (b) individuals made enquiries to local authorities to (i) foster and (ii) adopt a child or children in each of the last five years. [144434]

Mr. Dhanda: This information is not held centrally.

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment he has made of administration by local authorities of the support activity required by adoption legislation to parents in fostering and adoption. [144535]

Mr. Dhanda: The Secretary of State has made no assessment of the support services provided by local authorities. This is the responsibility of the Office for Standards in Education, Children's Services and Skills (Ofsted).

In November 2006, the then inspectorate of children's services, the Commission for Social Care Inspection, published "Adoption: messages from inspections of adoption agencies", which includes a chapter on supporting children in their new families. This report can be downloaded from the publications page on the Ofsted website: www.ofsted.gov.uk

In addition, as a part of its Adoption Research Initiative, the Department for Education and Skills has commissioned a study into the specialist support services available for birth parents in adoption cases and the services for supporting contact between birth parents and their children. The study is due to complete in June 2008.

In relation to fostering, the National Minimum Standards for Fostering Services require fostering service providers to have in place a clear strategy for working with and supporting their carers, including training and development, out of hours support and arrangements for reviews. The Fostering Services Regulations 2002 place an explicit duty on providers to provide carers with such training, support and information as appears necessary in the interests of the children placed with them. Fostering service providers' compliance with these Regulations and the National Minimum Standards is assessed by Ofsted as part of its inspections of fostering services.

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what average time local authorities took to interview and process an application form from (a) a couple and (b) an individual wishing to (i) foster and (ii) adopt in each of the last five years. [144431]

Mr. Dhanda: This information is not held centrally.

The Fostering Services Regulations 2002 set out in detail the requirements of the approval process for foster carers including the information that must be collected in the assessment and who must sit on the fostering panel. There are no prescribed time scales for the approval process; however, it is in the interests of the provider to conduct approvals efficiently, in order to place children into suitable homes.

The local authority adoption panel's recommendation about the suitability of a prospective adopter(s) to adopt a child should be made within eight months of the receipt of their formal application. The local authority's decision on whether the prospective adopter should be approved as suitable to adopt should be taken within seven working days of the adoption panel's recommendation. The prospective adopter should be informed orally of the local authority's decision within two working days and written confirmation should be sent to them within five working days.

The local authority should monitor its performance against these time scales and make this information available in its annual report.

Adoption: Foster Care

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps his Department is taking to minimise the disruption to the care provided to fostered children going through the court process for adoption. [145731]

Mr. Dhanda: The Ministry of Justice, through Her Majesty's Court Service, has lead responsibility for supporting the work of the judiciary in the family courts. These courts consider the cases of those children who become the subject of care proceedings brought under section 31 of the Children Act 1989, some of whom will be placed with foster parents while their cases are before the courts.

The Department works closely and collaboratively with the Ministry of Justice, in particular, through the Ministerial Steering Group on Care Proceedings, of which I am a member. Together, we are working to implement the recommendations of the 'Review of the Child Care Proceedings System in England and Wales', which are intended to reduce delay in the family courts and thus reduce the risk of disruption to the lives of children who are the subjects of such proceedings.

On 21 June, a revised 'Public Law Outline' was published for consultation by the President of the Family Division, Sir Mark Potter, who is also a member of the Ministerial Steering Group. This document, when implemented in April 2008, is intended to improve the case management of care proceedings cases brought by local authorities.

The White Paper 'Care Matters: Time for Change', also published on 21 June, sets out a range of measures aimed at increasing placement stability for children in foster care. As well as measures to improve the training of foster carers, the White Paper introduced a series of regional commissioning pilots in order to enable local authorities to recruit and retain sufficient foster carers in their local areas.

Apprentices: Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many 16 to 18-year-olds in West Lancashire (a) started an apprenticeship, (b) completed an apprenticeship and (c) found employment in the field of their apprenticeship in each of the last three years. [144821]

Phil Hope: The following table shows the number of apprenticeship starts for 16 to 18-year-olds in West Lancashire.

Success rates (the number of leavers who meet all of the requirements of their apprenticeship framework divided by the number of leavers who have either left training or successfully completed their programme) by age group and programme type are published in the Statistical First Release: "Further Education and work-based learning for young people—learner outcomes in England." Success rates for 16 to 18-year-olds are shown in the following table. These figures are not currently available at parliamentary constituency level.

Apprentices: Yorkshire and Humberside

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many 16 to 18-year-olds in

(a) Yorkshire and Humberside and (b) East Riding of Yorkshire (i) started an apprenticeship, (ii) completed an apprenticeship and (iii) found employment in the field of their apprenticeship in each of the last three years. [140382]

Apprenticeships

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many learners (a) participated in programme-led pathways and (b) participated in programme-led pathways and progressed to (i) a work-based learning programme and (ii) a further education programme in each year since the inception of the scheme. [131393]

Phil Hope [holding answer 16 April 2007]: Programme Led Pathways (PLPs) were introduced in 2004/05 for young people on courses of further education in colleges including study towards qualifications that form a mandatory part of an approved apprenticeship framework.

In 2004/05 the number of programme led pathways recorded was 40,510 (rounded to the nearest 10) or 18.7 per cent. of total starts.

PLPs were replaced by programme led apprenticeships (PLAs) in 2005/06. PLAs include those which would previously have been known as PLPs as well as apprenticeships, funded through the work based learning funding route, where the learners concerned are not yet employed. This change was made to provide a clear means to determine eligibility for education maintenance allowance (EMA). PLAs are not a substitute for employer led apprenticeships, which remain the preferred route for apprentices. They exist to enable young people who are not yet able to start an apprenticeship to study those elements of an apprenticeship that are able to be achieved outside an employed situation.

In 2005/06, using the criteria for PLAs under EMA, data from the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) show 24,580 (rounded to the nearest 10) learners starting a programme led apprenticeship—12.3 per cent. of total starts on apprenticeships.

Information on learners who participated in programme-led pathways and progressed to (i) a work-based learning programme and (ii) a further education programme is not readily available. To calculate the volumes progressing to mainstream provision would require a significant resource in terms of analyst time and that information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Assessments: Romford

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students took A2 level examinations in Romford in each year since 1997; and how many passed with grades A to C. [134545]

Jim Knight: The information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Bookstart Scheme

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) when the extension of the Bookstart scheme announced in the 2006 pre-Budget report to deliver books to five and 11-year-olds is planned to come into effect; [145446]

(2) how much more his Department expects to contribute to the Bookstart scheme via the Booktrust charity to fund the extension of the scheme to deliver books to five and 11-year-olds. [145447]

Beverley Hughes: Bookstart, which delivers free packs to babies and children aged between 6-9 months, 18 months and 3 years, is not being extended. However, the Department is funding two new free book offers—Booktime and Booked Up. Booktime, the free book scheme for every 5-year-old, will be delivered in the autumn term 2007. Booktime aims to involve parents and carers in their child's reading and promote reading for pleasure. The free book, carefully selected by a panel of experts will be 'FunnyBones' by Allan and Janet Ahlberg.

Booked Up is the free book scheme for every 11-year-old and this will also be delivered in the autumn term 2007. Every child will be able to choose a free book from a choice of 12 titles, selected to encompass a wide range of reading abilities and interests. Booked Up aims to encourage independent reading and personal choice of material as well as reading for pleasure.

Booktrust is administering both Booktime and Booked Up and the Department is funding the organisation £4 million to deliver both offers.

Building Schools for the Future Programme: Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of the total contract value PFI credits are normally expected to cover in cases where local authorities are allocated Private Finance Initiative credits for Building Schools for the Future contracts. [144532]

Jim Knight: PFI is the preferred route for funding new build projects within the Building Schools for the Future (BSF) programme. Through work with Pathfinder and Wave 1 local authorities the level of PFI credits has been set at a rate whereby authorities may be expected to provide an additional contribution to their PFI projects, which DFES expects to be affordable. Each BSF project is unique and some local authorities seek to include elements/services outside of the scope of what DFES will fund for BSF. As a result, the contribution made by individual local authorities varies by project and the proportion of the total contract value which is expected to be funded through PFI credits will vary.

Children: Protection

Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what mechanisms his Department has in place to ensure that (a) local authorities and (b) children's trusts ensure that calls to report child protection concerns are referred on to the appropriate agency with the appropriate level of urgency; [144384]

(2) what statutory time limits are in place within which a (a) local authority and (b) children's trust must respond to a call reporting child protection concerns from (i) a member of the public, (ii) schools, (iii) the police and (iv) other local authority child protection agencies; [144385]

(3) what measures are in place to ensure that local authorities record the number of calls to children's services to report child protection concerns. [144387]

Mr. Dhanda [holding answers 21 June 2007]: All organisations that work with children share a commitment to safeguard and promote their welfare, and for many organisations that is underpinned by a statutory duty or duties. Local authorities that are children's services authorities have a number of specific duties to organise and plan services and to safeguard and promote the welfare of children. Children's trusts are local area partnership arrangements, underpinned by the Children Act 2004 duty to cooperate, for bringing together key agencies which deliver services for children, young people and their families.

Section 11 of the Children Act 2004 places a duty on key people and bodies to make arrangements to ensure that their functions are discharged with regard to the need to safeguard and promote the welfare of children. The application of this duty will vary according to the nature of each agency and its functions.

Councils with local authority children's social services functions have particular responsibilities towards all children whose health or development may be impaired without the provision of services, or who are disabled (defined in the Children Act 1989 as children 'in need'). They should agree, with LSCB partners, criteria with local services and professionals as to when it is appropriate to make a referral to local authority children's social care in respect of a child in need. They should also agree the format for making a referral and sharing the information recorded.

Professionals who phone local authority children's social care should confirm referrals in writing within 48 hours. The Common Assessment Framework provides a structure for the written referral. At the end of any discussion or dialogue about a child, the referrer (whether a professional or a member of the public or family) and local authority children's social care should be clear about proposed action, timescales and who will be taking it, or that no further action will be taken. The decision should be recorded by local authority children's social care and by the referrer (if a professional in another service). Local authority children's social care should acknowledge a written referral within one working day of receiving it. If the referrer has not received an acknowledgement within three working days, they should contact the local authority children's social care again.

Local authority children's social care should decide and record next steps of action within one working day. This information should be consistent with the information set out in the Referral and Information Record (Department of Health, 2002). This decision should normally follow discussion with any referring professional/service and consideration of information held in any existing records, and involve discussion with other professionals and services as necessary (including the police, where a criminal offence may have been committed against a child). This initial consideration of the case should address—on the basis of the available evidence—whether there are concerns about the child's health and development or actual and/or potential harm that justifies and initial assessment to establish whether this child is possibly a child in need. Further action may also include referral to other agencies, the provision of advice or information, or no further action.

All child protection conferences, both initial and review, should have a dedicated person to take notes and produce a record of the meeting. The record of the conference is a crucial working document for all relevant professionals and the family. Cases where s47 inquiries do not result in the substantiation of referral concerns should be retained in accordance with agency retention policies. These policies should ensure that records are stored safely and can be retrieved promptly and efficiently.

Children: Work Permits

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 19 June 2007, Official Report, column 1701W, on children: work permits, when he proposes to issue guidance on child employment; and what steps he is taking to consult key stakeholders. [145350]

Mr. Dhanda: Government guidance on child employment will be issued within the next year. All key stakeholders will be invited to comment on the scope and content of the guidance, and to play an active part in its preparation.

City Academies: Private Sector

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what rights private sector sponsoring companies have to hire and fire staff in state city academies. [141026]

Jim Knight [holding answer 7 June 2007]: Staff in Academies are not employed by private sector sponsoring companies but by the Academy governing body. The Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations (TUPE) apply when a school closes and becomes an Academy, and general employment law applies to all open Academies.

Class Sizes

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average teacher-pupil ratio was in (a) mainstream primary, (b) mainstream secondary and (c) special needs schools in each local authority area in each of the last 10 years. [141232]

Jim Knight: The table which has been placed in the House Libraries shows the pupil to teacher ratio in maintained primary, secondary and special schools in each local authority in England, January 1997 to 2006.

Curriculum: Expenditure

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) pursuant to the answer of 5 March 2007, Official Report, column 1702, on curriculum: expenditure, whether the £3 billion allocated to the delivery of free nursery education for three and four-year-olds is additional to the £3 billion allocated to local authorities through the General Sure Start Grant; and what the timetable is for the allocation of such funding; [144991]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 2 February 2007, Official Report, column 983, on nursery services, whether the further £3 billion per year allocated by his Department to children's centres has been transferred to local authorities; on what basis it is distributed to individual authorities; what mechanisms are in place to analyse the spending of this funding; and for what period this annual spending has been committed. [144992]

Beverley Hughes: The funding of around £3 billion a year for delivery of the free entitlement to nursery education for 3 and 4-year-olds is provided to local authorities through the Dedicated Schools Grant (DSG) and is additional to the £3 billion of funding allocated to local authorities through the General Sure Start Grant (GSSG) for the period 2006-08.

The school funding settlement for 2006-08 announced in December 2005 set out individual local authority allocations of DSG for 2006-07 and 2007-08 subject to finalisation in light of actual pupil numbers. Distribution of DSG funding to schools and other providers is up to each individual LA in consultation with their School Forum.

GSSG allocations for the 2006-08 period were announced to local authorities by letter on 5 December 2005. Transformation Fund allocations (part of the GSSG) and additional funding for children's centres were announced by letter on 13 February 2006.

GSSG includes funding for Sure Start Children's Centres, extended schools, inclusion, workforce development, child care affordability and sustainability initiatives, and the implementation of the new duties in the Childcare Act. Local authorities have the freedom to decide how much is spent on each of these areas within the Main Revenue and Main Capital elements of GSSG.

The distribution methodology takes account of factors including numbers of children, areas of disadvantage and rurality.

Local authorities are required to report actual expenditure, for each of the blocks within the GSSG, at the end of quarters 2 and 3 of each financial year. Within one month of the year end, authorities are required to provide a more detailed breakdown of actual expenditure (including that for Sure Start Children's Centres) for the year.

The Department received its CSR settlement for 2008-11 in the 2007 Budget. Announcements about specific allocations will be made over the coming months.

Degrees

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of (a) women and (b) men of (i) white, (ii) Afro-Caribbean and (iii) Asian ethnicity received (A) first class, (B) upper second class and (C) lower second class degrees in English universities in the last five years for which figures are available. [145395]

Bill Rammell: The available information is given in the tables. Figures for 2006/07 will be available in January 2008.

The Department undertook analysis to find out whether ethnicity, after controlling for other factors, still had predictive power in explaining degree attainment. The 'Ethnicity and Degree Attainment' report, published in January 2007, concluded that much of the attainment gap between students from minority ethnic communities and their White peers could be explained by factors other than ethnicity (e.g. gender, prior attainment, disability, deprivation, subject, term-time accommodation, and age). However, even after controlling for these other factors, coming from a minority ethnic community was still found to have a statistically significant and negative effect on degree attainment. The research also showed that women are more likely to obtain a higher degree classification than men, except when it comes to attaining a first.

These findings do not automatically imply that there is some form of ethnic or gender bias within the HE system, and there are a number of other reasons which could explain the results obtained.

The Government are committed to ensuring that people from all backgrounds and all sections of society have the opportunity to benefit from the thrive in higher education. That is why we undertook this research and why we have asked the Higher Education Academy and Equality Challenge Unit to work with Higher Education Institutions, to investigate these results further. This work is supported by Universities UK and GuildHE and will build upon existing good practice. We have to ensure that every student regardless of race or sex is given equal opportunity to succeed within Higher Education. The full report can be accessed here:

Departments: Aviation

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many flights to overseas destinations were taken by (a) civil servants and (b) Ministers in his Department in each of the last three calendar years; and what the total cost of such flights was. [144930]

Bill Rammell: Since 1999 the Government have published, on an annual basis, the total costs of all ministerial overseas travel and a list of all visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500. This information is available in the Library of the House. Information for the financial year 2006-07 is currently being compiled and will be published before the summer recess. All travel is undertaken in accordance with the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers.

Information requested on overseas travel undertaken by civil servants across the whole Department is not held centrally and could be provided only by incurring disproportionate cost.

Departments: Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was spent by staff in his Department via departmental (a) credit, (b) procurement and (c) fuel cards in each of the last three years. [145291]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department for Education and Skills spent the following amounts via departmental credit, procurement and fuel cards in each of the last three years.

	Amount (£)

Departments: Delivery Unit

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 117W, on Departments: Delivery Unit, (1) what factors were taken into account in deciding to carry out a joint review of the Building Schools for the Future programme; [144459]

(2) if he will place in the Library copies of the terms of reference for the joint reviews of (a) Building Schools for the Future, (b) primary and secondary school standards, (c) pupil attendance and (d) pupil behaviour; [144461]

(3) what the findings were of the joint review of Building Schools for the Future. [144978]

Jim Knight: The reports and other associated documentation following joint PMDU reviews are confidential advice to Ministers and are not put into the public domain. This includes terms of reference and other documentation connected with the substance of the review.

Departments: Energy

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many energy saving lightbulbs were purchased by his Department for use on the departmental estate in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [144929]

Mr. Dhanda: This information is not held within the Department.

Departments: Foreign Relations

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many Memoranda of Understanding are in force as a result of agreements with foreign governments entered into by Ministers in his Department; and what executive actions each entails. [144472]

Mr. Dhanda: Ministers have signed a number of bilateral agreements, including some formal Memoranda of Understanding, with a number of countries, including Brazil, China, France and Germany. Most of these are typically based on collaboration in education and training, including the exchange of best policy practice, teacher and student mobility programmes and institutional partnerships. These are delivered largely, though not exclusively, through the British Council.

Departments: Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people in his Department have been allowed to work from home for part of the week in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on home working. [143885]

Mr. Dhanda: The information requested is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

I can however confirm that home working is available to all staff in the Department for Education and Skills and currently 50 per cent. of staff can access the Department's IT infrastructure from home.

Departments: Marketing

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which advertising and marketing campaigns were run by (a) his Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years; which external agencies were involved; and what the cost was of each campaign. [144625]

Mr. Dhanda: The information is as follows.

(a) The Department's central Advertising and Publicity Budget is used to fund a wide range of publicity activity, including advertising and marketing campaigns. Expenditure from this budget in the last five years is as follows:

	£000
2002-03	14,091
2003-04	16,943
2004-05	12,489
2005-06	9,391
2006-07	10,686

In addition to expenditure from this central budget, individual departmental programme budgets are often used to fund marketing activity, including advertising. It is not possible, except at disproportionate cost, to separately identify all this activity. However, it is possible to itemise all the Department's spend on advertising, as this is centrally placed through the Central Office of Information. This is as follows:

[1] Includes spend on advertising from within the central Advertising and Publicity Budget, included in the previous table.

The Department uses advertising as part of information campaigns to inform the public about how our policies affect them and how they can best take advantage of the educational and learning opportunities available to them. All of our campaigns follow the guidelines on propriety and value for money which apply to Government information.

All of our advertising is commissioned through the Central Office of Information.

(b) Spend on advertising and marketing by Departmental agencies and non-departmental public bodies is not held centrally.

Departments: Official Visits

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which destinations he visited in an official capacity between 17 May and 17 June. [144549]

Alan Johnson: During the dates specified, I visited the following places in the UK in an official capacity.

Since 1999 the Government have published, on an annual basis, the total costs of all ministerial overseas travel and a list of all visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500. This information is available in the House Library. Information for the financial year 2006-07 is currently being compiled and will be published before the summer recess. All travel is undertaken in accordance with the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers.

Departments: Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the current rate of employer contribution is to each public sector pension scheme for which his Department has responsibility; what the revenue impact would be of capping the employer contribution to each such scheme at 14 per cent.; and if he will make a statement. [144298]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department's employer contribution for 2006-07 for each of the public sector pension schemes is as follows:

Classic	17,611,364.30
Classic Plus/Premium	7,105,237.09

The information requested on what the revenue impact would be of capping the employer contribution to each such scheme at 14 per cent. is not retained centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Public Participation

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many public consultations his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and what the cost was of each consultation. [145274]

Departments: Publicity

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was spent on advertising by (a) the Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years. [139521]

Alan Johnson: The amount spent on advertising in the last five years by the Department for Education and Skills is as follows;

	Amount (£ million)
2002-03	13.790
2003-04	20.170
2004-05	11.088
2005-06	7.939
2006-07	6.265

The Department uses advertising as part of information campaigns to inform the public about how our policies affect them and how they can best take advantage of the educational and learning opportunities available to them.

In 2006-07, these campaigns included:

Information for young people and their parents about the financial help available to students taking higher education courses;

Information for young people and their parents about drugs and their effects; and

Information about sex and relationships as part of a campaign to help reduce rates of teenage pregnancy.

Costs of advertising placed by the Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies are not held centrally.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was spent by his Department on advertising in the last 12 months. [145912]

Alan Johnson: In 2006-07, the Department spent £6.265 million on advertising.

The Department uses advertising as part of information campaigns to inform the public about how our policies affect them and how they can best take advantage of the educational and learning opportunities available to them.

In 2006-07, these campaigns included:

Information for young people and their parents about the financial help available to students taking higher education courses;

Information for young people and their parents about drugs and their effects; and

Information about sex and relationships as part of a campaign to help reduce rates of teenage pregnancy.

Departments: Recruitment

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much his Department and its agencies paid to recruitment consultants in each year since 1997. [140034]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department was established in June 2001. Some information is available for payments made by the Department as set out as follows. No information is collected centrally for payments of this type made by the Department's agencies.

In 2002/03 recruitment consultants used to fill departmental posts were paid £584,976. In 2003/04 the amount paid was £335,321. Information was not collected in the same form in 2004/05 and 2005/06. In 2006/07 the amount paid in respect of recruitment to senior civil service posts only (the information for 2002/03 and 2003/04 relates to posts of all grades including SCS) in the Department was £354,144. Payments for the financial years 2004/05 and 2005/06, and the total payment for 2006/07 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Remploy

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what (a) services and (b) products his Department has procured from Remploy in the last 12 months; and at what cost. [143797]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department for Education and Skills has not procured services, products or made any payments to Remploy in the last 12 months.

Departments: Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many staff surveys his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and at what total cost. [145257]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department for Education and Skills has undertaken one full staff survey in the last 12 months—in May 2007. The spend to date for this survey is £25,000. As the survey has only recently been completed there is an anticipated further expenditure of approximately £10,000 for data analysis and reporting.

Education: Sustainable Development

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what progress has been made on the European strategy for education for sustainable development. [144249]

Bill Rammell: In 2005, members of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe (UNECE) adopted a regional strategy for education for sustainable development. The objective of the strategy is to incorporate key themes of sustainable development in all education systems, including poverty alleviation, democracy, justice, human rights, environmental protection, and natural resource management. The Department adopted the UNECE SD strategy and this is reflected in "Learning for the Future"—the DfES Sustainable Development Action Plan published in March 2006. UNECE is currently preparing an initial progress report on the implementation of the European strategy, and this will be presented at Sixth Ministerial Conference on "Environment for Europe" in Belgrade in October.

Foster Care

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research his Department has evaluated on the reasons for breakdown of (a) foster family units and (b) families with an adopted child or children. [144470]

Mr. Dhanda: As part of its Adoption Research Initiative, the Department for Education and Skills (DFES) is currently funding research into 'The characteristics, outcomes and meanings of four types of permanent placement'. This research is investigating the outcomes of placements for children, including the reasons for placement breakdowns. Its aim is to compare four types of permanent placement for looked after children: carer adoption, stranger adoption, long-term foster care and Special Guardianship. This work, which is being conducted by York University's Social Work Research and Development Unit, builds upon a recently completed DFES-funded study also undertaken by York University, which also includes a detailed analysis of the breakdown of placements. The current study is due to report to the Department in September 2008.

Free School Meals: City Academies

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average percentage is of the pupil intake in receipt of free school meals in each (a) city technology college (CTC), (b) academy CTC, (c) academy and (d) category of specialist school. [141577]

Jim Knight [holding answer 19 June 2007]: The information requested is shown in the tables.

Two sets of figures relating to the number and proportion of pupils known to be eligible for free school meals are given in the school level table. The first includes all pupils in the school, regardless of their age. The second includes full time pupils aged up to (and including) 15 and part time pupils aged 5 to 15 (inclusive). This second coverage is as used in the Achievement and Attainment Tables and Ofsted's PANDA reports and provides consistent school level comparisons.

Further Education: Finance

Stephen Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the cost was of learner support funds for 16 to 18-year-olds in (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2006-07; and what the cost is expected to be in 2007-08. [131577]

Jim Knight: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council, who operate learner support schemes for 16 to 19-year-olds on behalf of the DfES and hold information on the costs involved in the schemes. Mark Haysom, the Council's chief executive, has written to the hon. Member with the information requested and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 23 June 2007:

I am writing in response to your recent Parliamentary Question that asked, "What the cost was of Learner Support Funds for 16 to 18 year olds in (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2006-07; and what the cost is expected to be in 2007-08".

The amount of Discretionary Learner Support Fund used to support students aged 16-18 (16-18 Hardship, School Sixth Forms Hardship and 16-18 Residential Bursaries) is as follows:

2005-06 £40.6m (Actual Spend; 2005-06 Annual Accounts)

2006-07 £23.8m (Provisional Outturn)

The over all Discretionary Learner Support Fund budget is available to support learners in both the 16-18 and 19 and over age groups. There is a high degree of flexibility in the budget and we are at an early stage in the year. We would not anticipate establishing the expected spend on discretionary LSF for learners aged 16-18 in 2007-08 until after the start of the academic year 2007/08.

I hope that you find that this information answers your question.

GCSE: Languages

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students in Edmonton have taken GCSEs in modern languages in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [139797]

Jim Knight: The information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

GCSE: Standards

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what proportion of pupils in maintained mainstream schools did not achieve (a) five A* to C grades at GCSE including English and mathematics, (b) five A* to G grades at GCSE, (c) any grade above a D at GCSE and (d) any GCSEs in the last school year, broken down by (i) gender (ii) ethnicity and (iii) receipt of free school meals. [133241]

Jim Knight: Information about the achievement of five grades A* to C at GCSE including English and maths pupils and the achievement of any qualifications by gender, ethnicity and eligibility for free school meals is available in the Library. It is also available at:

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000693/index.shtml

The other information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills in how many maintained mainstream schools less than (a) 50 per cent., (b) 30 per cent., (c) 25 per cent. and (d) 10 per cent. of pupils achieved five A* to C grades at GCSE including English, maths and science at GCSE in the last school year for which figures are available. [133245]

Jim Knight: The information can be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, figures for all maintained schools can be found in the House of Commons Library in the reply to PQ 133245.

Information on the achievements of pupils in schools can be found in the achievement and attainment tables and published statistics which are available in the Library, and on the Department's website at http://www.dfes.gov.uk/performancetables/ and http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000702/index.shtml

General Certificate of Secondary Education

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of pupils achieved five or more GCSE passes at GCSE including (a) English and mathematics, (b) English, mathematics and science and (c) English, mathematics, science and a foreign language, broken down by (i) local authority, (ii) parliamentary constituency and (iii) local government ward. [134794]

Jim Knight: Information at local authority level is available in the Library. It is also published on the Department's website at

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000702/index.shtml

Information for parliamentary constituencies and wards can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils were entered for each (a) GCSE and (b) GNVQ subject in each academy in each of the last two years; and what grades were achieved in each category. [141946]

Jim Knight: In 2006, 3,539 pupils at the end of Key Stage 4 attended academies in England, an increase of 1,481 since 2005. The following table shows the GCSE attempts and achievements of pupils in academies in 2006 by subject.

Equivalent figures for each individual academy can be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Higher Education: Admissions

Stephen Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students went to university from a (a) state comprehensive school, (b) state grammar school, (c) state secondary modern school, (d) other state secondary school, (e) further education college, (f) state sixth form college and (g) independent school or college in each of the last four years for which figures are available. [145891]

Bill Rammell: The latest available information is shown in the table. The figures are taken from data collected by the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) which are limited to students who apply to full-time undergraduate courses via the UCAS application system. The figures do not therefore cover part-time students, nor those full-time students who apply directly to Higher Education Institutions.

Higher Education: Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students from West Lancashire were allocated a university place in each year since 1997. [144820]

Bill Rammell: The latest available information is shown in the table. Figures for 2006/07 will be available in January 2008.

The figures are based on students enrolled at 1 December in each year because these are the only figures available on a comparable basis in each year since 1997.

Languages: China

Stephen Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many higher education institutions have offered degrees in Chinese; and what the total number of students in each of the last 10 years has been. [145886]

Bill Rammell: The latest information available from the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) website shows that there are 23 higher education institutions in the United Kingdom offering courses in Chinese studies for the 2007 year of entry. UCAS only hold data on full-time undergraduate courses.

The latest information on the number of students enrolled on courses coded as Chinese studies is shown in the following table. Comparable figures for 2006-07 will be available in January 2008.

[1] The figures stated for those studying Chinese courses is likely to be an undercount. Some institutions which offer Chinese courses do so as part of a wider foreign languages course and the detail of the individual languages studied are not recorded on the HESA student record.
[2] In 2002/03 the coding frame and the method of recording subject of study was changed. The Joint Academic Classification Scheme (JACS) was introduced which although similar to the previous coding frame, is not directly comparable. Additionally, figures are on a full person equivalent basis whereby a student is apportioned between each of their subjects of study.

Figures are on a snapshot basis as at 1 December and are rounded to the nearest five.

Stephen Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much (a) his Department and (b) the Higher Education Funding Council for England has allocated to universities for the teaching of Chinese in each of the last four years for which figures are available. [145887]

Bill Rammell: We have increased funding for Higher Education by over 20 per cent. in real terms since we took office and now spend over £10 billion a year. However, the vast majority of funding is not ringfenced by either my Department or HEFCE for particular subjects but is demand led and allocated on the basis of student numbers. On that basis, about £3 million each year is made available to support students studying Chinese language and linguistics. However, we have consistently recognised that Chinese is an important subject and HEFCE has allocated an additional £1 million a year as special funding to support Chinese between 1999-2000 and 2003-04 as a special initiative for Chinese studies to ensure that we maintain capacity in this subject.

Literacy: Standards

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills in how many maintained mainstream schools (a) less than 50 per cent. of pupils, (b) less than 40 per cent. of pupils, (c) less than 30 per cent. of pupils and (d) less than 25 per cent. of pupils do not achieve the expected level in English at key stage 3. [133651]

Jim Knight: The information requested can be derived from the achievement and attainment tables which are available in the Library.

Mandarin: General Certificate of Secondary Education

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the (a) availability and (b) take-up was of GCSE Mandarin in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [138321]

Jim Knight: The information requested for part (a) is not held centrally. The information to part (b) is available only at a disproportionate cost.

Mothers: Finance

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much of the Learning and Skills Council £4 million budget for young mothers to be available from 1 April 2007 has been allocated to the Wirral. [138439]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 22 May 2007]: The Learning and Skills Council has made £4 million available nationally, in the financial year 2007-08 to support a range of programmes for young parents and young parents to be. A total of £124,688 has been allocated to the Merseyside area. This has not been further allocated to local authority level.

Nurseries: Non-domestic Rates

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will estimate the amount that private, voluntary and independent nurseries in England pay in (a) business rates, (b) VAT and (c) Ofsted inspection fees per year. [138621]

Beverley Hughes: The information is not available in the form requested.

Nursery Schools: Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many nursery school places were available in West Lancashire in (a) 1996-97 and (b) 2006-07. [144825]

Beverley Hughes: The available information is shown in the tables.

Table 1 provides information about the part-time equivalent number of free early education places filled by three and four-year-olds in West Lancashire parliamentary constituency area. Data are provided for 2006 only because data are not available at constituency level for 1997.

The latest figures on early education places for three and four-year-olds in England were published in Statistical First Release (SFR) 19/2007 "Provision for children under five years of age in England: January 2007", available on my Department's website at www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/.

Nursery Schools: Standards

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether he has undertaken an assessment of the impact of regulations applying to the provision of nursery education which have been introduced since 2001; and if he will make a statement. [145305]

Beverley Hughes: Successive Codes of Practice on the free early education entitlement for three and four-year-olds have had a substantial impact on the lives of our youngest children. 96 per cent. of three and four-year-olds now take up at least some early education, with the substantial developmental benefits that provides.

We consulted widely on the 2006 Code of Practice—with the responses showing both support for the free entitlement and for its extension to 38 weeks. We adjusted our proposals in response to comments about aspects of the extension which some nursery providers would have found difficult to meet.

Part-Time Education: North East Region

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many part-time students registered for higher education courses at (a) Newcastle College, (b) Northumbria University and (c) Newcastle University in each year from 1997 to 2005. [145036]

Bill Rammell: The number of students enrolled on part-time higher education courses for each year since 1997/98 is given in the table.

Pathways to Work

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the costs of the Pathways study have been to date; what further expenditure on the study is planned; and how many staff in his Department are working on the study. [145720]

Jim Knight: There are two current studies funded by the Department which are looking at aspects of pathways. These are:

1. Predicting Adult Life Outcomes from earlier signals: Modelling pathways through childhood. The total cost of this project is £20,450. No further expenditure is planned.

2. Adoption initiative: Pathways to permanence for children of Black, Asian and Mixed parentage: Dilemmas, Decision Making and Outcomes. The total cost of this is £341,952. No further expenditure is planned.

Both these projects have been contracted to external academic research bodies. One member of staff is involved in managing these external projects.

Pre-school Education: Finance

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 17 May 2007, Official Report, columns 856-8W, on pre-school education: finance, how much funding each local authority provided to nursery providers in each of the last two years. [140659]

Beverley Hughes: The information requested is not collected centrally. Local authorities—in consultation with their School Forums—are responsible for deciding how best to apply their total school and early years funding across all age groups and between different types of provider, based on an assessment of local circumstances. It is a matter for each local authority to determine the levels of funding for providers in their area. The Schools, Early Years and 14-16 Funding consultation which closed on 1 June set out a number of proposals for changes to the way the early years funding system operates. Ministers expect to announce final decisions over the summer, in the light of responses to the consultation.

Primary Education: Voluntary Work

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what schemes exist for unpaid volunteers or other unpaid helpers to provide support or one-to-one help in primary schools. [144531]

Jim Knight: We encourage schools to draw on the services of parents and other volunteers through strong links with parents, the local community and others. We know that schools receive a vast amount of help through parents giving up their time. We do not collect data from schools about this sort of activity. The specific schemes or organisations which we support are:

Volunteer Reading Help, a charity which places trained volunteers in primary schools to help young disadvantaged children with reading.

The Workers Educational Association (WEA) makes a valuable contribution to training parents who left school with few or no qualifications as classroom volunteers.

The National Literacy Trust (which delivers the National Reading Campaign) provides a list of voluntary organisations who work with schools.

Private Education: Charities

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will place in the Library a copy of his submission to the Charity Commission on review of public benefit concerning independent schools. [145140]

Jim Knight: The Charity Commission will be publishing a summary of responses to their public consultation on draft public benefit guidance later this year. We will place a copy of DfES's response in the House Library when the consultation response is published.

Private Finance Initiative: Finance

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the value is of the unitary payments of each private finance initiative scheme overseen by his Department over the lifetime of the contract expressed in 2007-08 prices and discounted to present value. [145870]

Jim Knight: Information on schools private finance initiative contracts, including balance sheet treatment and unitary charges, is included in HM Treasury's PFI Signed Projects List, which is available through:

www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/documents/public_private_partnerships/ppp_pfi_stats

This is a working document containing information on current signed PFI projects. It is updated on a 6-monthly basis to reflect the updates HM Treasury receives from Departments at Budget and pre-Budget report.

Pupils: Hay Fever

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the merits of changing the timings of (a) GCSE and (b) A-level examinations, with particular reference to the effect on seasonal allergic rhinitis sufferers. [145431]

Jim Knight: It is the responsibility of an independent body, the Joint Council for Qualifications (JCQ), to timetable GCSE and A-level examinations on behalf of the awarding bodies. The JCQ seeks to take into account a range of different conditions and circumstances which can affect performance in examinations. Under present arrangements, candidates who suffer from hay fever on the day of an examination may apply via their examination centre for "special consideration", which can result in an increase in their marks by up to 2 per cent., depending on the circumstances.

Pupils: Hyperactivity

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what steps he has taken to provide students affected by attention deficit hyperactivity disorder with an education programme which meets their particular needs; [144246]

(2) what discussions he has had with ministerial colleagues in the Department of Health on research and best practices in the treatment of young people affected by attention deficit hyperactivity disorder. [144247]

Mr. Dhanda: Schools must have regard to the SEN Code of Practice (2001). The Code recognises four main areas of Special Educational Need (SEN). These include (i) cognition and learning (ii) behavioural, emotional and social development (iii) communication and interaction and (iv) sensory and/or physical needs. Pupils with a range of difficulties including attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) fall within the overall descriptor of BESD.

The monitoring of individual children's progress is set out in the Code through the graduated approach. This is a model of action and intervention in schools and early years education settings to help children who have SEN. The approach recognises that there is a continuum of special educational needs and that, where necessary, increasing specialist expertise should be brought to bear on the difficulties that a child may be experiencing. The graduated approach is applicable to the identification, assessment and provision for children and young people with BESD. Chapters 4, 5, 6 and 7 of the Code explain in detail this approach and the additional support that may be needed at School Action and School Action Plus.

Although research and best practice in the medical treatment of children with ADHD falls to the Department of Health (DH), Ministers from DfES and DH meet regularly to discuss how outcomes for the physical, mental and emotional health of children and young people can be improved.

Pupils: Injuries

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schoolchildren were injured whilst at work in England in each of the last four years. [145485]

Mrs. McGuire: I have been asked to reply.

For each of the years 2002 to 2006 HSE has received the following number of RIDDOR reports of accidents to persons aged 1-15 years, described as being an employee or trainee.

	Number
2002/03	17
2003/04	29
2004/05	23
2005/06	34
Total	103

For each of the years 2002 to 2006 HSE has received the following number of RIDDOR reports of accidents to persons aged 1-17 years, described as being on work experience.

	Number
2002/03	11
2003/04	33

	Number
2004/05	36
2005/06	42
Total	122

HSE is aware of the rising number of reportable incidents and is undertaking work to establish the possible causes for the increase before deciding on the appropriate action to take.

Qualifications

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what (a) mechanisms and (b) data are provided to employers for the purposes of checking the authenticity of academic qualifications claimed by job applicants. [145906]

Phil Hope: The National Database of Accredited Qualifications (www.accreditedqualifications.org.uk) is a free tool that any individual can use to check that a qualification is accredited by the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA). Only awarding bodies that have been recognised by QCA are able to submit qualifications for accreditation. Should an employer wish to check the authenticity of a certificate and qualification in respect of a specific individual, the usual process is to send a copy of the certificate to the issuing awarding body which will then confirm that the certificate was issued to the person named on the certificate and the name matches the certificate number.

As for HE qualifications, employers would be expected to check with the HE institution concerned.

Research: Israel

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many UK-Israel research collaborations are supported by (a) EU and (b) European Science Foundation funding; and what the value is of such funding. [144579]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

The European Commission is responsible for providing member states with data on the implementation of the Framework Programme. The Sixth Framework Programme (FP6) covered the years 2003 to 2007. The latest FP6 data provided by the European Commission cover all projects where a contract has been signed up to July 2006. The data provided by the Commission show that there were 262 signed contracts where there were participants from both the UK and Israel. These contracts have been awarded funding of €1.5 billion.

The European Science Foundation (ESF) UK member organisations are the seven Research Councils and the British Academy. ESF does not provide information on research collaborations to members; this is not part of their reporting procedures.

Schools: Crimes of Violence

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teachers and teaching assistants have been assaulted in each region of England in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [142144]

Jim Knight: The number of incidents of assaults towards staff in schools is not collected centrally.

From the academic year 2003/04, information is available on the reasons for pupil exclusions. These reasons include 'physical assault against an adult'.

Local authority level tables (including Government office region) showing the number of permanent and fixed period exclusions by reason are available in the House Library.

Schools: Ethnic Groups

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of ethnic minority pupils attend (a) Catholic schools, (b) Church of England schools, (c) maintained comprehensive schools without a religious character and (d) grammar schools in (i) Birmingham, (ii) Solihull, (iii) West Midlands and (iv) England. Schools: Internet

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the numbers of (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools who have installed Wi-Fi technology; what his policy is on the use of such equipment; and what research he has (i) commissioned and (ii) evaluated on the potential effects on the health of school children arising from the installation of this technology. [145062]

Jim Knight: Becta lead on this area for the Department and advise that in their ICT equipment in schools 2005 survey (published March 2006) of the 556 schools surveyed, 128 primary schools (41.03 per cent.) and 154 secondary schools (70.97 per cent.) made use of wireless networking.

Becta recommends that while secure wireless networks can complement an institution's wired network, they should not replace it. Advice and guidance for schools on wireless networking is available through their website.

Becta has been in contact with the Health Protection Agency (HPA)—the Government agency responsible for health and safety—to obtain the latest guidance on health issues relating to wireless technology. The HPA reports that there is no consistent evidence of health effects from RF exposures below guideline levels. Becta therefore believes that there is no reason why schools and others should not use wi-fi equipment to benefit from the flexibility these technologies can provide.

Schools: Standards

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what assessment he has made of the reliability of the formula used to calculate the contextual value added measure of a school's performance; and if he will make a statement; [143125]

(2) what discussions his Department has had with teaching unions on the calculation of the contextual valued added measure of schools' performance. [143127]

Jim Knight: The formula used to calculate the contextual value added (CVA) measures was developed over a number of years, initially taking advice from leading academics in the field and then refining the models through close consultation with schools, local authorities and teacher unions. All supported the introduction of CVA and we continue to maintain close links with schools, local authorities and their unions on the use of CVA and how the model might be further refined. Many of the changes made to the model through the development years were brought about thanks to the contribution of schools and their representative bodies.

This has produced a formula which estimates the contribution each school makes to its pupils' attainment, taking account of each pupil's starting point and a broad range of contextual factors which are shown to affect progress and for which consistent national data are available. The formula is widely accepted by schools as providing a fairer basis for comparison of schools than either raw statistics of attainment or un-contextualised value added.

The formula for each key stage is calculated each year based on the actual attainment of the entire national cohort of over half a million pupils, and has been found to be very stable year-on-year in terms of the effects of particular factors such as deprivation, which indicates its robustness. A paper produced by the DfES for the OECD Project on the Development of Value-Added Models in Education Systems discusses some of the more technical aspects of the model and addresses both the advantages and disadvantages of the chosen approach. This is available on the Department's Research and Statistics website.

Development work continues each year to refine the models, including implementing any necessary changes arising from the evaluation of each pilot and taking account of improved sources of data as they become available.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many new statements were issued for children with special educational needs of (a) primary and (b) secondary school age in each local authority area in each of the last 10 years; and what percentage of school age children they constituted in each case. [141223]

Mr. Dhanda: The information requested has been placed in the House Library.

Specialised Diplomas: Expenditure

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what total expenditure has been allocated by his Department to the development of the Diploma; and how much funding has been given to the sector skills councils to develop the Diploma content. [145872]

Phil Hope: Up to the end of the 2007-08 financial year, the Department has allocated £22.85 million towards the development of the new 14-19 Diploma qualifications. Of this figure, £14.425 million has been allocated specifically to sector skills councils to support the work of Diploma Development Partnerships across all 14 Diploma lines.

In addition, through existing delivery budgets, we have allocated a total of over £297 million up to the end of the 2007-08 financial year to support preparations for the delivery of Diplomas from September 2008.

St. Thomas of Canterbury School: Playing Fields

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) if he will place in the Library a copy of the agreement and consent given by his Department to St. Thomas of Canterbury School in Merrow, Guildford to sell part of its playing fields; [145892]

(2) what conditions were attached to the permission given by his Department to St. Thomas of Canterbury School in Merrow, Guildford to sell part of its playing fields; and whether any minimum (a) sale price and (b) capital value was specified. [145893]

Jim Knight: In May 2007 the governing body of St. Thomas of Canterbury Primary School received the Secretary of State's consent to dispose of part of its detached playing field. Approval was given on condition that the land was sold for a price of not less than £1.2 million and all of the sale proceeds were to be used to improve the school's remaining outdoor and indoor sports facilities. A further condition of approval was that a community user of the playing field subject to the application was guaranteed access to the school's remaining improved sports facilities. Officials are sending to the hon. Member a copy of the letter of consent.

Students: Fees and Charges

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the total receipts from university tuition fees in each year from 2008-09 to 2030-31; and if he will make a statement. [144123]

Bill Rammell: The expected receipts from university tuition fees were given in the November 2005 statement to the commons and repeated as follows. These were based on the income from UK and EU full-time undergraduate students studying at English Higher Education institutions; where we estimated that once all cohorts of students were paying variables fees, the total fee income would equate to £2,250 million in 2006-07 prices.

	£ million 2006-07 fee income[1]
Fee income from standard fee of £1,200	900
Additional fee income from variable fees[2]	1,350
Total	2,250

[1] Figures are rounded to the nearest £50 million and are in 2006-07 prices.
[2] Based on 91 per cent. of universities charging the full £3,000.

The latest estimates of tuition fee income for financial years 2008-09 to 2010-11 are shown in Figure 2 as follows, along with the proportion that is extra income from variable fees. Figures relate to fees paid by full-time UK and EU domiciled students studying in English institutions. These estimates differ slightly to those quoted in figure 1; mostly in that they are not steady-state (i.e. assume that there are still students in 2008/09 paying standard rather than variable fees) and relate to assumptions on average fees charged in later years.

Figure 2: Estimated tuition fee income in current prices (figures rounded to the nearest £100 million)[1,2,3,4]

		Fee income	£ million
	2008-09	2009-10	2010-11
Fee income from standard fee	1,100	1,200	1,200
Additional fee income from variable fees	1,300	1,600	1,800
Total	2,400	2,800	3,000

[1] All figures cover full-time undergraduates, but also PGCE students and part-time initial teacher training students.
[2] Tuition fee income from un-regulated fees (i.e. fees charged to overseas and part-time students) is not included.
[3] Figures are based on estimates of the relative proportion of new students paying variable fees; and continuing students paying fixed fees.
[4] The figures include over £300 million a year to be recycled as non-repayable bursaries for students.

Estimates beyond 2010-11 have not yet been produced.

Teachers: Mesothelioma

Natascha Engel: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many teachers have been diagnosed with mesothelioma in each of the last 10 years; [142289]

(2) if he will issue updated guidance for schools on treatment of asbestos in school buildings; [142290]

(3) if he will require all asbestos to be removed from school buildings during refurbishment projects undertaken as part of the Building Schools for the Future programme; [142291]

Jim Knight: The Department does not have or collect any data on teachers who are diagnosed with any specific medical condition. However numbers of deaths from mesothelioma and asbestosis are published annually by HSE's Epidemiology and Medical Statistics Unit. They have also published an analysis of deaths from these diseases, between 1980 and 2000, which identifies teaching as a profession.

We recently updated our Department's guidance on the management of asbestos in schools[1]. In addition, the HSE also recently updated its notice to governors, proprietors and head teachers of schools in England and Wales about the duty to manage the risk from asbestos in school buildings[2].

There is no requirement to remove asbestos from buildings during refurbishment. The Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations, as amended in 2004, do not require the automatic removal of Asbestos Containing Materials (ACM's). If the material is in good condition and will not be disturbed then it does not pose a health risk and it is usually safer to leave it in place and manage it. If the material is damaged or is likely to be disturbed and it cannot be repaired or protected, it should be removed.

Anybody undertaking any sort of work on ACM's must be competent and adequately trained. Licensed contractors must be used for most work with asbestos insulation, asbestos insulating board and asbestos coatings.

Teachers: Pay

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average salary of teachers in Blackpool North and Fleetwood was in (a) 1997 and (b) the latest year for which figures are available. [143973]

Jim Knight: The information requested is not available at constituency level.

The following table shows the average salary of full-time regular qualified teachers employed in Lancashire local authority maintained schools and in England and Wales in March 1997 and 2005, the latest information available.

Average salaries of full-time regular qualified teachers employed in local authority maintained schools in Lancashire local authority and England and Wales, March 1997 and 2005[1]

Training: Coventry

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many workers in Coventry have received additional training under the Engineering Workforce Development scheme. [144026]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 21 June 2007]: I have been asked to reply.

Following extensive inquiries with a wide range of Coventry and Regional partners including Advantage West Midlands, the Coventry and Warwickshire Learning and Skills Council, Coventry and Warwickshire Connexions, Coventry City Council and the Coventry, Solihull and Warwickshire Partnership, it has not been possible to identify the Engineering Workforce Development scheme. If my hon. Friend wishes to write to me separately with more detail about the scheme, I will endeavour to provide the information requested.

Truancy

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills in how many schools more than (a) 20 per cent., (b) 30 per cent. and (c) 50 per cent. of pupils took unauthorised absence in the last school year for which figures are available. [133244]

Jim Knight: In 2006, 7,777 schools had more than 20 per cent. of their pupils take an unauthorised absence. 4,882 schools had more than 30 per cent. of pupils taken an unauthorised absence, while 1,716 schools had more than 50 per cent. of pupils take an unauthorised absence. These figures are from a total of 23,940 schools.

Unauthorised absence is absence without leave from a teacher or other authorised representative of the school. This includes all unexplained or unjustified absences, such as lateness, holidays during term time not authorised by the school, absence where reason is not yet established and truancy.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many unauthorised absences were recorded in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in Warrington in each year since 1997, broken down by type of institution. [134026]

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many unauthorised absences were recorded in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in West Lancashire constituency in each year since 1997, broken down by type of school. [143525]

Jim Knight: The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost. Information on absence for all parliamentary constituencies has been placed in the Library.

Information on absence in secondary schools, broken down by type of institution is available in the Library for the 2005/06 academic year. It is also available on the Department's website at:

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000718/index.shtml

Absence data for individual schools are available in the Library in the achievement and attainment tables. These are also available on the Department's website at:

Vocational Training

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what evidence he collects on the performance of Train to Gain brokers; and what assessment he has made of the satisfaction levels of those using such brokerage services. [142436]

Phil Hope: The Train to Gain broker service is managed and monitored by the LSC on an ongoing basis. Detailed operational information is not held centrally by the Department but is collected by the Learning and Skills Council (LSC); Mark Haysom the LSC's chief executive has written directly to the hon. Member and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 19 June 2007:

I have been asked by the Secretary of State for Education and Skills to respond to questions you posed regarding what evidence is collected on the performance of Train to Gain skills brokers, what assessment has been made of the satisfaction levels of those using such brokerage services, Level 3 Trials and any assessment that has been made in the North West.

Train to Gain: evidence collected on performance and satisfaction levels

The performance of Train to Gain skills brokers against set targets is monitored and reported on a monthly basis. Monthly management information evidence includes employer engagement, employer size, sector data; skills broker referral destinations; learner profile, and employer satisfaction with the service provided by skills brokers. Performance against these targets has been reported each month since April 2006 and the information is used to manage the skills brokerage contractors.

An independent survey of the skills brokerage service has been in place since the launch of Train to Gain in April 2006. The survey measures employers' satisfaction levels with the independence, impartiality and responsiveness of the skills brokerage service The current national satisfaction level with the service provided by skills brokerage organisations is 85.7%.

Train to Gain: Level 3 Trials

The Level 3 Trials have been running in the region since August 2006. In the first six months of operation the Trials did not perform well, with negligible learners on programme. As a consequence an early assessment of the Trials was carried out with providers within the region.

The assessment of the Trials resulted in the Department for Education and Skills and the Minister for Skills agreeing to allow the LSC to amend the policy. This has reduced policy conflicts that existed between mainstream Further Education and the Trials.

The LSC spent the early part of 2007 working with providers and Skills Brokers to both re-contract and communicate the policy changes. The changes are now implemented and the learner numbers in all Trial regions are increasing steadily month on month. Performance is still lower than we had anticipated but monitoring and further research is ongoing to ensure that issues relating to performance are understood.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people have (a) started and (b) completed the Train to Gain programme in each region of England since its inception; and what the targets are for each region. [145141]

Phil Hope: Train to Gain is an ongoing service and as such performance is updated on a regular basis. Detailed operational information is not held centrally by the Department but is collected by the Learning and Skills Council (LSC). Mark Haysom the LSC's Chief Executive will write directly to the hon. Member and a copy of his reply will be placed in the House Library.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the per capita cost is of each qualification gained under (a) the Train to Gain programme since its inception and (b) the Employer Training Pilot programme in each region of England. [145142]

Phil Hope: Train to Gain is a major new service that will raise skill levels and the quality of training across England. It commenced in the 20 Learning and Skills Council (LSC) areas covered by the former Employer Training Pilots (ETPs) from April 2006, and reached full coverage across England in August 2006. Full operational capacity will not be reached till the end of 2007-08 from which point we expect it to deliver 175,000 first full Level 2 achievements per year. As at the end of April 2007 over 40,000 employers had engaged with Train to Gain, 154,290 employees had commenced training and 32,800 learners had achieved a first full Level 2 qualification.

Train to Gain offers employers a holistic service. Independent and impartial skills brokers help employers understand and meet their business needs. In some cases this can mean directly helping the employer in upskilling their workforce to gain basic skills and a range of qualifications from basics skills, such as literacy and numeracy to higher education qualifications. Skills Brokers also help employers identify potential sources of public funding, but also any likely contribution from employers, including paid time off for the individual to undertake the training. If the business need goes much wider than LSC funded provision, the Skills Broker will refer the employer to other services such as Jobcentre Plus, Investors in People, and Business Link for more general business advice as well as business to business networks. To date, more than 12,000 such referrals have been made to non training destinations.

It is therefore not possible to calculate a per capita cost per qualification that takes account of this added value of the Train to Gain service. We will, however, continue to develop more accurate methods of determining the gross added value of the service as a whole.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the evidence is for increased employer investment in work force training arising from the Train to Gain programme. [145143]

Phil Hope: Train to Gain is a major new service that will raise skills levels and the quality of training across England. It commenced in 20 Learning and Skills Council (LSC) areas covered by the former employer training pilots (ETPs) from April 2006, and reached full coverage across England in August 2006. Full operational capacity will not be reached until the end of 2007-08. In its first year of operation, it has already engaged more than 40,000 employers with some 70 per cent. of those defined as hard to reach (i.e. not recognised as an Investors in People and no recorded investment in training).

Independent and impartial Skills Brokers work with the employers to identify how skills might help them meet their business goals, including increased productivity. The Skills Brokers also help the employer identify possible sources of public funding available, as well as identifying the need for employer investment, in both funding for training and in paid time off for employees to study for the relevant qualification. Train to Gain continues to be evaluated on an ongoing basis and we already know that 85 per cent. of employers are satisfied with the service they are receiving. While it is too early to measure at a national level, we already know of many employers at regional and local level who have realised the benefits of investing in the skills of their work force and have returned to their Skills Broker for additional advice and guidance.

Train to Gain was developed from the employer training pilots and a full evaluation of those pilots was published in 2006. One of the findings was that 71 per cent. were more convinced that training less skilled employees can benefit the business. A copy of the report has been placed in the House Library.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether he plans to review progress of employer delivery of the skills pledge in 2010 as outlined in the final report of the Leitch review of skills. [145144]

Phil Hope: The Skills Pledge is a voluntary, public commitment by the leadership of a company or organisation to support all its employees to develop their basic skills, including literacy and numeracy, and work towards relevant, valuable qualifications to at least level 2 (equivalent to five good GCSEs). For those employees who do not already have a full level 2 qualification, the Government will provide funding to help them gain basic literacy and numeracy skills as well as their first full level 2 qualification.

We remain committed to this voluntary approach. However, as recommended by Lord Leitch, in 2010 we will review whether progress on a voluntary basis is sufficient, or if we need to consider at that point whether to introduce a statutory entitlement to work force training in England.

Vocational Training: Expenditure

Stephen Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of the (a) Train to Gain, (b) 19+ FE and (c) 19+ work-based learning budget was spent on (i) first full Level 1, (ii) first full Level 2, (iii) first full Level 3 and (iv) spending outside these categories in the most recent year for which figures are available. [145426]

Phil Hope: We have increased public investment in further education by 48 per cent. in real terms between 1997-98 and 2005-06. Adult education funding will increase by 7 per cent. between 2005-06 and 2007-08, with funding for young people increasing by 13 per cent. over the same period. This means that overall in 2007-08, through the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) we will invest £11.2 billion, an increase of £716 million compared with 2006-07. This includes the significant investment in Train to Gain to ensure more employers are able to receive the training they need for employees. Train to Gain has yet to complete a first year. It started in April 2006, and reached full coverage across England in August 2006. Train to Gain full operational capacity will be reached at the end of 2007-08. The Train to Gain budget will grow by 62 per cent. to £460 million in 2007-08.

The Department does not hold information on publicly funded post-16 provision at levels requested. Mark Haysom, the Learning and Skills Council's chief executive will reply to the hon. Member with the requested information and will place a copy of his reply in the House Library.

Warrington Collegiate: Finance

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much (a) capital and (b) revenue funding was allocated to Warrington Collegiate in each year since 1997, broken down by funding stream category. [141158]

Bill Rammell: This Government are fully committed to developing a world leading FE system. In 1996-97, Government expenditure for FE capital was nil. In 2007-08, the Government plan to spend just under £500 million on FE capital. In a little over a decade, the total investment by this Government in the FE sector's buildings and facilities will be just over £2 billion.

We have increased revenue funding in further education by 48 per cent. in real terms between 1997-98 and 2005-06. In 2007-08, through the Learning and Skills Council (LSC), we will invest £11.2 billion, an increase of £716 million compared with 2006-07.

The LSC capital and revenue funding allocations to Warrington Collegiate for each year since 2001, when the LSC was established, are set out in Table 1. Information on allocations prior to 2001-02 is a matter for LSC and Mark Haysom, the LSC Chief Executive, will write to the hon. Member with this information and a copy of his reply will be placed in the House Library.

Young People: Death

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many fatalities there were of children aged (a) zero to four, (b) five to eight, (c) nine to 12 and (d) 13 to 16 years where the cause of death occurred in (i) the home, (ii) at school, (iii) in hospital, (iv) on a sports ground or similar space where sporting activities occur, (v) public parks and (vi) other places in each year since 1997. [144277]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 25 June 2007:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your four recent questions about deaths of children listed here:

How many deaths there have been following recorded injuries of children aged (a) 0 to four, (b) five to eight, (c) nine to 12 and (d) 13 to 16 years which have taken place (i) in the home, (ii) at school, (iii) in hospital, (iv) on a sports ground or other place where sporting activities occur, (v) in public parks and (vi) in other places in each year since 1997; (144259)

how many deaths there have been following recorded injuries of children aged (a) 0 to four, (b) five to eight, (c) nine to 12 and (d) 13 to 16 years in each year since 1997; (144262)

how many fatalities there were of children aged (a) zero to four, (b) five to eight, (c) nine to 12 and (d) 13 to 16 years in each year since 1997; (144278)

how many fatalities there were of children aged (a) zero to four, (b) five to eight, (c) nine to 12 and (d) 13 to 16 years where the cause of death occurred in (i) the home, (ii) at school, (iii) in hospital, (iv) on a sports ground or similar space where sporting activities occur, (v) public parks and (vi) other places in each year since 1997. (144277)

Not all of the information you requested exists. The Office for National Statistics does not collect information on recorded injuries but does collect data on all registered deaths, including those with an underlying cause of injury, categorised by coroner's verdict—accident, intentional self-harm, homicide, and injury of undetermined intent. Information on place of occurrence of death is collected at registration for all deaths.

However, information on place of occurrence of the cause of death (i.e. where the person was when they were injured or became ill) is only collected on coroner's certificates of cause of death after inquest for deaths from injury and poisoning with a verdict of accident (including misadventure). The coroner is asked to select one often pre-specified categories of 'place where the accident occurred'.

The place of accident is then coded by ONS according to the revision of the International Classification of Diseases in use at the time (Ninth Revision 'ICD-9' from 1979 to 2000, and Tenth Revision 'ICD-10' since 2001). 'Home' and 'place of sport or recreation', are specified categories in both revisions, but school and hospital are not. They are subsumed in much larger categories: both are in 'public building' in ICD-10, but hospital was classified in 'resident institution' in ICD-9. Place of occurrence of injury is not coded in the same way for deaths from transport accidents, but the vast majority of these are motor vehicle accidents, and for most the place of accident would be street or highway. We have shown transport accidents separately in attached tables.

The tables below show the number of deaths in children by age group for all deaths, and deaths with a coroner's verdict of accident by place of occurrence of accident, between 1997 and 2005 in England and Wales.

HEALTH

Social Care

15. Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will bring forward proposals on the future funding of social care. [145324]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Proposals to cover the period 2008-11 will be brought in as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review in the autumn. The Government recognise the need to address the longer-term funding issues, too, as identified in last year's pre-Budget report, but the timing has not yet been established.

NHS Trust Deficits

17. Mr. Mackay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the proportion of NHS trusts which will be in deficit at the end of 2007-08. [145326]

Andy Burnham: We have received financial plans for 2007-08 and these are now subject to final validation and sign-off with the national health service. At this stage, the figures are encouraging, with only around 6 per cent. of organisations forecasting a year end deficit, compared with 22 per cent. in 2006-07, as reported in our provisional outturn in the Department's NHS Financial Performance in Quarter Four 2006-07 report.

The NHS continues to build on the good financial health achieved in 2006-07, and enters 2007-08 in its strongest financial position for many years.

Access to NHS Treatment

18. Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of differences in access to NHS treatment in different parts of the country; and if she will make a statement. [145327]

Andy Burnham: It is for primary care trusts to assess local health needs and commission services to meet them. The Department supports primary care trusts by funding them on the basis of their assessment of their population's health needs. Waiting lists are at a record low and falling. Guidance produced by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence is promoting much more consistent access to cost-effective drugs and other specific interventions.

NHS Staff Morale

19. Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment she has made of staff morale in the NHS. [145328]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Healthcare Commission Annual Staff Survey measures a range of things that contribute to the level of staff morale such as job satisfaction and work-life balance. The 2006 survey results are being analysed with national health service trade union representatives in the National Social Partnership Forum.

Cottage Hospitals

20. Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the future of cottage hospitals. [145329]

Andy Burnham: The Government are committed to delivering more health services in community settings—community or cottage hospitals are key to this. We are making available £750 million capital funding for the development of community hospitals and services.

Smoking Ban

21. Mr. Slaughter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions her Department has had with public bodies on the introduction of the smoking ban in England. [145330]

Caroline Flint: The Department has had discussions with a wide range of stakeholders, both public and private, to support them to understand the requirements of the new smokefree law and to build compliance ahead of 1 July 2007. The Department has also provided support, advice and resources to local councils and port health authorities to assist with preparations for them to undertake their role as enforcement authorities for the new smokefree law.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much her Department has allocated to the advertising of the impending 1 July smoking ban in public places. [145766]

Caroline Flint: To ensure that businesses and members of the public across England are aware of the requirements of the new smokefree law and its implementation on 1 July, the Department is undertaking an extensive communications campaign. The budget for advertising smokefree legislation is £5.8 million.

Research undertaken in early June, almost a month before the law comes into effect, shows that awareness of the new law among the general public stands at 95 per cent. and spontaneous awareness of the implementation date is 83 per cent. Similar research with businesses shows that 96 per cent. are aware of the new law and 93 per cent. spontaneously state that 1 July is the day the law comes into effect. Also, 86 per cent. of businesses feel that enough information has been made available to help them prepare for the new law.

Community Hospital: Malvern

22. Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to make an announcement about a new community hospital in Malvern, Worcestershire. [145331]

Andy Burnham: NHS West Midlands and Worcestershire primary care trust are currently reviewing the continued applicability and robustness of the business case for a new community hospital in Malvern.

Midwives

24. Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of midwives needed to ensure delivery of the Government's policy in Maternity Matters. [145333]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The 2007-08 NHS Operating Framework requires local national health service organisations to undertake a review of their maternity services including an assessment of their work force capacity.

It is important that these decisions are made locally as they know their local needs best and can ensure that services are developed to meet these needs.

Carers

25. Mr. Malik: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance her Department has issued for the introduction of emergency respite care for carers in England. [145334]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Next month, we plan to issue guidance on the introduction of emergency short breaks to councils and £25 million will be made available to support implementation of the guidance from October 2007.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people (a) under and (b) over the age of 60 were registered as carers in (i) the Jarrow constituency, (ii) South Tyneside, (iii) the North East and (iv) England in each year since 1997. [146007]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Individuals are not registered as carers nationally. However, the 2001 census indicates that there are 5.2 million carers in England and Wales.

GP Appointments

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance she provides to GPs on whether more than one condition may be considered at each patient visit. [145332]

Andy Burnham: None. It is for general practitioners to apply their professional and clinical judgment when assessing patients who present.

Blood: CJD

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 14 June 2007 to question 142988, what the batch numbers were that were provided to NHS trusts, primary care trusts and to the UK Haemophilia Centre Doctors' Organisation. [145747]

Caroline Flint: Details of the implicated batch numbers were provided by the Health Protection Agency (HPA) to the United Kingdom Haemophilia Centre Doctors Organisation who wrote to all Haemophilia centre clinicians so that they could inform patients about their individual risk status. The HPA also provided the batch numbers to national health service trusts and primary care trusts for information.

Each patient was asked to indicate whether or not they wished to know if they had received an implicated batch, and informed according to their wishes. As some patients indicated through their clinicians that they do not wish to be informed, it would be inappropriate to publish full details of batch numbers.

Carbon Monoxide

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 30 November 2006, Official Report, column 911W to the hon. Member for Dudley North on carbon monoxide, how many of the deaths listed were caused by (a) domestic gas appliances and (b) other locations and types of appliances. [145799]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is as follows:

	Number of deaths	Caused by domestic gas (including appliances)	Other locations and types of appliances
1996	1,016	31	985
1997	840	28	812

[1] Provisional.

Community Health Services: Manpower

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) consultants and (b) other medically qualified personnel were practising in the public health medicine and community health services specialties in each year since 1997. [137274]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Hospital and community health services: medical and dental staff within the public health medicine and community health services group, England

Notes:
1. All other medical and dental staff includes qualified clinical staff at the following grades; associate specialist, staff grade, registrar group, senior house officer, house officer, F2, F1, hospital practitioner, clinical assistant, senior dental officer, dental officer, senior clinical medical officer, clinical medical officer, clinical director, assistant clinical direct, dental clinical director, dental assistant, clinical director, other (medical practitioners doing part-time work), other (salaried dental practitioner)
2. Some trusts and primary care trusts (PCT) have included health visitors, school nurses and other non-medically qualified staff in the public health medicine specialty prior to revised definitions being published by the Information Centre in 2005-06. Source:
The Information Centre for health and social care medical and dental workforce census.

The Public Health Medicine and Community Health Services Group includes the following specialties:

Dental public health;

Public health medicine;

Community health services dental; and Community health services medical.

There has been an increase in the number of consultants in public health working in the national health service of 85 (10 per cent.) between 1997 and 2006.

Over the same period the number of other public health staff numbers has decreased by 1,805 (57 per cent.). This is in part due to changes in the way the data are collected and coded. For example, health visitors, district nurses, general practitioners and other professionals, who are not formally coded as public health staff, perform public health tasks. There has been growth in many of these groups. There is also variation from trust to trust in which exact roles are classed as public health. In addition, the definition of the public health specialty has been more closely defined in recent years resulting in the exclusion of groups of staff such as health visitors and school nurses who some trusts and PCTs previously included as public health staff.

A public health workforce collection was conducted on 28 February 2007 which asked NHS to return information on their public health staff in post on that date. The Information Centre is currently analysing this data with a view to publication in the autumn.

Departments: Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent by staff in her Department via departmental (a) credit, (b) procurement and (c) fuel cards in each of the last three years. [145294]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department has spent the following on credit, procurement and fuel cards in the last three years:

	2004-05	2005-06	2006-07	£000 Total
Credit card	8	0	n/a	8
Procurement card	1,346	3,051	2,715	7,112
Fuel card	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a

The figures have been extracted from the Department's financial systems and from statements supplied by the bank provider.

Credit cards held by staff ceased to exist from May 2005. These were superseded with Government procurement cards (GPC). Unlike a consumer credit card, which offers consumers extended credit facilities, GPC cards were introduced to consolidate high-occurrence small value purchases, with procurement card invoices to be settled in full at the end of each billing period.

The Department has not held any fuel cards for the period in question.

Departments: Northern Ireland

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library a copy of the concordat governing the relationship between her Department and the Northern Ireland administration. [145938]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: "Devolution concordat on health and social care: UK Department of Health, Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales and Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety" was published in 2001. It governs relations between the Department and the Northern Ireland Assembly.

A copy of this Concordat is available in the Library.

Departments: Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff surveys her Department undertook in the last 12 months; and at what total cost. [145260]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In the last 12 months the Department has conducted one staff survey, in March 2007. Analysis of the results of the survey continues and therefore the final costs are not yet known. We anticipate it to cost similar to the survey in 2006 which cost £23,000.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library copies of her departmental employee surveys for (a) 2005, (b) 2006 and (c) 2007. [145628]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 18 June 2007, Official Report, column 1560W.

Domestic Violence: Victim Support Schemes

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funds are available to assist the victims of domestic violence to recover from their experiences. [144635]

Mr. Coaker: I have been asked to reply.

This year, the Ministry of Justice has committed £3 million to fund independent domestic violence advisers: trained specialists whose goal is to ensure the safety and recovery of victims of domestic violence.

The Home Office has allocated £2 million to fund the local delivery of support services for victims of domestic violence and their children, and just under £2 million has been made available to local areas for the development of multi-agency risk assessment conferences, which aim to ensure the safety of identified high risk victims, and help them recover from their experiences without fear of repeat victimisation.

Safe housing is integral to victims' recovery, and Support People funding is available to provide housing-related support for victims of domestic violence. In 2005-06, over £59 million was made available through this funding.

The Government also part funds a matrix of helplines which provide support and information to victims of domestic violence, to enable them to access assistance and support to help them recover from domestic violence.

In addition to this, health services have been making significant progress in the early identification of, and intervention with, victims of domestic violence—for example, rolling out making routine inquiries of all pregnant women, and taking forward work on collecting violent crime data (including domestic violence data) through electronic patient records.

Drugs: Guernsey

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will place a copy of the response from the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency to the recent consultation by the Bailiwick of Guernsey on its draft medicines legislation in the Library; and if she will make a statement on that response; [145993]

(2) if she will invite the Governments of Guernsey and Jersey to attend a meeting with the Health Food Manufacturers' Association to discuss issues relating to the trade in food supplements and unlicensed medicinal products. [145994]

Caroline Flint: The Food Standards Agency, Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) and Ministry of Justice have met with the Health Food Manufacturers' Association to discuss issues relating to the trade in food supplements and unlicensed medicinal products via the Channel Islands. Further information has been requested to assist in discussions with the island Governments. There are no plans to invite the governments of Guernsey and Jersey to a meeting with the Health Food Manufacturer's Association.

A copy of the MHRA's response to the consultation by the Bailiwick of Guernsey on its draft medicines legislation has been placed in the Library. The MHRA's response said that the proposed legislation did not implement the Medicines Directive, it offered assistance to the Bailiwick of Guernsey in implementing the directive and asked for the Bailiwicks proposed time scale.

General Practitioners

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Rayleigh (Mr. Francois) of 6 June 2007, Official Report, column 571W, on general practitioners, what process for managing discussions and negotiations was agreed by the NHS Confederation; what timetable was agreed; and which parties were involved. [144515]

Andy Burnham: This information is contained in news releases and regular updates issued by the NHS Confederation, relevant text copies have been placed in the Library.

The press notice dated July 2001 outlined the initial steps taken to develop the process and identified the need for urgent discussions. The subsequent updates set out the arrangements put in place.

Health Services: Armed Forces

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures have been taken to inform general practitioners of the particular (a) medical and (b) mental health needs of (i) former and (ii) serving armed forces' personnel; and whether she has a system for monitoring the effectiveness of such communications. [145957]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has embarked on a number of pilots, in partnership with the Ministry of Defence (MOD) and service charities, to improve access to mental health care for ex-servicemen. The health care of serving armed forces is the responsibility of the MOD.

Injuries: Cycling

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children who had suffered injuries while cycling were admitted into (a) accident and emergency units and (b) other hospital services in each of the last three years. [145489]

Caroline Flint: Data on children admitted to hospital as in-patients who had suffered injuries while cycling are shown in the table. Data are shown for all inpatient admissions and for inpatient admissions of those who initially attended accident and emergency (A&E) units. Data are not available centrally on children attending A&E units who are not subsequently admitted as in-patients.

Count of finished in year admission episodes for children aged 0-14 years suffering injuries while cycling shown by all admission methods and admission via A&E, 2003-04 to 2005-06, national health service hospitals, England

	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
Admission via A&E	5,162	5,216	5,214
Other admission methods	765	712	717
Total admissions	5,927	5,928	5,931

Notes:
1. Data are for International Classification of Diseases version 10 (ICD10) external cause codes V10 to V19, which relate to pedal cyclist injuries.
2. Admission via A&E covers the following admission methods: Emergency—via A&E services, including the casualty department of the provider; Emergency—other means, including patients who arrive via the A&E department of another healthcare provider.
3. A finished in-year admission is the first period of in-patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider, excluding admissions beginning before 1 April at the start of the data year. Please note that admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year.
4. Figures have not been adjusted for shortfalls in data (i.e. the data are ungrossed).

IVF

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in ensuring that primary care trusts follow the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence's guidelines on access to IVF treatment. [145757]

Caroline Flint: In welcoming the clinical guideline published by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) in 2004, we advised that the Department would be looking to primary care trusts (PCTs) who provided no in vitro fertilisation (IVF) treatment to meet a minimum level of one cycle of IVF by April 2005, and to make progress to the full implementation of the guideline in the longer term. This guideline is due to be reviewed in 2008.

The NICE clinical guideline has raised the profile of infertility within the national health service. However, the primary responsibility for implementing NICE guidelines, including the rate of implementation, rests with the NHS at local level. The consideration that PCTs give to this is part of the range of factors that they, in liaison with local health bodies and patient groups, take into account in deciding their policy on the provision of treatment services for their locality. This policy will reflect local health needs and priorities.

The Department is funding the patient support organisation Infertility Network UK to help PCTs share best practice and engage with fertility patients in the planning and prioritisation of fertility services.

Medical Records: Databases

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with the Welsh Assembly Government Health Minister on (a) plans to create an electronic care record for patients, (b) confidentiality matters arising from the proposed system and (c) the cost of implementation of the Choose and Book electronic referral system for GPs. [144984]

Caroline Flint: None. Health services in Wales, and the information technology used to support them, including the creation of electronic care records for Welsh patients, are matters for the Welsh Assembly Government. However, officials from the Department and NHS Connecting for Health work closely with officials from the Welsh Assembly Government and Informing Healthcare Wales on a range of matters of common concern.

Mental Health: Wales

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions she has had with the Welsh Health Minister on a mental health measure for Wales. [145605]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I have had a discussion with the Assembly Minister for Health and Social Services, and have received and replied to a letter from her regarding mental health measures for Wales in the last week.

Musculoskeletal Disorders

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department plans to audit progress in relation to the objectives established in the musculoskeletal services framework. [145848]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department will not directly audit progress in relation to the objectives established in the musculoskeletal services framework (MSF) as the purpose of this document is best practice guidance. It is up to local health systems to decide which changes to implement in order to meet the objectives set out in the MSF.

NHS: Non-geographic Numbers

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer to question 138605, whether national health service organisations using 09 or 087 numbers established before April 2005 are still able to use them. [144976]

Andy Burnham: Regulations came into force in April 2005 which prevented national health service dentists, NHS opticians, general practitioner practices and out of hours providers from establishing new premium rate telephone numbers for patients seeking to contact services. Existing numbers were not affected. Ministers decided not to issue directions to enforce a migration of existing numbers to low-cost alternatives such as 0844 or 0845 in the light of Ofcom's decision to review its numbering system. Ofcom has now created a new country-wide number range 03 for public and not for profit bodies, which are charged to the consumer at the local rate, and has now started allocating numbers using the 03 prefix.

The Department expects decisions on telephone numbers in primary care to be based on what is in the best interests of patients taking account of the Central Office of Information guidance on cost to the citizen.

NHS trusts and foundation trusts are not affected by the aforementioned regulations.

Service Categories

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 15 June 2007, Official Report, columns 1384-5W, on service categories, whether service category 27 is inclusive of (a) service category 25 and (b) Common Procurement Vocabulary Codes 74511000-4, and from 85000000-9 to 85323000-9, except 85321000-5 and 85322000-2. [145914]

Andy Burnham: Service category 27 is not inclusive of service category 25. Common Procurement Vocabulary Codes 745 11000-4, and from 85000000-9 to 85323000-9, except 85321000-5 and 85322000-2, are not included in Service Category 27.

Tobacco: Retail Trade

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Government has any plans to license tobacco retailers; and if she will make a statement. [145991]

Caroline Flint: The Government considered different ways of further controlling the selling of tobacco products, including positive and negative licensing, and consulted on these options last year. A copy of this consultation document "Consultation on Under-Age Sale of Tobacco", published on 3 July 2006, is available in the Library. In line with the proposal in the consultation, the Government intend to introduce a negative licensing system at the first legislative opportunity. Under this scheme, retailers who repeatedly flout the law on under-age sale of tobacco will be liable to orders prohibiting them from selling tobacco.

Tomography: Wales

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many patients from Wales were referred to (a) fixed location positron emission tomography (PET) scanners and (b) the mobile PET scanners in England in the last 12 months for which figures are available; [144181]

(2) how many positron emission tomography scans were procured from private operators in England for NHS patients from Wales in the last 12 months. [144365]

Andy Burnham: These are issues for the National Assembly for Wales.

Voluntary Work: Publicity

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the departmental publication Opportunities for Volunteering Scheme 2007 cost to produce. [145637]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: A finalised invoice for the production and distribution of the 2007 Opportunities for Volunteering report has not yet been received by officials at the Department. The initial estimate provided was £6,906.

PRIME MINISTER

Peers

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister if he will request the House of Lords Appointment Commission to publish all recommendations for appointment of non-party political peers and all nominations for peerages made by political parties for peerages since it was established. [145956]

The Prime Minister: As has been the practice of successive Governments, and continued by the House of Lords Appointments Commission (HOLAC), nomination forms for peerages are confidential.

HOLAC publishes a list of the individuals selected for appointment as non-party political peers on its website (www.lordsappointments.gov.uk).

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Bank Services: Fees and Charges

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which UK banks the Office of Fair Trading (a) is monitoring and (b) plans to monitor, with respect to the bank charges levied against individuals who exceed their overdraft limit or where a cheque or direct debit is refused. [146012]

Mr. McCartney: The OFT market study into personal current accounts is being undertaken in consultation with a range of interested parties, including major current account providers and their representatives.

At present the consultation with interested parties remains confidential. This exercise involves collecting and assessing sensitive information and, if the names of the persons involved in an ongoing investigation of this nature were vulnerable to disclosure, this could prejudice the full and frank disclosure of information as part of the investigation, and discourage co-operation with future OFT investigations.

The findings of the study are due to be published by the end of 2007.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to require banks to publicise their methods of calculating the penalty charges levied on customers when overdraft limits are exceeded or cheques or direct debits are returned. [146013]

Mr. McCartney: It will be for the OFT to take or recommend any action in the light of its market study findings, including its investigation into the fairness of current account charges under the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations (UTCCRs).

Construction: Environment Protection

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps are being taken to incentivise the use of environmentally friendly practices by the home construction industry. [144243]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The Government are working closely with the house building industry to improve the environmental sustainability of how it operates and what it delivers.

The changes already made in the Building Regulations mean that the energy efficiency of new houses has improved by 70 per cent. compared to pre-1990 levels. We have also consulted on further strengthening Building Regulations such that all new homes will be required to be zero carbon from 2016.

In addition the Code for Sustainable Homes and the Stamp Duty exemption that we have announced for new zero carbon homes will encourage the development of highly sustainable housing. We have already consulted on whether to make a rating against the code mandatory from April 2008 and will shortly consult on the detail of how we propose to do this.

Energy Performance Certificates will also be required on all newly constructed homes from 1 January 2008. The production of the certificates will be built in to the Building Regulations completion process, and will give the new owners or occupiers an understanding of the energy efficiency and environmental impact of their new home.

Other initiatives such as the Carbon Challenge and Eco-towns proposals will also encourage innovation and challenge the housebuilding industry to deliver overall improvements in sustainability.

Government are also intending to consult shortly on a new 'Strategy for Sustainable Construction'. The aim of this new initiative will be to set the direction in which government and industry together should be heading to tackle issues affecting the construction sector up to the year 2020 and their ability to respond to the important issue of environmental sustainability.

Departments: Aviation

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many flights to overseas destinations were taken by (a) civil servants and (b) Ministers in his Department in each of the last three calendar years; and what the total cost of such flights was. [144932]

Mr. Darling: In each of the last three calendar years the Department undertook the following number of flights to and from overseas destinations and the total cost of these flights was:

	Flight spend (£)	Number of flights
2006	3,201,001	3,169
2005	3,066,531	3,877
2004	3,528,407	3,851

The above data includes flights taken by both Ministers and officials in the core DTI and two of its agencies (Patent Office and the Competition Commission). The Department and its travel agent do not separately record details of flights taken by Ministers and flights taken by civil servants.

Departments: Smith Institute

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) meetings and (b) seminars were held by the Smith Institute as part of the Government's Review of Maternity Pay and Leave and Parental Leave; and which (i) individuals attended and (ii) companies were represented at each. [144964]

Jim Fitzpatrick: As far as our records show, the Smith Institute held no meetings or seminars on behalf of DTI during the Government's Review of Maternity Leave and Pay and Parental Leave.

Energy: Meters

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research has been undertaken (a) by and (b) on behalf of his Department into the use of smart meters in non-residential properties. [145075]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 25 June 2007]: Between 2004 and 2006, the Carbon Trust, a Government-funded organisation, conducted field trials of advanced metering with 580 businesses. The results of the trials are available at www.carbontrust.co.uk

Foreign Workers: EC Nationals

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment has been made of whether British workers have been displaced from jobs by incoming workers from new EU accession states. [143307]

Mr. Jim Murphy: I have been asked to reply.

Research published by the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) last year showed that there is no discernible statistical evidence that migration from the EU accession states has increased claimant unemployment. This is in line with international evidence on the impacts of migration which finds little discernible evidence of adverse effects on wages or employment of native workers.

The DWP research report can be accessed here:

http://www.workandpensions.gov.uk/asd/asd5/wp29.pdf

Fuel Poverty

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to publish the fifth annual report on the UK fuel poverty strategy. [144829]

Mr. Darling: The Government expect to publish the Fifth Annual Report on the UK Fuel Poverty Strategy in summer 2007.

Iran: Export Credit Guarantees

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the level of UK Export Credit Guarantee Department export credit guarantees to Iran was in the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [139612]

Mr. Darling: In the financial year from 1 April 2006 to 31 March 2007, ECGD supported two export contracts with an aggregate exposure of £4.97 million. To date, no support has been provided for any exports in the financial year beginning 1 April 2007.

The current level of ECGD exposure to Iran is approximately £290 million.

Low Carbon Buildings Programme

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what date the last domestic grant award was made under the Low Carbon Buildings Programme; and if he will make a statement. [136969]

Malcolm Wicks: The last domestic Low Carbon Buildings Programme grant award was made on 1 March 2007. Since then, it was announced in the Budget 2007 that a further £6 million would be made available to the household stream taking the total available to householders to more than £18 million.

Taking this into account, we took the opportunity to suspend the scheme so that we could work with stakeholders on re-structuring the household stream to ensure we made best use of the monies available and delivered against the programmes objectives.

The scheme was re-launched on 29 May 2007 with a number of changes, including the removal of the monthly cap, a pre-requisite for planning approval in the application process and a shorter grant claim period. We hope changes to the programme will allow us to reach a wider audience. We will continue to monitor and report on grant commitments and payments.

More information on the restructured programme is available on the programme's website:

http://www.lowcarbonbuildings.org.uk

Packaging

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) undertaken on the impact of misleading and copycat packaging on (i) shoppers and (ii) UK manufacturers of consumer goods. [140405]

Mr. McCartney: The Department has not commissioned any research on the impact of misleading and copycat packaging on shoppers and UK manufacturers of consumer goods.

Research: Tax Allowances

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions he has had on the potential to amend his Department's guidelines on the conditions to be satisfied for research and development tax relief to include expenditure on the design process. [145905]

Malcolm Wicks: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has had no recent discussions on this subject. The DTIs guidelines on the Meaning of R and D for Tax Purposes, 5 March 2004 already allow for expenditure on the design process to be claimed "when achieving design objectives requires the resolution of scientific or technological uncertainty within a project." The Government consider that the economic case has not yet been made for incentivising design more generally, outside the scope of R and D, even if the practical problems of definition and state aids could be overcome.

Written Answers to Questions

TREASURY

Defence: Finance

Mr. Harper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the current HM Treasury financial delegation to the Ministry of Defence. [145204]

Mr. Timms: I have today placed a copy of the current HM Treasury delegations to the Ministry of Defence in the Library, as requested.

Hometrack

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what meetings representatives of (a) his Department and (b) the Valuation Office Agency have had with (i) the company Hometrack and (ii) its representatives in the last 24 months; [145230]

(2) what representations (a) his Department and (b) the Valuation Office Agency have received from the company Hometrack in the last 24 months. [145231]

Dawn Primarolo: Treasury Ministers and officials have meetings with and receive representations from a wide range of organisations and individuals in the public and private sectors as part of the process of policy development and delivery. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such meetings and representations.

National Insurance: Rebates

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost to the Exchequer in each year from 2007-08 to 2011-12 of implementing in full the advice of the Government Actuary's Department on the level of national insurance rebates for contracted out pensions from 1 April 2007; and if he will make a statement. [144116]

James Purnell: I have been asked to reply.

National insurance rebates are paid from the National Insurance Fund. The effect on national insurance revenues that would arise from implementing in full the Government Actuary's advice for rebates from 6 April 2007 is broadly neutral over the longer term for schemes contracted out on a defined contribution basis. For schemes contracted out on a defined benefit basis, it would mean increasing estimated total expenditure on rebates between 2007-08 to 2011-12 by around 9.4 per cent.

Smith Institute: Publications

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 5 June 2007, Official Report, column 476W, on the Smith Institute: publications, how many publications are held in the Chancellor's private office. [144499]

John Healey: I have nothing further to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Rayleigh (Mr. Francois) on 9 May 2007, Official Report, column 283W.

Unemployed

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many working age workless households with couples without dependent children there were in each year since 1992. [145881]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 26 June 2007:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about workless couple households without dependent children. (145881)

The attached table gives the information requested. The figures in the table are estimates from the Labour Force Survey (LFS), for the three month period ending in May of each year from 1992 to 2006.

A household is defined as a single person, or a group of people living at the same address who have the address as their only main residence and either share one main meal a day or share the living accommodation (or both). A workless working-age couple household is one that is headed by a married/cohabiting couple and that includes at least one person of working age and in which no-one aged 16 or over is in employment. Couple households without dependent children may include non-dependent children, and/or members of other family units, whose economic status affects the combined economic status of the household (i.e. whether it is classified as workless or not).

As with any sample survey, estimates from the LFS are subject to a margin of uncertainty.

Workless working-age couple households without dependent children[1,2,3,4]—United Kingdom, spring (March-May) 1992 to 2006, not seasonally adjusted

	Thousand	Percentage[5]
1992	738	11.6
1993	813	12.9
1994	794	12.5
1995	811	13.0
1996	770	12.8
1997	791	12.9
1998	111	12.6
1999	764	12.4
2000	771	12.3
2001	736	11.8
2002	727	11.6
2003	697	11.1
2004	700	11.2
2005	716	11.4
2006	691	11.1

[1] A workless couple household is a household that is headed by a married/cohabiting couple and that includes at least one person of working age and in which no-one aged 16 or over is in employment. Couple households without dependent children may include non-dependent children, and/or members of other family units, whose economic status affects the combined economic status of the household (i.e. whether it is classified as workless or not).
[2] Working-age includes men aged 16 to 64 and women aged 16 to 59.
[3] Dependent children are those aged under 16 and those aged 16 to 18 who are never-married and in full-time education.
[4] Estimates have been adjusted for households with unknown economic activity status.
[5] Workless working-age couple households without dependent children as a percentage of all working-age couple households without dependent children.

Valuation Office: Manpower

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 27 April 2007, Official Report, column 1513W, on Valuation Office: manpower, what the reasons are for the change in staff numbers between 2000 and 2007. [145344]

Dawn Primarolo: Staff numbers have varied between 2000 and 2007 for operational and efficiency reasons. The VOA staffing policy is to predict, where possible, peaks and troughs of work and to plan for staff numbers accordingly.

JUSTICE

Barristers: Legal Aid Scheme

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice which barristers received the highest sums from the Legal Services Commission in respect of legal aid cases for (a) civil and (b) criminal work in each of the last three years; and how much each was paid in each year. [145472]

Vera Baird: The information requested for 2004-05 has been published on the Department for Constitutional Affairs website, at the following location:

http://www.dca.gov.uk/rights/dca/inforeleased/050914.htm.

The figures relating to the highest paid criminal and civil barristers for 2005-06 has also been published on the Ministry's website, at the following location:

http://www.justice.gov.uk/foi-highpaidbarristers.htm.

Information regarding which barristers received the highest sums from the Legal Services Commission in respect of legal aid cases for civil and criminal work in 2006-07 will be published once the data have been collated and verified.

Departments: Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice how many staff in her Department and its predecessor received bonus payments in each of the last five years for which information is available; what proportion of the total workforce they represented; what the total amount of bonuses paid was; what the largest single payment was; and if she will make a statement. [143102]

Vera Baird: The Ministry of Justice employs staff previously employed on several sets of different terms and conditions, each with their own arrangements for bonus payments. The information provided in the following table relates to former DCA Senior Civil Service (SCS) and grades below SCS. It excludes magistrates courts staff who became civil servants within this Department in April 2005 and whose terms and conditions do not normally allow for payment of performance or special bonuses. It also excludes those staff in the Tribunals Service and who joined former DCA on 1 April 2006 for whom information is not currently available.

Information for Her Majesty's Prison Service (below SCS) is provided.

Senior civil service bonuses received during the past five years for staff on former DCA terms and conditions

Paid in calendar year	Staff receiving bonuses	Proportion receiving bonuses (Percentage)	Total amount awarded (£)	Largest award (£)
2003	43	46	170,557	6,500
2004	69	72	268,900	11,200
2005	105	84	537,687	12,690
2006	118	79	821,750	17,500
2007[1]	—	—	—	—

[1] No bonuses have yet been paid to members of the SCS during 2007

Special bonuses received during the past five years for staff on former DCA terms and conditions (not SCS)

Paid in financial year	Staff receiving bonuses	Proportion receiving bonuses (Percentage)	Total amount awarded (£)	Largest award (£)
2002-03	995	7	253,258	—
2003-04	447	3.1	343,347	—

2005-06	1,809	12.8	487,753	5,000

Notes:
1. Data show payments for each financial year from 2002-03. Comprehensive information is not yet available for 2006-07.
2. Data covering largest award are not available prior to 2004 when the current recognition and reward scheme was launched.
3. Proportions refer to the number of staff eligible to be awarded special bonuses under their terms and conditions (i.e. these exclude former Magistrates Courts Service Staff).

Performance bonuses awarded during the past five years to staff on former DCA terms and conditions (not SCS)

Paid in calendar year	Staff receiving bonuses	Proportion receiving bonuses (Percentage)	Total amount awarded (£)	Largest award (£)
2003	1,131	9.27	302,030	725
2004	1,430	9	572,000	400
2005	1,881	13.3	752,400	400
2006	1,995	14.1	798,000	400
2007	1,848	13.2	739,200	400

Notes:
1. Data referring to Proportion of staff receiving bonuses refer only to staff on relevant terms and conditions (i.e. only include former DCA and Court Service Staff but exclude staff on Magistrates Courts terms and conditions).
2. Prior to 2003 performance bonuses in former LCD were linked to grade—from 2004 a flat rate was applied.

HM Prison Service became an executive agency of the Ministry of Justice on 9 May 2007.

Information on the number and proportion of staff receiving special bonuses, the total amount of bonuses awarded and the largest payment in each year within the public sector Prison Service is contained in the following table:

Public sector prison service special bonuses recorded 2003-04 to June 2007

Paid in financial year	Staff receiving bonuses	Proportion receiving bonuses (Percentage)	Total amount awarded (£)	Largest award (£)
2002-03	1,268	3	463,449	4,000
2003-04	1,983	4	740,443	4,000
2004-05	3,375	7	868,594	5,000
2005-06	3,004	6	983,273	15,802
2006-07	2,432	5	873,141	5,000
April-June 07	518	1	250,453	20,000

Details of staff who joined the Ministry of Justice from the Home Office are currently being collated. Therefore it has not been possible to identify Ministry of Justice staff on former Home Office terms (including from the National Offender Management Service) who received bonuses under their previous schemes within the available timescales.

Domestic Violence

Sarah Teather: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what funds are available to assist the victims of domestic violence in escaping from abusive situations. [144636]

Meg Munn: I have been asked to reply.

Domestic violence is a cross-Government priority led by the Inter-Ministerial Group for Domestic Violence. The group comprises Ministers from nine Government Departments and the three devolved Administrations.

The budgets outlined as follows contribute towards the delivery of the National Delivery Plan for Domestic Violence which focuses on a range of key work objectives from early intervention and prevention through to developing a coordinated community response to tackling domestic violence.

Communities and Local Government provide a part of the funding that assists victims of domestic violence to escape abusive situations.

For 2003-06 a total of £32.1 million capital was invested in refuge provision in England (£15.7 million through the Housing Corporation and £16.4 million from the Homelessness Strategy and Support Directorate in Communities and Local Government). 511 units of accommodation were refurbished or newly built.

In 2005-06, £59 million of Supporting People funding was used to provide housing related support to women at risk of domestic violence.

We continued to fund UKRefugesonline (£100,000 2007-08), a UK wide database of domestic violence services delivered in partnership by Women's Aid and Refuge which supports the national 24 hour free phone domestic violence helpline.

In addition my Department has allocated £47.2 million to local authorities to help them tackle and prevent homelessness in their area for 2007-08. They may choose to use a proportion of this money to fund Sanctuary Schemes.

Government provide other funding to help support victims of domestic violence. In 2006-07 the Home Office allocated £6 million to tackle domestic violence:

£3 million to support and improve local delivery on domestic violence for victims of domestic violence and their children

£1 million to expand the Specialist Domestic Violence Court Programme

£1 million for Independent Domestic Violence Advisors

£1 million to continue to fund national domestic violence services, for example the matrix of help lines.

In 2007-08 Ministry of Justice/Her Majesty's Court Service provided a further £3 million for the expansion of the network of Independent Domestic Violence Advisers that support the Specialist Domestic Violence Courts.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Aerials: Planning Permission

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will take steps to change the planning laws so that Network Rail has the same requirements to seek planning permission from local communities when erecting GSM-R communication masts as commercial mobile telephone operators. [145190]

Yvette Cooper: There are no current plans to change the permitted development rights for railway undertakers to erect communication masts.

Affordable Homes

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the latest estimate is of the average sale price of an affordable home produced in each of the areas participating in the design for manufacture competition. [111939]

Yvette Cooper: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Milton Keynes North-East (Mr. Lancaster) on 6 March 2007, Official Report, column 1890W.

In this answer I set out precise details for one of the sites in the competition that is one of the first to reach the stage of having completed homes available. On this site, Renny Lodge, we expect people will be able to purchase a 30 per cent. equity stake in a two bedroom home available under Homebuy shared ownership arrangements for between £42,000 and £46,800. The homes available through the First Time Buyers Initiative will typically be available at equity stakes from 50 per cent. starting at around £71,500 for a one bedroom flat.

The other nine sites are at different stages of construction and are spread around the country. The prices of the units for sale will reflect the land value, the local market at the time they go on sale and the equity share as well as the construction cost. However, all sites will include a proportion of affordable housing. This includes social rent and different kinds of shared ownership. We expect that an equity stake in a home, through either shared equity or shared ownership arrangements, will be available on every site other than the one in Hastings for a cost of £60,000 to £70,000. On the Hastings site all of the 15 units will be for affordable rent.

Arm's Length Management Organisations: Finance

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the funding arrangements will be for arm's length management organisations after the Decent Homes Standard period has passed in 2010; and if she will make a statement. [145537]

Yvette Cooper: Arm's length management organisations (ALMOs) secure their funding through a management fee from the local authority. The resources available to the local authority flow from the HRA subsidy system, its capital receipts and any prudential borrowing it takes on. This funding arrangement will remain after the Decent Homes programme is complete.

Association of Home Information Providers: Finance

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what funding the Government have provided to the Association of Home Information Providers. [145136]

Yvette Cooper: The Department has not provided any funding to the Association of Home Information Pack Providers and has no plans to do so.

Community Relations: Bingo

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will assess (a) the contribution of bingo clubs to community cohesion and (b) the impact on communities of the closure of bingo clubs. [139604]

Mr. Woolas: The Government have no plans to assess the contribution of bingo clubs to community cohesion or the impact on communities of the closure of bingo clubs.

However, we recognise the important role that bingo halls play in communities around the country. As a Government we are keen to continue to support an industry which provides so much enjoyment to millions of players each week, and which is an important source of employment.

It should also be noted that the Gambling Act 2005 already introduces a range of measures designed to support the bingo industry and other sectors of the gambling industry and I know that the Department for Culture, Media and Sport is keen to continue to work closely with the industry to see what more can be done to help bingo.

Council Tax: Valuation

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Brentwood and Ongar of 31 January 2007, Official Report, column 315W, on the Valuation Office, (1) how many properties in each local authority billing area in England are recorded by the Valuation Office Agency as having the property attribute of (a) one bathroom and (b) two or more bathrooms; [124428]

(2) how many domestic dwellings in England are recorded by the Agency as having the property attribute of (a) one parking space, (b) two parking spaces, (c) three parking spaces and (d) four or more parking spaces; [124429]

(3) how many domestic dwellings in England are recorded by the Agency as having the property attribute of (a) one bedroom, (b) two bedrooms, (c) three bedrooms and (d) four or more bedrooms. [124430]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Brentwood and Ongar (Mr. Pickles) on 28 March 2007, Official Report, columns 1596-97W.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether the Valuation Office Agency's Automated Valuation Model (a) uses and (b) holds data from the Index of Multiple Deprivation. [143463]

Mr. Woolas: No.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many individual domestic dwellings (a) have had their property records updated or amended by the Valuation Office Agency using information from Rightmove since the contract was signed and (b) had their records so updated or amended in the last year for which figures are available. [143468]

Mr. Woolas: This information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Councillors: Data Protection

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what guidance her Department has produced on the requirements councillors have to register under the Data Protection Act 1998 when acting in their capacity as a representative of the residents of their ward. [143466]

Angela E. Smith: The Department has issued no guidance of the sort described. The Information Commissioner has issued a guidance note aimed at elected and prospective members of local authorities, about how the Act applies to them.

The note is available on the Commissioner's website at:

http://www.ico.gov.uk/upload/documents/library/data_protection/practical_applicatiou/advice_elected_and_prospective_members_local_authorities.pdf.pdf

Departments: Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many staff surveys her Department undertook in the last 12 months; and at what total cost. [145254]

Angela E. Smith: During the last 12 months, the Department has completed the first of four quarterly staff surveys at a total cost, to date, of £42,770.

Energy: Conservation

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the Government's target is for the number of (a) homes with an excellent building regulations energy efficiency rating and (b) zero-carbon homes to be built in each year in England. [145535]

Angela E. Smith: Building Regulations set minimum standards for energy efficiency. Changes we have already made to Building Regulations mean that the energy efficiency of new houses has improved by 70 per cent. compared to pre-1990 levels. We have also consulted on proposals to further strengthen Building Regulations over the next decade such that all new homes will be required to be zero carbon in terms of their net emissions over the course of a year from 2016.

Homes built with Government funding are taking the lead here. All new Government funding for homes built by registered landlords and other developers, for example through the Housing Corporation, will now make it a condition that they achieve a 3-star rating in the Code for Sustainable Homes—25 per cent. better than current Building Regulations.

We expect that changes to the Building Regulations, the Code for Sustainable Homes, the carbon challenge and the stamp duty relief for new zero carbon homes will all encourage the development of highly energy efficient and zero carbon homes. We do not have targets of the type referred to but we will be monitoring progress carefully.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she expects to be in a position to introduce a Single Equalities Bill. [141109]

Mr. Woolas: The Government have given a commitment to introduce a Single Equality Act during the lifetime of this Parliament. Proposals for a Single Equality Bill will be published for public consultation, shortly. The Discrimination Law Review was published on the 12 June 2007.

European Regional Development Fund

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she was first notified by the European Commission of the prospect of European Regional Development Fund payments being suspended; on what grounds the payments are being suspended; what form this notification took; what action she has taken in response; and if she will make a statement. [135790]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 8 May 2007]: Officials from the European Commission informed us orally and wrote to the United Kingdom in November 2006 indicating an intention to advise the Commission to hold back the reimbursement of expenditure by the Government on the ERDF 2000-06 programmes in England. In particular, the European Commission wanted us to carry out more physical on-site checking of projects to ensure compliance with particular EU budget criteria. Formal notification was received on 11 April 2007. Action to increase the level of on-site checks began June last year in addition to strengthened management of the processes involved. A robust action plan has been in place for some time and we have made significant progress which has meant that four of the nine regions were not included in the Commission's formal decision. Further work is under way with the Commission to meet their requirements.

Fire Prevention: Tourism

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what guidance her Department has issued to fire authorities on the need for fire risk assessments in (a) single unit and (b) multiple unit self-catering properties for tourists. [145894]

Angela E. Smith: The Department has issued 11 guides dealing with a range of different types of premises. The guides are intended to assist both fire and rescue authorities and the person responsible in the interpretation and application of the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2005. Guide No. 3 deals with sleeping accommodation and includes advice on the need for fire safety risk assessments for both single and multiple unit properties. The guides are freely available on the Department's website: www.communities.gov.uk.

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what actions her Department has taken to ensure the consistent interpretation and enforcement by fire authorities of fire risk assessments undertaken in respect of self-catering tourist providers; and if she will make a statement. [145895]

Angela E. Smith: The Department has issued 11 guides dealing with a range of different types of premises. The guides are intended to assist both fire and rescue authorities and the person responsible for a premises to establish what fire precautions may be necessary for a particular case. Guide No 3 deals with sleeping accommodation and includes advice on fire safety risk assessment for self-catering tourist accommodation. The guides are freely available on the Department's website at www.communities.gov.uk.

Home Information Packs

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 24 May 2007, Official Report, column 1529W, on home information packs, when the copy of the concession agreement will be placed in the Library. [143454]

Yvette Cooper: A copy of the concession agreement has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what meetings her Department's special advisers had with the Association of Home Information Providers in the last 12 months. [145183]

Yvette Cooper: Advisers met with the Association of Home Information Pack Providers once on 22 August 2006.

Home Information Packs: Finance

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what funding is being allocated to local authority trading standards officers to enforce the home information pack regulations. [145521]

Yvette Cooper: The Government have allocated significant additional resources through the local government settlement for local authority trading standards officers to meet the statutory duty to enforce home information packs.

Home Information Packs: Vetting

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the estimated time period is for an energy inspector (a) to undergo a Criminal Records Bureau check and (b) to be accredited. [140860]

Yvette Cooper: A fully completed application for a criminal records check for a domestic energy assessor is currently being processed within seven to 10 working days by Disclosure Scotland.

It is the trained assessor's responsibility to ensure that all required documentation is provided to the accreditation scheme they have applied to. Due to this, the process varies in duration. Required documentation includes: certificate of qualification from awarding body, completed criminal records check, and proof of suitable operating insurance.

Hometrack

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what (a) representations her Department has received from and (b) meetings her Department has held with Hometrack in the last 24 months. [140870]

Yvette Cooper: We have regular discussions with all key stakeholders about home information pack development and implementation including Hometrack. Officials have received consultation representations from Hometrack. Officials also met with Hometrack in June 2005, July and September 2006.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what payments her Department and its predecessor have made to the company Hometrack since 2002. [143480]

Yvette Cooper: Since 2002, neither Communities and Local Government nor its predecessor, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, has made any payments to Hometrack.

Hounslow Borough Council: Members

Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what representations Ministers in her Department have made to the London borough of Hounslow on its relationships with its local Members of Parliament; and if she will make a statement. [135633]

Mr. Woolas [holding answer 3 May 2007]: No representations by Ministers from this Department have so far been made to the London borough of Hounslow about its relationship with local Members of Parliament.

Housing

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what proportion of domestic dwellings in England have four or more bedrooms. [145134]

Yvette Cooper: The most reliable estimates are in terms of numbers of households not dwellings. In 2005-06, an estimated 18 per cent. of the 21 million households in England lived in dwellings with four or more bedrooms.

Source: Survey of English Housing.

Housing: Construction

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) what the Government's target is for the number of new domestic dwellings to be built in each year in England; [145523]

(2) what the Government's target is for the number of new homes to be built in each year under its Sustainable Communities programme. [145524]

Yvette Cooper: The Sustainable Communities Plan, launched in 2003, set out plans to increase housing delivery across London and the wider south east in the period to 2016 to 1.1 million in total, from previous plans for 900,000. In 2005, the Government set a target for 200,000 new homes a year by 2016.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many homes have been built in each year under the Sustainable Communities Plan since its inception. [145525]

Yvette Cooper: Since the Sustainable Communities Plan was announced in 2003, net additions to the housing stock in England have been as follows:

	Net additions
2003-04	154,800
2004-05	167,900
2005-06	185,200

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many domestic dwellings were completed in England in each year since 1996-97. [145526]

Yvette Cooper: The number of new domestic dwellings completed in England in each year since 1996-97 has been tabulated as follows.

House building: permanent dwellings completed, England

Financial year	Houses
1996-97	146,246
1997-98	149,555
1998-99	140,708
1999-2000	142,046
2000-01	133,255
2001-02	129,866
2002-03	137,739
2003-04	143,958
2004-05	155,893
2005-06	163,398
2006-07	167,691

Housing: Empty Property

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which local councils have brought into use empty private sector properties under the Housing Act 2004. [145067]

Yvette Cooper: Local authorities have a range of powers to bring empty properties back into use. The provision in the Housing Act for Empty Dwelling Management Orders (EDMOs) is just one of a range of measures and in many areas is used to encourage landlords to take action on a voluntary basis. Since the commencement of the Housing Act 2004 in April 2007, three interim EDMOs have received authorisation (Norwich, Peterborough and South Oxfordshire).

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps she plans to take to regularise the definition of empty homes for the purposes of comparative council performance in respect of the Housing Act 2004. [145069]

Yvette Cooper: We have no plans to make any changes to the Housing Act 2004 in respect of the Empty Dwelling Management Orders provisions.

Housing: Females

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what guidance she has issued on the priority to be given to the provision of appropriate housing for (a) women and (b) women with children who have (i) suffered domestic violence and (ii) who have been trafficked. [135276]

Yvette Cooper: Local housing authorities must allocate housing accommodation in accordance with part 6 of the Housing Act 1996. Among other things, this requires authorities to publish a scheme for determining their priorities, and defining the procedures to be followed, in allocating housing. The scheme must be framed so that reasonable preference for an allocation is given to certain groups of applicant, but it is for individual authorities to decide on the priorities to be given to people within these groups. The reasonable preference groups are based on housing need and include people who need to move on medical or welfare grounds (including grounds relating to a disability) and people owed a homelessness duty. The scheme may also be framed so that additional preference is given to people within the reasonable preference categories who have urgent housing need. The Department has issued statutory guidance to local housing authorities on how they should discharge their functions under part 6. This gives examples of people with urgent housing needs to whom housing authorities should consider giving additional preference including those owed a homelessness duty as a result of domestic violence.

Under the homelessness legislation (part 7 of the 1996 Act), local housing authorities must secure that suitable accommodation is available for housing applicants who are eligible for assistance, homeless through no fault of their own and who fall within a priority need group. Accommodation must be secured until a settled home becomes available. The priority need groups include people whose household includes a dependant child or a pregnant woman and, in 2002, the Government extended the priority need groups to include, among others, people who are vulnerable as a result of leaving their home because of violence or threats of violence likely to be carried out. Jointly with the Secretaries of State for Education and Skills and for Health, the Secretary of State has issued statutory guidance to local authorities which they must have regard to when exercising their homelessness functions. The guidance reminds authorities that, under the legislation, a person is homeless if it is not reasonable for them to continue to live in their home and it would not be reasonable for someone to continue to live in their home if that was likely to lead to violence against them or against a member of their family. The guidance also encourages authorities to offer people who have experienced domestic violence a range of accommodation and support options, including the option of remaining in their home with additional security measures provided under a sanctuary scheme.

The Government have signed and ratified the UN Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children. It has also recently signed the Council of Europe Convention on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings. This will build on our strategy to combat human trafficking by providing minimum standards of protection and victim support, whilst also providing a framework for enhanced provision.

Details on how implementation will be taken forward are currently being developed. These will involve close co-operation with non-governmental organisations, law enforcement agencies and other Government Departments. Progress will be monitored by the Inter-Ministerial Group on Human Trafficking of which Communities and Local Government's Deputy Minister for Women and Equality is a member.

The London-based POPPY Project, run through "Eaves Housing for Women", was launched in 2003 and provides a highly regarded combination of safe accommodation and support for victims of trafficking for sexual exploitation, which meets Council of Europe Convention requirements. Additionally, as a result of Operation Pentameter there are now a number of independently funded organisations (Salvation Army, CHASTE, the Medaille Trust), who also provide accommodation.

The Government are currently considering a pilot scheme to test the level and type of support required for victims of forced labour trafficking.

The UK Human Trafficking Centre was launched on 3 October 2006, the first of its kind in Europe. This is becoming a centre of excellence for dealing with human trafficking and will promote the expansion of victim support services. The Government also published the UK Action Plan on Tackling Human Trafficking on 23 March. This aims to strike the right balance between protection and assistance for all victims of trafficking, and prevention and enforcement activity to crack down on criminals.

Through its recently published Gender Equality Scheme, the Department has also initiated a number of actions aimed at supporting those women who are victims of domestic violence or who have been trafficked. These include co-ordinating and joining up Government actions on violence against women, and monitoring the impact of changes in local government funding on locally delivered support for vulnerable women. Communities England will also ensure that gender issues are taken into account in exercising functions delivering local strategies for regeneration, housing growth and affordable housing.

Housing: Finance

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much (a) capital and (b) revenue funding the Government provided to each local authority in England for (i) housing and (ii) regeneration purposes in the last year for which figures are available. [143668]

Mr. Woolas: Capital funding for local authority housing is provided through the Housing Revenue Account (HRA) subsidy system in the form of supported capital expenditure (SCE) and the major repairs allowance (MRA). SCE is the level of borrowing for capital purposes that is supported by the Government through the HRA subsidy. This value is based on the Regional Housing Boards' allocations. MRA represents the estimated long-term average amount of capital spending required to maintain a local authority's housing stock in current condition. The capital funding includes an element for regeneration but that is combined with the decent homes programme in the private sector. There is also an element of non-HRA funding for local authorities.

Revenue funding for local authority housing is provided in the form of HRA Subsidy and Formula Grant. HRA subsidy refers to the entitlement local authorities receive from Government to support their housing programs. 2005-06 is the latest year for which audited figure are available. Housing is one of the services supported by formula grant. Formula grant, which comprises Revenue Support Grant, redistributed business rates and principal formula Police Grant, where appropriate, is an unhypothecated block grant, i.e. authorities are free to spend the money on any service. For this reason, and because of the method of calculation, particularly floor damping, it is not possible to say how much grant has been provided for a particular service. Tables displaying the 2005-06 HRA subsidy and 2005-06 capital funding for each local authority have been placed in the Library of the House.

For regeneration purposes, there is no local authority wise breakdown available. The information is compiled on a program-specific basis. Departmental funding for regeneration projects in 2005-06 is tabled as follows.

Regeneration programmes: departmental funding spent on regeneration projects in 2005-06

Housing: Greater London

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what proportion of housing in each London local authority was (a) units of social rented housing, (b) private rented housing and (c) owner occupier housing in (i) 1986, (ii) 1996 and (iii) 2006. [144924]

Yvette Cooper: Information reported by local authorities on the proportions of all dwellings that are 'social for rent', private (owner occupied and rented) and other public sector (e.g. school caretakers' houses) is shown in the following table.

Proportions of dwellings by social, private or "other public" in London by borough, 1986, 1996 and 2006

Housing: Low Incomes

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) how much funding was allocated to build affordable housing in financial years (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2006-07; how much she plans to allocate in 2007-08; and how many affordable homes (i) were built in financial years 2005-06, (ii) 2006-07 and (iii) she estimates will be built in financial year 2007-08; [130118]

(2) what estimate she has made of the cost of building 50,000 social homes in the years 2006-07 and 2007-08; and if she will make a statement; [130120]

(3) what estimate she has made of the number of social homes that will be completed in 2006-07. [130121]

Yvette Cooper: Expenditure through the Housing Corporation's Affordable Housing Programme (AHP) in 2005-06 totalled £1.6 billion and for the two years 2006 to 2008 we allocated a further £3.9 billion, of which the Housing Corporation spent £1.9 billion in 2006-07.

In 2005-06 over 45,400 affordable homes were provided, with 36,386 of these being provided through Housing Corporation's AHP. Provisional figures for 2006-07 indicate that over 44,000 affordable homes were provided, of which around 38,000 were through Housing Corporation's AHP. A further 56,000 affordable homes are planned for 2007-08, of which over 47,000 will be provided though the Housing Corporation's funding.

Provisional figures for 2006-07 show that over 25,000 social rented homes were provided of which 22,000 were through the Housing Corporation's AHP.

We have made no estimates for the cost of building 50,000 social rented homes in 2006-07 and 2007-08. We set the Housing Corporation targets to provide 21,000 social rented homes in 2006-07 and 28,000 in 2007-08. The latter homes will contribute towards our target of providing 30,000 social rented homes in 2007-08.

Of the Housing Corporation budget of £3.9 billion for 2006-08 it is estimated that £2.8 billion will be spent on providing social rented homes. Future investment will be subject to the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review 2007 on which we have already stated that we intend to make the provision of social rented homes a priority.

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what recent discussions she has had with ministerial colleagues in the Department of Work and Pensions on the Hills report; and if she will make a statement. [145066]

Yvette Cooper: Professor John Hills' Review "End and Means: The future roles of social housing in England" raised concerns about high levels of worklessness among households living in social housing.

Ministers and officials from Communities and Local Government and the Department for Work and Pensions have held a number of discussions on this issue. We are working closely together to explore ways in which we can address worklessness and how social housing can act as a platform for social and economic mobility.

Housing: Valuation

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and local Government pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Surrey Heath of 29 March 2007, Official Report, column 1731W, on housing: valuation, whether (a) greenhouses and (b) sheds are classified as outbuildings for the purposes of dwellinghouse code 14. [145483]

Mr. Woolas: No.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether a permanent greenhouse is considered by the Valuation Office Agency when establishing the capital value of a domestic dwelling during a valuation. [145520]

Mr. Woolas: It depends how much it is worth.

Housing: Wycombe

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many empty properties designated for key workers were recorded in Wycombe constituency in each of the most recent three years for which figures are available. [145454]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 25 June 2007]: The Government offer housing assistance to key workers under the Key Worker Living (KWL) scheme in areas experiencing severe recruitment and retention difficulties. Key Worker Living funding is divided between Open Market HomeBuy (equity loans to purchase properties on the open market) and new build products such as New Build HomeBuy (shared ownership of newly built homes) and intermediate rent (newly built homes where the rent is set at a level between that charged by social and private landlords).

Since April 2006 we no longer fund specific key worker only new build schemes. Instead key workers access our New Build HomeBuy and intermediate rent programmes as a priority group alongside other priorities such as social tenants. Any key worker specific schemes yet to complete will have been funded under old shared ownership programmes.

Since the launch of Key Worker Living, the Housing Corporation has been collecting data on when the construction of a scheme has been completed and when the final unit has been occupied. The purpose of these data is to actively manage the portfolio of new build properties and take action to prevent long term empty units—and as such allows us to give a breakdown of the current position on empty properties only. As at the end of May 2007 there are no empty Key Worker Living properties designated for key workers only in the Wycombe constituency.

iGather

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what funding her Department and its agencies have provided for the iGather project; and what plans there are to roll it out across England. [141824]

Ruth Kelly: The iGather project was awarded funding of £300,000 in March 2005. The project has developed a prototype to enable ready access to environmental, employment, housing and other data stored electronically to assist planners to carry out sustainability appraisals effectively and efficiently.

The purpose of a sustainability appraisal, mandatory under the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004, is to promote sustainable development through the integration of social, environmental and economic considerations into the preparation of revisions of regional spatial strategies and for new or revised development plan documents and supplementary planning documents.

Further work is being carried out, which will enable the prototype to be fully operational for the South West region by the end of 2007. No decision has yet been made on its further roll out.

Immigration: EC Enlargement

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will estimate the likely impact on the number of houses in multiple occupation in (a) Peterborough and (b) local authorities in the eastern region of the migration of new EU member state citizens to these areas since 2004; and if she will make a statement. [145306]

Yvette Cooper: The Department recognises the impact of EU migration and, in partnership with the Improvement and Development Agency (IDeA), is currently developing a toolkit of good practice guidance for local authorities on issues such as overcrowding in Houses in Multiple Occupation (HMOs).

The number of HMOs in local authority areas has been collected by the Department through the Housing Strategy Statistical Appendix (HSSA) since 2001. The following table indicates the number of HMOs in Peterborough since 2004.

Housing strategy statistical data

Infrastructure Planning Commission: Termination of Employment

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether she will have the power to remove planning commissioners on the proposed infrastructure planning commission from their post before the end of their term of office for reasons other than misconduct. [145151]

Yvette Cooper: Paragraphs 5.56 to 5.61 of the White Paper, Planning for a Sustainable Future (cm 7120), set out the Government's proposals as to the personnel of the infrastructure planning commission. It is intended that members of the commission will have fixed tenure for periods of between five and eight years. The Secretary of State will have the power to remove a person from office as a member of the commission if she is satisfied that the person is unable, unwilling or unfit to perform the duties of the office. We do not propose that members could be removed because of the decisions they took.

Local Authorities: Disabled

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which local authorities have appointed a disability access officer. [145004]

Mr. Woolas [holding answer 25 June 2007]: Appointment of disability access officers is a decision for each local authority. Research to provide this information would incur disproportionate costs.

Local Authorities: Housing

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many local authority owned homes were sold to (a) registered social landlords and (b) private landlords in each London borough in each of the last 10 years. [144639]

Yvette Cooper: The following table gives details of London boroughs who have sold their housing stock to the registered social landlord sector through large-scale voluntary transfer in the last 10 years. We could provide figures for small-scale voluntary only at disproportionate cost. We do not have any data on trickle transfers to registered social landlords; nor do we have data on how many local authority homes have been sold to private landlords.

Local Authorities: Inspections

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which organisations have a function of inspecting local authorities. [145158]

Mr. Woolas: The Government set out proposals for a new performance management framework for local areas in the White Paper "Strong and Prosperous Communities" (Cm 6939) in October 2006. This will be introduced from 2009.

The Audit Commission (which from April 2008 will be merged with the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate) will continue to have powers to inspect local authorities under Best Value, with any inspection in future being triggered primarily by risk assessment. The Audit Commission will also manage the overall programme of inspection and external assessment of local authorities to reduce duplication and ensure inspection and assessment is better co-ordinated and proportionate to risk.

Other regulators and inspectorates with responsibilities for inspection of some local authority services include the new Ofsted, the Adult Social Care Inspectorate which will bring together Commission for Social Care Inspection and Healthcare Commission functions, and the existing five criminal justice inspectorates.

Local Authorities: Standards

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will make a statement on (a) the timetable and (b) progress achieved on reducing the number of central Government targets for local authorities to 200. [145161]

Mr. Woolas: As we set out in the Local Government White Paper "Strong and Prosperous Communities", we are developing a single set of national priority outcomes for local government working on its own or in partnership, measured by a single set of around 200 national indicators which will underpin the new performance framework. These outcomes and indicators will reflect decisions taken in the Comprehensive Spending Review (CSR) which is currently under way and details will be published as part of the CSR announcement in the autumn. Implementation will take place from April 2008.

Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Bill

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will reconsider the inclusion of clause 39 in the Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Bill following the combined 2007 Scottish Parliamentary and Scottish local elections; and if she will make a statement. [145160]

Mr. Woolas: Clause 60 (previously clause 39, prior to Report stage in the House of Commons) of the Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Bill provides for the Secretary of State, by order, to move the date of the local government elections in a year so that these coincide with the European parliamentary general election in that year. Any such order must be approved by both Houses of Parliament, following consultation with the Electoral Commission and other appropriate persons. This process will ensure that, in any year, the merits of holding the elections on the same day will be fully considered.

Local Government: Finance

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which (a) special grants and (b) specific grants were paid to local authorities in England in 2006-07. [145538]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the reports and related tables for the Local Government Finance Settlement 2006-07. Copies of the reports, tables and other supporting material were made available in the Vote Office and the Library of the House on 31 January 2006. Key Table 2 set out the specific and special grants to be paid in that year. Information covering all grants paid to local authorities in that year will be available from the local authority outturn return. There were no grants paid in 2006-07 using the special grant making powers under section 88B of the Local Government Finance Act 1988 (substituted by paragraph 18 of schedule 10 to the Local Government Finance Act 1992).

Local Government: Pay

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the pay ranges are for senior local government officials and chief executives. [144168]

Mr. Woolas: The Department for Communities and Local Government does not collect this information. Information on chief executives' and chief officers' pay can be obtained from the Local Government Employers' website http://www.lge.gov.uk.

Local Government: Reorganisation

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will take into account local polls of public opinion on local government reorganisation when selecting the unitary bids she will be taking forward; and if she will make a statement. [145101]

Mr. Woolas: Local polls of public opinion are one of many relevant matters to which we will have regard when assessing unitary proposals against our five criteria set out in the invitation document published on 26 October 2006.

Local Government: Somerset

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans she has to take into account the result of expressions of public opinion on local government reform in Somerset; and if she will make a statement. [144737]

Mr. Woolas: Expressions of public opinion are one of many relevant matters to which we will have regard when assessing unitary proposals against our five criteria set out in the invitation document published on 26 October 2006.

Non-Domestic Rates

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many staff in the Valuation Office Agency undertake work in relation to assessment casework for business rates valuations. [143669]

Mr. Woolas: It is the policy of the Department not to comment on staffing matters.

Owner Occupation

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the causes of the recent trends in the level of home ownership. [145225]

Yvette Cooper: Low mortgage rates and economic stability have increased the number of home owners by over one million since 1997. However, rising house prices have created pressure for first-time buyers. Kate Barker's review of housing supply showed that the industry had not been building enough homes to meet demand for over a generation.

The annual rate of new housing supply has increased by 40 per cent. since 2001 but we plan to go further in order to address the long-term problems of worsening affordability and help more people realise their aspirations to own their own home.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the level of home ownership was in England in each year since 1996-97. [145169]

Yvette Cooper: Estimates of the level of home ownership in England from 1996 to 2006 are shown below. This is based on a sample survey and so results can fluctuate from one year to the next.

Number of homeowners in England

	Number (Thousand)
1996	13,521

Peterborough City Council: Grants

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if officials from her Department will meet Peterborough city council in the near future to discuss grant funding; and if she will make a statement. [144290]

Mr. Woolas: We have been reviewing, with local government, a number of the formulae used to distribute grant to local authorities and will be undertaking a full consultation exercise over the summer, when all local authorities will have full opportunity to respond to our proposals.

Planning Inspectorate: Consultants

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much the Planning Inspectorate spent on consultants (excluding the cost of consultant inspectors) in each of the last four years; and what such consultants were tasked to work on. [144717]

Yvette Cooper: The Planning Inspectorate's spend on external advice and contracts over the last four financial years has been:

	Total (£)
2003-04	2,778,726
2004-05	2,824,952
2005-06	3,380,614
2006-07	1,604,379

This included:

Planning Portal Development
Planning Casework System Development
Human Resources and Training Development
Major Inspector Recruitment Advice
Agency Restructuring Advice
Baseline Study of Inspector Working
Electronic Business Modelling
Householder Development Consent Review

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what measures the Planning Inspectorate has in place to achieve value for money in the procurement of external consultants undertaken by the agency's procurement unit. [144720]

Yvette Cooper: The Planning Inspectorate has a dedicated procurement unit and all consultancy contracts are handled within that unit. In the drive to deliver value for money close attention is paid to standard best practice procurement procedures, from clear specification through to effective contract management. Extensive use is also made of the framework contracts managed by the Office of Government Commerce to deliver both price and process savings.

Planning Policy Statement 3: Regulatory Impact Assessments

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government for what reasons the regulatory impact assessment for Planning Policy Statement 3 (PPS3) was published after PPS3 came into effect. [145155]

Yvette Cooper: The Department produced a partial regulatory impact assessment as part of the consultation paper on a new Planning Policy Statement 3 (PPS3) "Housing", which we published in December 2005.

Subsequently, we considered those consultation responses made in respect to the partial assessment to inform the final regulatory impact assessment. This analysis is set out in the 'Consultation on Planning Policy Statement 3: Housing (PPS3)—A summary of responses and key issues', which we published alongside final PPS3 in November 2006.

While a regulatory impact assessment had been produced at the time of launching PPS3, unfortunately, this was not published until May 2007.

Planning: Reform

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what her timetable is for the (a) consultation and (b) legislation on reform of the planning system, following the publication of the Planning White Paper. [145138]

Yvette Cooper: The Government are consulting on some key proposals and other issues in the White Paper 'Planning for a Sustainable Future' (Cm7120) and four associated consultation papers on: planning performance agreements; planning fees; changes to permitted development rights for householders; and improving the appeal process. The closing date for responses is August 17 2007. Paragraphs 10.15 and 10.16 of the White Paper describe further consultations proposed during 2007 and 2008.

By summer 2007 we will consult on a new draft national Planning Policy Statement 'Planning for Economic Development', proposals to replace the need and impact tests with a new test, and proposals to reduce the Secretary of State's involvement in planning cases.

By the end of 2007 we will consult on proposals to extend permitted development rights for the installation of microgeneration equipment without planning permission to non-residential users, on detailed changes to regulations, policy and guidance in relation to local plan making, on proposals on revised arrangements for statutory consultees and on proposals to extend the impact approach to minor non-householder development.

By summer 2008 we will consult on proposals for revising the main legislation covering the process of submitting and considering planning applications.

The Government plan to legislate at the earliest opportunity, with the aim of having the infrastructure planning commission operational in 2009.

Refuges: Females

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many recorded cases there were of women being housed in refuges and safe houses in West Lancashire constituency in 2006. [144822]

Yvette Cooper: The Department does not hold a total figure centrally.

Information about local authorities' actions under homelessness legislation is collected quarterly at local authority level. The duty owed to a household accepted as eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in priority need is to secure suitable accommodation. If a settled home is not immediately available the authority may secure temporary accommodation until settled accommodation is provided.

One type of temporary accommodation is women's refuges. A breakdown by local authority of reported households in women's refuges under homelessness provisions at the end of December 2006 has been placed in the Library of the House. The West Lancashire constituency falls within West Lancashire district local authority.

Women may also enter refuges without going through the statutory homelessness route. Many women's refuges receive Supporting People funding, and records of new entrants to Supporting People funded services are submitted by service providers on the Client Record form.

Data from the Client Record form are published on the Centre for Housing Research's website, for financial years and at administrative authority level. This includes the number of new clients entering Supporting People funded women's refuges, for service providers in each of the administrating authorities, including Lancashire county council, in 2006-07, in table 2.1: http://ggsrv-cold.st-andrews.ac.uk/spclientrecord/, (follow the links to "Latest Reports", then "Reporting to Administering Authorities").

It is important to note that imputation has not been made for cases when the Client Record form was not submitted, and that these figures only cover Supporting People funded services.

Regional Planning and Development: Thames Gateway

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what recent representations she has received on the Government's targets (a) to create 180,000 jobs and (b) to build 160,000 new homes in the Thames Gateway between 2001 and 2016; and if she will make a statement on progress made to date towards meeting each target. [140631]

Yvette Cooper: The Government target to create the conditions for 180,000 jobs and the capacity for 160,000 homes was published in the Thames Gateway Interim Plan. The plan was endorsed by the relevant regional assemblies, regional development agencies, local regeneration partnerships and other key stakeholders through the Thames Gateway Strategic Partnership. The Department continues to work with the partnership and others in pursuing its shared objectives.

In 2005, there were approximately 58,600 more employees in the Thames Gateway than in 2001, an increase of 9.7 per cent. This is equivalent to an increase of approximately 46,600 or 9 per cent. in the number of full-time equivalent jobs.

Between 2001-02 and 2005-06, a total of 29,775 net new dwellings have been added to the housing stock of the Thames Gateway.

Regional Spatial Strategies

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the timetable is for the (a) approval, (b) amendment and (c) ratification of each of the regional spatial strategies. [145137]

Meg Munn: The following table sets out the Secretary of State's current plans for publication of proposed changes and the issue of final Regional Spatial Strategies in each of the eight English regions outside London.

	Proposed Changes	Issue of Final RSS
North East	May 2007	January 2008

Small Businesses: Rates and Rating

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the take-up rate was for small business rate relief in each year since its introduction. [145159]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Social Rented Housing

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether data on the location of subsidised housing from the National Register of Social Housing are used by the Valuation Office Agency for council tax valuation purposes. [128491]

Mr. Woolas: No.

Subsidence

Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) what policies her Department has in place with regard to local authorities dealing with widespread and severe subsidence in public areas; and if she will make a statement; [141999]

(2) whether her Department provides a contingency fund which local authorities can access to deal with severe and widespread subsidence in public areas caused by abandoned mineworkings. [142001]

Yvette Cooper [holding answers 11 June 2007]: The Department has in place the Land Stabilisation Programme as a source of contingency funding, which provides local authorities with financial assistance with meeting a proportion of the costs for dealing with unforeseen land instability problems caused by abandoned non-coal mines, where the project costs are judged to be eligible.

Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) what guidance her Department has made available to local authorities affected by widespread and severe subsidence in public areas caused by abandoned mineworkings operated by companies no longer in existence on how to determine where the financial liabilities lie for restoring affected public areas, public buildings and private properties; [142000]

(2) what (a) financial assistance, (b) additional powers or responsibilities and (c) legal and technical assistance her Department makes available to local authorities dealing with severe subsidence in public areas; [142002]

(3) what courses of action are available to local authorities to provide remedies to (a) schools, (b) housing estates and (c) other public spaces affected by severe subsidence caused by derelict mineworkings; and if she will make a statement. [142003]

Yvette Cooper [holding answers 11 June 2007]: Statutory responsibility in ensuring public safety from threats stemming from land instability lies with local authorities. Local authorities in England are eligible to apply to the Land Stabilisation Programme via English Partnerships, the national regeneration agency, for assistance with funding for land stabilisation problems arising from abandoned non-coal mines. English Partnerships manages the Land Stabilisation Programme on behalf of the Department. The focus of funding through the Land Stabilisation Programme is principally on removal of blight or enabling investment to regenerate areas where abandoned underground non-coal mine workings are present and where there is a threat to life and/or property. Extensive guidance on the assistance available and how to apply for assistance with funding can be found on the English Partnerships website at:

www.englishpartnerships.co.uk.

Responsibility for dealing with stabilisation works and for complying with any regulations or legislation governing public health and safety lies at all times with local authorities. This includes compliance with planning requirements environmental protection and management of consultants/contractors. English Partnerships' expertise in best value and best practice is available to all project partners and covers a wide range of subjects such as construction methods and standards, management techniques, sustainable remediation and regeneration of blighted land. Where project costs are not eligible for assistance from EP via the Land Stabilisation Programme, EP will nevertheless assist with advice.

Funding assistance for local authorities provided through the non-coalmining Land Stabilisation Programme can help to safeguard or remediate housing, commercial and other properties and public areas, including schools, above the mines.

Travelling People

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which local authorities have produced Gypsy and Traveller accommodation assessments deemed inadequate by her Department on grounds of (a) unreliable figures and (b) inadequate research; and if she will make a statement. [145019]

Meg Munn: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today (PQ 142434).

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps are being taken to ensure that the Travellers' site at Ecton Lane is provided with the floodlighting and perimeter fencing as specified in the bid for funding approved by her Department. [146002]

Meg Munn: The completion of fencing as required by the contract specification is currently being undertaken by a fencing contractor, and is programmed to be completed by 20 July 2007.

The floodlighting is now being undertaken by electrical contractors. These works have a target completion date of 27 July 2007.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the quality of Gypsy and Traveller accommodation assessments which she has received to date; and if she will make a statement. [142434]

Meg Munn: The Secretary of State does not have a formal role in assessing the quality of Gypsy and Traveller accommodation needs assessments. Communities and Local Government will offer advice and support to local authorities on undertaking these assessments as necessary. Draft guidance was published in February 2006, and a final version has now been laid before Parliament, as required by the Housing Act 2004.

Regional assemblies will need to consider the quality of these assessments as they revise regional spatial strategies to identify pitch requirements at a regional level and allocate these between local authorities. Research undertaken for Communities and Local Government, "Preparing Regional Spatial Strategy reviews on Gypsies and Travellers by regional planning bodies", provides regional assemblies with a methodology for this. This is available on the Communities and Local Government website at http://www.communities.gov.uk/index.asp?id=1508208

Westminster City Council: Temporary Accommodation

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 2 May 2007, Official Report, column 1693W, if she will commission an independent assessment of Westminster city council's ability to procure short-term leased temporary accommodation for homeless households within its area before making any further reductions in housing benefit subsidy in 2008-09. [145165]

Yvette Cooper: A questionnaire has been sent to a sample of local authorities seeking information on the use and costs of temporary accommodation. Until we have considered the results of this questionnaire no decision can be made about subsidy arrangements in respect of homeless households in temporary accommodation for 2008-09.

We are continuing to work with the Department for Works and Pensions and the devolved Administrations on our longer term proposals which would separate out reasonable costs for the rent and management of temporary accommodation; we would expect these to take effect from 2009.

TRANSPORT

A21

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which properties have been purchased under compulsory purchase orders along the proposed route of the A21 upgrade. [145672]

Dr. Ladyman: No properties have been purchased under compulsory purchase orders along the proposed route of the A21 upgrade.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department has spent on the Weald Smokery, East Sussex, following its acquisition under blight provisions. [145671]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency purchased Weald Smokery on 8 May 2007. The property itself was purchased for £1,395,657.00 which includes the farmhouse at £525,000, the business at £810,657 and the land stables at £60,000.

Following the purchase of the Weald Smokery under statutory blight provisions, the Highways Agency has incurred costs of £4,131 + VAT to date.

Aviation: Scotland

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many scheduled flights took place between (a) Glasgow and London and (b) Edinburgh and London in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2006. [145760]

Gillian Merron: The number of scheduled flights that took place between (a) Glasgow and London and (b) Edinburgh and London in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2006 were as follows:

Number of Scheduled flights between:	1997	2006
Glasgow and London	22,318	24,371
Edinburgh and London	26,307	35,045

Note:
London airports include Gatwick, Heathrow, London City, Luton and Stansted

Speed Limits: Cameras

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) reviewed on the likely change in number of speeding fines issued as a result of the new speed camera guidance effective from 1 April. [145765]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department has not commissioned or reviewed any research on the likely change in number of speeding fines issued as a result of the new speed camera guidance. The guidance provides local authorities with greater freedom and flexibility on the deployment of cameras, allowing them to enforce in response to community concerns or at sites where there are speeding problems and a high risk that casualties will occur.

Travel: Carbon Emissions

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what estimate his Department has made of the carbon emissions which would be caused by a journey from (a) Glasgow and (b) Edinburgh to London using a high-speed rail service; [145761]

(2) what estimate his Department has made of the carbon emissions caused by a journey from (a) Glasgow and (b) Edinburgh to London by aeroplane. [145762]

Gillian Merron: The Department estimates that the per passenger carbon emissions for a journey between London and Edinburgh will be approximately 8 kg carbon for conventional speed rail, 17 kg carbon for high speed rail, and 26 kg carbon for aviation. Passenger carbon emissions are likely to be similar between Glasgow and London.

These rail estimates assume an approximate 600 km distance, current electricity generation mix, average intercity train occupancy of 38 per cent., and the same number of passengers using a high speed rail service as the conventional rail service. The estimates will be sensitive to these assumptions.

The estimate for air is based on Department for Environmental Food and Rural Affairs estimates of average per passenger kilometre emissions for domestic flights.[1] Estimates of rail carbon emissions are based on estimates by Professor Roger Kemp of Lancaster University[2] and Department for Transport modelling.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Olympic Games: Greater London

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what provision she is making for providing Dorset police authority with full funding for any security arrangements they provide for the Olympic games held in Dorset. [145593]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 25 June 2007]: The Home Office and Olympic security co-ordinator are developing and costing the security planning and operation for London 2012. This will be published when appropriate, and will include relevant costs for police forces outside London.

Sports: Finance

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much she has allocated to the development of British sportsmen and women until 2012; how many recipients of such funding live in

Ribble Valley constituency; and what proportion of the funding allocated to the 2012 Olympic games is for the development of sporting talent. [145959]

Mr. Caborn: UK Sport, the Government's lead agency for high performance sport, is scheduled to allocate £600 million to the development of British sportsmen and women between now and 2012. £252 million has already been allocated to supporting Olympic and Paralympic sports and athletes through to the Beijing games in 2008. £216.4 million has been awarded directly to the national governing bodies and the athletes via UK Sport's world-class pathway programme, with the remainder funding key athlete support services such as sports science and medicine, and technology research and innovation.

The world-class pathway programme supports athletes at three different levels: World-class talent, world-class development and world-class podium. Of the total through to Beijing, approximately 50 per cent. of funding is focused on the world-class talent and development pathways.

Funding for each sport beyond 2008-09 will be decided after a comprehensive review of its performance at the Beijing games, and assessment of its potential for future success at London 2012.

At present there are three athletes from the Ribble Valley area on the world-class pathway programme.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Polygamy

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Solicitor-General how many (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions for polygamy there were in the last 12 months. [144224]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I have been asked to reply.

There is no offence of polygamy as such. A person who enters into a second or subsequent marriage while the first is still valid commits an offence of bigamy under section 57 of the Offences Against the Person Act 1861.

The most recent data available, from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform, show that in England and Wales in 2005, 28 defendants were prosecuted for and 21 found guilty of the offence of bigamy. Data for 2006 will be available in the autumn of 2007 and data for 2007 will be available in the autumn of 2008.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Churches: Fire Prevention

Mr. Pickles: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what guidance has been provided on the implementation of the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2005 in churches. [145722]

Sir Stuart Bell: Comprehensive guidance to the legislation may be found on the Department of Communities and Local Government website and the Churches Main Committee has circulated supplementary guidance on the regulations' effect on places of worship. Church Fire Guidance Notes are available from Ecclesiastical Insurance and from the Churchcare website http://www.churchcare.co.uk/atoz_fire.php

Churches should be aware that, in practice, the 2005 Order did not significantly change the requirements falling on them. All churches are recommended to make a 'suitable and sufficient' risk assessment and act upon it.

WALES

Departments: Sick Leave

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of sick leave taken by staff in his Department was stress-related in each of the last three years. [145985]

Mr. Hain: No Wales Office staff have cited stress as a reason for sick absence in the last three years.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION COMMITTEE

Absent Voting: Proof of Identity

Mr. Heald: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what steps the Electoral Commission is taking to check what proportion of postal vote identifiers were checked in the 2007 local elections. [142188]

Peter Viggers: On 20 February, the Department for Constitutional Affairs formally requested the Commission to carry out a review of the introduction of personal identifiers for absent voting in England and Wales, and to report by 31 July 2007. The Electoral Commission informs me that it has asked Returning Officers to supply information about the levels of checking they undertook in the 2007 local elections, and intends to include the information supplied by Returning Officers in its report.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Catering

Mr. Hands: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how much it has cost to commission the Russell Partnership to conduct a survey into catering services in the House. [144925]

Nick Harvey: Invoices have not yet been received for this work, but the tendered price to carry out two surveys (one for staff of the House and one for Members' staff) and to carry out interviews with a sample of around 35 Members is £6,950.

The work is being carried out to provide qualitative information for the benchmarking of the House of Commons Refreshment Department's services, which was recommended by the Administration Committee in their report on Refreshment Department Services (HC 733) published on 14 February 2006.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departments: Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent by staff in his Department via departmental (a) credit, (b) procurement and (c) fuel cards in each of the last three years. [145298]

Mr. Hain: The following table represents the amount spent by staff in the Northern Ireland Office, excluding its agencies and NDPBs, via departmental (a) credit, (b) procurement and (c) fuel cards in each of the last three years.

	2004-05	2005-06	2006-07
(a) Credit Cards	0	0	0
(b) Government Procurement Card	0	9,521	66,810
(c) Fuel Cards	32,376	29,605	17,965

The Northern Ireland Office does not have departmental credit cards.

The Government Purchasing Card (GPC) was fully introduced in the Northern Ireland Office in the 2006-07 financial year as a tool to purchase and pay for low value goods and services.

Departments: Legal Costs

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 19W, on Departments: legal costs, how much of the expenditure on legal fees in each of the last five years was incurred (a) by the Public Prosecution Services, (b) in respect of the Saville inquiry, (c) in respect of the Finucane, Nelson, Hamill and Wright inquiries, (d) by the Crown Solicitor's Office and (e) by other parts of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [141257]

Mr. Hain: Pursuant to the answer provided on 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 19W, on the Department's legal costs, the Northern Ireland Office (NIO) expenditure is broken down as follows:

Legal fees	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06	2006-07
(a) Public Prosecution Service	5,005,857	5,374,952	6,357,772	6,783,071	9,858,615
(b) Bloody Sunday Inquiry	9,746	3,000	12,361	1,733	65,310
(c) Finucane, Nelson, Hamill and Wright Inquiries	0	1,733	110	15,177	10,408
(d) Crown Solicitors Office	160,958	87,391	301,283	364,638	230,164
(e) Other parts of NIO Department	337,587	117,413	332,880	169,411	705,432
Total	5,514,148	5,584,489	7,004,406	7,334,030	10,869,929

The hon. Member should note that the total figures have changed from the answer given on 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 19W. Some legal costs were omitted in error for which I apologise.

The original answer should have read:

"The Northern Ireland Office (NIO), excluding its agencies and NDPBs, has spent the following on legal fees in each of the last five years:

	Legal fees (£)
2002-03	5,514,148
2003-04	5,584,489
2004-05	7,004,406
2005-06	7,334,030
2006-07	10,869,929

Legal fees for the NIO have risen substantially in 2006-07, mainly due to expenditure by the Public Prosecution Service on the Omagh bomb trial, and also on the trial of James Fulton and his associates, which proved to be the longest murder trial in NI history. These two cases alone have accounted for an increase in legal expenditure of £2 million. Scale fees for counsel also increased in April 2006, the first increase in a number of years, and this also contributed to overall increase in 06/07."

Departments: Official Visits

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which destinations he visited in an official capacity between 17 May and 17 June. [144547]

Mr. Hain: Since 1999 the Government have published, on an annual basis, the total costs of all ministerial overseas travel and a list of all visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500. This information is available in the Library of the House. Information for the financial year 2006-07 is currently being compiled and will be published before the summer recess. All travel is undertaken in accordance with the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers

In regards to domestic travel, between 17 May and 17 June 2007 I have been in Northern Ireland and London in my official capacity as Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Departments: Public Expenditure

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his Department's budget is in 2007-08; and what estimate he has made of the budget for 2008-09. [144791]

Mr. Hain: The Northern Ireland Office (NIO), including its agencies and NDPBs, has been allocated the following funding for 2007-08 as per the published Treasury Main Supply Estimates 2007-08:

Resource DEL	1,141,000,000
Capital DEL	71,913,000

The Department's 2008-09 budget will not be established until the outcome of the 2007 comprehensive spending review is announced. This covers the financial years 2008-09 to 2010-11.

Departments: Public Participation

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many public consultations his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and what the cost was of each consultation. [145280]

Mr. Hain: From April 2006 to March 2007 the Northern Ireland Office carried out 19 consultation exercises. The following table lists the consultations undertaken and the costs involved. Where the costs are listed as '0' only the price of circulating the consultation document has been incurred. This information relates only to the NIO and does not include its agencies or NDPBs.

Rape: Sentencing

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average sentence handed down by courts in Northern Ireland for rape was in each of the last three years. [145487]

Maria Eagle: Table 1 as follows gives the number sentenced to immediate custody for rape and attempted rape and the average sentence length given for each of these offences and in total.

Data cover the calendar years 2003 to 2005 (the latest available) and are collated on the principal offence rule; thus only the most serious offence with which an offender is charged is included.

Table 1: Number sentenced to immediate custody and the average custodial sentence length in months for rape and attempted rape 2003-05

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Afghanistan: Politics and Government

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the political situation on a regional level in Afghanistan. [144776]

Dr. Howells: The general political situation in Afghanistan is relatively stable. The influence of the central Government outside Kabul is gradually increasing, particularly in the north and west. Local governance structures are slowly being built up, although this is more challenging in some areas than others. One of the key aims of the international-led provincial reconstruction teams, throughout the country, is to support the development of local government and to help the Government of Afghanistan extend their reach.

British Nationality: Prisoners

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British subjects are serving jail sentences in prisons in the European Union, broken down by country. [145873]

Mr. Hoon: On 31 March, British consular officials were aware of 851 British nationals detained in EU countries. The breakdown by country is shown in the following table. These figures include detainees on remand, as well as those serving sentences.

Country	Number of detainees
Austria	4
Belgium	23
Bulgaria	0
Cyprus	18
Czech Republic	4
Denmark	12
Estonia	0
Finland	2
France	107
Germany	121
Greece	18
Hungary	1
Ireland	91
Italy	18

Iran: Embassies

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of (a) the extent and nature of the recent harassment of guests to the United Kingdom embassy in Iran and (b) the extent to which the Iranian authorities assisted in minimising the harassment and controlling the demonstrators; and if she will make a statement. [145920]

Dr. Howells: There was a large demonstration outside our embassy in Tehran before and during Her Majesty the Queen's Birthday Party reception on 14 June. The demonstrators blocked access to the embassy for some hours and harassed and intimidated guests on their way into the reception. There were some instances of physical violence. Harassment continued as guests left the party and we are aware of a number of instances of guests being questioned and detained on departure.

The Permanent Under-Secretary at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office summoned the Iranian ambassador on 19 June to register our dismay that the authorities had failed to prevent this harassment from taking place. Our embassy in Tehran has done likewise with the Iranian authorities.

Palestinians: Lebanon

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with ministerial colleagues on providing aid to Palestinian refugees in Lebanon. [144777]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has ongoing discussions with her ministerial colleagues on a range of issues on the Middle East including provision of aid. Officials are also in regular contact to discuss these issues.

The Department for International Development takes the lead on the provision of aid and has a significant programme of assistance to Palestinians in Lebanon. The UK is a regular and significant donor to the UN Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), who are taking the leading role in the humanitarian response to the crisis at the Nahr El Bared refugee camp. The Government have committed £100 million of funding to UNRWA's work in the region over the next five years. Historically, around 20 per cent. of UNRWA spending is on Lebanon.

The UK is also supporting the Lebanon operation of the non-governmental organisation 'Mines Action Group' (MAG) which is standing by to assist in clearing unexploded ordnance in the Palestinian refugee camp directly affected by the recent violence in the north of the country. We are providing £290,000 to MAG in Lebanon this financial year, with projected total funding to MAG's work in the country at over £980,000 over the next three years.

Palestinians: Politics and Government

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the effect on stability in the region of the newly formed Palestinian Government. [144774]

Dr. Howells: We have made no assessment of the effect the new Palestinian Government have had on stability in the region. We, along with regional partners, are concerned about the current situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territories. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary spoke to Palestinian President Abbas, US Secretary of State Rice and the Egyptian, Omani and Qatari Foreign Ministers ahead of the Arab League Foreign Ministers meeting on 15 June. We support President Abbas and the emergency Government.

Arab League Foreign Ministers on 15 June agreed to support President Abbas and condemned all parties for the violence. The Arab League agreed to establish a Fact-Finding Committee (Egypt, Jordan, Saudi Arabia, Tunisia and Qatar) to engage with the parties.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan: Peacekeeping Operations

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date the mission in Helmand province was originally expected to end; and what the most recent estimate is of what that date will be. [144778]

Des Browne: The current deployment of UK troops in the South of Afghanistan as part of the NATO-led International Security Assistance Force is planned until 2009, although we have always made it clear that our commitment to Afghanistan is a long-term one. The size and duration of the UK presence in Helmand will depend on a number of factors including the ability of Afghan security forces to take greater responsibility for the security of their own country.

Al Yamamah Project

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which organisations had drawing rights on the special account held at the Bank of England in relation to the Al Yamamah contract; and what information his Department had on the identity of those with drawing rights on accounts to which money was sent from that special account. [144255]

Des Browne: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 21 June 2007, Official Report, column 1989W.

Armed Forces: Cultural Heritage

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what advice is given to UK armed forces personnel serving in (a) Afghanistan, (b) Iraq and (c) other theatres overseas on the buying and export from the country of origin of ancient coins and antiquities and other cultural property; and if he will make a statement. [142701]

Mr. Ingram: Guidance on this issue is provided in both a Defence Council Instruction (DCI) and a Defence Operational Instruction (DOI) on the retention of captured enemy equipment as operational memorabilia (OM).

Specifically in relation to OM: the DCI states

"Units are to ensure that neither items of private property nor those that could be seen as having historical, cultural or religious significance are removed."

and the DOI states

"Items of private property or items that could be seen as having historic, cultural or religious significance are not to be removed."

In addition there are provisions within the agreements between UK and the host nation in which our troops are serving that state that personnel will respect the laws, regulations, customs and traditions of the host country insofar as this is compatible with the entrusted task and mandate.

Armed Forces: Desertion

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) rank, (b) age, (c) sex, (d) regiment and (e) last theatre of operation is of those service personnel classed as being absent without leave and who have not yet been unaccounted for. [145958]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, as at 25 June 2007, the numbers of personnel who have gone absent without leave from the services since 1 January 2003 and remain so are:

Service	Number
Army	960
RAF	10
Navy	15

These figures are rounded to the nearest five. They are subject to daily changes as individuals return to their units.

Armed Forces: Housing

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of accommodation provided by his Department to non-ministerial members of the Army Board is considered to be of Standard 1 condition. [137729]

Derek Twigg: Of the five non-ministerial members of the Army Board who are provided with accommodation, two (40 per cent.) occupy Standard 1 Condition properties. They are the General Officer Commanding Northern Ireland and the Assistant Chief of the General Staff. The property occupied by the Chief of the General Staff is not owned or maintained by the MOD and therefore is not classified using the MOD system.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many UK armed services personnel (a) were barracked in the UK and (b) had a private residence that was not provided by the armed forces in each of the last five years. [137899]

Derek Twigg: Figures for the period 2003 to 2006 are set out as follows. The term 'barracked in the UK' has been taken to include all Service Family Accommodation (SFA), Single Living Accommodation (SLA), Substitute Service Families Accommodation (SSFA) and Substitute Service Single Accommodation (SSSA). The information requested is currently captured as at 1 April each year, but this only began in 2003 for SFA and 2004 for SLA. The allocation and occupancy of SFA is managed on a single information system, but in the case of SLA differences in reporting, for example over whether SLA is formally allocated to individuals in dormitories, mean that the figures should be regarded as approximate. Information on SLA occupied by those undergoing Phase 1 and 2 training (basic recruit/trade training) is not available for 2004 and 2005, but is included in the 2006 figures. Comparable figures for 2007 are not yet available.

	1 April each year:
	2003	2004	2005	2006
Number of entitled Service personnel accommodated in SFA/SSFA in UK	43,148	42,848	42,848	43,339
Number of entitled Service personnel accommodated in SLA/SSLA in UK	n/a	89,990	91,979	108,308
Total number of entitled Service personnel Barracked in UK	—	132,838	134,827	151,647

n/a = Not available

Information on whether Service personnel own a private residence is not held by the Ministry of Defence. However, estimates derived from surveys indicate that the level of home ownership is approximately 73 per cent. for Officers and 45 per cent. for Other Ranks.

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the estimated cost is of bringing all family accommodation at Pirbright barracks to an acceptable standard for habitation. [141845]

Derek Twigg: We have not yet made any dedicated estimate of the cost of bringing all Service Families Accommodation (SFA) at Pirbright Barracks to an acceptable standard.

Departments: Common Purpose

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department paid to Common Purpose in each of the last five years; for what purpose; and what the outcome of the expenditure was. [145342]

Derek Twigg: Sums paid to Common Purpose UK in each of the last complete five financial years, inclusive of VAT, are as follows:

	Amount (£)
2002-03	56,576.25
2003-04	66,716.50
2004-05	42,958.00
2005-06	58,456.27
2006-07	83,817.89

These payments covered the cost of participation by MOD staff in Common Purpose UK's training and education programmes. Programmes of this nature help to develop leadership skills, to gain understanding about broader aspects of government and to share experience with and learn from participants from both the private and public sectors.

Departments: Older Workers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of staff in his Department were over 60 years of age in each of the last three years. [145677]

Derek Twigg: Departmental staffs 60 and over are shown as follows:

	Percentage
April 2005
Percentage of staff aged 60 and over	5.8
April 2006
Percentage of staff aged 60 and over	6.5
April 2007
Percentage of staff aged 60 and over	7.6

Source:
DASA (Civilian)

Figures quoted include trading funds, but excludes Royal Fleet Auxiliaries and locally engaged staff. Percentages have been calculated on unrounded figures.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people aged (a) over 55 years of age and (b) over 60 years of age have been recruited by his Department in each of the last three years; and what percentage in each case this is of the number of new recruits in each year. [145709]

Derek Twigg: The following table gives details of civilian personnel recruited by the Ministry of Defence:

Civilian inflow to the Ministry of Defence by financial year

Headcount

	2004-05		2005-06		2006-07
Age	Total inflow	Percentage of total inflow	Total inflow	Percentage of total inflow	Total inflow	Percentage of total inflow
55 to 59	590	6.3	360	5.8	350	6.2
60+	310	3.3	210	3.3	220	4.0
55+	900	9.6	570	9.2	570	10.2

Notes:
1. This includes industrial and non industrial staff employed by the Ministry of Defence and trading funds, but excludes Royal Fleet Auxiliaries and locally engaged staff.
2. Percentages are calculated on unrounded figures and exclude staff of unknown age.
3. Staff grouped 55+ are a subset of 60+.
4. Due to the rounding methods used, totals may not always equal the sum of the parts. When rounding to the nearest 10, numbers ending in 5 have been rounded to the nearest multiple of 20 to prevent systematic bias.

Departments: Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff surveys his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and at what total cost. [145256]

Derek Twigg: There are a variety of staff surveys conducted by the Ministry of Defence. Details of these surveys are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The four principal staff surveys conducted in the last 12 months were of the Naval Services, Army, RAF and civilian personnel.

Departments: Written Questions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many ordinary written questions tabled to his Department by hon. Members have been waiting for a substantive reply for more than (a) one month and (b) two months; and what the subjects are of those questions. [144587]

Derek Twigg: As at 25 June, five ordinary written questions had been waiting for a reply for between one and two months and eight for more than two months. The questions are various and include subjects such as insurgency in Iraq, contaminated land, service personnel issues, and costs and expense claims of Army Board members.

Iraq

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the capabilities of insurgents in Iraq to launch attacks on naval and maritime targets. [110370]

Des Browne: We keep the capability of insurgents in Iraq under constant review, including their capability to launch attacks on naval and maritime targets. This is a credible threat and our current force structure reflects that assessment.

Iraq: Peacekeeping Operations

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with senior army personnel on the death of Baha Mousa in Basra in 2003; and if he will make a statement. [143699]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 18 June 2007]: The Secretary of State for Defence has regular discussions with senior army personnel on a range of matters. In line with standard practice, the Royal military police are currently reviewing the evidence from the court-martial. The Army Reviewing Authority is also conducting a statutory review of the sentence passed on Corporal Payne and the case remains sub judice. We will make a statement when these reviews are complete.

Land: Sales

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 22 March 2007, Official Report, column 1035W, on land: sales, on what basis a contaminated site is not remediated before sale; and on what basis land on Matapan Road, Hilsea was not remediated. [134491]

Derek Twigg: It is normal for the Ministry of Defence (MOD) to undertake Land Quality Assessments (LQAs) on all sites being considered for disposal. Before the sale of a site, the MOD will generally undertake remediation of ordnance and other defence specific contaminants such as chemical agents, radioactive and microbiological materials.

A phase I and phase II LQA survey for the Royal Navy Motor Transport Depot site at Hilsea concluded there were no unacceptable risks to public health or the environment and action was not required under the Environmental Protection Act 1990. Low levels of contamination were identified but no remediation measures by this Department were deemed necessary.

Navy: Drug Seizures

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what the value was of illegal narcotics seized by the Royal Navy in all theatres in each of the last three years; [143363]

(2) what value of illegal narcotics was seized by the Royal Navy in all theatres in each of the last three years. [144007]

Mr. Ingram [holding answers 18 June 2007]: All drugs seizures involving Royal Naval vessels or Royal Fleet Auxiliary vessels over the past three years have taken place in the Caribbean or the Atlantic.

Figures for total tonnage seized also include estimated amounts that traffickers have jettisoned or destroyed during Royal Naval interdiction operations.

It is difficult to put an accurate value on the amount of illegal drugs seized or destroyed in these operations. The price of illegal drugs varies greatly depending on supply and demand, as well as the purity of the drugs themselves when they reach the UK market. Therefore quoted MOD figures for the "street value" of successful seizures are always estimates. Against that background and following close consultation with the Serious Organised Crime Agency since its formation in April last year, we have revised our overall figures for 2006-07 seizures (better reflecting the actual street value).

The tonnage and estimated value of Royal Naval drugs seizures over the last three reporting years are set out as follows.

	Tonnage (to nearest metric tonne).	Estimated street value (£ million)
2004-05	10	500
2005-06	14	840
2006-07	17	680

Written Questions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to reply to question 134491, on land: sales, tabled by the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South on 24 April 2007; and what the reasons are for the delay. [144584]

Derek Twigg: I replied to the hon. Member today. The delay occurred because I sought further information in order to give the fullest possible reply.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Departments: Northern Ireland

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if she will place in the Library a copy of the concordat governing the relationship between her Department and the Northern Ireland Administration. [145936]

Hilary Armstrong: We do not have a concordat with the Northern Ireland Executive. The principles set out in the Memorandum of Understanding and Supplementary Agreements between the UK Government, Scottish Ministers, the Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales and the Northern Ireland Executive, published in 2001, continue to underpin our working relationship with the Northern Ireland Executive.

Voluntary Organisations: National Lottery

Mr. Mackay: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if she will make a statement on the impact of funding plans for the 2012 Olympics on lottery funding for voluntary sector organisations. [143869]

Hilary Armstrong: The Big Lottery Fund (BLF) is the main distributor of lottery funding to the Voluntary and Community Sector (VCS). The BLF has committed to distributing 60-70 per cent. of its money to the voluntary sector and that commitment is based on the money the sector would have received without the Olympic transfer, not 60-70 per cent. of what is left. The commitment remains unchanged, and the NCVO has welcomed this. It will allow for the important work carried out by Third Sector organisations, for the benefit of individuals and communities, to continue.

The other lottery distributors are currently considering the specific impact of the Olympics funding on the VCS. However, lottery money will not be transferred to Olympic funding before 2009. This is in order to give the distributors the highest degree of certainty and the greatest possible time for planning. The other distributors are also concerned to ensure that support for small-scale and voluntary sector projects remains available.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Departments: Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much was spent by staff in his Department via departmental (a) credit, (b) procurement and (c) fuel cards in each of the last three years. [145296]

Mr. Thomas: Department for International Development spend on departmental credit, procurement and fuel cards in the last three years is set out in the following table.

Financial year	Credit card	Procurement card	Fuel card	Total for year
2004	41,980	127,840	0	169,820
2005	56,981	2,594,110	0	2,651,091
2006	16,567	2,684,785	0	2,701,352
Year to date	[1]0	770,182	0	770,182

[1] The use of the credit card ceased in August 2006

Departments: Energy

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many energy saving light bulbs were purchased by his Department for use on the departmental estate in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [144947]

Mr. Thomas: The vast majority of light bulbs and fluorescent tubes used in DFID are of the energy efficient type. DFID purchased 1,645 bulbs and fluorescent tubes in the 2005-06 financial year and 2,015 in 2006-07.

Departments: Older Workers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of staff in his Department were over 60 years of age in each of the last three years. [145684]

Mr. Thomas: Information on the number of staff over 60 is not available for March 2005, but figures for the last two years are shown in the following table. The figures relate to both our UK-based staff and staff appointed locally overseas.

As of 31 March:	Total number of staff	Number of staff over 60	Percentage
2005	2,917	[1]—	[1]—
2006	2,779	51	1.84
2007	2,630	67	2.55

[1] Not available

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many people aged (a) over 55 years of age and (b) over 60 years of age have been recruited by his Department in each of the last three years; and what percentage in each case this is of the number of new recruits in each year. [145702]

Mr. Thomas: In 2004, there were 409 new recruits to DFID, of which 10 were over age 55 and a further three over age 60. These represent 2.44 per cent. and 0.73 per cent. of the total respectively.

For 2005, there were 243 new recruits to DFID, of which eight (3.29 per cent.) were over age 55 and one (0.41 per cent.) was over age 60.

In 2006 the total was 208, with six (2.88 per cent.) over age 55 and none over age 60.

These figures include both our UK-based staff and those appointed locally overseas.

Departments: Sick Leave

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of sick leave taken by staff in his Department was stress-related in each of the last three years. [145978]

Mr. Thomas: Data on stress related absence in DFID are only available for the last year and the estimated figure for this was 1.1 per cent. of total sickness absence in that period. Data are not available for the previous two years and could be gathered only at disproportionate cost.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 8 May 2007, Official Report, column 8W, which set out the steps DFID has taken to prevent and manage stress in the workplace. On 1 July DFID will launch our Better Balance Campaign which is specifically targeted at raising awareness of stress-related issues and the support available to tackle these.

Palestinians: EC Aid

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his policy is on the resumption of European Union aid to the Palestinian Authority. [144775]

Hilary Benn: The UK fully supports the EU's position. On 18 June, EU Foreign Ministers discussed the resumption of assistance to the Palestinian Authority. They concluded that the EU should develop the conditions for urgent practical and financial assistance. The EU is currently working on plans for the best way for this to be delivered. In allocating our assistance, we will wish to ensure that it addresses the needs of Palestinians in both Gaza and the West Bank, and is subject to satisfactory fiduciary controls.

Sudan: Overseas Aid

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment has been made of the humanitarian requirements of the displaced people in the Gereida region of Darfur following the recent withdrawal of independent aid agencies; and if he will make a statement. [145812]

Hilary Benn: The work of Oxfam and other aid agencies in addressing the humanitarian needs of the 130,000 people in Gereida was exceptional. Their withdrawal is highly regrettable but under the circumstances, they could not place their staff at such a continued risk. Since the evacuation of the other agencies the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), as the only agency left, decided to cover the gaps, providing water, sanitation, food, health care, shelter and other household items to the camp and host population of Gereida. As a result of this huge expansion in services, ICRC increased their appeal by £13 million to £44 million. In response, DFID increased its support to ICRC proportionately by £1 million to £4 million for 2007.

The events in Gereida underline the fragility of the humanitarian situation in Darfur. It is only through the admirable work of aid agencies that the four million people dependent on aid in the region have had access to vital assistance and services. The deterioration of the security situation and attacks on humanitarian workers, however, are having a severe impact on getting help to those in need.

I utterly condemn the continuing violence targeting civilians and humanitarian workers in Darfur and have called on all sides to cease the violence immediately, renew the ceasefire, reinvigorate the political process and support the rapid deployment of the AU/ UN peacekeeping force for Darfur.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Cattle: Exports

Gwyn Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what proportion of live calves exported since 1 January 2007 have formed part of (a) a consignment exported from a single farm and (b) a multiple pick up of consignments from several farms; [142649]

(2) what proportion of live calves exported since 1 January 2007 have been sent (a) from a holding of origin in the UK directly to a place of destination in another EU member state, (b) from a holding of origin in the UK via an assembly centre in the UK to a place of destination in another member state and (c) from a holding of origin in the UK via an assembly market in the UK to a place of destination in another member state; and if he will make a statement. [142650]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answers 14 June 2007]: The information requested is not collected centrally and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost to the Department.

Climate Change: Insects

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessments have been made of the impact of climate change on the life cycle of (a) bees and (b) insect populations. [144210]

Barry Gardiner: Losses of pollinators may be just one of the signals of the effects of climate change on our ecosystem goods and services that we need to respond to. The recently published DEFRA-funded review "England Biodiversity Strategy—Towards Adaptation to Climate Change" identified potential impacts of climate change on species and habitats. The report gave an overview of the types of impacts and their effects on a full range of species and habitats, under each of the England Biodiversity Strategy sectors, such as Agriculture or Woodland and Forestry. It did not look specifically at insect life cycles, although a few examples are given of effects on insects.

DEFRA also co-funded the MONARCH project (Modelling Natural Resource Impacts of Climate Change) which projected how the area that provides suitable climate for a particular species might change between now and 2080. Most of the insects covered in the MONARCH report (published in May 2007) were butterflies and showed a potential increase in suitable climate area. However there are clearly other insects at more northerly latitudes or higher altitudes or those that require for damp conditions that risk a loss or shift in suitable climate area.

Other research in this area is undertaken outside the Department. The previous (6th) and current (7th) EU research framework programmes have had major themes on the biological impacts of climate change. The Natural Environment Research Council draft strategy for 2007-12 lists as its principal science goal the prediction of regional and local impacts of climate change. DEFRA maintains close links with these programmes in Europe and the UK.

This is a rapidly developing field and there is a need to assemble evidence to prioritise research and adopt an integrated approach to guide policy responses. The England Biodiversity Strategy Climate Change Adaptation Workstream and the Climate Change Adaptation Network are helping this process.

Climate Change: Publicity

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been spent on advertising the Department's climate change campaign act on carbon dioxide; and how much has been spent on (a) online advertising and (b) television advertising. [145432]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA's climate change 'Act on CO_2' campaign was launched in March 2007.

In the financial year 2006-07, the Department spent £225,000 on online advertising and nothing on any other media, including television advertising.

Dairy Farming

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many dairy farms went out of business in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and how many of these farms were located in Cheshire. [145110]

Barry Gardiner: Information on numbers of holdings is collected in the annual June survey of agriculture and horticulture. No information is collected on the number of holdings leaving the industry. The following figures show the number of registered holdings at June each year where dairy was the predominant activity. These figures show net change only and therefore include gains as well as losses.

Number of dairy type holdings

	England	Cheshire CC	Halton and Warrington UA
2004	13,264	887	10
2005	12,918	851	[1]—
2006	12,626	836	[1]—

[1] Suppressed to ensure the confidentiality of individual holdings.

Note:
Estimates have been made for holdings on surveyed and holdings not responding.

Departments: Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much was spent by staff in his Department via departmental (a) credit, (b) procurement and (c) fuel cards in each of the last three years. [145292]

Barry Gardiner: From information held centrally, the spend (inclusive of VAT) by staff in the Department via departmental procurement and fuel cards in each of the last three financial years is shown in the following table:

	2004-05	2005-06	£ 2006-07
Government procurement card	3,797,675.07	5,751,629.76	8,327,067.01
Fuel cards	15,878.28	20,203.05	10,457.36

The Department does not issue departmental credit cards—payment cards which permit the holder under the contract with the issuer to purchase goods and/or services on a credit basis.

Departments: Energy

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many energy saving light bulbs were purchased by his Department for use on the departmental estate in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [144945]

Barry Gardiner: The Department for Environment Food and Rural Affairs does not record the number of energy saving light bulbs purchased on a year by year basis.

In accordance with the Government's sustainable procurement policies and the recommendations of the sustainable procurement task force, all light bulbs purchased for use on the departmental estate are energy saving bulbs.

Additionally, any remaining tungsten lighting within the estate is being replaced with energy saving bulbs as part of the ongoing sustainability review.

Departments: Foreign Relations

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many memoranda of understanding are in force as a result of agreements with foreign governments entered into by

Ministers in his Department; and what executive actions each entails. [144474]

Barry Gardiner: Records of memoranda of understanding (MoU)'s are not held centrally across Whitehall or centrally within DEFRA.

However, I am aware that we hold the following MoU's:

with Japan on the continuation of co-operation on research into environmental endocrine disrupting chemicals. This MoU facilitates exchange of information and joint workshops but has not lead to direct executive action; with the Russian Ministry of Natural Resources covering cooperation on matters relating to environmental protection and sustainable development. There are no executive actions arising from this MoU; with environment ministries or regulators in 15 countries to develop registry software for the trading of carbon allowances—Bulgaria, Cyprus, Estonia, Finland, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Latvia, Lithuania, Malta, Netherlands, Norway, Romania, Slovenia. In each case the MoU has been supplemented by a formal separate licence agreement with each country and officials work closely with their counterparts on the software developments including improvements to the existing operational software; with the National Development Reform Commission of the People's Republic of China and the Department for Environment Food and Rural Affairs on establishing a China-UK Climate Change Working Group. The MoU identified a range of climate change science, economics, technology and policy priorities for discussion; and between DEFRA, DTI and The Ministry of Science and Technology of the people's Republic of China. Its title is "Cooperation on Near-zero Emissions Coal Technology through Carbon Capture and Storage— Phase 1".

Its purpose is to cooperate on near zero coal technology in China through carbon capture and storage and to explore the feasibility of and options for demonstration of this technology in China. Phase 1 activities are aimed to be complete by 2008; with China memorandum of understanding on agricultural science and technology, signed in 1980 Originally the responsibility of the Department for International Development's predecessor department. The Memorandum's sole executive action is the facilitation, with minimal funding (£10,000 a year, matched by the Chinese Ministry of Agriculture), of exchange visits between British and Chinese agricultural experts in relation to selected research projects; with China on Phytosanitary Co-operation. The purpose of the agreement is to strengthen bilateral phytosanitary co-operation, to help prevent the movement of plant pests. Under the agreement, both parties exchange information on legislation; support technical exchanges, and notify each other of any discovery of plant pests; and a Protocol of phytosanitary requirements for the export of potato mini tubers from the UK to China, signed in Beijing in October 2006 by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on behalf of his DEFRA colleague

DEFRA does have other ministerial-level agreements with foreign Governments, such as the Sustainable Development Dialogues with Brazil, China, India, Mexico and South Africa, but these are not formal MoU's.

Departments: Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people in his Department have been allowed to work from home for part of the week in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on home working. [143884]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA does not keep centrally held records of staff who work from home and this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Home working commences because it enables DEFRA to both recruit and maintain a diverse work force. Home working helps staff maintain a work life balance. DEFRA is committed to helping its staff maintain a work life balance and recognises that home working can help to reduce the need to travel to work thereby removing journey time and potentially reducing overall transport congestion and pollution as well as individual stress levels. Therefore, DEFRA believes that home working contributes not just to staff welfare but ultimately to delivery of a high quality service to our customers. DEFRA supports home working and is taking steps to ensure that the necessary tools and technologies are in place to facilitate this as part of its overall policy on flexible working. Home working can include the occasional day or days taken to complete a specific task or address a particular situation and is available to all staff subject to business needs. Alternatively, it can be a permanent arrangement with regular home working days appropriate to the individual's situation.

Managers and individuals are encouraged to think creatively about working patterns so that efficient working can most easily be combined with other responsibilities and with employee's interests, responsibilities and personal circumstances.

Departments: Official Engagements

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will list his official engagements with (a) non-governmental organisations and (b) private companies in the last three months. [144092]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Secretary of State had the following official engagements in the last three months with non-governmental organisations and private companies.

27 March: World Wildlife Fund

29 March: Green Alliance

18 April: Range of Stakeholders to discuss Marine Policy

18 April: Syngenta

23 April: Range of Stakeholders to discuss Climate Change

23 April: Arup

2 May: Range of Stakeholders to discuss Planning White Paper

15 May: BP

4 June: General Motors

18 June: Range of Stakeholders to discuss Climate Change

Departments: Older Workers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of staff in his Department were over 60 years of age in each of the last three years. [145680]

Barry Gardiner: The percentage of staff in DEFRA over 60 in the last three years for which published figures are available was as follows:

As at 1 April each year	Percentage
2003	1.66
2004	1.95
2005	1.78

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people aged (a) over 55 years of age and (b) over 60 years of age have been recruited by his Department in each of the last three years; and what percentage in each case this is of the number of new recruits in each year. [145706]

Barry Gardiner: The number of people over (a) 55 and (b) 60 recruited by DEFRA in the last three years for which published figures are available was as follows:

	Over 55		Over 60
	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage
2003	10	1.33	<10	—
2004	10	1.37	0	0
2005	10	2.50	<10	—

Note:
Figures are rounded to the nearest 10, and those below 10 are not disclosed for privacy reasons.

Departments: Publications

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many copies his Department printed of (a) reports and (b) consultation documents in the latest financial year for which figures are available. [142769]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 18 June 2007]: The Government have a duty to explain their policies, decisions and actions; to inform the public about their rights and liabilities; and to provide the public with advice and warnings. DEFRA publishes regular reports and consultations in accordance with these principles. The number of copies printed of such publications is not held centrally and could be collated only at disproportionate cost. Print procurement policy is to produce the lowest quantity of publications to meet the specific needs of each case, thereby minimising waste. Most reports are less than 1,000 copies. In the case of consultations, most are handled online and stakeholders may download a copy for local printing. Copies will be supplied to order—printed digitally—on a limited basis, if requested, as will large print and Braille versions.

Departments: Sick Leave

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what average number of days per year was taken by staff in his Department as sick leave in each of the last five years for which records are available. [143061]

Barry Gardiner: Information on sickness absences in Departments is collected by the Cabinet Office and published on their website at:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management/occupational health/publications/index.asp

The most recent published data available are for the calendar year 2005. The average number of working days lost due to sickness in DEFRA in 2005 and in the previous four years was as follows:

	Working days lost	Total staff-years
2001	7.4	n/a
2002	8.7	10,320
2003	8.3	7,285
2004	7.5	7,483
2005	8.2	7,313

Farmers

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farmers there were in (a) Cornwall, (b) the South West and (c) the UK in each year since 1979; and what proportion of the total workforce they made up. [144223]

Barry Gardiner: The following table shows the number of farmers and total agricultural workforce in (a) Cornwall, (b) the South West and (c) England and the proportion of the total UK workforce they made up for 1992-2006. These are the figures that are most readily available. Figures for Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland fall under the jurisdiction of the devolved authorities.

Notes:
1. Figures prior to 2000 cover main holdings only. Figures from 2000 onwards include main and minor holdings. A minor holding has to meet all the following conditions:
(a) have a total area of less than 6 hectares
(b) a total labour requirement of less than 100 standard person days
(c) no regular full-time farmer or worker
(d) a glasshouse area of less than a 100 square metres
(e) the occupier does not farm another holding
2. Estimates have been made for holdings not selected or not responding.
3. Office for National Statistics total labour force figures include all workforce categories (employed, self-employed, HM forces and Government supported trainees)
4. Agricultural labour force includes:
(a) principal farmers, spouses and business partners
(b) salaried managers, regular and casual/gang workers
5. Due to the introduction of new questions in 1998 figures prior to this year are not directly comparable with earlier years' results.
5. Due to a register improvement exercise in 2001 labour figures prior to this are not directly comparable with later results.

Farmers: Income

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the number and proportion of farmers in (a) Cornwall, (b) the South West and (c) the UK who are living below the poverty line. [144221]

Barry Gardiner: The Government's preferred measure of "low income" is income that is less than 60 per cent. of the median equivalised income for all UK households after tax. The Farm Business Survey is not able to provide figures for income net of tax and the figures below are therefore based upon a modified low income threshold of £13,800 calculated before tax. Data on farm household income are available for 2005-06 only and not at the UK level.

	Estimated number of farm households below the modified low income threshold	Estimated proportion of households below the modified low income threshold (percentage)

Net farm income is defined as the return to the principal farmer and spouse for their manual and managerial labour and on the tenant type capital of the business. It excludes all income arising from outside the farm business.

Fisheries: Finance

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what funding the Government have allocated to the inshore, under 10 metre fishing fleet in the last 10 years. [142668]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 14 June 2007]: From 1997 to 2006 some £1.5 million of Government and European funds has been paid to owners for modernising fishing vessels in England.

Figures are not held separately for under 10 metre vessels.

Horses: Animal Welfare

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he plans to introduce a code of practice for tethering; and if he will make a statement. [145925]

Barry Gardiner: A code of practice on the tethering of horses will be introduced as soon as possible in line with available resources. No timetable has yet been set.

Livery Yards: Licensing

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he plans to require livery yards to be licensed; and if he will make a statement. [145924]

Barry Gardiner: Secondary legislation, under the Animal Welfare Act 2006, concerning livery yards will be introduced as soon as possible in line with available resources. No timetable has yet been set.

Pollution Control

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with (a) the senior management and (b) the trades union representatives of the Environment Agency on the implications for (i) pollution control and (ii) employment of field inspectors of the proposed changes in the pollution monitoring and control regime. [145850]

Mr. Bradshaw: The change from area office permitting to four national permitting centres is an operational matter for the Environment Agency. As such, it is its responsibility and the Secretary of State has had no discussions with either the senior management or trade union representatives about it.

The Agency understands that the scale of change can give rise to uncertainty for staff and has ensured that everyone in the organisation is aware of the programme of change. The Agency has full and regular consultation with the trade unions on the changes and potential impact on their members. The implementation of business changes which impact on staff is carried out in accordance with a set of principles agreed with the trade unions.

Sewers

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) when he expects the statutory instrument enabling the transfer of private sewers in the area including Lime Grove, Sittingbourne to the ownership of Southern Water will be (a) drafted, (b) made and (c) tabled; and if he will make a statement; [145746]

(2) what issues the forthcoming further public consultation on the transfer of private sewers to water companies will cover which (a) were and (b) were not raised in either of the two previous consultations on the transfer of private sewers; and what the reasons are for the further consultation. [145748]

Ian Pearson: In 2003, a public consultation reviewing existing private sewers in England and Wales sought views on a number of possible solutions to the problems caused by them, including the adoption of private sewers by water and sewerage undertakers.

The Government announced on 22 February that existing private sewers and lateral drains connected to the public sewer in England should be transferred into the ownership of the nine statutory water and sewerage companies. The Government undertook to consult on a range of ways transfer could be implemented and to examine how to prevent the proliferation of new private sewers. The consultation will also pose questions on the scope of assets to be included in transfer.

The consultation on implementation options will take place over the summer and will run for 12 weeks. Following this, regulations will be drafted, consulted on and amended accordingly. The timing of the process cannot be stated with any certainty, but the earliest date for regulations to be in force is likely to be summer 2008.

Water Sports: Bournemouth

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he plans to grant a licence to Bournemouth for the operation of the artificial surf reef. [145618]

Ian Pearson: An application to construct an artificial surf reef at Boscombe is under consideration by the Marine and Fisheries Agency and its advisers. An assessment is being made of the environmental, navigational and fisheries implications, taking into account the views of a number of consultees. A meeting has been arranged with the applicant and Bournemouth district council, to discuss aspects of the project.

Once this assessment has been completed a decision will be made as to whether to issue a licence.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Child Support

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many cases of (a) full compliance, (b) partial compliance and (c) non-compliance by the partner without care were recorded by the Child Support Agency in each of the last five years. [144885]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Gentleman.

Child Support: Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which electoral wards in West Lancashire have the highest numbers of Child Support Agency claimants. [144966]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to my hon. Friend with the information requested.

Children Support Agency

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was collected in maintenance by the Child Support Agency in each year since 1993-94; what the cost of running the agency was in each year; how much he expects it to collect in 2007-08; what the expected cost is of running the agency in 2007-08; and if he will make a statement. [145362]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 26 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply for the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how much was collected in maintenance by the Child Support Agency in each year since 1993-1994; what the cost of running the Agency was in each year; how much he expects to collect in 2007-08; what the expected cost of running the Agency in 2007-08; and if he will make a statement.

Such information as is available, is presented in the attached table.

Child Support Agency's actual and forecast net administration costs and maintenance collections for the years 1994-95 to 2007-08

1995-96	199.30	134.45	—
1994-95	192.40	74.20	—

Notes:

1. The increase in administration costs over 3 years from April '06 is as a result of the extra £120 million costs associated with the Operational Improvement Plan.
2. We are unable to provide figures for 1993-94, as audited accounts were not published for that year and as such the information is not available.
3. Information from 1994-95 to 2005-06 is sourced from the Child Support Agency's published Annual Report and Accounts, and differ slightly from the published QSS which uses monthly figures, not subjected to yea-end adjustment.
4. In 2005-06, following national Audit Office advice, the Agency's accounting boundaries were changed to include Child Support Reform Programme costs in the Agency's annual accounts. The 2005-06 accounts and the 2004-05 comparatives were changed accordingly. In line with this policy the table below includes Child Support Reform costs from 1999-00.
5. The 2006-07 net administration costs and maintenance collections may be subject to change and will be confirmed when the audited accounts are published in July 2007.
6. The 2007-08 estimate for maintenance collections is consistent with the published Agency target to collect or arrange £970 million of maintenance outcomes. The residual £310 million in maintenance will be delivered via private arrangements outside of the Agency's collection service.
7. Total maintenance collected and arranged from 1994 to 2003 does not include maintenance direct.
8. Maintenance Direct figures are sourced from Table 19.5 of the Quarterly Statistical Supplement. Maintenance Direct information is only available from April 2003 onwards.
9. The amount of maintenance received is that collected via the CSA collection service. This includes both clerical and system payments.
10. Monthly amounts of maintenance collected will not sum to the financial year figures published in the Annual Accounts as they do not include end year adjustments.
11. The value of Maintenance Direct arrangements in place shows the value of the assessments that the Agency has made i.e. the recommended amount to be paid to the Parent With Care by the non-resident parent. This value is an estimate because it is not possible to calculate, for every day of the year, the value of Maintenance Direct arrangements in place at that point in time. However, it is possible to calculate the value of weekly Maintenance Direct arrangements in place at the end of each month and derive a full monthly estimate from that.
12. Money relating to Maintenance Direct arrangements is not collected directly by the Agency. As such, the arrangement in place is the best estimate of the money being paid by the Non-Resident Parent.
13. Figures are rounded to the nearest £0.1 million.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many liability orders the Child Support Agency (a) applied for and (b) obtained in each (i) year and (ii) quarter since 1997; how many of the original orders were inaccurate; and if he will make a statement. [145372]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 26 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions regarding the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many liability orders the Child Support Agency (a) applied for and (b) obtained in each (i) year and (ii) quarter since 1997; how many of the original orders have been inaccurate; and if he will make a statement.

Due to the arrangements for assigning a court hearing date, the Agency may make an application for a liability order during one reporting year which has a court date assigned for the next therefore I have given the granted liability orders for a year only.

Information about the numbers of liability order granted is only available since March 1998. Table 1 attached, shows the information requested since April 1998. We do not routinely collate information with regard to civil enforcement processes on a quarterly basis, so this information is unavailable at this time.

To ensure the Agency applies for an appropriate Liability Order, a number of management checks are undertaken prior to a Liability Order application being made, including the provision of an account audit. In a small percentage of cases the Agency may identify a case where a Liability Order has been granted but subsequently discovered an issue, which requires remedial action before further civil proceedings can be considered. These may be procedural steps, including dealing with new information received as well as numerical inaccuracies. This information is set out in the attached Table 2.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Table 1: Numbers of Liability Orders granted in each year from April 1998 to January 2007

	Liability Orders granted
April 1998-March 1999	2,033
April 1999-March 2000	2,523
April 2000-March 2001	1,755
April 2001-March 2002	1,427
April 2002-March 2003	2,383
April 2003-March 2004	3,885
April 2004-March 2005	*7,760
April 2005-March 2006	*11,245
February 2006-January 2007	*13,335

Notes:
1. A liability order is a document obtained from the court showing that they legally recognise that the debt is owing. This is the same in both England and Wales and Scotland. This is required before the Agency can use litigation powers (Diligence in Scotland).
2. The figures marked with an asterix* are sourced from the Agency's Quarterly Summary Statistics. Prior to April 2004, the figures given were clerically collated and are actual figures, not subject to rounding.
3. Figures sourced from the Agency's Quarterly Summary Statistics are rounded to the nearest five.
4. The figures for 2006-07 are from February 2006 to January 2007 and these are the latest figures published available.

Although the software for recording data was introduced in 2003, robust information did not become available until April 2004 following remedial work by the Agency.

Children Support Agency: Manpower

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total staff numbers at the Child Support Agency were in each quarter since 1997; what he expects the total staff numbers at the agency to be in each quarter to 2010; and if he will make a statement. [145363]

Mr. Plaskitt: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to an earlier response given to his Parliamentary Question 141934 and 141935, published in Hansard on 21 June 2007; Official Report, column 2216W.

Children: Maintenance

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what definition the Child Support Agency uses of unfair and inappropriate when it decides not to recover debt owed by a non-resident parent. [143581]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 26 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what definition the Child Support Agency uses of unfair and inappropriate when it decides not to recover debt owed by a non-resident parent.

The 1991 Child Support Act, (Section 29) gives the Agency a discretionary power in the collection of child support maintenance, although the Agency does not have the power to write off debt owed by non-resident parer . In cases where the Agency decides not to recover debt the Agency must show that this decision is reasonable (rather than inappropriate or unfair) taking into account the circumstances of each case.

The Agency has issued guidance, for cases where there are exceptional circumstances and where the Agency would consider not collecting debt. The circumstances are not proscribed but do include, for example, terminal illness or death of a non-resident parent, parent with care or qualifying child, cases where the non-resident parent is in prison, hospital or residential care or where the parentage of the qualifying child is under dispute.

Unless there is a good reason not to do so, every effort will be made to ensure the non-resident parent fulfills their duty to pay child maintenance.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the proportion of the £3.5 billion debt owed to parents with care which was due to official delay or error. [143582]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 26 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what estimate he has made of the proportion of the £3.5 billion debt owed to Parents with Care which was due to official delay or error.

The Agency is unable to identify how much, if any, of the gross debt balance of £3.5 billion has been caused by official delay in processing a maintenance application.

In addition, if an official error is subsequently identified in a non-resident parent's assessment, any outstanding debt is reassessed and adjusted as necessary.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many parents with care were affected by a fully or partially non-compliant non-resident parent in each year since 1997. [143591]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Gentleman.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty, dated 26 June 2007:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many parents with care were affected by either a fully or partially non compliant non resident parent in each year since 1997.

The information that you have requested is only available in respect of cases rather than parents with care, a parent with care or non-resident parent may have more than one case. Information on fully and partially non-compliant cases is set out in the attached table.

The first year of the Operational Improvement Plan focused on the reduction of the Agency's uncleared applications. The Agency has substantially reduced the number of uncleared applications, which are at their lowest level since comparable records began in May 1999. The second year of the Operational Improvement Plan, will focus on Enforcement which will include greater focus on improving case compliance.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

The volumes of nil and partially compliant cases with a positive liability: 1997 to 2007

Quarter ending	Nil compliant	Partial compliant
February 1997	115,500	57,600
February 1998	116,100	63,100
February 1999	137,000	78,000
February 2000	144,100	82,100
February 2001	131,600	85,700
February 2002	119,600	77,400
March 2003	107,400	88,900
March 2004	123,200	86,900
March 2005	145,200	98,500
March 2006	148,900	129,000
March 2007	170,600	142,400

Notes:

1. Compliance of a case is measured over a three month period. If a case was open and classed as a collection service case at the end of the period, and within the period money was charged on the case but no money was collected, then the case is classed as nil compliant. If some, but not all, of the money charged was collected via the collection service, then the case is classed as partially compliant. If all of the money charged was collected via the collection service, then the case is classed as fully compliant.
2. Data as at end of March has been used from 2003 onwards. Data as at end of February has been used prior to this, as information for March is unavailable.
3. Volumes are rounded to the nearest 100.

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many deductions from earnings orders were (a) applied for and (b) successfully implemented by the Child Support Agency in each month since March 2003. [144786]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 25 June 2007]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Lady with the information requested.

Jobcentres: Chard

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will assess the environmental impact of closing the jobcentre in Chard; and if he will make a statement. [144122]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Gentleman with the information requested.

Letter from Mel Groves, dated 26 June 2007:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the environmental impact resulting from the proposed closure of Chard Jobcentre. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to Lesley Strathie as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus. I am replying on her behalf as Acting Chief Executive.

No specific environmental impact assessment has been undertaken. However the decision to consider Chard for potential closure has taken account of the likely additional travel requirements for both customers and staff. Consideration will be given to postal arrangements for customers who may experience particular difficulty with any future travel requirements.

We are continuing to develop our nationwide network of Jobcentres, and to review and improve our services. Advances in technology and the increased availability of Contact Centre facilities mean that increasing numbers of customers, including employers, access our services via the Internet or telephone. This will result in a positive environmental impact as the necessity to travel to attend our offices is reduced.

I hope this is helpful.

National Insurance Contributions: Rebates

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for what reasons his Department has capped the level of contracted-out rebates for contracted-out appropriate personal pensions and money purchase schemes; and if he will make a statement. [141178]

James Purnell: Age related rebates for contracted-out personal pension schemes and money purchase occupational schemes were introduced in April 1997. The details are in the Secretary of State's report of March 1996, which forms part of the "Occupational and Personal Pension Schemes Review of Certain Contracting-out Terms, Cm. 3221" This approach to age related rebates has continued in subsequent rebate reviews.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what effect on costs to the public purse the Government have achieved from capping the age-related national insurance rebate to appropriate personal pension schemes for each year from 2007-08 to 2012-13; and if he will make a statement; [141452]

(2) what savings are expected to result for the Exchequer from the decision to cap contracted-out rebates for personal pensions and money purchase occupational schemes (a) at 7.4 per cent. rather than the previous cap level of 10.5 per cent. and (b) at 7.4 per cent. rather than at the levels recommended by the Government Actuary in each year from 2007-08 to 2012-13; and if he will make a statement. [141204]

James Purnell: The effect on national insurance revenues arising from recent changes to age-related rebate rates is broadly neutral over the longer term.

New Deal

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what the average cost per participant was on the New Deal for young people in each year since 2001; [143573]

(2) what the average cost per participant was on the New Deal 25 plus in each year since 2001; [143574]

(3) what the average cost per participant was on the New Deal 50 plus in each year since 2001; [143575]

(4) what the average cost per participant was on the New Deal for disabled people in each year since 2001; [143576]

(5) what the average cost per participant was on the New Deal for lone parents in each year since 2001. [143577]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The available information is in the following table.

New Deal—average cost per participant

	New Deal for young people	New Deal 25 plus	New Deal for young people and New Deal plus[1]	New Deal 50 plus[2]	New Deal for lone parents	New Deal for disabled people

[1] There is no split currently available between New Deal for young people and New Deal 25 plus for 2005-06
[2] Participant numbers for New Deal 50 plus are only available from January 2004.
[3] Calculations for New Deal 50 plus for 2003-04 are based on starts to the programme from January to March 2004 only.
[4] New Deal 50 plus costs for 2004-05 and 2005-06 were only incurred by those people who claimed the New Deal 50 plus in-work training grant.

Notes:
1. On 6 April 2003 the New Deal 50 plus Employment Credit was replaced by the 50 plus element of the Working Tax Credit. For the period Jan-March 2004 some of those who were helped into work through New Deal 50 plus may still have been receiving the Employment Credit, which was paid for up to a year. Costs also included the New Deal 50 plus in-work training grant which some participants claimed after entering work through the programme.
2. New Deal 50 plus costs for 2004-05 and 2005-06 were only incurred by those people who claimed the New Deal 50 plus in-work training grant.
3. Costs are calculated on the total number of people participating and total spend on each programme, excluding administrative costs and include, where applicable, costs incurred in payments made to employers and Job Brokers.
4. Calculations are also based on all New Deal programme costs and allowances paid to participants apart from the 50 plus element of the Working Tax Credit, which is met by HMRC. As this is not included, New Deal 50 plus costs reduce considerably from 2004-05.
5. Following agreement with HM Treasury in 2002-03, ring fences were removed from New Deal. Calculations exclude administrative costs as it is no longer possible to identify the costs of administering the costs of each New Deal separately from the costs of other labour market activities.
6. Calculations include start-up costs.
7. Programme start dates are: New Deal for Young People: January 1998; New Deal 25 plus: July 1998; New Deal for Lone Parents: October 1998; New Deal 50 plus: April 2000; New Deal for Disabled People: July 2001 (New Deal for Disabled People pilots ran from September 1998-June 2001).
8. Calculations are based on latest spend figures to March 2006 and New Deal programme start figures to March 2006.

Pensions

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he expects to be able to take between the publication of the initial report in the summer of 2007 on pension scheme assets held by schemes in wind-up with a deficiency of assets to protect those scheme assets and the publication of the final report. [143543]

James Purnell: The prospective assistance provided by the Financial Assistance scheme and the current work of the review into the use of relevant scheme assets should not affect the decisions that trustees take in relation to their scheme funds.

It is not for the Government to offer advice to trustees on whether and when they should purchase annuities. Trustees must act in the best interest of their members and in accordance with scheme rules and their statutory obligations.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what survey work has been carried out to establish the retirement income replacement rate which individuals are prepared to fund by contributions from current salary in the UK. [144216]

Mr. Plaskitt: No survey work provides information in exactly this form.

The Pensions Commission estimated median desired replacement rates using information on individuals' current income and on the income individuals considered enough to live on in retirement. In addition the Commission also looked at actual replacement rates and levels of expenditure. Considering the evidence together they concluded that there could be no universal definition of pension adequacy, but used benchmark replacement rates of 80 per cent. of gross earnings for lowest earners, declining to 67 per cent. for median earners and to 50 per cent. for top earners to assess pension adequacy. (See Table 1)[1].

Both the Pensions Commission and DWP have estimated the number of people who are saving enough to reach these benchmarks utilising evidence from more than one survey. DWP current estimates indicate that around seven million people are undersaving[2].

Pensions: Advisory Services

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many home visits have been carried out by the Pension Service in each year since 1997, broken down by type of visit and local area. [141831]

James Purnell: The information that is available for the area of East Sussex is in the following table. I will write to the hon. Gentleman with information on the remaining areas and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Home visits carried out by the Pension Service

	Nationally	East Sussex
2004-05	549,369	—
2005-06	954,359	—
2006-07	897,702	9,687

Notes:
1. All visits are 'Holistic Visits' so whatever the reason for referral a full benefit entitlement check is undertaken.
2. The Pension Service Local Service was created in April 2004.
3. There are occasions when a follow up visit is requested by the pension centre to clarify some aspects of the application; however these are not recorded separately.
4. The number of visits at a cluster level is held on the Local Service System (LSS). The East Sussex cluster figures for the years 2004-05 and 2005-06 are not available because of data protection issues which means customer data 18 months from the date the referral is cleared.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost has been of the Pension Service's outbound telephone campaign. [141876]

James Purnell: The information requested is not available. Outbound calls from the DWP are not broken down by campaign.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the effect of the Pension Service's (a) method of home visits, (b) outbound telephone campaign and (c) strategy of identifying harder-to-reach customers by working with local partners on take-up of services. [141878]

James Purnell: The information that is available is in the following tables.

Effect of home visits, 2006-07

	Number
Visits made	897,702
Claims to various benefits	[1]481,434

[1] This includes claims made following Information Point appointments. There were 57,522 Information Point appointments during 2006-07.

Pensions: Financial Assistance Scheme

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what measures his Department has taken in conjunction with the financial assistance scheme (FAS) to raise the profile of the FAS among members of occupational schemes that come under its remit. [141882]

James Purnell: Since the inception of the financial assistance scheme (FAS), the main focus of our communications has been aimed at trustees and administrators in order to encourage them to apply for FAS and to supply the member data needed to make payments.

We currently provide information for members via our website at www.dwp.gov.uk/fas and we have worked with trustees on a scheme specific basis to provide information for their updates to members about the progress of the winding up.

We recognise the need to provide more clarity to members about the nature of FAS benefits, how they work and when they can expect payments. Lord McKenzie, announced in the Lords on 6 June that we are introducing arrangements so that, rather that relying on trustees to make applications on their behalf, individual scheme members who believe that they are eligible for payment can advise the FAS operational unit direct, which will then contact the scheme trustees to seek to arrange a payment.

Personal Accounts

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether (a) Ministers, (b) special advisers and (c) officials in his Department briefed Financial Times journalists on 13 June 2007 about the Government's plans on personal accounts; and if he will make a statement. [144078]

Mr. Hutton: No Financial Times journalists were briefed on 13 June 2007. There was regular communication between Ministers, special advisers and officials and our stakeholders, including journalists and other political parties, in the run up to the publication of our proposals on personal accounts.

State Second Pension

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the impact on national insurance revenues of recent changes in the number of people contracted out of the state second pension. [141551]

James Purnell: The effect on national insurance revenues arising from recent changes in the number of people contracted out of the state second pension is broadly neutral over the longer term.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Adoption: Foster Care

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what assessment he has made of (a) delays caused in adoption to fostered children going through the court process without a care order under section 31 of the Children's Act 1989 and (b) the disruption in the care provided to such children caused by such delays; and if he will make a statement; [145730]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact of a child not being subject to a care order under section 31 of the Children's Act 1989 on the adoption process; and if he will make a statement. [145808]

Mr. Dhanda: The Government's view is that delays in relation to the adoption of a child, whether or not the child is also the subject of care proceedings, are likely to be damaging and prejudicial to his/her welfare, to the extent that it may contribute to disruption. This is the case whether it arises from delays in processes that are the responsibility of local authorities, such as the operation of adoption panels, or those that arise in the family courts.

Cache Foundation Award in Caring for Children

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils at the end of key stage 4 were entered for a Cache Foundation Award in Caring for Children in each of the last five years. [145727]

Jim Knight: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Children in Care: Greater London

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children were forcibly removed from their parents by social services in each London borough in each of the last five years. [145218]

Mr. Dhanda: It would not be possible for local authority social services departments forcibly to remove a child of any age into their care in circumstances where parents do not consent to this. While social services departments and the police have powers to obtain emergency orders so that they can act immediately to protect a child, the Children Act 1989 does not permit local authorities to remove children from the care of their parents without referring the matter to a Court.

The number of children who were taken into care during the years ending 31 March 2002 to 2006 is shown in the following table.

'Children taken into care' are children who started to be looked after under the following legal statuses: interim or full care orders, and police protection or emergency protection or child assessment orders. They exclude children freed for adoption or for whom a placement order was granted, they exclude children under voluntary accommodation and they also exclude children under youth justice legal statuses.

[3] Figures are taken from the SSDA903 one-third sample survey.
[4] Only the first occasion on which a child was taken into care in the year has been counted.
[5] "Children taken into care" are children who started to be looked after under the following legal statuses: interim or full care orders, and police protection or emergency protection or child assessment orders. They exclude children freed for adoption or for whom a placement order was granted, they exclude children under voluntary accommodation and they also exclude children under youth justice legal statuses.
[6] Historical figures may differ from older publications. This is mainly due to the implementation of amendments sent by some local authorities after the publication date of previous materials.
[7] To maintain the confidentiality of each individual child, data at national level are rounded to the nearest 100 if they exceed 1,000 or to the nearest 10 otherwise. At local authority level, data are rounded to the nearest 5 and at region level, to the nearest 10. Where the number was 5 or less (other than 0) this has been suppressed and replaced with a hyphen (-).

Children: Protection

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on co-operation between European Union countries on preventing sex offenders from gaining employment with children, with particular reference to the exchange of information on criminal records. [140660]

Joan Ryan: I have been asked to reply as the Home Office is leading UK negotiations within the EU to enhance the contents and format of the criminal records which are exchanged.

A framework decision has recently been agreed under which member states will be obliged to inform other member states of all criminal convictions imposed against their nationals as soon as possible. These provisions, which will improve and speed up existing exchange systems, will ensure that each member state holds a complete criminal record for its nationals, containing all convictions imposed by EU member states. Disqualifications arising from criminal convictions must also be exchanged where they are recorded in the criminal record. This will facilitate the taking into account of the final judgments of the courts of other member states in the course of new criminal proceedings and in employment vetting in the state of nationality.

A new Vetting and Barring scheme is being introduced under the Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Act 2006 which will focus on providing the maximum possible protection for children and vulnerable adults from possible harm from unsuitable persons in the workplace.

There will be a further opportunity to look at these issues as part of the review of criminality information currently underway.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent representations he has received on the ability of sex offenders in the European Union to move between countries and take up employment with children. [140661]

Joan Ryan: I have been asked to reply as the Home Office is leading UK negotiations within the EU to enhance the contents and format of the criminal records which are exchanged.

I refer the hon. Lady to the reply I gave in response to her question on 19 June 2007, Official Report, column 1781W.

There have been no representations on the ability of sex offenders in the European Union to move between countries and take up employment with children to the Home Office.

City Academies: General Certificate of Secondary Education

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the (a) GCSE and (b) GCSE equivalent examination results for each city academy were in 2006; how many pupils were entered for each subject; and how many achieved each grade, broken down by subject. [144319]

Jim Knight: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Class Sizes: Chelmsford

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of classes in the West Chelmsford area for five to seven year olds exceed 30 pupils in size. [145617]

Jim Knight: The School Standards and Framework Act 1998 places a duty on local authorities and schools to limit the size of infant classes for five, six, and seven year olds taught by one teacher to 30 or fewer pupils. The Education (Infant Class Sizes) Regulations 1998 allow the limit of 30 to be exceeded in limited circumstances. In prescribed circumstances, this allows children to be treated as "excepted pupils" for the purposes of ascertaining whether or not the class size limit has been exceeded.

As at January 2007 there was one infant class in West Chelmsford constituency with 31 pupils. However, this class did contain one excepted pupil making the class lawfully large.

Departments: Delivery Unit

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 117W, on Departments: Delivery Unit, what the (a) start date and (b) end date was of each review; and on what date a final report was produced for each. [144462]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department does not collect this information centrally.

Departments: Families Unit

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which Minister has responsibility for the Families Unit; what its current annual budget is; how many staff it employs; what its aims are; and which organisations are the unit's strategic partners. [145798]

Mr. Dhanda: Families Unit is part of the DfES Schools Directorate. It seeks to promote the importance of the family, including support to parents, across national and local government policy development. It supports the Parents Strategy Programme—a sub-programme of the Every Child Matters: Change for Children Programme—which brings together the main areas of DfES work on parents. It has 22.6 staff and a budget in 2007-08 of £105 million. Staff in the Unit work with a wide range of strategic partners across the parenting and children services sector including: 2as1, AFCS, Coram Family, Families Need Fathers, Family Planning Association, Fathers Direct, Family Welfare Association, Marriage Care, National Association of Children's Information Services, National Children's Bureau, National Family and Parenting Institute, One Parent Families/ Gingerbread, One Plus One, Opportunity Links, Project for Advocacy, Counselling and Education, Parenting UK, Parentline Plus, Relate, Safe Ground, Tavistock Centre for Couple Relationship, The Place2Be, Time for Families, Training and Development Agency.

I lead joint work to secure coherence in, and drive forward, the Department's policies in relation to parents and families, working with other Ministers, in particular, the Minister for Schools and 14-19 Learners and the Minister for Children, Young People and Families.

Departments: Northern Ireland

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will place in the Library a copy of the concordat governing the relationship between his Department and the Northern Ireland Administration. [145941]

Mr. Dhanda: The concordats between my Department and the Department of Education, Northern Ireland, and the Department for Employment and Learning, Northern Ireland, are publicly available via the DfES website:

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/concordat/index.shtml.

Departments: Older Workers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of staff in his Department were over 60 years of age in each of the last three years. [145679]

Mr. Dhanda: The information requested is set out as follows and is at 1 April for each of the last three years.

	Percentage
2005	2.4
2006	2.6
2007	3.8

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people aged (a) over 55 years of age and (b) over 60 years of age have been recruited by his Department in each of the last three years; and what percentage in each case this is of the number of new recruits in each year. [145707]

Mr. Dhanda: The information is set out in the following tables. All numbers and percentages relate to permanent staff.

55 and over	4	3
60 and over	2	1.5

2005

Faith Schools: Abuse

Lorely Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps he is taking to prevent the verbal or physical abuse of children in faith-based learning environments before the implementation of the Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Scheme in 2008. [145413]

Mr. Dhanda: Safeguarding children in all communities is a top priority for this Government.

No community supports the physical, sexual or psychological abuse of children. And wherever we see abuse, in whatever context, we need to challenge it. Abuse in any community will not be tolerated. "Working Together to Safeguard Children" was recently updated and sets out clearly how individuals should work together to safeguard and promote the welfare of children. This guidance must be followed wherever there is concern about the welfare of a child. Local Safeguarding Children Boards have an important role to play in engaging with organisations in their area, including key faith groups, with a view to safeguarding all children.

The DFES recognises the significant contribution over a great number of years that many communities make towards the education of our children, particularly children from minority ethnic backgrounds, through supplementary school initiatives.

In recognition of the many achievements of the supplementary and mother tongue school sector, DFES recently announced the establishment of a new National Resource Centre (NRC) to support and promote supplementary schools in England. The centre jointly funded by the Department and the Paul Hamlyn Foundation and managed by ContinYou, will support the development of more and better supplementary schools through, in particular, the extended schools and specialist schools programme, and will help to spread good practice in all areas, including safeguarding children.

Foster Care

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many foster family arrangements in all local authorities (a) remained as a stable family unit and (b) have broken down with the children returning to care facilities in the last 12 months. [144445]

Mr. Dhanda: At 31 March 2006, 23,600 children looked after by a local authority had been in the same foster care placement for more than 365 days.

During the year ending 31 March 2006, 15,800 children looked after by a local authority moved to another placement from a foster care placement. This figure excludes children who return to be placed with their parents.

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children are in private foster care arrangements in England. [145764]

Mr. Dhanda: The number of children who were in private fostering arrangements notified to local authorities in England at 31 March 2006 was 980.

Free School Meals

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of pupils attending the 200 highest performing comprehensive schools by unweighted attainment of five or more A*-C grade GCSEs, are in receipt of free school meals. [141746]

Jim Knight: The information for all schools has been placed in the Library.

GCE A-level

Stephen Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students at (a) state comprehensive schools, (b) state grammar schools, (c) state secondary modern schools, (d) other state secondary schools, (e) further education colleges, (f) state sixth form colleges and (g) independent schools and colleges were taking at least two A-levels in each of the last four years for which figures are available. [145947]

Jim Knight: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many and what percentage of pupils from (a) independent, (b) maintained and (c) grammar schools received a grade A in two or more of mathematics, further mathematics, physics, chemistry, French, German and Spanish A-levels in the latest year for which figures are available; [142985]

(2) how many and what percentage of pupils from (a) independent, (b) maintained and (c) grammar schools received three or more A grades at A-level in the latest year for which figures are available. [142975]

Jim Knight: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

GCE A-level: Languages

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils took A-levels in (a) French, (b) German, (c) Italian, (d) Spanish and (e) Russian in each year since 2000. [141416]

Jim Knight: The figures requested are in the following table.

GCE A-level entries in selected languages by 16 to 18-year-old[1] candidates, all schools and colleges, 1999/2000 to 2005/06

	French	German	Italian	Spanish	Russian

[1] Age at start of academic year (at previous 31 August).

GCSE: Gender

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of (a) girls and (b) boys in maintained schools were awarded (i) 5 A*-C at GCSE and (ii) 5 A*-C at GCSE including mathematics and English in the last period for which figures are available, broken down by (A) parliamentary constituency, (B) local education authority and (C) region. [143357]

Jim Knight [holding answer 18 June 2007]: Information on the performance of pupils in GCSE examinations is available on the Department's website at http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000702/index.shtml.

This provides information on the achievement of 5 A*-C grades and 5 A*-C grades including English and mathematics at GCSE at local authority and regional level, split by gender.

The proportion of pupils achieving 5 grades A*-C at constituency level is available at http://www.dfes.gov.uk/inyourarea/

This is not split by gender. Figures for the proportion of pupils achieving 5 A*- C grades at GCSE including English and mathematics at constituency level can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Home Education: Finance

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to fund and support children receiving home education. [145674]

Jim Knight: The Government believe that school is the best educational setting for most children. However, we respect the right of parents to choose education at home for their children. There is no Government funding available to support home education, nor any plans to change current arrangements. On 8 May we published draft guidelines for consultation which set out how local authorities can best support home educating parents.

National Academy for Gifted and Talented Youth

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children have joined the National Academy of Gifted and Talented Youth since July 2006. [140097]

Jim Knight: 34,436 pupils have joined the National Academy for Gifted and Talented Youth since July 2006.

Primary Education: Teaching Methods

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 4 June 2007, Official Report, column 498W, on primary education: teaching methods, what information his Department collects on personalised learning in primary schools in (a) English and (b) mathematics. [144448]

Jim Knight: As defined in the report of the Teaching and Learning in 2020 Review Group, personalised learning means taking a highly structured and responsive approach to each child and young person's learning, in order that all are able to progress, achieve and participate.

Many schools and teachers have tailored curriculum and teaching methods to meet the needs of children and young people with great success for many years. What is new is our drive to make the best practices universal across all schools, particularly for children whose needs can be the most challenging to meet. Personalised learning can therefore be described as effective day-to-day teaching and learning which is assessment-centred and which enables each learner to engage and 'own' their own learning. It can also encompass a wide range of more specific practices, such as Assessment for Learning and small group and one-to-one work with pupils.

The success of personalising teaching and learning will therefore be measured in improvements in the attainment of all pupils—especially in English and maths—in narrowing the gaps between different groups and in all reports of the quality of teaching and learning. We do not gather information on personalised learning as a separate programme or initiative, but Ofsted inspection reports, attainment data, evaluation of the 'Making Good Progress' pilots and a wide range of information sources can be used to build up a picture of personalised learning in both primary and secondary schools.

Procedures Relating to Soham Murders Inquiry

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether he plans to introduce a central scheme pursuant to recommendation nineteen of the Bichard Inquiry Report. [140279]

Mr. McNulty: I have been asked to reply.

A central vetting scheme created to deliver recommendation 19 of the Bichard Inquiry Report will be launched in autumn 2008.

Full information on the progress of the development of this new scheme is available in the Fourth Progress Report on the Bichard Inquiry Recommendations (pages 45 to 49 inclusive) published by the Home Office in May 2007.

Pupils: Intimidation

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will bring forward plans to carry out research to assess best practice in (a) preventing and changing bullying behaviour and (b) supporting those being bullied in schools. [145916]

Jim Knight: As a result of the recent Education and Skills Committee enquiry into bullying, and subsequent report, and an independent evaluation of the Department's work with the Anti-Bullying Alliance (ABA), the Department is in the process of assessing its overall strategy of work to identify upcoming priorities and will shortly be competitively tendering for elements of work to be carried out in the next financial year. One of these elements will be research into bullying. This will look at what strategies are most effective in tackling bullying.

The Department currently commissions Goldsmiths College London, through the ABA, to provide research aligned with policy needs. In the last financial year, the projects undertaken on behalf of the Department included reviews of disability and bullying and on bullying in the community. Research projects this year will look at how schools can best support young people displaying bullying behaviours; young people at risk of anti-social behaviour; and bullying of looked-after children. The Department has also undertaken research with young people on the subject of cyberbullying to inform and develop key, relevant messages for our planned digital information campaign.

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will bring forward plans to audit how different schools across the country respond to bullying in schools. [145917]

Jim Knight: The Department currently has no plans to collect statistical data from schools or conduct a formal audit on how schools respond to bullying. As stated in the Department's recent response to the Education and Skills Committee report on bullying, there are logistical difficulties involved in asking schools to record incidents of bullying and their responses to incidents. In particular, there are issues around consistency of definition and how bullying might be reported if it continues over a significant period of time. There is also a question of how we might interpret an increase in reported incidents, which might occur as the result of an improved anti-bullying policy and new focus on openness. These complications could lead to more bureaucracy and greater workload for schools.

The Department will continue to recommend in its revised anti-bullying guidance that schools record incidents of bullying and report the statistics to their local authority. The guidance will further advise that the LA should analyse the information gathered from schools to identify any issues of particular concern. This will enable the authority to be better informed in the development of appropriate strategies to tackle bullying across its area. The data will also enable LAs to support and challenge schools in their duties to promote the welfare of pupils.

In addition, the forthcoming "Tellus 2" survey should give us more comprehensive data on young people's experiences of bullying in schools. It will be an annual survey (starting this year), covering all LAs. Data will be considered by Ofsted in their annual performance assessment (APA) of each LA's services, and could lead to Ofsted looking more closely at anti-bullying practices in a particular authority.

We are currently looking at how we might use data derived from the survey to inform future policy development. We are also working with the National Strategies to undertake some localised auditing of how schools deal with bullying. The National Strategies are identifying secondary schools with weak or ineffective anti-bullying policies and practice. Regional advisers and local authority consultants will provide support and challenge to these schools, working with them to embed good practice, as well as development of appropriate intervention strategies at both staff and pupil level. Progress on this work will be monitored and reported to the Department on a regular basis.

School Meals: Standards

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people have achieved a Level 1 qualification in Providing a Healthier School Meal Service in each year since it was introduced. [145880]

Mr. Dhanda: It is estimated that the Vocationally Related Qualification (VRQ) "Providing Healthier School Meals Service" has been obtained by 4,405 candidates since its introduction in September 2005. This represents 1,285 candidates in the academic year September 2005-August 2006 and 3,120 candidates so far in the present academic year (September 2006-mid June 2007).

Schools: Counselling

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how much will be spent on providing independent school-based counselling services for children and young people in each of the next three years; [145915]

(2) if he will bring forward plans for a comprehensive national independent school-based counselling service for children and young people who need to access it; [145918]

(3) how many children in England have access to independent school-based counselling services. [145919]

Mr. Dhanda: We believe that individual schools are best placed to decide the arrangements which should be put in place to meet the needs of their pupils; if a school decides to provide a counselling service, it is free to choose an external provider or directly to provide the service on an 'in-house' basis. The Department does not collect data on the amount spent on independent school-based counselling services or on the number of children who have access to such services.

There are already many alternative sources of help for pupils experiencing difficulties within and outside school, including learning mentors, Connexions personal advisers and Behaviour and Education Support Teams (BESTs). They can all help pupils tackle problems in schools (e.g. bullying, poor attendance) and they can provide young people with access to specialist services that treat problems such as anxiety, depression, eating problems, drug addiction and family breakdown.

Supporting the psychological well being and mental health of pupils is already a key component of school based programmes such as the National Healthy Schools programme and social and emotional aspects of learning (SEAL). Through the development of comprehensive Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services (CAMHS) we are seeing increasing numbers of CAMHS teams working in more effective and innovative ways with their local schools and extended schools.

Schools: Disability Aids

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many text books are available in electronic form to enable schools to convert them to Braille; and what plans he has to make more text books available to schools in electronic form; [132924]

(2) what plans he has to make sheet music printed in Braille available in schools. [132925]

Mr. Dhanda: Part 4 of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 requires schools and local authorities to plan to improve access to the curriculum and written materials for disabled pupils over time. This includes all National Curriculum taught subjects, such as music.

With regard to the availability of text books and materials in electronic format for schools, I refer the hon. Lady to the reply I gave on 19 March 2007, Official Report, column 721W, to my hon. Friend the Member for West Ham (Lyn Brown).

Schools: Languages

Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many secondary schools in England teach non-European modern languages to (a) GCSE and (b) A-level standard. [144692]

Jim Knight: The information requested is not held.

Schools: Sports

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was spent on (a) the provision of sport equipment, (b) the training of teachers in sports-related activities and (c) the recruitment of coaches to provide sports lessons in (i) primary schools and (ii) secondary schools in each year since 1997. [144258]

Jim Knight: Data relating to the amount of money which schools spend on sports equipment and the recruitment of coaches to provide sports lessons in schools are not collected centrally.

The PE and school sport professional development programme, part of the National School Sport Strategy, has been running since 2003 and aims to raise the quality of teaching and learning in PE and school sport for all pupils. Over 156,000 training places have been taken up on the programme since it began. Funding for the five years that the professional development programme has been running is as follows:

	Programme funding (£)
2003/04	2,000,000
2004/05	6,000,000
2005/06	10,000,000
2006/07	3,100,000
2007/08	3,000,000

Secondary Education: West Lancashire

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the allocation to each secondary school in West Lancashire constituency was for extended schools development in (a) 2006-07 and (b) 2007-08. [143536]

Beverley Hughes: The Department does not hold information on how much funding each secondary school in West Lancashire constituency was allocated for extended schools development in either 2006-07 or 2007-08, and the information requested can be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

The Government have allocated a total of £384 million to local authorities in England over the period 2006-08 to support the development of extended schools. The Department for Education and Skills encourages all local authorities to devolve their extended schools funding to their schools. This should be done in line with their plan for rolling out extended schools which they will have drawn up in discussion with all their schools. Lancashire has received £3,531,061 in 2006-07 and £4,515,291 in 2007-08. We do not break down funding by parliamentary constituency.

In addition to this, schools are able to use their school standards grant to support the development of extended services. This is a wide-ranging grant that schools can use for any purpose of the school and which from 2006-07 can also be used for extended school provision. It is entirely for the school to decide how they use this funding depending on their particular priorities.

To date, good progress is being made in Lancashire towards the Government's aim of all schools providing access to extended services by 2010. Thus far, 66 schools in Lancashire are providing access to the full range of extended services of which 11 are secondary schools.

Special Educational Needs: Lancashire

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children aged five to 16 attending schools in the Ribble Valley are registered with a statement of special educational needs. [145961]

Mr. Dhanda: The available information is given in the table.

All schools: number and percentage of pupils with statements of special educational needs (SEN) [1,2] as at January 2007 Ribble Valley parliamentary constituency

HOME DEPARTMENT

Antisocial Behaviour: Bridgend

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many incidents of antisocial behaviour there were in Bridgend constituency in each of the last 10 years. [144307]

Mr. Coaker: The Home Office does not hold records of incidents of antisocial behaviour.

Individual police forces, local authorities and housing associations as well as other bodies may keep records of antisocial behaviour that is reported to them, but these figures are not collated centrally.

Anti-terrorism Control Orders: Biometrics

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date he became aware that individuals subject to control orders cannot have their fingerprints and DNA taken by the police. [144963]

Mr. McNulty: It is inaccurate to say the police cannot take fingerprints or DNA from individuals on control orders. Section 1 (3) of the Prevention of Terrorism Act 2005 allows for the imposition of any obligations that the Secretary of State or the court considers necessary for purposes connected with preventing or restricting involvement by that individual in terrorism-related activity. The Government could therefore make the provision of fingerprints or DNA an obligation under a control order, if it was considered necessary and proportionate to do so. Moreover, powers to take fingerprints are governed by other legislation, such as PACE. If, for example, an individual committed an offence while subject to a control order, fingerprints and DNA could be taken in the usual way.

The proposal for the forthcoming Counter-Terrorism Bill is to provide equivalent powers after a control order is served as currently apply when arrests are made under the Terrorism Act 2000 or the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984. This will provide the same police powers to retain, store and use the DNA and fingerprints of individuals on control orders and will mean that the procedures and safeguards that generally apply, also apply in control order cases.

Asylum

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 28 February 2007, Official Report, column 1351W, on asylum, when he expects to be able to say how many asylum seekers will be dispersed and to which boroughs. [133777]

Mr. Byrne: In the reply of 28 February 2007, Official Report, column 1351W, I advised that a review of cases would be undertaken to determine whether there were circumstances which required the continued provision of accommodation in London.

There are approximately 2,000[1] cases supported in the London area under section 4 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999. Reviews are now being undertaken of each of these cases to determine where they had their original support provided and if they have any special reason for remaining in London. Our current intention is to complete the review of each case by the 31 October 2007. It will only be after these reviews have been completed that we will be able to quantify the number of moves and to which local authorities they will be dispersed.

[1] This information is based on internal management information, and as such, is not published within the official statistics. Information is provisional and subject to change.

Asylum: Afghanistan

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Afghan asylum seekers cited membership of the Taliban as grounds for (a) claiming asylum and (b) it being unsafe for them to return to Afghanistan in each of the last five years. [145053]

Mr. Byrne: Information about an applicant's reasons for claiming asylum is not collected centrally. The requested information could therefore be obtained only at disproportionate cost by examination of individual case records

Information on asylum applications, initial decisions, appeals and removals for nationals of Afghanistan are published quarterly and annually. Copies of these publications are available from the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Bicycles: Theft

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were (a) prosecuted and (b) sentenced for bicycle thefts in each of the last five years. [145442]

Mr. Coaker: Data extracted from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform showing the number of people proceeded against and sentenced for theft of a pedal cycle in England and Wales from 2001 to 2005 are shown in the following table.

Number of persons prosecuted at magistrates' courts and sentenced at all courts for bicycle theft, England and Wales, 2001 to 2005[1, 2]

	Proceeded against	Sentenced
2001	1,349	809
2002	1,262	799
2003	1,112	678
2004	1,011	691
2005	1,152	861

[1] These data are on the principal offence basis.

[2] Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts and police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

Demonstrations: Whitehall

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) which organisations applied to mount protests in Whitehall on the afternoon of 15 June 2007; when the applications were (a) made and (b) approved; and if he will make a statement; [145793]

(2) how many (a) Metropolitan and (b) British Transport Police officers were deployed to police the protests in Whitehall on 15 June 2007; what operational instructions they were given to assist the public in accessing Whitehall and public transport; and what comments and complaints by members of the public were noted by police officers during the operation; [145794]

(3) when Transport for London was informed of the protests taking place in Whitehall on 15 June; and what operational instructions or guidance were given to Transport for London ahead of the organised protests in order to minimise disruption to the travelling public; [145795]

(4) what assessment he has made of the level of disruption to traffic, public transport and the flow of pedestrians during the protests in Whitehall on the afternoon of 15 June 2007; [145796]

(5) what monitoring was undertaken of the individual participants in the protests held on 15 June in Whitehall; what assessment he has made of the nature of the protest placards in terms of relevant statutory restrictions on inciteful language; and if he will make a statement. [145797]

Mr. Coaker: The policing of demonstrations in Whitehall is an operational matter for the Commissioner of the Police of the Metropolis. I have asked the Metropolitan police to collate the information requested by the hon. Gentleman. I shall write to the hon. Gentleman when that information is available.

Departments: Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent by staff in his Department via departmental (a) credit, (b) procurement and (c) fuel cards in each of the last three years. [145295]

Mr. Byrne: The expenditure in the Department via departmental (a) credit, (b) procurement cards and (c) fuel cards for the last three calendar years is shown in the following table.

	Government procurement card	Travel and expense cards	Fuel cards
2004	2,254,880	0	101,608
2005	11,834,369	158,750	558,156
2006	21,779,394	1,277,283	651,100

Travel and expenses cards were introduced in 2005 on a trial basis. Fuel card figures for 2004 relate only to the Arval contract which commenced that year. Figures for the previous contract could be obtained only at disproportionate cost because of changes in the accounting systems and organisational arrangements.

The Department has adopted OGCbuying.solutions pre-tendered national frameworks for the Government Procurement Card (GPC) and Government Fuel Card facilities in line with best practice. GPC is used for the consolidation of prompt and efficient payment of goods and services.

Arval Fuel Cards are available for any civil servant who need to put fuel in official vehicles on a regular basis The Travel and Expense (T&E) Cards are available to any civil servant in the Home Office who is called upon to travel regularly and would otherwise submit claims for reimbursement of personal expenses.

Departments: Northern Ireland

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of the concordat governing the relationship between his Department and the Northern Ireland administration. [145939]

Mr. Byrne: We do not have a Concordat with the Northern Ireland Executive. The principles set out in the Memorandum of Understanding and Supplementary Agreements between the UK Government, Scottish Ministers, the Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales and the Northern Ireland Executive, published in 2001, underpin our working relationship with the Northern Ireland Executive. These are contained in Command Paper 5240 and published by the Ministry of Justice at:

http://www.justice.gov.uk/guidance/mou.htm.

Departments: Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff in his Department received bonus payments in each of the last five years for which information is available; what proportion of the total work force they represented; what the total amount of bonuses paid was; what the largest single payment was; and if he will make a statement. [143100]

Mr. Byrne: Where it is available, the information requested is recorded in the following table.

	Amount paid (£)	Number paid	Total staff (headcount)	Percentage of total work force	Single highest payment (£)
2002-03	2,067,878	3,388	18,190	18.6	n/a
2003-04	2,919,953	4,082	20,994	19.4	n/a
2004-05	3,459,397	4,710	24,081	19.6	15,000
2005-06	3,612,916	5,014	25,343	19.8	15,000

n/a = Not available.

The information provided is subject to limitations. Comprehensive data for 2001-02 are not available or can be provided only at disproportionate cost. Data for appraisal-related bonus payments are included only for Home Office HQ and Border and Immigration Agency (BIA). Data for the public sector Prison Service are excluded and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Identity and Passport Agency (IPS) does not run an appraisal-related bonus scheme. Data recorded for performance appraisal payments relate to the previous reporting year and not the financial year in which the bonuses themselves were paid.

Data for special bonus payments are included only for the senior civil service (for the whole Department and its agencies) and IPS for 2004-05 and 2005-06 for certain bonuses where information is available. Staffing data cover those in Home Office HQ, BIA and all senior civil servants in the Department and its agencies. For 2004-05 and 2005-06, IPS staff are included. Information for 2006-07 is currently unavailable: bonuses relating to this period will be paid with the 2007 pay award later in the year.

The highest payments in each year were made to the senior civil service following recommendations by the independent Senior Salaries Review Body. Figures cannot be provided for 2002-03 and 2003-04 as they represented the highest paid amount to an individual and it is not departmental practice to provide information that could be attributed to individual members of staff.

Within the Home Office and its agencies there are separate arrangements for awarding bonuses. Staff below the senior civil service may receive annual, appraisal-related awards where their objectives were exceeded and overall effectiveness was significantly above the standards agreed for the post. Examples include demonstrating the ability and willingness to take on new and additional work or consistently exceeding key objectives that have been set. Special bonuses will be awarded for exceptional, specific work such as delivering key tasks in particularly challenging and demanding circumstances.

Senior civil service bonuses reward, provide incentives for, in-year delivery of key results. Senior civil servants can be awarded bonuses as set out in the Senior Salaries Review Body report No. 62.

Departments: Publications

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost to his Department was of the uncompleted research paper IND Customer Survey. [129043]

John Reid: The work carried out as part of the IND customer survey was undertaken by MORI during the period February-April 2002. The results of this work were used internally by the Department but were not placed into a final published report. Its cost was estimated to be £60,000.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost to his Department was of the unpublished research paper Dispersal: Facilitating Effectiveness and Efficiency. [129044]

John Reid: The work carried out by contractors as part of the report into Dispersal: Facilitating Effectiveness and Efficiency took place in the period September 2001 to September 2002. This work was used internally but not placed into a final published report, although it has now been released under the Freedom of Information Act. The cost of this work was estimated to be £137,000.

Departments: Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff surveys his Department has undertaken in the last 12 months; and at what total cost. [145261]

Mr. Byrne: Home Office Headquarters and the Border and Immigration Agency (BIA) have not conducted a staff survey since 2005.

The Criminal Records Bureau conducted one staff survey in 2006 at a cost of £24,120.

Identity and Passport Service conducted one staff survey in April/May this year at a cost of £65,823.

HM Prison Service conducted one staff survey in November/December 2006 at a cost of £25,000.

Departments: Travel

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department spent on first class travel in each year since 2004. [137025]

John Reid: The Department's accounting system does not hold information on expenditure on first class travel separately. A complete run of such information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Department expects all official travel to be carried out by the most efficient and economic means available, taking into account the cost of travel and subsistence, savings in official time, management benefit, and the needs of staff with disabilities.

Domestic Violence: Police Cautions

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the use of cautions in domestic violence cases usually defined by prosecutors as common assault. [145065]

Mr. Coaker: There is not a specific indicator of the effectiveness of the use of cautions in domestic violence cases. However, our view is that cautions are generally not a suitable alternative to charging in cases of domestic violence. They are only used in cases where, with due consideration to all of the evidence and the relevant charging criteria, there is no other alternative.

Entry Clearances

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for indefinite leave to remain received before 31 December 2006 have not yet been determined; what the principal reasons are for delay in such cases; and if he will make a statement. [140441]

Mr. Byrne: In respect of cases involving unresolved asylum claims, in accordance with information provided to the Home Affairs Committee on 19 February 2007 by the chief executive of the Border and Immigration Agency, periodic progress updates will be provided.

In respect of non-asylum cases, as of 31 May 2007 there are about 17,600 outstanding non-asylum indefinite leave to remain applications that were received in the Border and Immigration Agency prior to 31 December 2006. These applications include those submitted under a range of immigration categories.

On the whole, these cases are not straightforward and require additional consideration. The aforementioned data are not provided under National Statistics protocols. They have been derived from local management information and are therefore provisional and subject to change.

Harmondsworth Detention Centre

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the cost of the damage to Harmondsworth Immigration Detention Centre during the disturbances on 29 November. [109676]

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost of the repairs and refurbishment of Harmondsworth Immigration Removal Centre (IRC) was following the fire earlier this year; and whether the centre is planned to remain in use as an IRC. [145719]

John Reid: An initial independent review of the condition of Harmondsworth IRC has estimated that the sum of £7 million plus VAT will be required to fully repair the damage to the Centre 'as built'.

The Centre is fully insured for riot and material damage and business interruption cover. The damage to the Centre forms part of the total claim and is fully covered by insurance minus the deductible (policy excess).

Hunting

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what his policy is on the enforcement of the Hunting Act 2004; [145171]

(2) what recent meetings he has held with (a) Chief Police Officers, (b) the Secretary of State for Justice, (c) the Crown Prosecution Service and (d) others on the enforcement of the Hunting Act 2004. [145172]

Mr. Coaker: The Government are fully committed to enforcing the hunting ban. The Hunting Act is discussed as appropriate in meetings which the Home Office has with the police, prosecuting authorities, other Government Departments and other interested stakeholders.

Immigrants: Interpreters

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost was of interpreters for immigration services at St Judes, Plymouth in (a) 2005, (b) 2006 and (c) 2007. [142467]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 15 June 2007]: The Border and Immigration Agency only conducts interviews in that area in the course of operational enforcement visits or when visiting dispersed asylum seekers.

The information requested could, therefore, only be provided as a result of examination of individual case files at disproportionate cost, and would as a result of the use of telephone services still be incomplete.

Immigration Controls

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations his Department has received on the proposed new points-based system of immigration from community groups who will be affected. [134354]

Mr. Byrne: As part of the consultation for the points-based system, my Department has conducted formal research and face to face engagement with individuals and community group representatives across industry and other sectors. A total of 517 written responses were received. We continue to engage with groups representative of those affected by the points-based system. Informal consultation continues at a national regional level as we continue to develop the points-based system ahead of roll out.

Immigration: Females

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance is given to case workers on granting leave to remain to vulnerable women who have been (a) trafficked from and (b) raped in their country of origin; and if he will make a statement. [145879]

Mr. Byrne: Where a female victim of trafficking or rape claims to fear persecution we will carefully and sensitively consider the application on its individual merits under the UK's obligations to the 1951 Refugee Convention and the European Convention on Human Rights. Rape and trafficking are forms of harm which may constitute a form of persecution. This is specifically referred to in the guidance given to case workers. Where a woman is able to demonstrate a well-founded fear of persecution, she will be granted protection. Guidance for decision makers on considering asylum and human rights claims and granting leave is provided in Assessing the Claim, Humanitarian Protection and Discretionary Leave asylum instructions, which can be found on the Border and Immigration Agency website at:

http://www.bia.homeoffice.gov.uk/documents/asylumpolicyinstructions/

Immigration: Romania

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many expert level meetings took place between his Department's officials and the (a) Romanian National police and (b) Romanian Immigration Service in the last 12 months. [144069]

Joan Ryan: No central records are kept of such meetings, but they will take place frequently and routinely, both on a bilateral and a multilateral basis.

National Black Police Association: Finance

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Department expects to complete its analysis of the auditor's final report on funding for the National Black Police Association; if he will place copies of the auditor's final report in the Library; and if he will make a statement. [145438]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 25 June 2007]: The Home Office auditor's final report has been analysed resulting in 20 separate recommendations. It would be inappropriate to make a statement at this time, as the matter remains ongoing.

Home Office audit reports are internal documents and not for publication because they are part of Home Office business and are commercially sensitive.

Offenders: Deportation

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals were successfully deported due to committal of a criminal offence in the UK following completion of their prison term in each of the last five years. [124234]

John Reid: On 14 June the chief executive of the Border and Immigration Agency wrote to the Home Affairs Committee to provide the most recent information available on the deportation of foreign national prisoners. In this letter the director reported that 2784 foreign national prisoners were deported or removed in the financial year 2006-07. A copy of this letter is available from the Library of the House.

Statistics on the deportation of foreign nationals were last published in 2002. This data are available through the Home Office's Research Development and Statistics website at:

http://www.archive2.official-documents.co.uk/document/cm60/6053/6053.htm.

Published information on persons removed as a result of deportation action has not been available from 2003 onwards due to data quality issues. The Border and Immigration Agency is putting in place new systems to improve its data collection systems for the future in this area.

Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what discussions he has had with the Association of Chief Police Officers on the implementation of the Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill if enacted in its current form; [144342]

(2) if he will make an assessment of the likely implications for police forces of implementation of the Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill if enacted in its current form; and if he will make a statement. [144344]

Mr. Coaker: Officials in my Department have discussed the Off-Road Vehicles (Registration) Bill, with colleagues in ACPO as well as other Government Departments. In particular, Home Office discussions have focused on any potential impact to the police following implementation if enacted in its current form.

It is difficult to say with great certainty what impact such a Bill would have in practice, as an assessment of non-compliance has not been made. However initial estimates would suggest that additional burdens on the police would be inevitable and costly. ACPO have estimated that at a minimum for ad-hoc enforcement which does not include costs to the Crown Prosecution Service or HMCS, could be in the region of £50 million over three years, based on investigating approximately 300,000 vehicles a year. This does not include the costs of mounting an enforcement operation, but is based on the time it would take an officer to deal with the offence, such as dealing with the offender, arranging recovery of the vehicle and supervising the event. It also includes any necessary paperwork and officer time to prepare for court if that is applicable.

Without a full and proper assessment of a registration scheme and its likely impact on the police and given that there is a range of existing legislation available to the police to deal with this nuisance which is effective and being used, the Home Office strongly opposes the introduction of this particular private Member's Bill.

Passports: Fees and Charges

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost of a passport was in each of the last 10 years; and what the reason was for each change. [144033]

1997	18
1998	21
1999	28
2000	28
2001	28
2002	30
2003	42
2004	42
2005	51
2006	66
2007	72

The fees were increased in March 1998 to take account of inflation. Fees were increased in December 1999 to pay for service improvements, including the opening of an additional passport office, and a range of customer service enhancements including the creation of 24/7 call centres and extended public office opening hours, following the passport crisis that year, and to recover cost deficits incurred during the crisis.

Fees were increased in November 2002 in order to complete the recovery of deficits incurred in 1999 and to take account of increases in the cost of consular assistance to British nationals travelling abroad.

Fees were increased in October 2003 to pay for improved anti fraud measures and the introduction of the secure delivery service for passports.

Increases in December 2005 and October 2006 were a two stage increase to pay for the development and introduction of biometric passports and further improvements in security, including interviews for adult first time applicants.

The increase announced by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for October 2007 is to pay for increased costs in providing consular assistance to British nationals travelling abroad.

Police Air Support Units

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers are employed in police air support units in each police authority area. [145439]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 25 June 2007]: The available data are given in the following table. The officers in the table are predominantly employed either as pilots, ground crew, air observers or in administrative functions connected with air support, as well as other supporting roles. A number of police staff are also involved in these roles, but are not included in the table.

[2] Staff with multiple responsibilities (or designations) are recorded under their primary role or function. The deployment of police officers is an operational matter for individual chief constables.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding was provided for police air support units in each police authority area in each of the last five years. [145441]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 25 June 2007]: The Home Office has provided the following sums, in capital grant for Air Support, to Authorities over the past five years. Where Consortia have bid for funding, the allocation is listed against the 'Lead' Force.

Police High Potential Development Scheme

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Police High Potential Development Scheme. [145436]

Mr. McNulty: Policy, selection and co-ordination of the Police High Potential Development Scheme is now a matter for the National Policing Improvement Agency (NPIA). The NPIA is reviewing the current High Potential Development Scheme alongside a wider process of developing the future strategy for police leadership, as set out in the priorities of the NPIA's published business plan.

Police: Manpower

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) male and (b) female chief constables there are in England and Wales; what steps he is taking to encourage greater numbers of female chief constables in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [143202]

Mr. McNulty: There are currently 39 male and five female chief constables in England and Wales. The data currently available are for ACPO ranks and are previously been published in the Home Office Statistical Bulletin, Police Service Strength in England and Wales 31 March 2006 (13/06), which is available in the Library of the House and can be downloaded from:
www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs06/hosb1306.pdf

Table 4 in the bulletin contains the number of police officers in each force in England and Wales broken down by gender and rank. Promoting policing equality and diversity is a matter for the National Policing Improvement Agency (NPIA) working with the police service. I understand from the NPIA Chief Executive that there are a number of programmes geared to encouraging progression of staff within ACPO ranks including, HPDS (High Potential Development Scheme) and NSCAS (National Senior Careers Advisory Scheme).

Police: Road Traffic Control

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answers of (a) 11 June 2007, Official Report, column 503W and (b) 6 June 2007, Official Report, column 618W, on the police: road traffic control, how many dedicated traffic police officers there are in England and Wales. [145098]

Mr. Coaker: The numbers of dedicated traffic police officers are not collected centrally.

The available data are the numbers of full-time equivalent police officers primarily employed in the function 'traffic'. On this basis, there were 6,511 officers in post on 31 March 2006.

A corresponding figure for 31 March 2007 will be available when the police personnel statistics for 2006-07 are published on 26 July.

Proceeds of Crime: Wales

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been recovered by the (a) Assets Recovery Agency and (b) Proceeds of Crime Department of the Serious Organised Crime Agency relating to crime in the South Wales Police Authority area in (i) 2005-06 and (ii) 2006-07; and if he will make a statement. [144884]

Mr. Coaker: In 2005-06 the Assets Recovery Agency assisted South Wales police in obtaining a confiscation order with a value of £3.3 million.

The Serious Organised Crime Agency (SOCA) was established on 1 April 2006. It is a national agency and does not hold figures relating to UK police authorities. In their first annual report, published on 18 May, SOCA show the approximate value of their work in the UK to recover criminal assets. These figures do not include totals of cash seizures which have been made by their domestic partners.

Security Measures

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 9 June 2007, Official Report, columns 618-20W, on security measures, what assessment he has made of the progress made by the Mosques and Imams National Advisory Board in each of the five core areas. [144392]

Mr. Woolas: The Department for Communities and Local Government is working with a number of partners to progress work on the accreditation of imams; the development of leadership skills for imams and mosque officials; the inclusion of young people and women; improvement in the governance of mosques; and supporting mosques to contribute to community cohesion and to combating extremism. The Mosques and Imams National Advisory Board (MINAB), an independent body, is one of the key channels through which this agenda is being taken forward.

Sexual Offences

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of sexual assault were reported in (a) England and (b) each of the regions (i) in total and (ii) in each parliamentary constituency in each of the last three years. [145458]

Mr. Coaker: The available information relates to offences recorded by the police in England and in each region and is given in the table. Statistics for parliamentary constituencies are not available centrally.

Note:

The Sexual Offences Act 2003, introduced in May 2004, altered the definition and coverage of sexual offences.

Sexual Offences: Detection Rates

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the detection rate was for (a) rape and (b) other sexual offences in each police force area in England and Wales in each year since 1997. [143953]

Mr. Coaker: The information requested is given in the tables.

Data are available for 1997 calendar year and from 1998-99 in financial years. This followed a revision to the counting rules for recorded crime and the expanded coverage which came into effect on 1 April 1998. The figures were also affected by the revised detections guidance issued in April 1999 which formalised detection procedures, placing a greater emphasis on the evidential basis on which detections can be claimed. They were also affected by the introduction of the National Crime Recording Standard in April 2002, which required the police to record a crime unless there was "no credible evidence to the contrary".

The Sexual Offences Act 2003 in May 2004 also altered the definition and coverage of sexual offences, in particular, indecent exposure is now classified as a sexual offence. All these changes mean that detection rates are not comparable over this time period.

The existing statistical evidence suggests that both the changes to detections guidance and the introduction of NCRS had a marked impact in reducing detection rates for sexual offences since 1997. The Home Office is currently researching in detail recent changes in detection rates in rape cases in England and Wales, including variation between forces. This is expected to be published shortly.

New performance management arrangements have been introduced for the police and CPS on the investigation and prosecution of rape. The Home Office and Association of Chief Police Officers are also providing operational support to police forces on the implementation of recommendations from Without Consent, the rape inspection published in January 2007.

[1] Offences detected in current year may have been initially recorded in an earlier year, so some percentages may exceed 100.
[2] Expanded offence coverage and revised counting rules came into effect on 1 April 1998.
[3] Revised detections guidance was implemented on 1 April 1999.
[4] The data in this table take account of the introduction of the National Crime Recording Standard in April 2002. These figures are not directly comparable with those for earlier years.
[5] The Sexual Offences Act 2003, introduced in May 2004, altered the definition and coverage of sexual offences.

n/a = Not available.
[1] Offences detected in current year may have been initially recorded in an earlier year, so some percentages may exceed 100.
[2] Expanded offence coverage and revised counting rules came into effect on 1 April 1998.
[3] Revised detections guidance was implemented on 1 April 1999.
[4] The data in this table takes account of the introduction of the National Crime Recording Standard in April 2002. These figures are not directly comparable with those for earlier years.
[5] The Sexual Offences Act 2003, introduced in May 2004, altered the definition and coverage of sexual offences.

Sexual Offences: Internet

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he plans to take to prevent registered sex offenders using social networking sites to access or groom children. [145035]

Mr. Coaker: We published the 'Review of the Protection of Children from Sex Offenders' on 13 June. The review lists a number of actions to be taken, including providing for registered sex offenders to be required to notify the police of their e-mail addresses. This information could then be used to help with the management of offenders. In the review, we also recognised the need to develop the capability to monitor the online activities of child sex offenders, and we will investigate the possibility of developing software to install on offenders' computers to do this.

Sexual Offences Preventions Orders (SOPOs), introduced by the Sexual Offences Act 2003, are intended to protect the public, including children, from the risks posed by sex offenders, by imposing prohibitions on them. For example, a prohibition could be imposed on an offender to stop him using social networking sites. Failure to comply with such a prohibition would be a criminal offence, punishable by up to five years' imprisonment.

We have also set up a working group which includes representatives from social network providers, law enforcement and children's charities, to look at the safety issues for children caused by the development and growth of social networking sites and develop good practice guidelines.

Sexual Offences: Police Cautions

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many official cautions were issued for (a) rape and (b) other sexual offences in (i) Suffolk, (ii) Bedfordshire, (iii) Cambridgeshire, (iv) Essex, (v) Hertfordshire, (vi) Norfolk and (vii) England in each year since 1997. [143924]

Mr. Coaker: Decisions on cautioning are entirely an operational matter for local police forces. Serious sexual offences are very unlikely to be suitable for a caution. In a small number of cases local police and CPS may decide that it is not in the public interest to take a case to court (e.g. where a 16-year-old boy has consensual sex with his 15-year-old girlfriend).

Data from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the number of defendants cautioned for rape and other sexual offences in the relevant police force areas in England between 1997 and 2005 can be viewed in the following table.

Number of offenders cautioned for rape offences in the relevant police force areas and in England between 1997 and 2005[1,2,3,4]

	Bedfordshire	Cambridgeshire	Essex	Hertfordshire	Norfolk	Suffolk	Rape offences England

However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts and police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.
[3] Includes data from the Sexual Offences Act 2003, which came into force on 1 May 2003.
[4] Staffordshire police force were only able to submit sample data for persons proceeded against and convicted in the magistrates courts for the year 2000. Although sufficient to estimate higher orders of data, these data are not robust enough at a detailed level and have been excluded from the table.

Sexual Offences: Wales

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of sexual assault were reported in Wales (a) in total and (b) in each parliamentary constituency in each of the last three years. [145460]

Mr. Coaker: The available information relates to offences recorded by the police in Wales and is given in the table. Statistics for parliamentary constituencies are not available centrally.

Serious assaults recorded by the police in Wales

Number of offences

	Rape	Sexual assault [1]	Total
2003-04	514	1,308	1,822
2004-05	560	1,240	1,800
2005-06	595	1,166	1,761

[1] Includes recorded offences of indecent assault on a male or female and sexual assault on a male or female.

Note:
The Sexual Offences Act 2003, introduced in May 2004, altered the definition and coverage of sexual offences.

Speed Limits: Cameras

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 12 June 2007, Official Report, column 977W, on speed limits: cameras, by what means his Department estimates the time spent by police on road policing in each year. [145658]

Mr. Coaker: No meaningful estimate would be possible. Officers whose main function is traffic may undertake other duties too, and all officers can undertake roads policing duties from time to time as appropriate in their normal course of work.

Stop and Search: Vehicles

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 18 June 2007, Official Report, columns 1518-20W, on stop and search: vehicles, when the figures on vehicle stop and searches for (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2006-07 will be available; whether these figures are available for the Metropolitan Police; and if he will make a statement. [145415]

Mr. McNulty: The 2005-06 annual statistical bulletin 'Arrest for Recorded Crime (Notifiable Offences) and the Operation of Certain Police Powers under PACE', which includes information on stop and searches, will be published later this year.

Once the bulletin is issued a breakdown of published data covering 'vehicle only' searches will be published; at this time figures will also be available by force area.

2006-07 data will be made available in 2008.

Vehicle Number Plates

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what estimate he has made of the number of drivers falsely accused of motoring offences because of the fraudulent cloning of number plates in the latest period for which figures are available; [144799]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of drivers falsely accused of motoring offences due to inaccuracies in the automated number plate recognition database in the latest period for which figures are available; [144800]

(3) what estimate he has made of the number of motoring offences that the police have been unable to pursue due to inaccuracies in the automated number plate recognition database. [144801]

Mr. Coaker: It is not possible to estimate the number of drivers falsely accused of motoring offences because of the fraudulent cloning of number plates; the number of drivers falsely accused of motoring offences due to inaccuracies in automatic number plate recognition (ANPR) databases or the number of motoring offences that the police have been unable to pursue due to inaccuracies in the ANPR database as these figures are not collected centrally. ANPR is used as the starting point to investigate offences and is not in itself used to press charges or comment on prosecutions.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the merits of the pilot scheme Operation Laser using automatic number plate recognition; which police forces are participating in the pilot scheme; and if he will make a statement. [145435]

Mr. McNulty: Since the first Home Office pilot began in 2002, the police use of ANPR technology has resulted in more than 50,000 arrests; ANPR has now been rolled out across all police forces in England and Wales. Significantly, in the last three years it has delivered two to three times more 'offences brought to justice' (OBtJ) when compared to conventional policing methods. Much of this success is attributable to police intercept teams operating at the roadside although more recently, the benefits of ANPR as a police-intelligence and investigation tool has been realised by its ability to identify vehicles linked to many different types of criminal offending. It has consistently impacted on criminal activity at all levels, but particularly that involving drugs, cross-border crime and disqualified driving. With the help of new enabling-legislation, police ANPR intercept teams have been extremely effective in seizing vehicles for document offences.

The National Policing Improvement Agency (NPIA) assumed policy and operational oversight for ANPR from April this year. It is now seeking to embed the learning from the ANPR pilots into mainstream policing practice within police forces.

Vehicle Number Plates: Fraud

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of crimes involving number plate fraud in the latest period for which figures are available. [144797]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is not centrally available

Vehicle Number Plates: Legal Opinion

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice he has received on the legality of automatic number plate recognition systems. [145434]

Mr. McNulty: All data gathered by the police using automatic number plate recognition (ANPR) are covered by existing legislation. Home Office officials have been working closely with the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) to ensure that information collected by ANPR technologies and retained by the police is cognisant of the relevant data protection legislation. The ACPO guidance is designed to ensure that the principles detailed in Part 1 of Schedule 1 of the Data Protection Act 1998 and the Freedom of Information Act 2000 are followed by all police forces.

Vehicle Number Plates: Theft

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the level of number plate theft in the latest period for which figures are available. [144798]

Mr. McNulty: Latest published figures from the 2004-05 British Crime survey show that number plates were stolen in 1.9 per cent. of all thefts from vehicles, and in 5 per cent. of thefts where vehicle external fittings were stolen.

Yarl's Wood Detention Centre

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how money which has been sent to detainees at Yarl's Wood Detention Centre is (a) secured and (b) accounted for; and how many complaints were made about missing amounts in each of the last three years. [144846]

Mr. Byrne: Detainees at Yarl's Wood hold their own money in possession. The centre has facilities to store monies and valuables on their behalf should they require it. There have been no complaints recorded relating to missing money.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the treatment of detainees at Yarl's Wood Detention Centre in terms of (a) access to medical records, (b) curtailment of effective visiting time, (c) quality of food and service of food, (d) choice in the provision of sanitary products, (e) treatment of visitors, (f) availability of telephone and fax services, (g) access to advice and information and (h) availability of stationery and postage stamps; and if he will make a statement. [145164]

Mr. Byrne: The provision of services to detainees at Yarl's Wood Removal Centre is subject to self audit by Serco which operates the centre under contract to the Border and Immigration Agency. The self audit process is in turn audited by Border and Immigration Agency staff and is subject to routine monitoring and scrutiny by the Border and Immigration Agency managers in the site monitoring team. There is also an Independent Monitoring Board that has unrestricted access to the centre 24 hours per day, 365 days per year, and also has direct access to the Secretary of State's office. The establishment is also subject to regular inspection by Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons. Whenever issues arise concerning the provision of services including those listed in the question, both the on site Border and Immigration Agency staff and the contractor are committed to resolving concerns and improving systems accordingly. Since 26 April 2007 Serco has only received one complaint, this was in relation to the availability of telephone and fax services, and this was addressed immediately.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Children: Protection

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance he has issued on the application of the provisions of the Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Act 2006 to chaperones of children involved in performances under (a) formal and (b) informal arrangements. [145673]

Mr. Dhanda [holding answer 26 June 2007]: The Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Act 2006 which will be implemented from autumn 2008 provides the legislative framework to help prevent unsuitable people from working with children.

Child chaperones will be covered by the requirements of the Act if they are supervising, caring for or offering advice, guidance or instruction to the children and they do so frequently or intensively. This includes both paid employees and volunteers. The requirements of the Act do not extend to parents, so a parent chaperoning their own child taking part in a performance will not be affected by the new requirements.

An individual who is barred under the new scheme will commit an offence if they seek to engage in this activity and an employer will commit an offence if they seek to use such a person.

The Government will be issuing guidance next spring in preparation for planned implementation from autumn 2008.

City Academies: Sponsorship

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what tax relief can be claimed by sponsors of academy schools on £2 million contributions. [140970]

Jim Knight: Where an academy sponsor makes the payment wholly and exclusively for the purposes of their trade and does not receive a capital asset in return, they are entitled to a deduction in their business profit and loss account. As academy schools are charities, any sponsorship payment that could not be claimed as an allowable expense would normally qualify for tax relief as a charitable donation. Payments made to academy schools by educational charities would be treated as charitable expenditure by the sponsoring charity.

General Certificate of Secondary Education

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many GCSEs are a (a) GCSE short course, (b) GCSE double award, (c) intermediate level GNVQ, (d) GCE AS-level, (e) GCE A-level, (g) BTEC, (h) NVQ, (i) level 2 basic skills certificate, (j) level 2 key skills certificate, (k) Cache Foundation Award in Caring for Children and (l) international GCSE considered to be equivalent for the purposes of GCSE performance tables. [145726]

Jim Knight: A short course GCSE is equivalent to half a GCSE. A GCSE double award is equivalent to two GCSEs, an intermediate GNVQ equivalent to four GCSEs, an AS level to two GCSEs. A levels and international GCSEs are not included in the Key Stage 4 Achievement and Attainment Tables. Other qualifications can vary according to the subject. Complete information on the equivalence of all qualifications used in the Achievement and Attainment Tables is published by the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority in the National Database of Accredited Qualifications at http://www.ndaq.org.uk/

Home Education

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to collect information on the number of children educated at home. [146051]

Jim Knight: We do not collect information about the number of children whose education is arranged by their parents and we have no plans to change this. A recent study on the prevalence of home education in England, conducted by York Consulting estimated that there were around 16,000 children being educated at home that were known to the local authority. We have not made any estimate of the number of home educated children that are not known to their local authority.

Specialised Diplomas

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many employers have participated in the development of the (a) Construction and Built Environment Diploma, (b) Engineering Diploma, (c) Creative and Media Diploma, (d) Land-based Environmental Diploma, (e) Business, Administration and Finance Administration Diploma, (f) Hospitality and Catering Diploma, (g) IT Diploma and (h) Manufacturing and Produce Design Diploma. [144990]

Mr. Dhanda: Exact figures for each DDP are not readily available. Each DDP has consulted with around 1,000 employers, meaning that for the first phase, 5,000 employers have participated in the development process. The same process is being used for the development of the phase 2 Diplomas, and this will involve similar numbers.

It must be stressed that this number is based on the number of employers that have actively responded on Diplomas via forms/email/ or one to one telephone conversations.

TRANSPORT

Railways: Brighton

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the future of rail services from Brighton to Ashford International over the next five years. [145801]

Mr. Tom Harris: Provision of these services is a contractual requirement of the Southern franchise. They will continue. The Southern franchise is due to be re-let from December 2009. There will be a further opportunity for consultation at that time.

Railways: Chelmsford

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps are being taken to reduce overcrowding on trains between Chelmsford and Liverpool Street Station. [145932]

Mr. Tom Harris: The Secretary of State announced on 14 March 2007 that the high level output specification, to be published in the July, will include a commitment to a thousand extra carriages. They will be targeted at the most congested routes on the network.

Speed Limits: Cameras

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he plans to monitor the change in the number of fixed speed cameras resulting from the new guidance effective from 1 April. [145767]

Dr. Ladyman: As from 1 April the deployment of safety cameras has been a local matter and the number of cameras will therefore be a local decision. The Department plans to monitor the general activities of the road safety partnerships but will not centrally hold the number of cameras.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Carbon Emissions

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission if the House of Commons Commission will adopt a policy of carbon neutrality; and if he will make a statement. [145048]

Nick Harvey: The Parliamentary Estate Energy and Water Saving Policy is reviewed every two years and is next due for review later this year. The latest government sustainability targets which included the target, 'Central Government's office estate to be carbon neutral by 2012', were announced in June 2006 and will be considered when making the review.

Flowers

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission (1) what the total (a) volume and (b) value of flowers purchased by the House was in each year since 2001; [145050]

(2) what (a) type and (b) country of origin of the flowers purchased by the House for use in (i) banqueting facilities and (ii) other areas of the Commons Parliamentary Estate was in the last calendar year for which figures are available. [145051]

Nick Harvey: Some details of costs of flowers purchased are only readily available for the last four years following a change in the accounting system in 2003. No record is kept of volumes of flowers purchased by the House. The cost of flowers purchased for banqueting is recharged to the customer with the appropriate margin. The value of flowers purchased is in the following table.

	Banqueting—cost of flowers for resale	Catering outlets	Public areas	Total other areas	Total cost of flowers purchased
2000-01	—	7,497	—	—	—
2001-02	—	8,378	—	—	—
2002-03	—	8,801	—	—	—
2003-04	13,922	9,457	15,862	25,319	39,241
2004-05	14,886	11,513	13,727	25,240	40,126
2005-06	12,676	9,477	20,077	29,554	42,230
2006-07	16,513	10,825	20,674	31,499	48,012

No record is kept of the type or country of origin of flowers purchased for use in the House of Commons, banqueting facilities or other areas.

Palace of Westminster: Repairs and Maintenance

Jim Dowd: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission for how long the Commission expects Commons Court to be used for contractors' buildings. [145665]

Nick Harvey: The programme of large maintenance projects in the Palace of Westminster indicates that Commons Court will be required for contractor accommodation for the foreseeable future. It is currently being used by contractors for the Press Gallery refurbishment project. Planned works include the roofs programme and mechanical and electrical service modernisation programme.

Parliament: Security

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission (1) whether there are any plans to replace the visitor stickers issued to visitors on the Parliamentary Estate with another form of temporary pass; [145572]

(2) what steps are being taken to address the littering caused by discarded visitor stickers in and outside the immediate vicinities of the Parliamentary Estate; and if he will make a statement; [145579]

(3) what steps are being taken to address the environmental impact of discarded visitor stickers on the Parliamentary Estate. [145580]

Nick Harvey: The main step being taken to reduce the environmental impact of discarded visitor stickers is for them to be removed by the contract cleaners and receptacles are provided at exit points for the stickers.

Parliament's cleaning contractor has been instructed to remove all discarded stickers in the immediate vicinity of the Parliamentary Estate, including the Portcullis House colonnade. The company also cleans the area within and including the Corus barriers to the West of the Palace of Westminster. The contract manager has been reminded of the need for frequent cleaning.

A new access control system for the Parliamentary Estate will be introduced in the autumn. Part of this project is to introduce an improved Visitor Management System, which is currently in development. The intention is to provide a paper visitor pass clipped to the person instead of the stickers used at present.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how many visitor stickers were used on the Parliamentary Estate in each of the last 12 months. [145581]

Nick Harvey: An estimate of the number of visitor stickers used on the Parliamentary Estate in each of the last 12 months based on number of visitors counted through search points is in the following table.

	2006	2007
June	102,896	—
July	108,080	—
August	114,161	—
September	119,778	—
October	92,730	—
November	94,911	—
December	45,853	—
January	—	75,691
February	—	72,312
March	—	85,491
April	—	62,853
May	—	92,463

Note:
These figures are based on numbers provided by the Metropolitan Police using counting devices at search points. The counting device at Norman Porch is proving unreliable due to an ongoing technical fault, so Visitors Tour figures have been used instead. There may be a slight under-estimate due to Members or Peers guests using Norman Porch who will not be included in the Visitor Tour figures.

Television

Jim Dowd: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how many television licences are held across the Commons Parliamentary Estate. [145664]

Nick Harvey: The Parliamentary Estates Directorate holds one Multiple Form Television Licence for all the private residences on the Estate.

Black Rod's residence
Staff Superintendent's residence
Serjeant at Arms' residence
Office Keeper's residence
Head Office Keeper's residence
Senior Office Keeper's residence
Clerk of the House's residence
Speaker's Housekeeper's apartment
Speaker's Secretary's residence
The Lord Chancellor's House
The Speaker's House
22 John Islip Street

The working areas of the estate are currently exempt from requiring a licence because buildings used by and occupied by Government or Parliamentary employees do not need a television licence for televisions used for official purposes.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Departments: Consultants

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much his Department spent on (a) management consultants and (b) other external consultants and advisers in each year since 2000; and which of these consultants undertook work for the Department with a total contractual value in excess of £10 million over this period. [146334]

Mr. Thomas: The total spend on consultancy contracts by the Department for International Development (DFID) since 2000 is as follows:

Total spend on consultants
	£ million
2000-01	284
2001-02	273
2002-03	274
2003-04	270
2004-05	276
2005-06	255
2006-07	270

This includes both consultancy to deliver parts of the aid programme where services are often provided to third parties such as recipient Governments, and consultancy to DFID as an organisation. It does not include all low value contracts issued by DFID Departments and overseas offices, of which there are no consolidated records. We do not hold a central record of spend of management consultants as a separate category. These figures therefore contain spending on all types of consultancy.

The following table provides details of consultants, work undertaken and total contractual value in excess of £10 million.

Departments: European Union

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many officials in his Department are (a) involved in assisting European Council negotiations, (b) involved in assisting and advising the European Commission, (c) seconded to the European Commission, (d) involved in monitoring EU decisions, communications, regulations and directives, (e) involved in enforcing compliance with EU decisions, communications, regulations and directives and (f) involved in other work related to the European Council, Commission or Court of Justice. [146093]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has a core department of 21 staff working exclusively on European Union (EU) aid policy and implementation. This includes one post in the United Kingdom Permanent Representative to the European Union (UKREP, Brussels). DFID also fields 18 seconded national experts, of which 17 work directly with the European Commission in Brussels and one with the current presidency. A small number of additional DFID staff have been seconded to European Commission delegations in Africa. In addition, a variety of other departments in DFID deal with specific issues to which EU policy is relevant, including: trade, migration, aid effectiveness, climate change, and preparation of the EU-Africa Strategy. None of these other departments are exclusively EU focused. DFID does not have a mandate for enforcing compliance with EU decisions.

JUSTICE

Prisons: Costs

Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice what the average annual cost of a prison place is in (a) each prison establishment, (b) privately-run prisons and (c) publicly-run prisons. [142702]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The figures provided are for 2005-06 and are taken from HM Prison Service Annual Report and the Office of Contracted Prisons Annual Report.

(a) The establishment costs per place are listed as shown.

(b) The average cost per place of the private prisons is £33,722

(c) The average cost per place of the public prisons is £28,486.

The costs quoted for privately-run and public prisons are not directly comparable, because of different financing structures and differences in services funded by other Government Departments. The public prisons' costs quoted are the direct costs of each establishment and exclude Prison Service headquarters, depreciation and cost of capital charge on land and buildings, major maintenance and rates. The private prison costs are the direct cost of each establishment, including controllers and exclude depreciation, cost of capital charge/credit, repayment of capital, and rates.

There are also a number of factors which affect the costs of prisons and so comparisons must be made with caution. These factors include: the size of prison, its age, its design, the occupancy level, the prison security level, the type of prisoner and the activities carried on in the prison.

Notes:

1. The prison place numbers used in calculating the costs per place are the Certified Normal Accommodation data. Certified Normal Accommodation (CNA), or uncrowded capacity, is the Prison Service's own measure of accommodation. CNA represents the good, decent standard of accommodation that the Service aspires to provide all prisoners.
2. Establishments are categorised in these tables by their main role only. For this reason, performance of prisons within a category cannot necessarily be compared on a like for like basis.
3. Peterborough prison is not included as it was being brought into operation during 2005-06.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Delivery Unit

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) pursuant to the answer of 6 June 2007, Official Report, column 591W, on the Delivery Unit, whether joint reviews result in the drawing up of action points that departments are expected to take forward; [144496]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 6 June 2007, Official Report, column 591W, on the Delivery Unit, how many joint reviews the Delivery Unit has carried out in each financial year since 2001-02; [144497]

(3) pursuant to the answer of 6 June 2007, Official Report, column 591W, on the Delivery Unit, what the subject was of each of the joint reviews; [144498]

(4) what criteria are used to decide whether the Delivery Unit conducts a joint review with a department of a particular programme or area; [144526]

(5) whether the Delivery Unit produced guidance for its staff on procedures to follow when carrying out joint reviews with other Government departments. [144530]

Hilary Armstrong: Reports arising from joint reviews conducted by the Prime Minister's Delivery Unit and Departments are policy advice to the Prime Minister and Ministers. Reports contain advice including recommendations for actions to be carried out by Departments. It is for the Prime Minister and Secretary of State to decide how these should be taken forward.

Since its inception, PMDU has conducted joint reviews with Departments as follows:

	Reviews
2001-02	1
2002-03	5
2003-04	8
2004-05	14
2005-06	14
2006-07	32
2007-08	4

In the past 12 months, PMDU has carried out the following joint reviews with Departments:

Home Office

- Asset Recovery
- Antisocial Behaviour
- Reducing Reoffending,
- Citizen Focused Policing
- Respect Action Plans
- High Crime Causing Drug Users
- National Offender Management
- Non-Custodial Sentences
- New Asylum Model
- Department's Capability Review.

Education

- Primary and Secondary School Standards National Strategy
- Teenage pregnancy
- Pupil attendance
- Pupil behaviour
- Targeted Youth Support
- Building Schools for the Future
- 14-19 local delivery policy
- Department's Capability Review

Health

- 18 weeks
- Choice of four providers
- Practice-based commissioning
- NHS reform programme
- Childhood obesity
- PCT Capability
- Childhood and Adolescent Mental Health
- Department's Capability Review

Other projects

- Access to the Arts
- Review of Government Offices
- Sustainable Procurement
- Cross Government Delivery of Local Area Agreements

Decisions on whether to conduct a review are taken jointly by PMDU and the Department concerned in consultation with No. 10.

PMDU has produced guidance on conducting joint reviews for use in training staff.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many staff (a) were working in the Prime Minister's delivery unit on 31 March 2007 and (b) are expected to be working in the delivery unit on 31 March 2008, broken down by payband. [144529]

Hilary Armstrong: The unit is led at Permanent Secretary level, and its staffing profile at 31 March 2007 was 46 full-time equivalent staff, breaking down as the following mix of grades:

	Number
Senior civil service 2	3
Senior civil service 1	11
Cabinet Office Band A	22
Cabinet Office Band B2	5
Cabinet Office Band B2 (faststream)	3
Cabinet Office Band B1	2

The size of the unit and mix of grades at 31 March 2008 is in the process of being determined.

Departments: Consultants

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much the Department spent on (a) management consultants and (b) other external consultants and advisers in each year since 2000; and which of these consultants undertook work for the Department with a total contractual value in excess of £10 million over this period. [146340]

Hilary Armstrong: For details of my Department's spend on consultancy in each year since 2000, I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for North-East Hertfordshire (Mr. Heald) and the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) on 29 November 2006, Official Report, columns 767-08W.

My Department does not hold a central record of the total value of consultancy contracts, therefore, this information is only available at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Marketing

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster which advertising and marketing campaigns were run by (a) her Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years; which external agencies were involved; and what the cost was of each campaign. [144618]

Hilary Armstrong: The campaigns run by the Department and its agencies were as follows:

	Campaign	External Agencies	Cost (£)
2002-03	No activity	—	—
2003-04	Recruitment	Barkers	7,560
2004-05	Go In Stay In Tune In	WCRS	2,974,799
	Fast stream Recruitment	McCann Erickson	7,712
2005-06	Directgov	WTCS/Naked	864,732
	Recruitment	Barkers	13,414
2006-07	No activity	—	—

Energy

Alan Duncan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what the total cost was of producing and publishing the policy review document Building on progress: Energy and environment. [144830]

Hilary Armstrong: Final costs of producing and publishing this document are not yet available.

General Practitioners: Working Hours

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster pursuant to the answer of 6 June 2007, Official Report, column 652W, on general practitioners: working hours, (1) what work the Delivery Unit has done on out-of-hours care since 2001; [144494]

(2) whether the Unit has conducted a joint review of out-of-hours care since 2001. [144495]

Hilary Armstrong: The Prime Minister's Delivery Unit's (PMDU) role is to monitor and report on delivery of the Prime Minister's top delivery and reform priorities. Out-of-hours care is not one of the areas on which PMDU's health team has worked, and PMDU has not conducted a joint review on it since 2001.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Business Resource Efficiency and Waste Programme

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what bodies are funded within the Business Resource Efficiency and Waste Programme; how much each is due to receive over the next five years; what the administration cost is of each; and if he will make a statement. [145619]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Business Resource Efficiency and Waste Programme's (BREW) funding is distributed to regional and national delivery bodies over three years (April 2005 to March 2008), with the amount increasing each year. We are now in Year 3, the final year, of the current Programme. Any future BREW Programme will depend on the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

The current BREW delivery bodies are: the National Industrial Symbiosis Programme, Envirowise, the Waste and Resources Action Programme, the Market Transformation Programme, the Regional Development Agencies, the Royal Society of Wildlife Trusts, the Environment Agency, the Sustainable Supply Chain Group, the Carbon Trust, the Department for Trade and Industry Technology Programme and DEFRA. Funding for each of these bodies, for each year of the current programme, can be found on the DEFRA website.

One of the conditions from Her Majesty's Treasury, for the BREW Programme funding, is that administration costs should be kept to a minimum and this requirement is carried through to all of the BREW delivery bodies.

Federation of City Farms and Community Gardens: Finance

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what public funds have been made available to the Federation of City Farms and Community Gardens in each of the last five years. [145721]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

Through its Special Grants Programme, the Department for Communities and Local Government has funded the Federation of City Farms and Community Gardens (the Federation) as follows: 2005-06: £50,000; 2006-07: £70,000; 2007-08: £125,000 to a total amount of £245,000. No funding was provided to the Federation by the Departments in 2003-04 or 2004-05.

The Departments funding allows the Federation to develop networks to support and promote new and existing local community-based gardening and food production groups, supporting delivery of our Cleaner, Safer, Greener Communities programme.

Through the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs Environmental Action Fund, the Federation of City Farms and Community Gardens received a three-year grant from 2005-08 as follows:

2005-06	84,000
2006-07	116,500
2007-08	114,500

The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs funding supports the Sustainable Production in Active Neighbourhoods (SPAN) Project. SPAN partners, including the Federation, are being supported to develop resources and working methods that will support community organisations to enable people to be involved in sustainable food production and consumption.

Noise

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he expects to implement section 84 and Schedule 1 of the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005 relating to noise. [146068]

Mr. Bradshaw: Section 84 and Schedule 1 of the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005 came into force in relation to England on 1 October 2006. We have revised the directions for permitted noise levels and an approval for devices measuring noise levels.

However, these cannot be brought into force until a stand-still period required under the Technical Standards and Regulations Directive 98/34/EC has expired.

A statement will be published on the DEFRA website when we are able to confirm the exact date.

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what his Department's policy is on neighbourhood noise. [146069]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government take the issue of neighbourhood noise seriously, and has given new powers to local authorities to deal with noise-related problems under the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005.

Noise: Greater London

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many environment protection officers there are responsible for noise in each London borough. [146067]

Mr. Bradshaw: My Department does not hold the information requested. Staffing levels in individual London boroughs are a matter for the relevant local authority.

Noise: Pollution Control

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will provide an update on a proposed National Ambient Noise Strategy. [146066]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government plan to publish a combined national noise strategy for England, covering ambient and neighbourhood noise, by the end of 2007.

Recycling

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what steps his Department has taken to increase the level of recycling of plastic in the UK; [145620]

(2) what estimate he has made of the proportion of households able to recycle plastic packing through doorstep collection. [145622]

Mr. Bradshaw: Recycling is strongly promoted by a range of Government policies. The Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) is working to maximise the amount and quality of recyclate used in UK manufacturing operations.

The demand for recycled plastic is very strong, both from UK manufacturers and overseas markets. The UK currently recycles or recovers approximately 19 per cent. of all plastic consumed, and this is set to increase to over 25 per cent. by 2010. WRAP has a number of projects over the next two years which aim to switch manufacturing processes from virgin to recycled materials, including a target to support the recycling of an additional 16 kilo tonnes of plastic bottles—an increase of 30 per cent. from current levels.

The new Waste Strategy for England, which we published in May, focuses action on key waste materials for greater scope for improving environmental and economic outcomes, one of which is plastic. The Strategy recognises that recycling plastics shows significant potential for carbon and energy savings through displacing virgin materials. Actions set out in the Strategy include developing proposals (subject to further analysis) for higher packaging recycling targets beyond the 2008 EC Packaging Directive targets, and supporting WRAP in its work to increase recycling of plastics and the recycled content of certain plastic containers.

We have set demanding targets, both nationally and locally, for household waste recycling and composting and the Waste Strategy sets even higher national targets, to reach at least 40 per cent. by 2010, 45 per cent. by 2015 and 50 per cent. by 2020. These targets are not material-specific, but we expect the range of materials collected by local authorities, including plastics, to increase further as targets become more demanding and as collection and treatment capacity increases.

TREASURY

Al-Yamamah Project

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the departmental responsibilities of the Paymaster General since May 1997 have included authorisation of any aspect of the Al-Yamamah defence contract; and if he will make a statement. [146219]

Dawn Primarolo: The responsibilities of the Paymaster General do not include authorisation of any aspect of the Al-Yamamah defence contract.

Capital Gains Tax: Venture Capital

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library the memorandum of understanding with the British Venture Capital Association on the application of capital gains tax relief rules to venture capital companies. [146227]

John Healey: The two memoranda of understanding with the British Venture Capital Association can be found at the following links:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/manuals/ersmmanual/ERSM30530.htm
http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/manuals/ersmmanual/ersm30520.htm

I have also placed copies in the Library.

Corporation Tax

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what projections were made of non-North Sea corporation tax receipts in (a) the preceding Budget and (b) the Pre Budget report in each financial year from 2000-01 to 2006-07; and what the outturn receipts were in each year. [145038]

John Healey: Projections and outturns of on-shore corporation tax receipts can be derived from the current receipts tables in the public finances chapters of the Financial Statement and Budget report and pre-Budget reports.

An analysis of the difference between forecast and outturn for the year-ahead forecasts from the previous two Budgets is published in the End of Year Fiscal Report. This is published annually alongside the pre-Budget report.

Departments: Correspondence

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 20 June 2007, Official Report, column 1879W, on Departments: correspondence, whether the 15 day target for responding to correspondence from hon. Members includes holding replies; what percentage of letters received holding replies only within 15 days in the most recent period for which figures are available; and what percentage of letters from hon. Members received a substantive response within 15 working days. [145988]

John Healey: During the financial year ending March 2007 HM Treasury sent 85 per cent. substantive replies to hon. Members within target. Performances do not normally include holding replies but, exceptionally, where an issue may be subject to forthcoming policy or announcement changes such replies may be included if hon. Members are updated with the latest position and then further updated once those changes have been made. Holding replies account for around 2 per cent. of replies to hon. Members.

Departments: Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was spent by staff in his Department via departmental (a) credit, (b) procurement and (c) fuel cards in each of the last three years. [145302]

John Healey: HM Treasury issues cards for the purchase of official travel and subsistence services and the procurement of low value goods and services, in line with government rules on procurement. Total spending on these cards in the past three years was as follows:

2004-05	1,941,911
2005-06	2,637,234
2006-07	2,712,465

Departments: Sick Leave

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of sick leave taken by staff in his Department was stress-related in each of the last three years. [145984]

John Healey: The average working days lost per staff year in HM Treasury in the last three years is as follows:

2006: 4.8 of which 1.1 days is estimated to be stress-related

2005: 4.9 of which 1.2 days is estimated to be stress-related

2004: 4.1 of which 0.8 days is estimated to be stress-related

Direct Payments

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what discussions he has had with the British Bankers' Association on the Direct Payments scheme since 2003; and if he will make a statement; [142506]

(2) what discussions he has had with the Building Societies' Association on the Direct Payments scheme since 2003; and if he will make a statement. [142521]

Mr. Timms: The Chancellor has not met with either of these groups since 2003 to discuss the Direct Payments scheme.

HM Revenue and Customs: Pay

John McDonnell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average bonus payment made to HM Revenue and Customs staff in senior grades was in the last year for which figures are available. [144714]

Dawn Primarolo: The average bonus payment made to HM Revenue and Customs senior civil servants was £5,130.

Migrant Workers

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many migrant workers from the EU (a) arrived in the UK and (b) were in the UK in each month from April 2003 to April 2007; and if he will make a statement. [141094]

Mr. Byrne: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not available.

VAT: Exemptions

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discretion there is in applying exemptions from VAT for work carried out on a disabled person's home after the work has been completed. [146000]

Dawn Primarolo: The VAT reliefs for alterations to a disabled person's private residence include a zero rate for the provision, extension or adaptation of a bathroom, washroom or lavatory, and for the construction of rampsand the widening of doorways or passages to facilitate entry into, and movement within, the building. However, zero-rating is not available for all building work carried out on the homes of disabled people and EU VAT agreements, signed by successive Governments, do not allow us to extend the scope of our existing zero rates or introduce new ones.

If a customer has been charged the standard rate of VAT on a supply that was correctly liable to the zero rate, he or she should contact their supplier to obtain a refund of the amount they consider the supplier has overcharged. In turn, the supplier can recover from HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) the VAT for which he has over-accounted to them, subject to certain time limits. In cases of doubt the supplier should contact HMRC's Charities and Disabled Reliefs Helpline on 0845 302 0203.

Welfare Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the percentage of tax credits paid out for 2003-04 which is accounted for by fraud, error and overpayment; and if he will make a statement. [144876]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates for the level of error and fraud in 2003-04 are available in the publication 'Child and Working Tax Credits. Error and fraud statistics 2003-04'. This is available on the HMRC website at:

http://customs.hmrc.gov.uk/channelsPortalWebApp/channelsPortalWebApp.portal?_nfpb=true&_pageLabel=pageVAT_ShowContent&propertyType=document&columns=1&id=HMCE_PROD1_025711

Estimates of the amount of entitlement for claimants in 2003-04 are available in the publication 'Child and Working Tax Credits Statistics. Finalised awards 2003-04. Supplement on payments in 2003-04.' This publication is available on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-payments-0304.pdf

Estimates for the value of overpayments in 2003-04 are available in the publication 'Child and Working Tax Credit Statistics. Finalised annual awards 2005-06. Supplement on payments in 2005-06'. This is available on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-payments-0506.pdf

Welfare Tax Credits: Correspondence

Mr. Harper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what procedures are in place to ensure that letters notifying clients of the cessation of tax credits are not sent in error; and how many such letters have been sent in error since the system was established. [145209]

Dawn Primarolo: Procedural guidance for HM Revenue and Customs staff dealing with tax credits can be found at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/manuals/ntcmanual/index.htm

Information about the number of letters is not available in the format requested.

Welfare Tax Credits: Overpayments

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many letters were written by HM Revenue and Customs demanding the recovery of overpaid tax credits in each month since January 2007; and if he will make a statement. [144868]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs issued around 171,000 requests to pay back overpaid tax credits (forms TC610) from January 2007 to March 2007 (inclusive).

HOME DEPARTMENT

Agriculture: Foreign Workers

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many temporary agricultural workers permits have been issued to (a) Romanian nationals and (b) Bulgarian nationals since 1 January 2007; and if he will make a statement. [140539]

Mr. Byrne: Provisional figures indicate that for the period 1 January to 31 March 2007, 1,535 work cards have been issued for Bulgarian nationals and 890 work cards for Romanian nationals wanting to participate in the Seasonal Agricultural Worker Scheme.

The figures quoted are not provided under National Statistics protocols and have been derived from local management information and are therefore provisional and subject to change.

Airline Liaison Officers: Scotland

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many airline liaison offices and returns liaison officers are stationed in Scotland; where they are located; and if he will make a statement. [144404]

Mr. Byrne: There are no Airline Liaison Officers (ALOs) or Returns Liaison Officers (RLOs) based in the United Kingdom.

Airline Liaison Officers work at points abroad identified as significant points of embarkation for inadequately documented passengers boarding flights to the United Kingdom. Returns Liaison Officers are based overseas and are responsible for establishing and maintaining liaison with foreign officials on the ground to facilitate the return of those with no legal basis to remain in the United Kingdom.

Asylum

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 3 May 2007, Official Report, column 1871, on asylum, how many applications of claims for extensions of discretionary leave were decided in the weeks beginning (a) 23 October 2006, (b) 30 October 2006, (c) 6 November 2006, (d) 13 November 2006, (e) 20 November 2006, (f) 27 November 2006, (g) 4 December 2006, (h) 11 December 2006 and (i) 18 December 2006 [137125]

Mr. Byrne: Lin Homer, the chief executive of the Border and Immigration Agency, wrote to the chair of the Home Affairs Select Committee on 19 February 2007 about the legacy programme. She explained that once reports can be produced on the legacy programme which Parliament and the wider public can have confidence in, Parliament will be updated accordingly. A copy of this letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many of the 400,000 to 450,000 unresolved records relating to asylum cases to which he referred in his statement to the House on 19 July 2006, Official Report, column 324, on the Home Office: Reform Action Plan, have been resolved; [138530]

(2) how many of the 400,000 to 450,000 unresolved records relating to asylum cases to which he referred in his statement to the House on 19 July 2006, Official Report, column 324, on Home Office: Reform Action Plan, are held at Beddington Cross. [138531]

Mr. Byrne [holding answers 23 May 2007]: Lin Homer, the Chief Executive of the Border and Immigration Agency, wrote to the chair of the Home Affairs Select Committee on 19 February 2007 about the legacy programme. She explained that once reports can be produced on the legacy programme which Parliament and the wider public can have confidence in, Parliament will be updated accordingly. A copy of this letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

Asylum: Applications

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many outstanding asylum applications there are; and how many were first made (a) within the last (i) 12 months, (ii) two years and (iii) three years and (b) more than three years ago. [145492]

Mr. Byrne: The latest published figures show that the number of cases (excluding dependants) recorded as awaiting an initial decision was 5,700 at the end of March 2007. Of this total, 4,300 cases were work in progress, i.e. the application had been outstanding for six months or less.

Information on when outstanding asylum applications were first made could be obtained only at disproportionate cost by examination of individual case records.

Information on outstanding asylum applications is published quarterly and annually. Copies of these publications are available from the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html

Asylum: English Language

Mr. Leech: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has estimated any additional costs for interpretation services provided by his Department which might result from the decision to end free English classes for asylum seekers, refugees in work and migrant workers. [125557]

Mr. Byrne: Most asylum seekers already request that an interpreter be provided at their asylum interview. The costs of providing this service are already met by the Border and Immigration Agency. We do not therefore anticipate any additional costs arising from the decision to end free access to ESOL courses for asylum seekers. Refugees on low incomes continue to be entitled to free English classes. The Border and Immigration Agency funds the Sunrise pilot scheme which provides caseworker support to new refugees in accessing appropriate mainstream benefits, ESOL provision and employment services and opportunities. Other migrant workers have limited face-to-face contact with the Home Office.

Automatic Number Plate Recognition

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the percentage of (a) driver and (b) vehicle information held on the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency's Automated Number Plate Recognition database that is inaccurate. [144796]

Mr. McNulty: Driver information held by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) is not used to support use of Automatic Number Plate Recognition (ANPR) as the technology applies to vehicles only.

Border and Immigration Agency: Manpower

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many full-time equivalent staff were employed at the North Shields Enforcement Unit of the Border and Immigration Agency and its predecessor the Immigration and Nationality Department at the start of each year from 2003-04 to 2007-08; and how many site visits and inspections were made by them in each year from 2003-04 to 2006-07. [146309]

Mr. Byrne: The annual number of full-time equivalent staff employed by the Border and Immigration Agency and, before 2 April 2007, the Immigration and Nationality Directorate at North Shields between 2003-04 and 2007-08 are as follows:

	Full-time equivalent
2007-08	51.4
2006-07	50.4
2005-06	36.4
2004-05	57.0
2003-04	[1]—

[1] No figures available due to archiving of records.

The figures for 2004-05 cover border control and enforcement staff. Separate figures are not available.

The number of site visits and inspections made by this unit between 2003-04 and 2006-07 are as follows:

	Number
2006-07	438
2005-06	398
2004-05	341
2003-04	212

The figures quoted are not provided under National Statistics protocols and have been derived from local management information and are, therefore, provisional and subject to change.

British Nationality: Applications

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the people having to retake Knowledge of Life in the UK tests have already been granted citizenship. [141599]

John Reid: I will write to the hon. Gentleman shortly about this matter.

Departments: Advertising

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent on advertising by (a) the Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last five years. [139516]

Mr. Byrne: The expenditure on advertising for the Home Office, including the Border and Immigration Agency, and the Identity and Passport Service and the Criminal Records Bureau, for the requested period, is in the following table.

					£000
	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06	2006-07
Home Office	9,854	12,062	11,314	9,348	13,658
IPS	489	649	467	826	993

For both the Home Office and IPS, advertising for recruitment is accounted for as part of recruitment and selection costs and is not included in the figures above.

Departments: IPPR

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding his Department provided to (a) the IPPR and (b) IPPR Trading Ltd. in each year since May 1997; and for what purposes. [125719]

Mr. Byrne: The Department's payments to the Institute for Public Policy Research and IPPR Trading Ltd., for the period in question, were:

			£000
	IPPR	IPPR Trading	Total
1998-99	18.7	—	18.7
1999-2000	0	—	0

2004-05	—	4.1	4.1
2005-06	—	4.7	4.7

The purpose of expenditure was for research projects and consultancy work. More details could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departments: Manpower

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people granted (a) temporary part-time, (b) temporary full-time, (c) permanent part-time and (d) permanent full-time contracts of employment in his Department in each of the last three years were (i) male, (ii) female, (iii) registered disabled and (iv) aged 55 years or over. [143898]

Mr. Byrne: The available information is set out in the following tables.

Figures given are for FTE staff joining in the preceding year, who on the 31 March, were in post in the categories shown. In some cases movement between other Government Departments or other categories of employment other than recruitment may be included. It is not possible to exclude these except at disproportionate cost.

(iv) aged 55 years or over	1-4	13	16	171

Notes:

[1] Border and Immigration Agency moved to Agency status on 9 May 2007, previous to this it was Immigration and Nationality Directorate.

[2] Figures have been taken from the Home Office personnel system Adelphi as at 31 March 2005, 2006, 2007. Non-active staff have been excluded. Temporary staff here excludes agency workers and contractors.

[3] The Home Office does not store disability information on the basis of 'registered disability' figures are for self-declared disabled status.

[4] Where staff numbers are less than five, it is not Home Office policy to disclose them.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of staff in his Department are (a) male, (b) female, (c) registered disabled and (d) aged 55 or over. [143915]

Mr. Byrne: The department publishes annual Diversity and Equal Opportunity Monitoring Reports that includes comprehensive employment data on gender, disability and age. These can be accessed through the following link:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/about-us/publications/staff-equality-targets/

Departments: Older Workers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people aged (a) over 55 years of age and (b) over 60 years of age have been recruited by his Department in each of the last three years; and what percentage in each case this is of the number of new recruits in each year. [145703]

Mr. Byrne: The available figures are as set out in the tables.

Within the Criminal Records Bureau, these data are not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Available figures for Central Home Office and Border and Immigration Agency

(b) people over 60 years of age	17	0.70	26	1.03	51	1.95

[1] Number given is new entrants aged over 55, it therefore excludes those in (b).

An earlier PQ 143915 asked for staff numbers in the category '55 and over' figures supplied there are larger than the sum of (a) and (b) above as they include those at 55 years of age.

The figures have been taken from records held on the Home Office personnel system called ADELPHI.

Departments: Pay

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent by his Department on staff pay in each year since 1997-98; and how many staff were employed in each year. [126383]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Office Departmental Report (2004-05) contains outturn information on staffing numbers from 1999 to 2003 for the core department, Prison Service, Forensic Science Service, Fire Service College and United Kingdom Passport Agency (now Identity and Passport Service). The staff numbers are in tables 6.9 and 6.10 (pages 130 and 131). The report can be found on the Home Office website using this link:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/documents/annual-report-0405-html/?version=1.

Since 2004, the Department has published consolidated Resource Accounts, which detail staff costs and staff numbers for the core department, National Probation Service, HM Prison Service, identity and Passport Service and Criminal Records Bureau. The total staff costs from the Resource Accounts, for the last four financial years, are shown as follows. The costs comprise wages and salaries, social security costs and other pension costs. Resource accounts figures for previous financial years are not available on the same basis.

	Cost (£000)
2004-05	2,728,309
2005-06	2,905,651

For further information, the Home Office Resource Accounts can be accessed via the Home Office website using the following links.

Departments: PFI

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the value is of the unitary payments of each private finance initiative scheme overseen by his Department over the lifetime of the contract expressed in 2007-08 prices and discounted to present value. [145732]

Mr. Byrne: Details of each private finance initiative scheme overseen by the Home Department with information on estimated unitary charges for 2007-08 is available on HM Treasury's website at:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/documents/public_private_partnerships/ppp_pfi_stats.cfm

The estimated unitary charge is based on 2006-07 actual charges and is not simply repayments for capital value of the project but frequently include other factors such as inflation, service provision, capital repayments and major refurbishment.

To provide information on the unitary payments over the lifetime of the contract expressed in 2007-08 prices and discounted to present value would incur disproportionate costs. On average an appropriate discount rate to use for providing an Net Present Value (NPV) total would be as set out in the Green Book as real discount rate of 3.5 per cent.

The signed deals list covers unitary charges up until 2033-34 and to update the figures to cover the duration of the contract would incur disproportionate cost.

Departments: Written Questions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many ordinary written questions to his Department from hon. Members have been waiting for a substantive reply for more than (a) one month and (b) two months; and what the subjects are of those questions. [144586]

Mr. McNulty: As of 27 June, the Department had 15 questions that were overdue to either the House of Commons or the House of Lords by one month or more. Of these, 13 were overdue by more than two months. These questions concern a range of subjects relating to departmental business and policy responsibilities.

Emergency Calls

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many emergency telephone operators were employed by police in each of the last 10 years, broken down by police force area. [139483]

Mr. McNulty: The available data relate to the number of individuals primarily employed in the function of control room (cell handlers). This function includes those staff who are predominately employed as control room operatives, or those who support such individuals, in either force or area control rooms including officers employed as telephonists.

The available data for police officers are from 2002-03 onwards, and the available data for police staff are from 2004-05 onwards, both are given in the tables.

Entry Clearances

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the unit cost is of dealing with each category of in-country application. [127402]

Mr. Byrne: Following a public consultation at the end of 2006, we set out in a written ministerial statement and formal response to the consultation the intention to move away from a simple cost recovery model for immigration and nationality fees from this April to a model where categories of leave are priced on the basis of their value to the applicant. This allows us to adopt a more flexible approach and can keep fees low for particular groups.

The projected unit costs on which the fees which took effect on 2 April 2007 were calculated are as follows. The actual costs of processing the applications will be reported in the accounts of the Border and Immigration Agency in the usual way following the end of the financial year.

Entry Clearances: USA

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the United States Department for Homeland Security on limits to the visa waiver programme for security purposes; and whether exclusions based on (a) ethnic and (b) behavioural profiling have been discussed. [141354]

John Reid: There have been discussions on several occasions with Secretary Chrertoff on how to enhance co-operation on border security, including the Visa Waiver programme. At no stage has ethnic profiling been requested, countenanced or discussed other than in addressing misleading press reports, which were dismissed by both sides.

Immigration

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average response time has been to an immigration enquiry from an hon. Member in 2007; and what the equivalent figure was in (a) 2006 and (b) 2005. [145493]

Mr. Byrne: In 2005 letters from hon. Members were answered within an average of 32.8 working days. In 2006 letters from hon. Members were answered within an average of 23.56 working days.

Figures for the average number of days to respond to a hon. Member's letters in 2007 are not currently available.

Immigration Asylum and Nationality Act 2006: Prosecutions

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been prosecuted under section 34 (3) of the Immigration, Asylum and Nationality Act 2006. [143457]

Mr. McNulty: The Immigration, Asylum and Nationality Act 2006 received Royal Assent on the 30 March 2006. Section 34(3) provides an offence where a person fails to provide information in response to a requirement under section 32 (2) or (3) or 33(2) of that Act.

We are currently engaged in consultation with industry on implementation of these sections, which will influence when these sections will commence. To date, there have been no prosecutions under section 34(3) of the Immigration, Asylum and Nationality Act 2006.

Immigration Controls

David Heyes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedure (a) is followed by Border Control and Immigration Agency officers in relation to cases defined as 'work in progress hold' and (b) determines the order in which such cases are dealt with; and what the average length of time taken was to deal with such cases in the latest period for which figures are available. [140653]

Mr. Byrne: The document Fair, Effective, Transparent and Trusted: Rebuilding Confidence in our Immigration System, published in July 2006, lays out the order of priorities for legacy asylum cases. We will consider first those who may pose a risk to the public, and then those more easily removed, those receiving support, and those who may be granted leave. All cases are dealt with on their individual merits.

Immigration Officers: Manpower

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many full-time equivalent immigration officers there are in the Immigration and Nationality Directorate; [120401]

(2) how many full-time equivalent removals and enforcement officers there are in the Immigration and Nationality Directorate. [120402]

Mr. Byrne: At the end of 31 March 2007, there were around 9,000 full-time equivalent staff working in both the Border and Enforcement areas within the Border and Immigration Agency.

Leave to Remain

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on enforcement action in the case of applicants for the family indefinite leave to remain exercise with criminal convictions (a) whose cases are outstanding and (b) whose applications have been refused; and how many have been made the subject of enforcement action since the policy was introduced. [115828]

Mr. Byrne: The criteria Border and Immigration Agency applies its criteria for deportation when determining whether enforcement action should be taken in family indefinite leave to remain cases where criminality is involved. The agency's deportation criteria were set out by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary in a written ministerial statement on 23 May 2006.

Figures for those with criminal convictions refused under the Family Indefinite Leave exercise and subject to enforcement action are unavailable and would only be obtained by examination of the individual case records at disproportionate cost.

Members: Correspondence

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons (a) the letter of 16 April 2007 on the All-Party Parliamentary Group on Trafficking of Women and Children was not acknowledged or replied to and (b) the subsequent fax did not reach him; and if he will deal promptly with the email sent on 22 May containing the original letter. [139592]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 4 June 2007]: The letter of 16 April was delayed in reaching my office.

A copy of the letter was received on 10 May, and I wrote to the hon. Member on 19 June in response to the requests made in the original letter.

Northumbria Police: Finance

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the general grant to the Northumbria police was in each of the years 2003-04 to 2007-08; and what the percentage change was between each year and the succeeding year. [146305]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is set out in the following table.

Northumbria police—General grant funding 2003-04 and 2007-08

	General govt grants[1] (£ million)	Annual change in general govt grants (Percentage)
2003-04	214.3	—

[1] General grant comprises: Home Office police grant, DCLG revenue support grant and national non-domestic rates.
[2] Adjusted for comparison purposes following the transfer of pensions and security funding from general grant in 2006-07.

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) special grants and (b) targeted initiatives were provided to Northumbria police in each of the years 2003-04 to 2007-08; and what the percentage change in funding was for each scheme or initiative between each year and the succeeding year; [146306]

(2) what (a) special grants and (b) targeted initiatives for Northumbria police were allocated to the City of Newcastle in each year from 2003-04 to 2007-08. [146307]

Mr. McNulty: Information on specific grants is set out in the following tables.

Northumbria has received two special grant allocations in the period 2003-04 to 2007-08. In 2004-05 it was awarded £1.44 million for the Labour Party Spring Conference and it was awarded £0.9 million in 2006-07 for the EU Justice Ministers Conference.

The Government allocate funding to police authorities. The allocation of resources within Northumbria police is a matter for the chief officer and the Police Authority. We do not hold information on resources for the city of Newcastle.

Offenders: Deportation

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what resources were drawn from the Criminal Casework Team in the former Immigration and Nationality Directorate to improve the speed of responses to Ministers' letters from hon. Members as stated on page 2 of A Review of the Failure of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate to consider some Foreign National Prisoners for Deportation. [144735]

Mr. Byrne: The Chief Executive of the Border and Immigration Agency, Lin Homer, was responsible for commissioning this review and implementing its findings. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Gentleman to provide further clarification on the issue he has raised and will also arrange for a copy of this letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Police: Labour Turnover

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 12 June 2007, Official Report, column 975W, to the hon. Member for Taunton (Mr. Browne) on police: labour turnover, how many police recruits left the police force within two years of joining since 2002-03, broken down by police force area; and what percentage of leavers that figure represents. [143509]

Mr. McNulty: The available data are given in the following table. The totals for leavers include transfers to other England and Wales forces.

Police: Manpower

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police are employed by Essex police in the Chelmsford area. [145928]

Mr. McNulty: The available data are for the number of full-time equivalent police officers in the Chelmsford basic command unit (BCU) within the Essex police force. These data are published in the supplementary tables of the Home Office Statistical Bulletin 13/06 "Police Service Strength, England and Wales, 31 March 2006" and are downloadable from:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs06/hosb1306add_tab.xls

The number of full-time equivalent (FTE) police officers in the Chelmsford BCU was 232 as at 31 March 2006 (FTE figures rounded to the nearest whole number, includes those officers on career breaks or maternity/paternity leave).

Salman Rushdie

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been spent from the public purse on the protection of Salman Rushdie in each year (a) since the fatwa was announced and (b) since its removal. [145825]

Mr. McNulty: It is our long established policy not to comment on protective security arrangements (and their associated costs) for any individual. This is because to do so could compromise the integrity of those arrangements and affect the security of the individuals concerned.

Work Permits: Fraud

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many investigations the Home Office Work Permits Section carried out into complaints of work permits abuse in the IT, communications and electronics sector in (a) 2004, (b) 2005 and (c) 2006; and how many resulted in a penalty or sanction against (i) the employing organisation and (ii) the work permit holder in each year. [145079]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 25 June 2007]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 25 June 2007, Official Report, column 327W.

The figures quoted are not provided under National Statistics protocols and have been derived from local management information and are therefore provisional and subject to change.

Written Questions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to answer question 134975, tabled by the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South on 25 April 2007, on Miss Ketchanou; and what the reasons are for the delay. [144578]

Mr. McNulty: My hon. Friend the Minister for Immigration, Citizenship and Nationality (Mr. Byrne) replied to the hon. Member on 25 June 2007, Official Report, column 311W.

Yarl's Wood Detention Centre

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints about (a) the food served and (b) those serving it were made at Yarl's Wood Detention Centre in each of the last three years; and what action has been taken as a result. [144843]

Mr. Byrne: Records of complaints by detainees about food are only readily available from January 2006. Since this date there have been 15 complaints about food and seven about servery staff. All complaints about the food have been addressed and detainees have received written responses. Staff concerned have been provided with advice and guidance regarding their conduct in the workplace but disciplinary action has not been necessary. Currently, two investigations into staff conduct are ongoing.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many employees at Yarl's Wood Detention Centre were disciplined in each of the last three years; for what offences; what action resulted in each case; and if he will make a statement. [144847]

Mr. Byrne: Information prior to July 2006 is not available under the Data Protection Act, which does not permit the storage of records relating to disciplinary action for more than 12 months.

From July 2006 to April 2007, the last 10 months that Global Solutions Limited (GSL) operated the centre under contract to the Border and Immigration Agency (BIA), fifteen employees at Yarl's Wood Removal Centre were subject to disciplinary procedures. The disciplinary offences were poor attendance, failure to report absence, unauthorised absence, lateness, failure to follow procedures, unprofessional conduct and harassment, displaying threatening behaviour to a colleague, discourteous to staff, sickness, inappropriate use of language and behaviour and leaving the site without authorisation. None of the disciplinary offences concerned actions towards detainees. The cases resulted in the issue of warnings to the staff concerned. These were in the form of verbal and written warnings.

Serco were awarded the contract for the operation of Yarl's Wood in April 2007. There have since been two disciplinary investigations of staff, both for bringing mobile phones into the establishment. The members of staff were given verbal warnings.

Contractors are responsible for their own disciplinary procedures which are overseen in operation by Border and Immigration Agency staff.
